"I've been offered a job by my

"I'm presently applying to gra think my U.Y.A. experience Competitive advantage."

"Rotten teeth is an epidemic in gave me (a pre-dent) a chance problem for a year and earn acad same time."

"I have a feel for Vermont and h just never there before. A yea Kingdom tends to do that."

a

Education
AGENCY: Sixteen Ninety (S. Bu
POSITION: Resident Counsellor
DESCRIPTION: Coordinat educational resources for boys be and 17 living in a group home

AGENCY: Vermont Associatio Inc.
POSITION: Research Coordinat
DESCRIPTION: To design disseminate the results of a study employment opportunities for h

AGENCY: Office of Volunteer P
POSITION: Publicity Coordinat
DESCRIPTION: To organize an regarding services by the C Programs via newsletters, n "spots," and other presentation

Health
AGENCY: People's Free Clinic
POSITION: Outreach Worker
DESCRIPTION: To assess residents in the North St. sect develop a system for meeting design several focused, health addressing those needs

PETER 'QUAZY' MACAUSLAND

COUPON

DENTS MEMBERS
excluded)
COUNT CHASES AT PHARMACY
ROM Center

repair "Smoke Stack"

ON PLACE Mall
gton, Vermont 05401
K. $3.89 CARTON
11th,12th 8:30AM-10:00PM
ndles clothing Jokes

PRESENTING U Y A FOR THE 1975-76 YEAR

Why U.Y.A.

"UYA gave me a chance to put some of my academic training to work – solving some very real problems!"

"I've always liked working with small children. My U.Y.A. year gave me a chance to work in a day-care setting, and find out if I wanted to make kids a career."

"When I started U.Y.A. I was worried about the job market. I'm still worried! But my year's experience has shown me that I really can make it in the world outside U.V.M."

"I'm now into my first post U.Y.A. semester. It's amazing how much more relevance educational theory is having."

"I've been offered a job by my agency."

"I'm presently applying to grad schools, and I think my U.Y.A. experience has given me a Competitive advantage."

"Rotten teeth is an epidemic in Vermont. U.Y.A. gave me (a pre-dent) a chance to work with this problem for a year and earn academic credit at the same time."

"I have a feel for Vermont and her people that was just never there before. A year in the Northeast Kingdom tends to do that."

Who qualify's for university year for action?

You do, if you...

...Are a full-time student (graduate or undergraduate) at UVM (or any) of the Vermont State Colleges.

...Are willing to serve full-time for twelve months.

...Can integrate the internship year with your academic program and learning goals.

...Receive medical and legal clearance from the Office of Citizen Placement, Washington, D.C.

...Are accepted at an agency, and satisfactorily complete a pre-service training program.

You qualify for University Year for ACTION if you truly want to create alternatives in America, not just in education, but in society; not just for yourself, but for everyone.

University year for action offers you:

A full year's academic credit while you work with low-income residents of Vermont.

A chance to take your knowledge out of the classroom and put it to use in surrounding communities.

An allowance to meet living expenses.

A chance to discover new career plans, or through your field experience, reaffirm your present ones.

a sampling of the 60 available positions

INTERVIEWS NOW IN PROCESS
CONTACT OVP PLACEMENT OFFICE
MANSFIELD HOUSE 656-2062

Education

AGENCY: Sixteen Ninety (S. Burlington)
POSITION: Resident Counsellor
DESCRIPTION: Coordinate community and educational resources for boys between the ages of 12 and 17 living in a group home.

AGENCY: Vermont Association for the Crippled, Inc.
POSITION: Research Coordinator
DESCRIPTION: To design, undertake and disseminate the results of a study on past and present employment opportunities for handicapped youth.

AGENCY: Office of Volunteer Programs, UVM
POSITION: Publicity Coordinator
DESCRIPTION: To organize and carry out publicity regarding services by the Office of Volunteer Programs via newsletters, news releases, media spots," and other presentations.

Health

AGENCY: People's Free Clinic
POSITION: Outreach Worker
DESCRIPTION: To assess health care needs of residents in the North St. section of Burlington, to develop a system for meeting those needs and to design several focused, health-education programs addressing those needs.

AGENCY: Visiting Nurses Association
POSITION: Family Advocate and outreach worker
DESCRIPTION: To assist infants, children, youth and pregnant mothers of low-income families in Winooski and Colchester in obtaining available, comprehensive health services.

AGENCY: Vermont Department of Health
POSITIONS: Field Support Staff; Program Management Staff
DESCRIPTION: To assist in administering and implementing the special supplemental food program for women, infants and children (WIC) to provide those foods lacking in the diets of pregnant and lactating women.

Nutrition

AGENCY: Bread and Law Task Force
POSITION: School Breakfast Coordinator
DESCRIPTION: To coordinate and administer a hot breakfast program in Thayer and Barnes schools in Burlington.

AGENCY: UVM Extension Service
POSITION: Family Gardening and Nutrition Assists DESCRIPTION: To establish a seed and tool cooperative and enroll 60 low-income Burlington and

Youth

AGENCY: King St. Youth Center (Burlington)
POSITION: Staff Assistants
DESCRIPTION: To run a pre-school program and year-round recreational/educational programs for kids in the 6-20 age range.

AGENCY: Planned Parenthood
POSITION: Interviewing Counsellor
DESCRIPTION: To serve as interviewers in the Bi-weekly contraceptive clinic for teenagers (under 18) and women with children (over 24).

Advocacy

AGENCY: Vermont Dept. of Corrections
POSITION: Recreation Coordinator, Chittenden Co. Correctional Center.
DESCRIPTION: Design and implement recreational and Arts and Crafts programs for 90 male and female residents and their families.

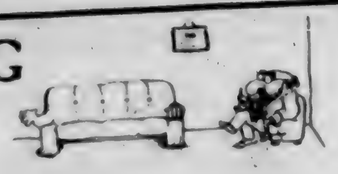
AGENCY: Central Vermont Community Action Council (Barre)
POSITION: Co-editor, newspaper
DESCRIPTION: To co-edit The Peoples Voice, a monthly newspaper which informs low-income persons of Orange, Washington, and Lamoille Counties of services and community resources available to them.

AGENCY: Consumer Fraud Division, Attorney General's Office
POSITION: Complaint Investigator
DESCRIPTION: To monitor consumer fraud complaints and assist agency staff in investigating those requiring litigation or other action.

AGENCY: State's Attorney's Office, Chittenden Co.
POSITION: Consumer Complaint Investigator
DESCRIPTION: To handle consumer complaints, initiate investigation where appropriate and carry the case through to solution.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by Arnold Werner M. D.



Address letters to Dr Arnold Werner, Box 974, East Lansing, MI 48823

QUESTION My question concerns what effect, if any, the pill might have upon a woman's sexual response. I have been taking birth control pills for about four years continuously. Initially I experienced no problem in enjoying the sex act; lately I have had difficulties which appear to me to be physical, rather than psychological in nature. By difficulties I mean that normal vaginal secretions seem to be almost non-existent. This often makes for an extremely tight and painful sensation during intercourse. Is it possible that the pills are affecting me adversely after taking them for four years?

ANSWER One of the side effects of birth control pills can be a decrease in vaginal secretions. I have heard other women say that this has occurred after taking them a while, although not having been present initially. The best way to find out what is happening is to visit your doctor and change to an alternate form of birth control for a period of time to see whether or not the situation remedies itself.

QUESTION I'm not unhappy with my weight (145 lbs., 5'10" tall). But I would like to re-distribute some of it because I am getting a bit of a "pot-belly". I would like to know if wearing a weight belt (8-10 lbs.) for a few hours a day would tighten up my stomach muscles. I've tried touching my toes 200 times a day but that didn't work.

ANSWER Your weight is fine for your height and I doubt if the problem is one of redistribution. In people of normal weight, pot-bellies are a result of decreased abdominal muscle tone and poor posture. Long periods of time spent sitting also make things worse.

Weight belts are not advisable. They are unbalancing, can throw your posture out of alignment and produce back trouble. Exercises that can be done in your room include sit-ups, which strengthen abdominal muscles and push-ups which improve posture. Some people have trouble doing sit-ups. They can be aided by anchoring their feet under a piece of furniture and/or doing them with the knees bent. Bicycling, swimming and jogging are other exercises which will improve your abdominal muscle tone.

QUESTION Why don't men shave their underarms? Wouldn't they perspire less and thus have less body odor to worry about?

ANSWER The question is backwards. It should be: why do women shave their underarms? Shaving or not shaving your underarms will not change the amount you perspire. The body odor of fresh perspiration is not offensive whereas rancid sweat smells pretty bad, hair or no hair. The presence or absence of body hair relates strictly to people's ideas of what looks good, and so is heavily influenced by cultural factors.

QUESTION I'm a very squeamish person. I've always wanted to work in a hospital, but for the last several years my phobia is getting worse. I couldn't even watch my baby being born. I'm afraid if anyone had to depend on me in an accident, I'd faint or have a cardiac arrest. Is there any hope of overcoming this squeamishness? The suggestion has been made to me that I start taking Red Cross courses and get used to the idea of helping bleeding and helpless persons.

ANSWER The phobia you described clearly places minimal limitations on a person, unless that person wants to be involved in the type of situations you described. Squeamishness at the sight of blood or injury is a normal reaction. One is much less apt to faint or feel squeamish if actively involved in events rather than standing by as a passive observer. Those of us who are exposed to relative gory things by virtue of our professions, have had the opportunity during our training to gradually become used to situations which would normally offend one's sensibilities. Sometimes we even become insensitive in the process -- an undesired side effect.

As long as the phobia is well defined and anxiety is not pervasive, a form of behavior therapy known as desensitization is highly effective in getting rid of the symptom. Basically, the person is confronted with a carefully worked out series of anxiety provoking stimuli which are alternated with pleasurable stimuli. This is usually accomplished by imagining a variety of scenes presented by the treating person who has ascertained the nature of the phobia through a careful and extensive history. Many psychologists and psychiatrists are familiar with the techniques involved in this type of symptom removal.

In case all of this fails, treatment of fainting involves lying the person flat on their back and staying calm. Under no circumstances should the person who simply faints be kept in an upright position.

Saga Plans Board Increase

by John McDonald

A personal interview with Fred Smith, Food Service Director for SAGA Foods here at UVM, disclosed that the cost of next year's meal plan will rise $110 per student. Along with this increase will be a slight change in the structure of the plan.

Next year's plan will maintain its basic features but will require students to buy more coupons in the base plan. Presently, students buy 3 books at a cost of $247.00. On the average, however, Saga has found that the students buy 1½ extra books in the course of the term. This averages out to $275.00 per student a term. Consequently, next year's plan will require people to buy 4 books at a cost of $330.00, an increase of $55 per term, $110 overall.

Also built into this new plan is the devaluation of each coupon. This year, four books would mean 560 coupons, whereas, next year, 4 books will equal out to 680 coupons. Each coupon in the base plan is now worth $.59, next year the value will decrease to $.48. And instead of paying 2, 3, and 5 coupons for breakfast, lunch and dinner respectively, you will by paying 3, 4 and 6 coupons.

All of this may seem outrageous. Students are sick and tired of hearing what else is going to increase their overall yearly expenses. First it's tuition, then health fee, books, and now food. But when looked at closely, the increase is not really that great. For instance, the current base plan provides for 40% of the maximum consumption of a student. More simply, if a student ate every meal throughout the term, the basic plan would only cover him for 40%. Next year the basic plan will cover for 50%.

Also, at most schools the food institutions charge students for the meals they don't eat. For example, if a student buys 21 meals a week plan but misses breakfast and leaves for a weekend, he or she is charged for those meals. This is called the missed meal factor and it has been averaged that students miss 25% of the 21 meals offered per week. But, as you all know, Saga guarantees you the complete value because you only pay for what you eat.

Saga has been at UVM since 1956 and has enjoyed the relationship. This year it is expected that Saga will fall short of its projected income by $200,000. Estimating from the average return of 6½% on gross sales, Saga last year expected to come up with $140,000. But because of using prices of food additional services, underutilized utilities, etc. Saga is going to lose $60,000. As Fred Smith said, "We're eating it as a corporation."

As Fred Smith stated though "next year's increases are not geared to make up for this year's losses. With the increase in flexibilities and services offered by this year's Saga plan, there has been a rise in overall costs. We simply underpriced this year's plan by appointing $25 per student."

In closing, Fred Smith emphasized not your typical corporate body out to maximize its profits. Rather, Saga, at least its educational food service branch, is a low profit business which looks at profit "as a surplus which allows us to do new and different things and have top rate managers. We're here for the students and we're only as good as our last meal..."

And for $330 per semester, Fred, please make it a good one!

Food Day Shopping List Available

Vermont Tomorrow has released its sixteen page Bicentennial Food Day Shopping List. In accord with proclamation designating April 17 as Food Day in Vermont, the Shopping List suggests ways in which Vermonters can participate in this important national event.

Food Day 1975, similar to Earth Day in 1970, is intended to focus national attention on food -- where it comes from, how its prepared, why it costs what it does and why some people have more than they need while others have none at all.

Here in Vermont the emphasis will be on community action projects that will lead to greater food self-sufficiency, better nutrition and lower costs.

The Shopping List, produced under a matching grant from the Vermont Bicentennial Commission, provides a wide range of useful information. It describes community gardening and canning projects, emergency food shelves and farmers markets; provides the names and addresses of numerous public groups and state agencies active in the agricultural field; lists a number of books, films and upcoming events; and contains a special page for children. There are also articles on the new Governor's Emergency Food Commission; direct farmer to consumer commodity sales; hints on cutting your food costs; and plenty of suggested projects for schools, churches, clubs, and civic groups.

Copies of the Shopping List can soon be seen at your local library or county extension office. Or you can obtain a copy by sending your name, address and a modest contribution to Vermont Tomorrow, 223, 6067 from the S.A. and receive it by packing the meeting with club members on the night the measure is to be voted upon.

...Maddern

(continued from page five)

Bruce feels that the town meeting system "could be a good thing, or a headache" but is reserving final judgement until the system is tried in practice.

When asked to sum up his feelings about the S.A., and his hopes for its future Bruce said; "I think students can make the S.A. work."

...Schwarts

(continued from page five)

and weak and frustrating means of expression for the students, David replied.

"Yes, it can at times be very frustrating. There's a lot of wasted time involved at the meetings. Proposals and ideas are dragged out. For example, why do you have to have 10 people say the same thing when a short, simple show of hands would be enough?

But I do feel that the SA can be an effective means for the students in helping to direct and decide politics. The students need a legislative body through which they can work. It can be frustrating. I agree; but you must be able to put up with the frustration and you can't let them get in your way."

...Davis

(continued from page five)

"tap student tastes." He believes publicity should be stressed within the new system. A calendar of events should appear in campus locations other than Billings, and the Cynic could print a removable calendar each week.

Staige stressed that there must be more communication between S.A. organizations and the student population at large. For instance, the Student Association should work more closely with the Greek Coordinating Council since the Greeks provide an important social function on campus. The campus-wide town meetings which will be incorporated into the new system of government will allow for a stronger student voice, but in order to participate people must be aware of the issues.

Staige has proposed two new programs. He plans to start a housing office which would keep a listing of apartments and houses off campus as well as a record of tenant complaints. He also sees a need for a sex information service which would handle referrals for abortion counseling, distribution of wholesale nonprescription contraceptives, and listings for the cheapest prices on subscription contraceptives.

Staige believes the S.A. president in the new system will serve a coordinating rather than an overseeing function. Here again communication within the organization will be essential since much of the decision-making responsibility will be diffused through the committee chairmen. Staige is supporting vice-presidential candidate Paul Ajamian. He does feel though that both the S.A. president and vice-president should be elected earlier in the spring so that they would have a longer period of apprenticeship with the outgoing student administrators.

...Bartlett

(continued from page five)

important for the new Executive Committee. Lastly, he believes that a student government is a necessity for UVM. Bartlett concludes "I believe in the fundamental necessity of student government."

...Nuclear Power

(continued from page four)

replied; "I don't know what we'll do at this time. I'm disappointed." He said that the bill will reduce the chance of another atomic plant being constructed in Vermont. He argued that the bill has been a big mistake for Vermont because by the 1980's Vermont will need nuclear power generated electricity. Griffin is also president of Vermont Yankee, Vermont's only nuclear power generating plant.

The bill, H.127, entered the House in January with 45 sponsors, nearly one-third of the total membership of the lower chamber. A similar bill was sponsored by 9 of the 30 senators. Although a number of Senators and Representatives tried to sidetrack the bill to unfriendly committees all efforts against the bill were soundly defeated.

The controversy over nuclear power regulation in Vermont is far from over however. Next year's Legislative session should see opponents, especially representatives from the Electric companies, mount a campaign to weaken the bill through amendments that will take away the strength of the legislation. "If that happens, Hutchinson of VPIRG, said, "we will be there to fight for what took us so long to win."

CLASSIFIED

For Sale: AMF 27" 10-speed bicycle $75. Yamaha 12-string guitar steel strings $80. Pioneer headphones $10. call John at 862-4631 after 5:00 M.T.F. 12 noon any day.

Stereo For Sale: Pioneer SX-727, PL-12D, Panasonic RS-275, UTAH MK-18's. List $1089. Sell $530. 863-6973.

Free Castrated, grey, tiger cat. He's in good health, has a great disposition and needs a good home. 862-5432.

Rambler Wagon - 1964 with '66 engine. Trailer hitch, auto, PS, air conditioning, small 8. No Rust. New timing chain, Midas exhaust system, points, plugs, carb, excellent rubber. $225. 655-2631 evenings.

X-C poles, 54", $3.00. Austrian hiking boots, sz. 7, $20. Pontiac tire, rim and wheel cover: $12. Call 655-2631 evenings.

$65 to $95 Per Wk/Part Time. Unlimited earning potential in addressing envelopes at home. Companies pay top money for that "personal touch". For further information regarding opportunities with these companies, send $2 to Phoenix Advertising, P.O. Box 11707, Atlanta, Georgia 30305.

Volunteers Needed! The State YMCA at Camp Abnaki in North Hero needs 10-15 volunteers for one day to clear materials away from a recently done roofing job at this boy's summer camp. Volunteers are needed from the end of April through the first week of May. Summer camp scholarships will be offered as payment. Please phone the volunteer supervisor, Rob Dent, at 863-5028 (home) or write Box 806, Burlington.

Apartment to Sublet - for three people, available June 1 - Aug 31. Fully furnished modern kitchen facilities. Close to campus. $200 per month utilities included. Call Kim 656-3006.

Enjoy summer '75 cruising in a '67 Firebird Convertible. Must sell before May 17. Make me an offer I can't refuse! Call Mitch 863-6277.

Home Wanted: Couple looking for place to live within 15 mile radius of Burlington. We prefer lots of space for garden, dog etc. Wanted as soon as possible. Please call 985-8575.

Wanted to rent: a house away from the hustle and bustle of Burlington center. Please call Debra 656-3086.

Furnished Apartment: Available for 3 people June 1 to the end of August. 2 huge bedrooms, living room, bath, kitchen, walking distance to UVM. Located in attractive house on South Union St. $200/month. Call x2697, ask for Diane or Nancy; or x2954; ask for Lisa.

You Beautiful: Summer people who plan to stay in Burlington don't miss checking out the best sublet deal in town. One lonely male is in need of two roommates to share a terrific 3 bedroom apt. Give this place a look and you'll know what you've been lacking in terms of living environment. Price negotiable and may be for next year. Call Dave or Steve or Bill 864-7788.

MAZEL'S
Family Shoe Store
194 North St. Burlington

dunham

CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS

Tyroleans . . . the hiking, biking, camping, mountaineering or anywhere boots . . . You'll find 'em at Mazel's in Men's & Ladies' sizes . . . Comfort from first step to last . . . the boots for all outdoors and all seasons.

FREE PARKING OPEN DAILY 9 to 6 THURSDAY and FRIDAY 'til 9 practically on campus

GAYNES
ALWAYS FIRST QUALITY
SHOPPERS WORLD
BTS. 2 & 89 BURLINGTON VT

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

1975 summer program of goddard college

ALTERNATE ENERGY AND AGRICULTURE

wind, water, methane, solar social ecology studies

June 2-August 22 15 credits

An intensive 12 week program in social ecology and environmental sciences, exploring alternative technologies, a no-growth economy, organic agriculture, urban decentralization, the politics of ecology, and the design and construction of experimental models for wind, solar, and methane-powered energy production.

Goddard is located in a rural Vermont community, rich in both natural and human resources, in a state noted for its progressive environmental legislation.

The summer program is directed by MURRAY BOOKCIN, author of Post Scarcity Anarchism, Our Synthetic Environment, and Limits of the City. Visiting Faculty will include outstanding national experts in the fields of alternate technology and communities such as KARL HESS, Community Technologies, SAM LOVE, Environmental Action, JOHN and NANCY TODD, founders New Alchemy Institute, WILSON CLARK, author of Energy for Survival, STEVE BAER, Zomeworks, JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH, publisher of Mother Earth News, ROBERT REINES, Integrated Life Support Systems Labs, and STEWART BRAND, publisher of The Whole Earth Catalog.

For detailed illustrated brochure write:

D. Chodorkoff
Social Ecology Program
Goddard College Box SE 6
Plainfield, Vermont 05667

Trout Sea

by Paul Cain

Trout season opens this Saturday, but you might as well keep the tackle in the closet for at least a couple more weeks. Frigid water temperatures and the high level of streams due to the spring runoff will make most fishing unprofitable. But still the excitement of "opening day" and expectations of maybe one or two trout in the creek will be enough to drive the hardiest fisherman out.

After a long winter, what fisherman doesn't feel the urge to get out, practice his casting and with luck, hold a nice rainbow or brook trout in his hands -- even though the hands are numb from coldness and ice still covers half the stream. It's still fishing and this Saturday one can expect to find the best fishing spots crowded with people.

And with a normal fishing [illegible] little luck some [illegible] find early season [illegible] bad. This time of [illegible] will be deep [illegible] feeding mostly [illegible] eggs and whatev[illegible] the runoff brings [illegible] most successful [illegible] be using nympha[illegible] or the old [illegible] earthworms.

Good dry fl[illegible] most difficult an[illegible] trout fishing. [illegible] about until mid [illegible] when the May fl[illegible] hatches. Som[illegible] evening a fisher[illegible] his stream litte[illegible] flies, the trout [illegible] this is when [illegible] finest.

When such [illegible] progress the[illegible]

A Love Story: First

by Jay Samuels

It was Ballantines Day. We were sitting on the balcony of the Country Club, under the romantic Lite of a Lone Star. I had just given my fiancee a Sterling silver ring and a Pearl necklace, hoping for a new start in our faltering relationship.

"Is not this Champale in comparison to life itself?" she sighed in response to my overtures.

I resolved to be firm. "Genesee here," I said. "Come down off Mount Olympia and back to the real world."

"Of Coors," she replied dreamily. Then, in a quick change of moods, as though Reading my thoughts, she said, "Go to the Bartel the bartender we want two more beers, and let's enjoy the evening."

We danced to Old Style tunes that evening. I truly felt that this was it, the High Life. A Colt 45 could not have induced us to part.

Instead of going home, we went to the Busches on the sand dunes and made love. Jenny just laughed and said that if we were going to come back in the day[illegible] have to Schae[illegible] could figure Je[illegible]

Our relati[illegible] throughout the[illegible] to Piel the lay[illegible] character, to f[illegible] really was, b[illegible] assiduously Fi[illegible] and rebuff[illegible] attempt I wen[illegible] Ball, City pr[illegible] ultimate part[illegible] come.

But it di[illegible] staff appointm[illegible] and I had t[illegible] Milwaukee d[illegible] of Dixie. Je[illegible] Gibbon hal[illegible] would join [illegible] had saved up[illegible] leave.

I only [illegible] more She w[illegible] in New Yo[illegible] with a cop.

"Go A[illegible] bystander.

"This S[illegible] She's [illegible] screamed th[illegible] I just [illegible] my eye, said

SA PRES
SA VIC REF

DEBATES

1 WRUV-AM, F

2 Billings Mar

3 Harris Millis

4 Simpson Ma

ncrease

$60,000. As Fred Smith said, We're eating it as a corporation."

As Fred Smith stated though, next year's increases are not geared to make up for this years losses. With the increase in fees,tuitions and services offered by this year's Saga plan, there has been a rise in overall costs. We simply underpriced this year's plan by appointing $25 per student.

In closing, Fred Smith emphasized that your typical corporate body out to maximize its profits. Rather, Saga at least its educational food service branch is a low profit business which looks at profit as a surplus which allows us to do new and different things and have top rate managers. We're here for the students and we're only as good as our last meal.

And for $330 per semester I feel please make it a good one!

...Bartlett

(continued from page five)

important for the new Executive Committee. Lastly, he believes that a student government is a necessity for UVM. Bartlett concludes "I believe in the fundamental necessity of student government."

...Nuclear Power

(continued from page four)

replied, "I don't know what we'll do at this time. I'm disappointed." He said that the bill will reduce the chance of another atomic plant being constructed in Vermont. He argued that the bill has been a big mistake for Vermont because by the 1980's Vermont will need nuclear power generated electricity. Griffin is also president of Vermont Yankee, Vermont's only nuclear power generating plant.

The bill, H.127, entered the House in January, with 45 sponsors, nearly one third of the total membership of the lower chamber. A similar bill was sponsored by 9 of the 30 senators. Although a number of Senators and Representatives tried to sidetrack the bill to unfriendly committees all efforts against the bill were soundly defeated.

The controversy over nuclear power regulation in Vermont is far from over however. Next year's legislative session should see opponents, especially representatives from the Electric companies, mount a campaign to weaken the bill through amendments that will take away the strength of the legislation. "If that happens, Hal Isason of VPIRG said, we will be there to fight for what took us so long to win."

summer program of goddard college
ALTERNATE ENERGY AND AGRICULTURE
wind, water, methane, solar
social ecology studies

August 22 15 credits

five 12 week program in ology and environmental , exploring alternative gies, a no-growth organic agriculture, centralization, the politics , and the design and tion of experimental or wind, solar, and powered energy on.

is located in a rural community rich in both and human resources, in a ed for its progressive mental legislation.

mer program is directed by Y BOOKCIN, author of Post Anarchism, Our Synthetic ment, and Limits of the ting Faculty will include ding national experts in the alternate technology and nities such as KARL HESS, nity Technologies, SAM Environmental Action, nd NANCY TODD, founders chemy Institute, WILSON author of Energy for , STEVE BAER, orks, JOHN LEWORTH, publisher of Earth News, ROBERT , Integrated Life Support e Labs, and STEWART , publisher of The Whole Catalog

For detailed illustrated brochure write
D. Chodorkoff
Social Ecology Program
Goddard College Box M
Plainfield, Vermont 05667

Trout Season Opens

by Paul Cain

Trout season opens this Saturday, but you might as well keep the tackle in the closet for at least a couple more weeks. Frigid water temperatures and the high level of streams due to the spring runoff will make most fishing unprofitable. But still the excitement of opening day and expectations of maybe one or two trout in the creek will be enough to drive the hardiest fisherman out.

After a long winter, what fisherman doesn't feel the urge to get out, practice his casting and with luck, hold a nice rainbow or brook trout in his hands -- even though the hands are numb from coldness and ice still covers half the stream. It's still fishing and this Saturday one can expect to find the best fishing spots crowded with people.

And with a change in normal fishing technique and little luck some fisherman will find early season not all that bad. This time of year the fish will be deep in the water feeding mostly on nymphs, eggs and whatever terrestrials the runoff brings to them. The most successful fisherman will be using nymphs, salmon eggs or the old standby, earthworms.

Good dry fly fishing, the most difficult and rewarding of trout fishing, will not come about until mid and late May when the May flies begin their hatches. Some late spring evening a fisherman may find his stream littered with these flies, the trout rising endlessly -- this is when fishing is its finest.

When such a hatch is in progress the trout will single-mindedly gorge themselves with the specific fly hatching. Thus the reason for the great variety of flies in a fly fisherman's tackle box. He must find the exact size and formative phase of the fly to be successful. The more accomplished fishermen will tie their flies from hatch to hatch, imitating the precise characteristics of each.

Once the selection is made the fisherman must deliver the fly so it looks natural. Trout are just as wary as any other hunted animal and a fly laid on the water clumsily will chase a trout beneath the bank. The fly fisherman must cast with accuracy and finesse to be successful, but it is worth all the effort to draw a trout to the surface, breaking water, and to feel the sudden tension in your line.

When these hot, long days of summer do come, fishermen can expect a fine season. In the more secluded brooks and streams the native trout should be thriving and at the more used areas stocking of the Fish and Game Dept. should offer high fishing quality and diversity.

Last year 4500 Michigan "Steelhead" rainbows were introduced in the Winooski river from its mouth to U.S. Route 7 and 3500 upstream between Rishmond and Bolton. The Dept. hopes to stock 50,000 a year from this year on. These are the real thing, wild steelhead trout, known as the best fighting trout.

Also land locked salmon will be found in a few creeks this summer. These fish have been stocked in the North East part of the state since 1971. Salmon have a minimum legal size of 15 inches and since they resemble closely a trout one should be able to distinguish the two. A salmon has a dark, forked tail that is unspeckled and a trout has a squarer tail with some speckles.

It all leads to pleasant thinking, misty mornings with sun rising warmly on your back as you wade through a cool stream, striking into a good strong trout. It's worthy of little anticipation.

A Love Story: First Draft

by Jay Samuels

It was Ballantines Day. We were sitting on the balcony of the Country Club, under the romantic Lite of a Lone Star. I had just given my fiancee a Sterling silver ring and a Pearl necklace, hoping for a new start in our faltering relationship.

"Is not this Champale in comparison to life itself?" she sighed in response to my overtures.

I resolved to be firm. "Genesee here," I said, "Come down off Mount Olympia and back to the real world."

"Of Coors," she replied dreamily. Then, in a quick change of moods, as though Reading my thoughts, she said, "Go to the Bartel the bartender we want two more beers, and let's enjoy the evening."

We danced to Old Style tunes that evening. I truly felt that this was it, the High Life. A Colt 45 could not have induced us to part.

Instead of going home, we went to the Beaches on the sand dunes and made love. Jenny just laughed and said that if we were going to come back in the daytime, the would have to Schaefer legs. I never could figure Jenny out.

Our relationship continued throughout the summer. I tried to Piel the layers from Jenny's character, to find out who she really was, but she just as assiduously Fostered new ones, and rebuffed my every attempt. I went on hoping that Fall, City problems, and our ultimate parting would never come.

But it did. With the Fall, Staff appointments were made, and I had to move from Old Milwaukee down to the heart of Dixie. Jenny vowed that Gibbon half a chance, she would join me as soon as she had saved up enough money to leave.

•••••••

I only saw Jenny once more. She was on 42nd Street in New York City, fighting with a cop.

"Go Andeker," yelled a bystander.

"This Schlitz," spat Jenny. She's a Horiecher up," screamed the onlooker.

I just watched, a tear in my eye, sadder Budweiser.

Open Meeting To Discuss Project Coordinators Council

An Open Letter to UVM Students

Everyone is cordially invited to attend an "open-meeting" of OVP volunteers and student project coordinators on April 10 at 7 p.m. at the Living/Learning Center's Common Room 120 (underneath the fireplace room).

The purpose of this meeting is to better acquaint OVP volunteers with the purposes and workings of the Project Coordinators Council (PCC), the student administrative body which represents "you", the volunteer. Further, we hope that in this meeting you will provide us with input that will serve to further improve the way we work for you and the community.

The Project Coordinators Council of the Office of Volunteer Programs was developed to assist students with the planning and implementation of volunteer projects serving the human needs of the community and to encourage others to become involved in volunteering. All students who are individual Project Directors/Coordinators serve on the council.

As student administrators, the Project Coordinators take the responsibility for coordinating the work of the volunteers and maintaining liaison with professionals in the agencies and the Office of Volunteer Programs. Each Project Coordinator acts as a support mechanism of the Office of Volunteer Programs, offering counsel, assistance, and planning skills to new project leaders.

One of the main purposes of the PCC is to facilitate the learning process which volunteers experience. The Council endeavors to insure their success by exploring possible problems before they occur. Therefore, the PCC provides a meaningful interaction for Project Leaders as well as a resource for new volunteers.

The PCC also serves as a governing board, which is directly responsible for the allocation of OVP's Student Association budget to the individual student coordinated volunteer projects. All students who wish to begin a project at OVP are required to submit a Project Proposal and Budget Request following the outline in the Criteria Proposal to the PCC. It is therefore the function of the PCC and its chairperson to facilitate the students' involvement with OVP by outlining baseline procedures for establishing a new OVP project.

Following is the Criteria Proposal:

I. A new project must meet a genuine community need and must offer continuous service.

II. The project leadership should be clear. The project leader will be responsible for the ongoing coordination of the project.

III. Specific goals for the project must be concretely established and submitted in writing to the PCC for approval.

IV. Evaluation of the project shall take place at appropriate intervals.

V. Projects requiring any seed monies must submit a formal budget with their project proposal.

VI. In considering the scope of any project, the director should try to involve a significant number of UVM students.

VII. OVP will support short-term one shot projects which will provide human service to people in need.

VIII. Any person assuming the extensive responsibilities of project leadership must also be willing to serve on the PCC.

IX. Resources which the project will require as well as any skills the volunteers might be asked to have should be included in the project proposal.

The members of the Council review the proposal/request and allocate seed monies if they feel it is essential to the project.

It is the function of the PCC chairperson to oversee and encourage new volunteer projects as well as those currently operating. It also involves responsibility for funding recommendations and the annual OVP budget request to the Student Association. This person serves as an extension of the PCC to assist the OVP staff in the coordination of volunteer programs.

The PCC serves as a vital link between the Office of Volunteer Programs and the volunteering being done through student coordinated projects. The Council believes in making full use of facilities and human resources to meet the pressing human needs that exist in the Burlington Area Community.

Colleges Compete For Students

(CPS) - A few years ago children of the baby boom faced cut-throat competition for college entrance. Today the knife is in different hands as colleges increasingly must compete for students.

"Some colleges are raiding other colleges for students who are already enrolled...Others are registering students on opening day without requiring advance applications and transcripts," Dean Harold Landruth of Clemson University told the annual meeting of the Mid-America Association of College Personnel.

Landruth further charged that some institutions have implied in their advertising that a student can get a free television by enrolling. He also said certain college recruiters were sifting through low income projects, picking out students whose major qualifications are eligibility for student aid.

Time magazine reported that Antioch College, Ohio, was in such dire financial straights that its very future depended on its ability to increase its fall freshman enrollment by 50 per cent. So Antioch bought the names of 92,000 high school students from the Educational Testing Service in New Jersey and has begun a massive telephoning campaign plus a 200,000 piece direct mail advertising program.

Elsewhere, the University of Wisconsin has proposed a 50 per cent tuition cut as a "no holds barred" competitive move in higher education.

Such tactics have become more widespread even though admissions applications to more than 500 private colleges and universities for next fall were maintaining an even keel, according to an Association of American Colleges survey.

A mathematical model prepared by a Yale University researcher, however, predicted a grim future for enrollments and estimated that they would shrink by 46 per cent between 1980 and 1990.

L/L Program Offered:

World Food Situation

The world has shrunken to a tiny size during its course in time. Continents are connected by telephones, jetplanes, television, and the written media, yet separated by political and economic barriers. People are dying of starvation around the corner - not only in India but in parts of Appalachia as well - while we, the consumers of the world merrily gorge ourselves on planned obsolence. Looking at our present system of values and ethics and their various institutions of greed - capitalism, much of politics, chauvenism, etc. I forsee an imminent collapse of this system and the absolute need for complete reevaluation of our ethics.

Ever since the value of money and profit has been more important than the value of human life, mankind has led an existence where the rich and the poor, the city and the country and the educated and uneducated are separated into the have and the have-nots. We read about and directly feel the pressures of depleted resources, of dehumanized industry, of political trickery and of other blatant signs that tell us that we are about to change our lifestyle and thought process or else destroy ourselves.

My motive for writing this article is that I want to explore the existing alternatives to this system, their practicality and their possibilities with other people. The means will be a Living/Learning program called 'Meals for Millions' that will center on world and regional food production. We will explore and evaluate the literature on the subjects of global planning, energy in agriculture, political and economic control of food production, regional solutions, non-growth economics and self-sufficiency as well as specific approaches to agriculture in a course to be offered to any interested student on campus. Learning about the various means of farming and distribution of food will give viable alternatives to as well as a better understanding of our agricultural industry. Acquiring knowledge about the political, social, economic and resource aspects of the global food crisis will give the people involved clear viewpoints and reasonable approaches with which they can lead their lives.

'Meals for Millions' can't happen without other people, so if you're interested in being a part of the program contact me as soon as possible. I'd like to hear anyone's feedback, ideas and comments about this program. Echo Nowakoski 862-7855.

SA PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS
SA VICE-PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS
REFERENDUM ON PROPOSED SA BUDGET
& VPIRG TRUSTEES ELECTIONS

UVM ID required to vote

Tuesday, April 15 & Wednesday, April 16

DEBATES with Presidential Candidates

1 WRUV-AM, FM
Monday, April 14 8 pm

2 Billings Marsh Lounge
Thursday, April 10 5 pm

3 Harris Millis Main Lounge
Thursday, April 10 7:30 pm

4 Simpson Main Lounge
Sunday, April 13 7:30 pm

VOTING PLACES
Tuesday, April 15 & Wednesday, April 16

1 Waterman Main Lobby 9 am - 4 pm

2 Billings Center 9 am - 7 pm

3 Living Learning Dining Hall 11:15 - 1:15
4:45 - 6:45

4 Harris Millis Dining Hall 10:45 - 12:45
4:15 - 6:15

5 Simpson Dining Hall 4:30 -6 pm

6 Wright Dining Hall 11:15 - 1:45
4:45 - 6:45

Wilson To Retire

by Margo Howland
(Times Argus)

Donald E. Wilson, executive assistant to University of Vermont President, Dr. Edward E. Andrews Jr., will retire on June 30, capping a long and distinguished career in communications and management.

Wilson, 54, said his departure was "in no way connected" with that of Dr. Andrews, who will leave UVM June 30 to head the Maine Medical Center.

Wilson made the announcement in a recent interview. In discussing his plans for retirement, Wilson said, "I'm going to be lazy. I haven't had an extended break in a long, long time. I'm going to take the summer off. We have a place in Randolph, New Hampshire, and I'll probably fool around there for awhile."

"I've had three separate careers and I'm ready for a fourth one. I like change. I'm used to it. Remember, I was a preacher's kid," he laughed.

"I've been thinking of rounding it off to five years," Wilson explained. "I've enjoyed it hugely, I feel I'm ready for a change, and it's my own personal method of restimulating myself."

Before his arrival at the University in September 1970, Wilson had spent 26 years with the United States Government, working on international affairs. For 16 of those years, he lived abroad as a U.S. Foreign Service Officer.

Born in Mercersberg, Pennsylvania, Wilson received a B.A. degree from Bucknell University in 1941 and did graduate work at American University in Washington, D.C. and the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Virginia.

A newspaper reporter from 1940-1944, Wilson held a government post with the U.S. Office of War Information in New York City during World War II. He then spent three years as public liason with the State Department.

From 1949-1959, Wilson served as American Embassy attache in New Zealand, Denmark, Finland, and Iceland, in information and cultural work. In 1961, he traveled for the U.S. Information Agency, working in the Far East, Middle East and Southeast Asia.

In 1962 he was named director of the United States Information Service in Canada, working out of the U.S. Embassy in Ottawa.

In 1965, Wilson was named Deputy (and Acting) Inspector General of the U.S. Information Agency, Washington, D.C.

Wilson is listed in Who's Who in America, and is married to the former Ann Buchanan.

Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne Patterson is expected to name an interim replacement for Wilson shortly.

Introducing Professor Aiken!

by Margo Howland

The folks who have wondered whether to call George D. Aiken "Senator" or "Governor" can set their minds at rest. The University's distinguished commuting scholar-in-residence has a new title - Professor Aiken.

The former U.S. Senator from Putney, Vermont, was named a full professor on the UVM faculty on Saturday, April 5 by the Board of Trustees.

The adoption of a "Resolution Appointing George D. Aiken A University Professor" was one of the happier incidents of Saturday's Board of Trustees meeting - a meeting dominated by growing concern over the realization that Vermonters may soon be unable to afford the cost of an education at their own state university.

"Governor Aiken agreed to spend sometime on this campus. He did so reluctantly; he came with considerable trepidation," said UVM President Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr.

But, the trustees were told, "the Governor and Mrs. Aiken have taken the campus by storm... he even insists on going through the line and eating routine Saga Food!"

The Board broke into helpless laughter at this remark, and were further informed that the Governor attends "any and all hockey and basketball games that he can get to."

Aiken's son-in-law was Jim Cross' coach at Boston University, which may explain the Governor's fondness for hockey games.

Aiken has attended numerous classes to give guest lectures. Last week he addressed Dr. Harold Meeks' Geography of Vermont class on the subjects of agriculture, dairy farming and atomic energy.

The resolution adopted by the Board of Trustees reads as follows:

"Recognizing that he has had a long and distinguished career in the government of the State of Vermont where he served successively as Town Representative, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Lieutenant-Governor, and Governor, and that he has had an even longer and equally distinguished career in the United States Senate where he represented Vermont for the last thirty-four years and in which body he served on the Committee on Agriculture, the Committee on Foreign Relations, and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, and

"Whereas his very presence on campus will enable students and faculty to share the knowledge and insights that he brings to the study of the history of Vermont's social and political institutions and to the study of our national political institutions, and

"Where he is eminently qualified for a staff appointment to the faculty of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College by virtue of his deep knowledge of farming and horticulture, and of politics and government, and foreign affairs and

"Whereas he has successfully served a probationary period of three months as a distinguished visitor on our campus, Therefore be it resolved that the Board of Trustees heartily approves of President Andrews' appointment of George D. Aiken as Professor on the faculty of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College."

SA Budget Referendum

by Peter MacAusland

Each semester every full-time student pays a student activity fee of $10.75 which becomes part of the S.A. budget. The total budget for one year is about $155,000. This money is then allocated each spring by the S.A. Finance Committee with final approval by the S.A. Senate.

However, because of the disbandment of the senate, approval of the budget will rest upon the students voting in the referendum next Tuesday and Wednesday. The finance committee has been holding budget hearings all this week. The finance committee's final recommendations will appear on the referendum. Donna Vershay, the S.A. Treasurer, is confident that the next years budget will be balanced.

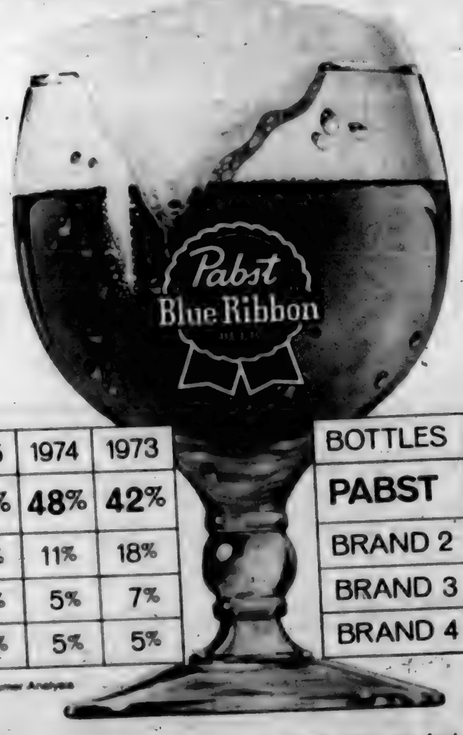
Listed below in the first column are the proposed budgets submitted by the S.A. organizations and the third column is the amount that the organizations have left this year. The non-organization accounts include mainly the operating costs of the Student Association and are generally fixed costs. Any questions anyone may have concerning the S.A. budget should be directed to Donna Vershay at the Student Association office in Billings Center or by calling 656-2053.

ORGANIZATION	BUDGET REQUEST FY 1976	ALLOCATION FY 1976	BALANCE 3/31/76
Austin Model UN	-	250.00	312.80
ASME	91.00	65.00	82.18
Ariel	16,000.00	16,000.00	-
BCGB	6,297.46	5,800.00	2,422.07
Ethan Allen Rifles	-	-	73.71
Film Bureau	16,850.00	14,000.00	5,684.48
Concert Bureau	20,000.50	6,600.00	2,500.00
News & Weather	-	-	1,457.33
Outing Club	1,900.00	1,500.00	330.68
Lawrence Forensic	-	200.00	428.09
Pershing Rifles	-	-	167.01
Premed & Predental	-	-	.88
Student Photo Service	2,910.92	2,550.00	722.13
UVM Band	2,135.00	1,150.00	1,031.58
Horse Club	660.00	400.00	95.36
Forestry Club	266.00	20.00	69.00
University Players	2,250.00	1,625.00	1,124.80
S.A. Van	1,380.00	900.00	399.70
Speakers Bureau	20,000.00	16,000.00	6,808.38
WRUV-AM & FM	16,244.20	14,000.00	6,519.69
Catalina Club	-	-	322.53
OVP	11,826.00	8,250.00	2,988.66
Vt. Cynic	5,000.00	10,550.00	18,170.24
UVM Rescue	13,468.29	5,645.00	2,420.05
L'Amicale Francais	400.00	270.00	219.00
Third World	5,350.00	400.00	478.07
Anthropology	-	-	29.21
ASCE	910.00	-	317.07
Student Home Economics	80.00	170.00	94.89
Rugby Club	1,262.10	-	70.64
East Asian Club	-	500.00	913.35
Art Club	1,815.00	1,275.00	625.63
Folk Dance Club	2,870.00	550.00	487.44
Sailing Club	200.00	1,750.00	1,034.75
SNEA	-	-	75.00
El Hispanic	-	200.00	80.00
Winter Weekend	4,650.00	900.00	1,076.82
Lacrosse Club	105.00	1,875.00	1,471.87
Plant & Soil Science	-	75.00	65.24
Wrestling Club	190.00	-	-
Wildlife Society	-	55.00	40.00
Gymnastic Club	500.00	875.00	66.42
Student Women's Caucus	-	250.00	250.00
Pre-Vet Club	-	80.00	80.00
Chess Club	-	234.00	27.30
Ananda Marga	300.00	-	-
Gay Student Union		200.00	231.00
Sub-Total	155,968.51	114,964.00	61,836.06

NON-ORGANIZATION ACCOUNTS	BUDGET REQUEST FY 1976	ALLOCATION FY 1975	BALANCE 3/31/75
Accountants Fee	2,250.00	800.00	800.00
Billings Center Information Desk	2,500.00	2,100.00	-
Billings Center Furniture and Repair	-	-	101.58
Professional Services	13,000.00	12,540.00	2,403.42
Presidential Discretionary	1,000.00	1,000.00	240.84
Contingency	-	-	76.38
Supplies and Services	2,000.00	2,060.00	772.47
Billings Center Office Fund	-	-	-
Senate Contingency	-	-	368.53
IBM Copier	-	580.00	1,177.28
Replacement Fund	2,500.00	2,500.00	2,500.00
Secretary of Communications	800.00	1,700.00	1,500.00
Secretary of Elections	-	300.00	235.40
Ticket Exchange	-	-	50.50
Sub-Total	24,050.00	24,835.80	10,226.40
Total	180,018.51	139,798.80	72,062.45

#1 in the beer capital of the world.

For years we've been telling you that in Milwaukee, beer capital of the world, Pabst Blue Ribbon is the overwhelming favorite.



CANS	1975	1974	1973
PABST	53%	48%	42%
BRAND 2	12%	11%	18%
BRAND 3	5%	5%	7%
BRAND 4	5%	5%	5%

BOTTLES	1975	1974	1973
PABST	46%	46%	43%
BRAND 2	10%	9%	11%
BRAND 3	8%	7%	8%
BRAND 4	6%	9%	10%

SOURCE Milwaukee Journal Consumer Analysis

More beer is brewed in Milwaukee than any other city in the world. So to be the #1 selling beer in Milwaukee means you've got to be brewing the best beer money can buy.

And Pabst must be doing just that. Look at the charts. Blue Ribbon accounts for more than half the beer sold in Milwaukee. It outsells the next brand nearly five to one.

That's why we feel we've earned the right to challenge any beer. So here's the Pabst challenge: Taste and compare the flavor of Blue Ribbon with the beer you're drinking and learn what Pabst quality in beer is all about. But don't take our word for it. Taste our word for it.

Pabst Blue Ribbon

PABST Since 1844. The quality has always come through.

PABST BREWING COMPANY Milwaukee, Wis., Peoria Heights, Ill., Newark, N.J., Los Angeles, Calif., Pabst, Georgia.

Noogenesis

The Vermont Institute announces NOOGENESIS, July 6—August 29 at Kingsland Bay on Lake Champlain. An experience in bio-feedback, psychic healing, bio-energetics, aura-balancing, gestalt, Tai chi, Jungian & Neo-Reichian psychology, aikido, to foster integration of the mind-body-spirit whole existing in all persons. Up to 12 credits available. Write or call— Vermont Institute
Box 2267
So. Burlington, Vt. 05401
(802-862-9666)

Recycle Bottles

If anyone is interested in recycling jars or bottles (that normally go to the dump) please call Robinson 656-3086 and ask for Dave or Donna (3084).

Interested people are reminded that there is a Recycling Barrel on the main floor of Billings. Read the sign on the barrel and don't put in any trash. Thank you.

EXXON

Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

Cynic In

CYNIC: A part-time student AND president of [illegible] same time?

P.M.: At the same time, yes. I couldn't afford [illegible] were a full-time student and my application for f[illegible] was rejected. I guess because my chances for a[illegible] were of a limited nature according to the Dean. [illegible] was questionable as I had been a full-time stude[illegible]

CYNIC: During those years you were involve[illegible] Government?

P.M.: Well, this is my first year of full involvemen[illegible]

CYNIC: Do you plan to run for SA President ag[illegible]

P.M.: No.

CYNIC: why not?

P.M.: I got bogged down with having to do thin[illegible] particularly interest me but had to be done as a[illegible] the position, therefore it detracted from projec[illegible] to have pursued.

CYNIC: For instance?

P.M.: Implementing a better communication [illegible] and the student body to create some sort of fa[illegible] process by students. Things like that.

CYNIC: If you could do it all over again, w[illegible] change?

P.M.: I don't know if you could call it char[illegible] would seek more student involvement to ge[illegible] familiar with the function of SA and secondly[illegible] more students to research University matters[illegible] affect them, ie Why tuition increases, why r[illegible] fees go up, why final exams during the last [illegible] rather than during the exam period and on an[illegible]

CYNIC: Can you draw many parallels between [illegible] and real government or do you think that [illegible] politics at the University is so ineffective [illegible] nothing to do with it?

P.M.: Well, at the University there is just not[illegible] politics. Student's primary mission in coming [illegible] education, not to play politics, whereas in th[illegible] politicians are there especially to play them.

CYNIC: What would you point to as your [illegible] achievement as SA President?

P.M.: I think the biggest one, and it's not [illegible] demonstrating that students do have the po[illegible] by the decisionmakers. The lone introductio[illegible] to stop construction of the underpass into th[illegible] I think is an achievement. The bill was crea[illegible] students Scott Bauer and I, with the necessa[illegible] Student Association. We approached Senat[illegible] "here is a major portion of your co[illegible] disapproves of the tunnel, now will you h[illegible] prevent its construction?" He did. And that[illegible] student influence I think. So I think you[illegible] Student Association potential to be an eff[illegible] however the techniques necessary to uti[illegible] must be learned.

CYNIC: Right now it seems there is a gen[illegible] involvement on campus, almost to the p[illegible] people are doing anything to alliviate that [illegible] you point to as examples of student [illegible] influencing decisions?

The R[illegible]

by Dave Mainer

The eight annual Winooski River Raft Race is to be held this year on Saturday the 19th of April. The first raft will fight its way down the course starting at 8:00 a.m.

Last year's race was very successful even though it was hampered and eventually stopped due to the loss of the rescue boat, making any attempt at rescues impossible and also the inability of the deputies to handle the enormous traffic problem. Despite this, everyone had a fantastic time, racers and spectators alike.

This year many changes have taken place. For one, the UVM Outing Club has been relieved of being sole coordinator of the race and it is being co-run by the IRA. With the help of them we are able to have many people doing the or[illegible] are going mu[illegible] at this stag[illegible] problems encountered [illegible] are being tra[illegible] and Ken Ba[illegible] especially he[illegible] solutions and[illegible] of the To[illegible] where the ra[illegible] Rich Wa[illegible] Treasurer, h[illegible] horrendous[illegible] task of keepi[illegible] The[illegible] which were[illegible] Town of [illegible] year's face[illegible] were just to[illegible] along the [illegible] the other s[illegible] Route 2. [illegible] that if there[illegible] anywhere i[illegible] be impossib[illegible] vehicle to[illegible] year no ca[illegible] belonging [illegible] bringing i[illegible] allowed o[illegible] Deputies [illegible] certain are[illegible] transportat[illegible] with vans[illegible] from the[illegible] certain are[illegible] These va[illegible] pretty [illegible] throughou[illegible]

Anot[illegible] over last [illegible] IRA's and[illegible] race cre[illegible] funded w[illegible] with In[illegible] Outing C[illegible] with mo[illegible] entry fee[illegible] only thre[illegible]

... Tennis

(continued from page sixteen)

1:00 match. UMass, the top contender in the conference should provide the racketmen with their toughest match and support would be gratefully appreciated. We're sure we can do it again this year, just help to get psyched.

Singles

Tom Lenci, UVM def
Steve Fass, Midd 4-6,7-5,7-5
Dickie Hilmer, UVM def
Steve Fier, Midd 6-2,6-4
Kirk Dice, UVM def
Andy Stern, Midd 6-3,6-2
Jay Moorhead UVM def
Todd Anderson, Midd
7,5-7,6-0
John Dana, Midd def
Kevin Delaney, UVM 7-5,6-4
John Koerner, UVM def
Scott Chitton, Midd 6-4,6-4

Doubles

Moorhead-Hilmer UVM
Fass-Anderson Midd
6-1
Dice-Lenci UVM def
Fier-Midd 6-4,7-6
Proctor-Bostwick, Midd
Beal-Turban, UVM
6-4,6-2.

eferendum

...day and ...finance ...bidding ...ee's week, ...tee's final ...l appear ...Donna ...asurer is ...ent years ...d the first ...proposed ...the S.A. ...the third column in the amount that the organizations have left this year. The non-organization accounts include mainly the operating costs of the Student Association and are generally fixed costs. Any questions anyone may have concerning the S.A. budget should be directed to Donna Vershay at the Student Association office in Billings Center or by calling 656-2053

LOCATION FY 1975	BALANCE 3/31/75
250.00	312.80
65.00	82.18
16,000.00
5,600.00	2,422.07
	73.71
14,000.00	5,884.48
6,600.00	2,500.00
	1,457.33
1,500.00	330.68
200.00	428.09
	167.01
	.88
2,550.00	722.13
1,150.00	1,031.58
400.00	95.36
20.00	69.00
1,625.00	1,124.80
900.00	399.70
16,000.00	6,808.38
14,000.00	6,519.69
	322.53
8,250.00	2,986.66
10,550.00	18,170.24
6,645.00	2,420.05
270.00	219.00
400.00	478.07
	29.21
	317.07
170.00	94.89
	70.64
500.00	913.35
1,275.00	625.63
550.00	487.44
1,750.00	1,034.75
	75.00
200.00	50.00
900.00	1,076.82
1,875.00	1,471.87
75.00	65.24
55.00	40.00
875.00	66.42
250.00	250.00
80.00	80.00
234.00	27.30
200.00	231.00
114,964.00	61,836.05

ALLOCATION FY 1975	BALANCE 3/31/75
800.00	800.00
2,100.00	-
-	101.58
12,640.00	2,403.42
1,000.00	240.84
-	76.38
2,060.00	772.47
-	-
-	368.63
580.00	1,177.28
2,500.00	2,500.00
1,700.00	1,500.00
300.00	235.40
	50.50
24,835.80	10,226.40
139,798.80	72,062.45

Recycle Bottles

...is interested in ...or bottles (that ...to the dump) ...tenson 656-3086 ...Dave or Donna

Interested people are reminded that there is a Recycling Barrel on the main floor of Billings. Read the sign on the barrel and don't put in any trash. Thank you.

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
...te 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

Cynic Interview: Peter "Quazy" MacAusland

CYNIC: A part-time student AND president of the SA at the same time?

P.M.: At the same time, yes, I couldn't afford the time if I were a full-time student and my application for full-time status was rejected. I guess because my chances for academic success were of a limited nature according to the Dean. I thought that was questionable as I had been a full-time student for 3 years.

CYNIC: During those years you were involved in Student Government?

P.M.: Well, this is my first year of full involvement.

CYNIC: Do you plan to run for SA President again?

P.M.: No.

CYNIC: why not?

P.M.: I got bogged down with having to do things which didn't particularly interest me but had to be done as an obligation to the position, therefore it detracted from projects I would like to have pursued.

CYNIC: For instance?

P.M.: Implementing a better communication between the SA and the student body to create some sort of faculty evaluation process by students. Things like that.

CYNIC: If you could do it all over again, what would you change?

P.M.: I don't know if you could call it change, but first, I would seek more student involvement to get students more familiar with the function of SA and secondly I would recruit more students to research University matters which directly affect them, ie Why tuition increases, why room and board fees go up, why final exams during the last week of classes rather than during the exam period and on and on.

CYNIC: Can you draw many parallels between student politics and real government or do you think that people believe politics at the University is so ineffective that they want nothing to do with it?

P.M.: Well, at the University there is just not much room for politics. Student's primary mission in coming here is to get an education, not to play politics, whereas in the outside world, politicians are there especially to play them.

CYNIC: What would you point to as your major political achievement as SA President?

P.M.: I think the biggest one, and it's not that obvious, is demonstrating that students do have the potential to be heard by the decisionmakers. The lone introduction of S.93, the bill to stop construction of the underpass into the state legislature I think is an achievement. The bill was created solely by two students Scott Bauer and I, with the necessary support of the Student Association. We approached Senator Daniels saying, "here is a major portion of your constituency which disapproves of the tunnel, now will you introduce a bill to prevent its construction?" He did. And that says something for student influence I think. So I think you can see that the Student Association potential to be an effective organization however the techniques necessary to utilize that potential must be learned.

CYNIC: Right now it seems there is a general lack of student involvement on campus, almost to the point that very few people are doing anything to alliviate that apathy. What would you point to as examples of student activity aimed at influencing decisions?

P.M.: I can quickly think of two. One is the Student Advisory Committee which is coming out with a comprehensive handbook on teacher evaluations which will be different from the Albatross which was a computerized form. Too computerized. It will come out in the fall. It will be a starting point for teacher reviews if a teacher's evaluation is poor. The other is the two students on the Presidential Search Committee, Dave Schwartz and Tina Boardman. They are playing a major role because any college president coming to the University would not want to be met with student disapproval. This would be voiced ahead of time by those two students.

CYNIC: What's your favorite bar in Burlington?

P.M.: My favorite bar?

CYNIC: Uh Huh.

P.M.: Ah, well I work at the Last Chance, but my favorite bar, is I think, gee I don't know I go to all of them.

CYNIC: (Laughs)

P.M.: I go to the Sting alot because I like the music.

CYNIC: Do you frequent F.A.D.C.?

P.M.: I've been to F.A.D.C. at Lambda Iota almost every time since I've been in school. I've missed it twice this season which I think is a pretty good record.

CYNIC: What brand of cigars do you smoke?

P.M.: I don't smoke cigars. I don't smoke cigarettes. I don't smoke tiparillos.

CYNIC: Anything else you don't smoke?

P.M.: I'll leave it at that.

CYNIC: When was the last time you had your hair cut?

P.M.: I just had it cut by a girl named Sheila, who is my dance partner at the Sting. She cut it on the piano stool down in the Round Room in the basement of Billings Center with her shears. I think she did a good job, I had about two inches cut off.

CYNIC: Do you have a particular lady friend?

P.M.: What is this? No, I don't have a particular one at the moment.

CYNIC: So you're eligible?

P.M.: Jesus...

CYNIC: What are your plans for this summer?

P.M.: Oh, I think I'll use that old cliche and say I'm going to travel.

CYNIC: You're going to travel?

P.M.: Yeah, I'm going to travel.

CYNIC: Where to?

P.M.: I have a possible ride down to Georgia. I do a fair amount of hitching. Three summers ago I hitched across the country so I have some experience in long distance hitching.

CYNIC: You must have had some interesting experiences in your travels.

P.M.: Oh, yes.

CYNIC: Can you relate one of those experiences?

P.M.: Well a friend and I were hitching in Nevada and we got dropped off the road in the middle of the desert. Once you get off the road you can get pretty well cooked and I mean literally cooked, cause it's damn hot. So this lady picked us up and took us ten miles which is only a drop in the bucket. She said she was going to her camp so we went with her to stay there for the night. It was about 12 miles off the Interstate. The place turned out to be a friend's store and we camped at a nearby lakeside. During the night the woman broke into tears and started crying. We couldn't figure out what the problem was. We slowly found out the woman was very lonely. She was a loner. When we had first gotten into the car that day she had just delivered a monologue going on and talking about driving her station wagon across country. She finally calmed down and said in the morning she would take us back to the Interstate. Morning came and she drove us as far as a coffeehouse and said she couldn't take us all the way back. So we were pretty bummed out and spend about 3 hours cooking in the sun on our way back to the Interstate, but in retrospect it was fun because it was an experience. That's the way hitching is.

CYNIC: So where will you be going from Georgia?

P.M.: Well this is all tentative. I operate on the old spur of the moment philosophy. Spontaneous living you know. If a good opportunity comes up, I'll jump on it.

CYNIC: How do you think the CYNIC has been since the new editors took over? And how do you think students feel about it?

P.M.: I think it reflects the new staff and I feel the difficulties will iron out. I've heard reports of confusion down in the basement office there. Things like "Oh I was supposed to do this" or "A deadline? What's a deadline? I think most of the CYNICS in Billings go by the weekend, but on Monday I still see some around and that shows that people aren't picking them up as fast as they used to.

CYNIC: What do you think of the CYNIC interview?

P.M.: Of the CYNIC interview?

CYNIC: Yes.

P.M.: Well I had nothing else to do right now.

CYNIC: And neither did I.

Photo by Steve Tanner

The Rat Race Before The Raft Race

by Dave Mainer

The eight annual Winooski River Raft Race is to be held this year on Saturday the 19th of April. The first raft will fight its way down the course starting at 8:00 a.m.

Last year's race was very successful even though it was hampered and eventually stopped due to the loss of the rescue boat, making any attempt at rescues impossible and also the inability of the deputies to handle the enormous traffic problem. Despite this, everyone had a fantastic time, racers and spectators alike.

This year many changes have taken place. For one, the UVM Outing Club has been relieved of being sole coordinator of the race and it is being co-run by the IRA. With the help of them we are able to have many people doing the organizing and things are going much more smoothly at this stage. Many of the problems which were encountered the year before are being ironed out. Bill Root and Ken Bartlett have been especially helpful in providing solutions and getting the gripes of the Town of Duxbury, where the race is held, straight. Rich Warner, the IRA Treasurer, has been doing the horrendous, time-consuming task of keeping the books.

The major complaints which were submitted by the Town of Duxbury after last year's race were that there were just too many cars parked along the dirt road located on the other side of the river from Route 2. They were worried that if there was an emergency anywhere along there, it would be impossible for an emergency vehicle to get through. This year no cars other than those belonging to entrants who are bringing in their rafts will be allowed on the River Road. Deputies will be provided at certain areas in Waterbury and transportation will be provided with vans bringing spectators from these parking lots to certain areas along the course. These vans will be running pretty much continuously throughout the day.

Another big improvement over last year is that with IRA's and SA's help, the raft race committee has been funded with $1600 to work with. In the past years the Outing Club paid all expenses with money received in the entry fees. With the entry fee only three dollars the Outing Club lost close to $100 on last year's race. This year rather than raising the fee to $10 we were able to get very helpful support from the SA and IRA. This money will be used basically to fulfill the strict requirements imposed on us by the town of Duxbury such as providing off the road parking for 1000 cars and hiring more efficient traffic and spectator controls. Also after last years race it was evident that better rescue facilities were needed. This will be provided this year.

Last year's race brought a couple of thousand people down to the banks of the Winooski to watch the one hundred plus rafts go down. Entrants came from as far as Springfield, Mass. and Albany, N.Y. and spectators were present from all over New England. Two years ago Wide World of Sports came to cover the race as well as Sports Illustrated too. With all of these people present there is usually a problem with littering. This is all private land which the owners kindly let us use. They all like to see the race every year and it would be a sad thing if they decided that they would not let spectators use their land to watch the race anymore due to large amounts of trash left behind. Last year not too much was left and this year I would hope there isn't any. This problem is by no means caused entirely by the spectator. Rafters often intentionally or by accident put much debris into the river such as beer cans, large amounts of wood, styrofoam, milk containers, and 55 gallon drums. Many ecology groups such as trout unlimited have gotten very excited in the past over this problem and have gone as far as using editorials in the news papers and on TV to influence the stopping of the race for good. These people have a large backing and it is conceivable that they could put an end to this springtime tradition. There was so much heat after last year's race from the ecologists and the town of Duxbury, to name a few, that if not for the willingness of IRA and SA to take on the large burden of running the race the Outing Club would most likely have decided against having a large race if any at all again this year. They went and talked to the officials from Duxbury and got things straightened out so that they agreed to allow the race to go this year. They gave the impressions however that this is going to be a trial or another chance. So if things go badly this year it could be all over. This is why I hope (entrants and spectators alike) will abide by the rules set by the raft race committee.

This year looks to be a great race. There won't be the traffic jam problem that has been present in the past and with the better organization and more man power this year everything should go much more smoothly. The snowfall that we've been getting should really make things get hopping when it hopefully warms up the water will be really fast and the rafters will have to be on their toes. Watch out for that trestle! See you all there—Rain or Shine!

... Tennis

(continued from page sixteen)

1:00 match. UMass, the top contender in the conference should provide the racketmen with their toughest match and support would be gratefully appreciated. We're sure we can do it again this year, just help us get psyched.

Singles

Tom Lenci, UVM def. Steve Fass, Midd 4-6,7-5,7-5
Dickie Hilmer, UVM def. Steve Fier, Midd 6-2,6-4
Kirk Dice, UVM def. Randy Stern, Midd 6-3,6-2
Jay Moorhead UVM def. Judd Anderson, Midd 7-5,5-7,6-0
John Dana, Midd def. Kevin Delaney, UVM 7-5,6-4
John Koerner, UVM def. Bart Chitton, Midd 6-4,6-4

Doubles

Moorhead-Hilmer UVM def. Fass-Anderson Midd 6-4,6-1
Dice-Lenci UVM def. Dana-Fier Midd 6-4,7-6
Proctor-Bostwick, Midd def. Beal-Turban, UVM 6-4,6-2.

Peter Rebutts Knut

(continued from page seven)

crossings. Several days is not sufficient time to determine if crossing guards would be a viable alternative. Mr. Rostad, I guess I should have stated "In depth exploration and possible proper implementation of some alternatives have been neglected."

I now become somewhat upset. Mr. Rostad writes "The idea that the administration has not explored alternatives is one with a great deal of evidence challenging it," and directly implies that that is my "idea." Mr. Rostad has grossly misinterpreted my third reason. I have never had any idea of that kind at all. It is my strong conviction that the University administration has done more exploration into alternatives than the BPC and the DEC, and I have received full cooperation from the University's Office of Administrative Resources, which has been dealing with the underpass.

(4) The problem, which the underpass is attempting to solve, has been inadequately defined.

(5) Justification for the underpass is insufficient.

Mr Rostad suggests that I "spend some time at the crosswalk and observe the UVM style of Russian roulette," if I really maintain my fourth and fifth reasons. It is because I have spent so much time in observing the pedestrian-auto conflict that I list my fourth and fifth reasons of opposition. The problem is the poor co-ordination of pedestrians and vehicles crossing on the same level. The volumes of both pedestrians and vehicles do not, by themselves, justify an underpass. A safe passage across the road now becomes a factor. I hope I am correct in assuming that Mr. Rostad is sarcastic in writing "If we can not even cross a road by ourselves, it is our own problem." Don't be sarcastic, Mr. Rostad. If a student, whether handicapped or not, can't cross the road safely, that student has a problem. The existing traffic lights, although inefficient, do provide a safe passage across the road, only patience is needed to receive the "walk" signal.

The students are the major users of the crosswalks. For nearly two school years they have been crossing Main Street. No student complains about the so-called hazardous crossings have been registered or even heard by any official organization of any kind. Over one million student crossings have passed through over six mission automobiles in the immediate area of the proposed underpass during this time period. Mr. Rostad completely misunderstands the reason of opposition of UVM students. I venture to say that they are opposed because crossing Main Street is not hazardous and that they don't need the underpass to insure for a safe crossing. The students who cross Main Street several times daily throughout the school year have the best perspective of the situation and can determine if an underpass is a necessity. I would suggest to Mr. Rostad that he talk to some of his fellow students and seek their opinion.

A column in most newspapers reflect a sound opinion. But Mr. Rostad, in his column entitled "Peter's Project," has misinterpreted my involvement with the underpass, distorted documented facts beyond my comprehension, has written inaccurate facts to support his twisted opinion and has displayed an incredible lack of knowledge of the entirety of the underpass issue. I can say that I was very upset in reading this so-called piece of journalism. I am ready and willing to debate Mr. Rostad, publicly or privately, on the underpass issue and I an willing to answer any questions anyone may have concerning the proposed underpass. Just call 656-2053.

MAGRAMS It's an experience

WOW! LEVIS® SCRUBBED SOFT FOR YOU!

The Levi's® look in a special look, and we've washed them to give you the broken-in feeling that you want. Make Levis® a tradition in your life, and come to Magrams for quality washed jeans — $14-$19 washed jacket $19

Way-in Shop

Boutilier's
ART CENTER
ART SUPPLIES
DRAFTING SUPPLIES
CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING.
VT.'S LARGEST ART STORE
112 Church Street BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181
10% OFF WITH UVM ID.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN MICHELIN RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

sports

O'Connell Named Captain; Koch, Rickard Honored

The New Captain, Tim O'Connell

by Norm Robinson

The University of Vermont hockey team had its annual break up dinner this past Thursday and three players were honored.

Tim O'Connell, the school's highest scorer ever, and the nation's number one goal scorer, this past season with 41 tallies, was elected captain of the 1975-76 season.

Bill Koch, who separated his shoulder in the 7-5 win over Providence in the opening round of the playoffs, was named Most Valuable Player by his teammates.

Andy Rickard, a relatively unknown senior, was presented the Coaches Award by Jim Cross. This special award is often referred to as the Unsung Hero Award.

O'Connell, the All-American and all everything else replaces John Murphy, who was the team's captin this past season.

Having scored 190 points in three season's with 86 goals and 104 assists O'Connell rocketed from seventh place into the All-Time Scoring lead with 41 goals and 41 assists for 82 points this past season.

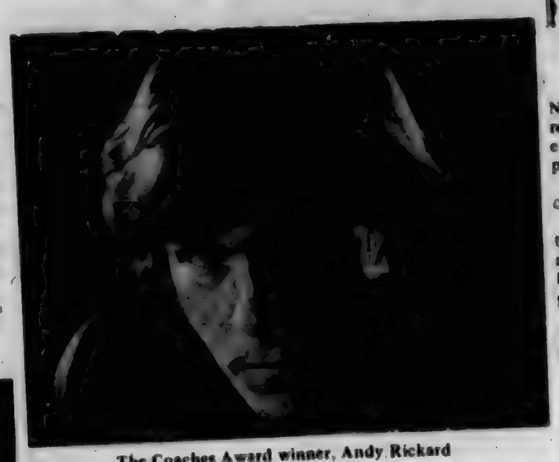
Koch's 66 goals and 58 assists put him in sixth place in All-Time Scoring and was one of the toughest wings in the game.

Accepting the MVP award Koch replied "I really appreciate this. It's been a hell of a four years.

Although he couldn't play in the playoffs at Boston Garden, Koch was a key factor in the Catamounts getting there.

Andy Rickard spent a majority of his four years in uncertainity, moved to wing and found a home. He had seven goals and 14 assists this past season. The Coaches Award is annually given to the player that Cross deems worthy. There is no special requirements other than being a member of the Team; and having "put out" all season.

Bill Koch -- Vermont's Most Valuable Player



The Coaches Award winner, Andy Rickard

Rickard certainly "put out" for the Catamounts. Although his statistics aren't as impressive as some, his constant hustle was a trademark for Vermont.

Dr. Edward Andrews, President of the University; and athletic director Lambert were guests at the dinner and both praised the teams hustle and competiveness.

Andrews said "I may be leaving Vermont, but I am not leaving UVM hockey. I will be back to see you play as often as I can."

Cross also announced that UVM will make another trip to St. Louis in November next year. Next year's games will be at an opportune time because they are a week before the Cats open the Division I season in the North Country Tournament at St. Lawrence University.

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

With the first round of the NBA playoffs in session as you read this article, your fearless editor is going to attempt to pick 'em once again.

The playoff picture is a complicated one but here goes!

Boston and Golden State, the top teams in the Eastern and Western Conferences draw byes for the first round of the playoffs.

In the East: New York, the wild card team, will face Houston in a best-of-three set with the winner meeting Boston. At the same time Washington and Buffalo will collide for the rights to the Eastern Conference finals.

In the West, Seattle faces Detroit in the best-of-three series with the winner meeting Golden State in a best-of-seven set. Meanwhile, Chicago and Kansas City-Omaha tangle.

The winners of the East and the West meet to determine the champion.

Going back to the East, New York looks like the best bet to beat Houston. The Knicks have too much experience for the Rockets.

New York runs into trouble however as they meet Boston in the Eastern Conference semi-finals. Last year's champions have Dave Cowens, JoJo White and the ageless John Havlicek plus a lot, lot more. Boston should win easily.

The Washington-Buffalo series could be exciting. Both teams love to run but the Bullets should run faster and farther and move on to meet Boston.

The Eastern final may be the greatest of all the series. Boston and Washington are both fast-break teams and have great rebounding as well. Look for the Celtics to win it in seven games. They have more depth and the home court advantage. The loss of Phil Chenier has to hurt Washington.

In the West, the mere presence of Bob Lanier and Dave Bing has to make Detroit a favorite over Seattle.

When the Piston's meet Golden State, most anything can happen but give the edge to State. Rick Barry and his 30 points a game is as good a reason as any.

The Chicago-Kansas City series promises to be a neck and neck battle. Kansas City beat out Chicago during the season, five games to four and the playoffs could be as tight. My vote goes to Kansas City. Sam Lacey is having a great year and if the Kings are ever going to do it, this is the year.

Golden State looks like the top team in the West, but it could be a long haul. Clifford Ray will knock heads with Lacey in a real battle but when the smoke clears the Warriors will be on top.

In what will undoubtedly be anti-climatic after the Eastern Conference championship, the final will feature Boston and the Golden State.

The Celtic tradition will continue as they should handle the Warriors quite easily. The Boston bench is too much for Golden State to handle and Cowens and company should run them in to the ground.

Well, there it is! The two best teams (Boston and Washington) are from the East and can't meet in the finals and either of them could handle the best in the West.

In case you hadn't heard, Muhammed Ali has announced his next title fight. Ron Lyle will meet Ali on May 16 at Las Vegas.

The fight will be on home television so stock up on your beer and pretzels. On second thought, don't! It won't be a long fight. Ali will knock out Lyle in an early round, like the sixth.

Tennis Cats Trounce Middlebury In Season Opener

Following a decisive pre-season loss to powerful Williams team on Thursday, the UVM Racketmen proved to Middlebury College that it still had the winning way.

Led by the likes of returning letterman, captain Jay Moorhead, Dickie Hilmer, Tom Lenci, Kirk Dice, and Kevin Delaney, the team looks stronger than last year when it won the Yankee Conference title.

Depth seems to be the biggest asset, with two strong freshman John Howard, Koerner and Scott Turban rounding out the top selections. "We've played together for a long time and in a sport where togetherness is so important, we've got the edge". Coach Hal Grieg calls this team, "the strongest team to play at UVM." He further added; "we were disappointed with the loss to Williams, but proved ourselves when we needed to at Middlebury. I guess, I was very pleased with the way everyone played."

From the outset UVM took the lead with Dicki Hilmer accounting for the first victory over Middlebury's number two player, Steve Fier. Coming off an injury at Williams, Hilmer ran through his opponent 6-2,6-4, in a carefully played match. Then the spot light changed to court one where Tom Lenci, playing the number one position, had his work cut out for him. Losing the first set and behind in the second, much credit must be given to Tom, for when he needed the important point, he won it and ended winning the second set and the match in the third set 7-5. Following in the winning tradition, Kirk Dice, after a slow seasons start, caught fire and swept his opponent easily in the number 3 position. As soon as Kirk gets his winning form, he'll be up and running for the number one position along with captian Jay Moorhead. The team's depth may be accented when someone with Jay's talent is playing in the four position. Needless to say, Moorhead won his match and gave the Cats an early 4-0 lead. It was Kevin Delaney who hit "hot" Middlebury player John Dana in the number five position. Playing well all spring, Kevin played well in his own right, but Dana was just too devastating for Kevin's game of patience. John Koerner, the freshman whiz, rounded off the singles wins with a carefully played match in the number six position. Steady play and consistency are John's virtues and can outlast most anyone on a slow court.

Strong doubles have always been the mainstay of the team and Saturday showed no exception. Combining Moorhead and Hilmer at number one, this strong team showed no match for Middlebury's best as they won easily 6-1, 6-2. Then the number two team of Lenci and Dice defeated Middlebury's team as it downed them 6-2, 7-6 in a toughly fought match. The last doubles of Scotty Turban and a promising newcomer Tim Beal sustained the Cats second lost in a three set marathon match.

However, a strong team needs support and backing in order to go all the way. This weekend the University of Massachusetts comes to Gutterson field house for a

(continued on page fifteen)

RAP CORNER

by Jeff Twiss

For the remaining few issues of the Cynic, Norm and I will voice our opinion(s) on current issues affecting many of us sports fans. I think many of you will agree and disagree towards the comments.

Just off. The world of sports has lost a truly remarkable man and coach in John Wooden. The string of 88 consecutive victories in a row, a dozen or so college championship wins and on and on. But, for all anti-UCLA rooters, you have to admit he did a great coaching job in the win over Kentucky. He had a young, inexperienced team, yet he built a poised, determined ball club.

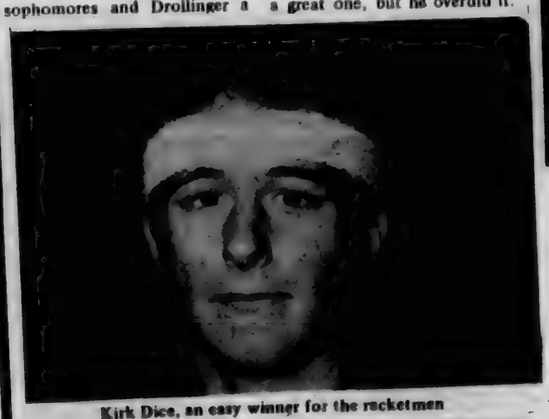
Also, the play of Marques Johnson, Richard Washington and Ralph Drollinger for UCLA was amazing in the championship game. Johnson and Washington are both sophomores and Drollinger a Junior. All three shot and rebounded fantastically.

BASEBALL -- Orioles to win the AL East. They can't go wrong with potential 30 HR hitter Lee May, also Ken Singleton, Mike Torrez and Dave Duncan. Don't look good Yankee and Bosox Fans.

HOCKEY -- I think Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman will be or should be traded. The Bruins need a new look--Why not? Look at this year's performance!

Also, it appears that either the Canadiens, Flyers of Sabres will capture Lord Stanley's Cup.

CURT GOWDY -- Not bad as an announcer but he should stick to one sport and also to cut out picking favorites. For instance, he raved about Jack "Goose" Givens until he signed off after the Kentucky -- Syracuse game. Granted the kid (Givens) is good and will be a great one, but he overdid it.



Kirk Dice, an easy winner for the racketmen

Dickie Hilmer, comes off an injury to win

Synchronized Swim Show

The Catalina Club will be participating in a Synchronized Swim Show on April 10, 11, and 12 at 7:30 p.m. at Forbush Pool.

Entitled "Catalina Cuisine" the show will be a series of routines on food.

Swimmers will impersonate different foods and utensils associated with food, such as one routine where salt and pepper shakers are the stars.

Tickets are on sale at Southwick and the Patrick Gym at anytime and at Waterman from 12-1. Tickets will be also sold at the door. They are .50 for children and students with ID's and $1.00 for adults.

It's an interesting, exciting and very different form of entertainment you'll enjoy it. Hope to see you there!

UVM S.A. Concerts Presents
The Fourth Annual
BLUES FESTIVAL
FEATURING...
The Buddy Guy-Junior Wells Band
Mose Allison
The Luther Johnson Chicago Blues Band
The Son Seals Blues Band
Robert Junior Lockwood
Saturday April 26 at 7:30PM
UVM Patrick Gym
FREE Workshops on Saturday Afternoon in Billings Center.
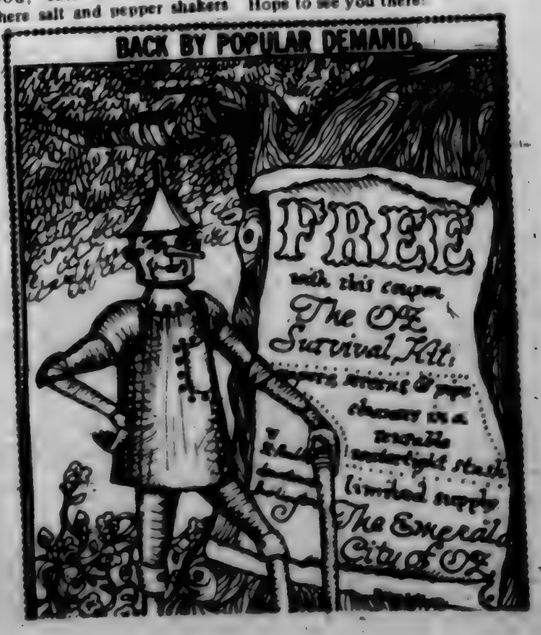
TICKETS: $3.50 w/ UVM ID at UVM Bookstore
$4.50 Gen'l. Adm. at UVM Bookstore
Vermont Bookstore in Middlebury
Buch Spieler in Montpelier
Bailey's in Burlington

There is only one Earth brand shoe. You will experience its comfort as soon as you try it on. And the longer you wear it, the more you'll appreciate its quality and value.
Earth shoe
Available only at:
139 BANK STREET



VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont — FOUNDED IN 1883

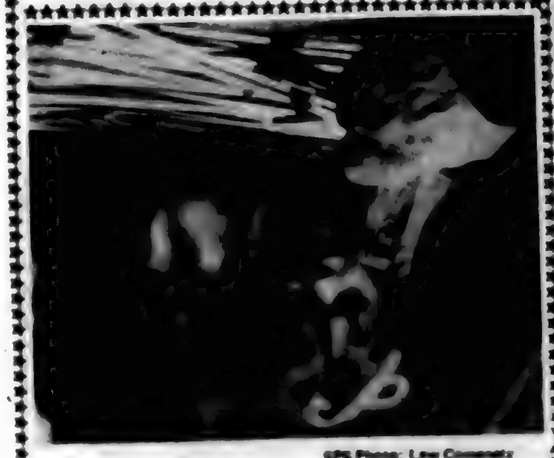
VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 13 — APRIL 17, 1975

American Freedom Train Comes to Vermont

Engineer Popular with Children

A Long Wait for a Short Trip

Is the Bicentenial Commercialized?



Non-Profit? SPS Photo: Lew Comenetz

Support American Bicentennial

Davis Captures Student Vote

In a decisive victory, Staige Davis has won the Student Association elections held on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, gathering more than twice the votes received by his nearest opponent. Davis' total, 627 votes, was 45% of the total votes cast. Dave Schwartz came in second with 235 votes, and Bruce Maddern came in third with 180 votes. In the Vice Presidential race, Paul Ajamian was elected with 580 votes to 447 votes cast for his opponent Frank Coiffi. The remaining votes were cast as follows: Ken Bartlett – 178; Dallas Sacher – 133. Observers in the S.A. were disappointed with the turnout, since only 1353 votes were cast, a percentage of only 18% of the total student body eligible to vote in this election.

Staige Davis, a Junior from Grand Isle, Vermont, is currently involved with the Concert Bureau, the Student Activities Coordinating Council, and the recently formed Student Activities Board. He campaigned on a platform of "listening, communicating, and working" with Students. To serve students, he advocates more effective publicity about S.A. and its activities.

Davis sees two programs that can be beneficial to UVM. He feels there is a definite need for a Student Sex Information Service, which will provide wholesale non-prescription contraceptives, a referral service for sexuality, birth control, V.D., pregnancy and abortion, and inexpensive medicine for students.

Davis wants a S.A. Housing Bureau for off-campus students to channel and correlate information on non-UVM housing. This service would provide a listing of up-to-date apartments and houses, and monitor tenants' rights to provide protection for the students.

Davis stresses that communication between S.A. organizations and the student population should be improved. This would allow students to have a greater input in student government, if they became more aware of the issues affecting students.

Staige Davis will replace the current S.A. President, Peter MacAusland this May. He will become more familiar with the functions and responsibilities of the S.A. president this summer.

New S.A. President Staige Davis SPS Photo: Lew Comenetz

Leaders Wanted At OVP

A number of rewarding leadership positions are available with the Project Coordinators Council, the student-run governing group of the Office of Volunteer Programs. The leadership positions, which are listed below, are opportunities for UVM students to explore their own leadership potentialities and to develop and use a wide range of organizational and communication skills relevant to the jobs available. Students need not have had prior experience in leadership positions but must have an interest and/or need to; 1) explore their personal potential, 2) test out career options and; 3) to develop an understanding of the organizational structure of "social service/learning systems" such as the Office of Volunteer Programs.

Listed below are the positions which are available . . . they can be arranged on a credit/non-credit and/or work-study basis.

CHAIRPERSON

preside over PCC meetings coordinate efforts of 3 member committee frequent communication feedback between

(continued on page eleven)

Big Brother/Sisters Reach Out

Big Brother/Sister Program activities, events, policies, and procedures, are initiated, planned, and evaluated by the Big Brother/Sister Project Coordinating Committee. Members are all full time students and Big Brother/Sisters, working on such activities as interviewing, office work, social events, placement, publicity, recruitment, and volunteer follow-up.

As the school year draws to a close, several activities and events are planned: Actionfest, Little Brother/Sister Day at the UVM Farm, Spring Picnic, and opportunities for YMCA camp, Football, and admission to the Freedom Train.

Presently there are 231 volunteers in the program; 62 Big Brothers and 114 Big Sisters have been placed this year while 21 Big Brothers and 34 Big Sisters have remained from past years. 71 Big Brothers/Sisters live off campus in Burlington, 23 live off campus and outside of Burlington, Living/Learning Center has 27 Big Brothers/Sisters, Wills–8, Buckham–8, Chittenden–5, Marsh–1, Austin–3, Tupper–7, Harris–3, Millis–8, Mason–7, Simpson–9, Hamilton–3, Wright–13, Patterson–4, Christie–5, Wing–6, Davis–7, Wilks–11, and J. Mance–2.

At present 84 individuals representing 45 agencies have referred children to the program. Each of the 84 individuals has been sent a letter describing the program in detail, emphasizing their responsibilities and the volunteers, discussing the new OVP application, the revised Little Brother/ Sister referral form, and the prospects for increased development of the Big Brother/Sister Program.

One-hundred and ten children are still waiting for a Big Brother or Sister, most of these are little boys. The Coordinating Committee will be interviewing prospective Big Brothers and Sisters until the end of classes, however, interviews from now until May are only granted to those volunteers who will be here most of the summer. After the end of classes in May the Coordinating Committee members won't be available until the first week of classes in September.

The coordinating committee spent much time this year on changing office procedures to meet the enormous work load when dealing with 45 agencies representing area schools, State Department of Social Services, Visiting Nurses Association, Burlington Housing Authority, etc., and several hundred student volunteers. Now that the foundation has been changed and rebuilt, next year the Coordinating Committee plans to spend much more time on strengthening the program in such areas as volunteer follow-up, volunteer commitment and activities, social agency follow-up and meeting the needs of both volunteers and the agencies.

The Big Brother/Sister Program has a budget of little over 1,000 dollars per school.

OVP: Big Brother/Sister Program Helps Out.

More than half of this money is used to provide Big Brothers and Sisters, Little Brothers and Sisters, with free transportation, (Bus tokens and taxi slips). Another portion of the money is used for printing the BB/S Bulletin, I.D. Cards, referral forms, and posters. Money from the budget is used for four large parties throughout the school year -- Halloween, Christmas, sledding, and spring picnic. At each party ninety dollars is spent on food and refreshments such as sandwich bars, cakes, ice cream, and punch. Additional money is spent on prizes for several games provided for little brothers and sisters. When little brothers and sisters have a hard time getting to and from the parties, the OVP van travels around Burlington picking them up and dropping them home after the fun. In addition, once a week the OVP van also shuttles the little brothers and sisters from Northpark and Northgate to UVM and back again.

Besides the social activities the Coordinating Committee provides, several individuals and organizations help with activities and benefits.

One of our biggest benefits and most appreciated comes from Fred Smith, Director of Saga, (University Food Service). Fred has allowed any Little Brother or Sister to eat free twice a week in any UVM Dining Hall. First Semester this year SAGA served 413 free meals to Little Brothers and Sisters. Also SAGA provides food for the parties at very reasonable prices and donated turkeys and fixings to three families of Little Brothers and Sisters for Thanksgiving.

Little Brothers and Sisters can participate in Actionfest during the school year where planned activities and team sports are held in the UVM Gymnasium. In addition, Little Brothers and Sisters have the same Gymnasium privileges as their Big Brothers and Sisters have.

Champlain Ferry – Special ½ price for both Big Brother and Little Brother and Big Sister and Little Sister anytime.

All Little Brothers and Sisters go to any UVM basketball games free of charge.

Big Brothers/Sisters, Little Brothers/Sisters have a discount rate at Cinema I and II, Shelburne Road and for the last two years were admitted free to the UVM Ice Show.

The Coordinating Committee also provides volunteers with a list of suggestions of things to do and places to go, some of which appear on the backside of the enclosed Big Brother/Sister Bulletin.

The Coordinating Committee believes a Big Brother/Sister, in addition to their relationship, can inform Little Brother/Sisters family about benefits available to them. For these reasons the committee provides all volunteers with the following health care information and asks them to discuss the benefits with their little Brothers/Sisters family.

Early periodic screening diagnosis treatment – preventative medical care for medicaid children.

Dental care – a gift from the tooth fairy!

The supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children, (WIC)

(continued on page nine)

UFW Supports Boycott

The Burlington United Farm Workers Support Committee is launching a major campaign in Burlington to spread the word of the lettuce–grape–Gallo Boycott. The major focus of this campaign is the boycott of all Gallo wines, until the Gallo wine corporation signs contracts with the United Farm Workers Union (UFW). The UFW is a democratic, grassroots union of migrant and permanent farmworkers who harvest the fruits and vegetables in America's agricultural valleys and orchards. The UFW won contracts with Gallo in 1967 which gave the workers decent wages and better working conditions. In the spring of 1973, Gallo signed "sweet-heart" contracts with the Teamsters Union without the consent of the workers, which effectively eliminated many of the gains the workers had made with the UFW contracts.

The Gallo Boycott is part of a national Boycott Gallo campaign launched by farmworkers who went on strike when Gallo began its union busting. The Gallo Corporation has poured more than 13 million dollars into an anti-boycott campaign and has hired two top public relations firms to counter the boycott. The American people know which side is on the side of justice though. According to the Wall St. Journal and the San Francisca Chronicle, Gallo's sales are down 9–10% across the nation, and in places like Boston sales are down more than 50%. As the word of the injustices Gallo perpetrates on their workers spreads around, their sales will continue to decline until they are forced to sign once again with the true representatives of the workers, the United Farm Workers Union.

Several weeks ago the UFW support committee won a victory when it succeeded in clearing the University of Vermont of all scab non-UFW lettuce. The UFW support committee is spreading the boycott by speaking and showing a slide show on the UFW to church groups, unions, student groups and at homes of friends and neighbors. The committee also sets up informational picket lines on Saturday mornings and afternoons at First National supermarket on Williston Road to inform shoppers of the boycott. Supporters are invited to join the picket line on Saturday to help spread the boycott.

Farmworkers are also putting pressure on the wealthy California growers in the valleys and fields. The UFW has led many strikes in the Southwest this winter, protesting the hazardous working conditions, low wages, and harrassment from field bosses that farmworkers are subject to. A few weeks ago 15,000 farmworkers marched on Gallo headquarters in Modesto, California demanding a UFW contract and renouncing the "sweetheart" deals with the Teamsters. For justice to be won though, the farmworkers need the support of the consumer to show they won't stand for injustice. Boycotting Gallo wines is a small sacrifice for the consumer but means a great deal for the hardworking exploited farmworker. Don't buy injustice; boycott grapes, non-UFW lettuce and Gallo wines which include: Boone's Farm, Spanada, Tyrolia, Red Mountain, Thunderbird, Ripple, Paisano, Madria–Madria Sangria, Josef Steuben and all other wines from Modesto, California.

National Food Day Fair Saga Plans Special Menu

by Cheryl King

Back in the late 60's, two brothers, William and Paul Paddock, wrote a book entitled, Famine 1975. They forecast the global food crisis facing the world today. People scoffed at them and called them doomsdayers.

Well, since then the world population has quietly slipped past the four billion mark and the problem worsens. If the current rates continue, the earth may have to support 7 billion by the year 2000. Food Day is concerned with the impact of these numbers, but it is also intended to focus on other elements of the food picture. The American Diet should be examined, the cost of food has many factors that keep spirling it upward, people are malnourished in the country, agribusiness has great control over our eating habits as well as what their actions do to the environment. The purpose of the Food Fair and the dining hall menu for April 17 is intended to initiate discussion on these issues and provide a participation opportunity as well.

Robinson Hall, members of Living/Learning nutrition suite, nutrition program people and a host of on-campus/-off-campus people have organized today's activities. One activity is an experiential event, a menu in most dining halls based on the concept of eating lower on the food chain. This is intended to be first a culinary delight, and then an educational experience. All during the past week, including the IRA meeting, the merits, pro and con, have been debated. IRA voted to support the events of the day provided that one dining hall serve meat. We agree that choice is critical in this learning experience. If students choose to eat the foods in the Food Day Menu, it will have much greater meaning. But some students will really not exercise that choice. Sometimes habit prevents our exercising it wisely.

We urge everyone to note this and examine the purpose of Food Day as well as established behavior. But far more important, we ask members of the UVM campus to support this effort. You may discover a neat treat and it's a good way to say thank you to Saga for participating in this national observance.

Happy, healthy eating.

Featured This Week:

Blues Festival To Arrive at UVM April 26 p. 8

Thoughts And Reflections

13 Great Horror Movies Revisited p. 7

UVM Tennis Team Clinches First Match Of Season p. 12

calendar annoucements

TM Program at L/L

A program entitled Living the Science of Creative Intelligence (Living SCI) is being offered for the 1975-76 school year by the Living/Learning Center for UVM students practicing Transcendental Meditation (TM). Besides benefitting from the enriched environment produced by several meditators living together, participants will be offered checking services and advanced lectures. The activities of members of Living SCI will be aimed at making the TM program more available to other members of the L/L community. If you are interested and would like to take part, please call Marselle at 863-1418 or write to 308 Main Street, Burlington, Vermont.

Orientation Planned

The Program for Orientation 1975 is now being planned. This year the Orientation Period falls between August 31 and September 3. We are interested in hearing any ideas you might have that you would like to see implemented. Any input would be appreciated. Please respond in the next week or so.

Nancy Magnus Counseling and Testing 146 S. Williams Street.

Baha'i Club Discussions

The Baha'i College Club is holding a series of discussions in different locations around campus. If you are interested in the unity of mankind and would like to hear the Baha'i approach, please plan to drop by:

Monday April 21, Living Learning Center, A110, 7:30 p.m. and Thursday, April 24, 313 Waterman, 7:30 p.m.

TICKET Needed For Moshe Dayan

General Moshe Dayan's appearance at Patrick Gym on Friday evening has been accompanied by some of the usual confusion. Posters publicizing the event bore the words "Free with UVM ID". Many students who plan to attend the event have interpreted this to mean that they will be admitted to the gym, merely by showing the ID card. According to SA Speakers Chairperson Dick Cassidy this is not the case. "No one will be admitted to the speech without a ticket. Students will not be charged, but they still must have a ticket."

As this Cynic went to press, it appeared that some tickets would be available at the door.

Interested In A VPIRG Suite?

Interested in forming a VPIRG (Vermont Public Interest Research Group) suite at Living-Learning Center? VPIRG is a statewide student-oriented organization working for broad social change in Vermont. Contact Tom Joslin at 656-2080 or 303 Chittenden - UVM for more information.

John Dewey Lecture Series

Friday, April 18 at 8:15 p.m. in the John Dewey Memorial Lounge, Old Mill - The third lecture in the John Dewey Lecture Series will take place. The speaker will be Professor Joseph Margolis, Temple University. His topic is "The Relevance of Dewey's Thought to Contemporary Work in Theory of Knowledge."

Wednesday, April 23 at 8:15 p.m. in the John Dewey Memorial Lounge, Old Mill - The fourth lecture in the John Dewey Lecture Series will take place. The speaker will be Professor Frederick Olafson, University of California at San Diego. His topic is "The Relevance of Dewey's Thought to Contemporary Work in Philosophy of Education." The series is free, and the public is invited.

Modern Dance Performance

Billings Governing board is bringing the Johnson State Dance Company to UVM on Friday April 18 at 7 p.m. in Southwick Gym. They are a modern dance group that performs to music by such artists as Santana, Joni Mitchell, Rick Wakeman, the Beatles, Pink Floyd, the Pointer sisters, and Todd Rundgren.

The group is from Johnson State College and travels around Vermont giving shows. The admission is Free, so you should go.

L/L Program Offered

Due to the great success of this years Behavior Modification Program, a group of students currently living in the Living/Learning Center would like to continue the program next year.

The Program involves a boy's suite and a girl's suite working together to achieve certain goals and have a good time. The program entails a special section of Psych 100 and group encounters.

If you are interested in joining the program or finding out more about please call Chuck or Mike: 4250, Karen, Laurie, or Peggy: 4252.

Folk And Bluegrass Festival

The Red Square Affair, IRA and the SA Concerts bureau are co-sponsoring an afternoon of free folk and bluegrass music Saturday, April 26 on the CBW green behind Bailey Library. (Rain site is Southwick Gym).

The featured artists include Utah Phillips, Saul Brody, Banjo Dan and the Midnight Ploughboys, Bottle Hill, Rosalie Sorrels and Jerry Jenkinson and his contra dance band. Tentative plans include a contra dance and workshop in the morning around 10:00 and the music to start around 12:00. Remember, it's FREE quality music.

Veterinary L/L Program

The Veterinary Interest Program (VIP), a student designed program for the Living/Learning Center, has recently been accepted for next semester and presently has openings available for interested students.

The program will involve students wishing to explore selected topics in the field of veterinary medicine. Students will also have the opportunity to acquire a greater knowledge of the career alternatives to veterinary medicine.

All interested persons please contact Paul Burditch at 656-2080 or Mike Rauch at 656-2083 as soon as possible.

Film On Tibetan Painting

On Thursday, April 17 at 7:00 p.m., there will be a film on Tibetan Buddhist painting. It will be shown in Living Learning B101.

All are welcome.

Help Needed For Energy Survey

Nathalie Worthington is doing a survey on energy consumption in commercial buildings in the Burlington area. If you could help her before April 25, contact her at 863-3435 (around noon Monday-Friday) or write to 49 North Prospect Street, Burlington.

Creative Works Wanted

The News and Weather is attempting to put out another issue. It wishes to concern itself with the environment (or anything having to do with human being's relationship to the earth, animals, plants or each other.) All forms of writing, art work or photographs are welcome.

Drop any contributions off at the News and Weather mail box at SA Desk, or a folder in the VERMONT CYNIC office. Please do so by April 24.

Consumer Fraud Watts Line

A new toll-free watts line has been installed at the Consumer Fraud Division of the Attorney General's Office. The number is 800-642-3147.

The toll-free watts line will make our services more accessible to individuals throughout the State who wish to file a complaint or obtain information.

THURSDAY, APRIL 17

3 p.m., An Organizational Development seminar is held at the Ramada Inn. Call Cindy Bullis at 656-2030 for details.

4 p.m., A Geology seminar will feature discussion of the geologic evolution of the moon by John C. Drake. Here's an opportunity to examine sections of lunar rock and soil provided by NASA. Room 200 Perkins Geology Hall is the site.

7:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in 101 Votey Bldg. Admission is free.

7:30 p.m., The Third World Organization holds an African Dance Workshop instructed by Monta Jones. To register, come at 7:15 p.m. with a $2 fee. The site is Southwick Ballroom.

7:30 p.m., The Medieval/Renaissance Program presents Meg Walker, medieval-style tapestry-maker who will give a slide-lecture and practical demonstration of the art and technique of medieval and Renaissance tapestry in 115 Commons, L/L.

8 p.m., Sigma Xi sponsors a lecture by Dr. Elmer Gaden, UVM dean, EMBA' on "Renewable Material and Energy Resources" at the Sheraton Motor Inn. See story this issue.

8 p.m., Joseph Clair, lawyer and member of the Sub-committee on Education for the U.S. House of Representatives in Washington, lectures on "Children's Rights and the Politics of Education" in 120 Living/Learning.

8:30 p.m., Introductory lecture on Ananda Marga Meditation at Unitarian Church in Burlington.

FRIDAY, APRIL 18

8 p.m., SA Speakers presents Moshe Dayan who will speak in Patrick Gym on "The Middle East and World Powers." Tickets are $1 for the general public and free with a UVM student I.D. and are available at present at Billings Center.

8 p.m., "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" starts tonight at the Royall Tyler Theatre, and continues through the weekend and resumes for three final shows next weekend. Call 656-2094 for details and reservations.

7:30 & 10:30 p.m., SA Films presents "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man" and "College Holiday," in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., Folk dancing occurs at Southwick Ballroom. All are welcome. Tomorrow, an old-English beef-eater dinner and following folk dance will be held at the Star-Thru Ranch at 6:30 p.m. For details call Pat Wells at 863-4691.

8:15 p.m., Joseph Margolis of Temple University will speak on the relevance of the philosophy of John Dewey. Margolis will focus on the Theory of Knowledge in the John Dewey Lounge, Old Mill. The lecture is free and open to the public.

SATURDAY, APRIL 19

The Eighth Annual Winooski River Raft Race is held today. Bolton Falls Basin is the starting point and those entrants that remain afloat will finish one mile upstream from the Jonesville bridge.

6:30 p.m., An old-English style multi-course dinner and folk dance will be held at the Star-Thru Ranch on Rte. 116. Come dressed as your favorite character in an English novel. Cooks are needed. For those interested, call Pat Wells at 863-4691.

7:30 & 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Long Day's Journey into Night," in 101 Votey. Admission is free.

8 p.m., The second performance of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" at the Royall Tyler Theatre is given tonight. Call 656-2094 for ticket reservations.

SUNDAY, APRIL 20

7 p.m., St. Anselm's Chapel (a coordinated effort by the Episcopal and Protestant ministries) presents Prof. Wolfe Schmokel of UVM's History Dept. who will discuss the relationship between his academic discipline and his participation in Christ's church. Held at St. Anselm's Chapel on the Redstone Campus.

8 p.m., "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" is preformed at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Call 656-2094 for ticket reservations.

Tickets to "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" are available for the three concluding performances (April 24, 25 and 26) from the Royall Tyler Theatre box office, Ext. 2094.

On view at the Fleming Museum is "Clarence Schmidt: Reconstructed Shrines and Architecture." The show closes at 5 p.m. on May 9.

MONDAY, APRIL 21

An exhibit of black art by students at the Rhode Island School of Design is on view today at the Craftsbury Room, Royall Tyler Theatre, under the auspices of the Third World Organization.

4:10 p.m., biology seminar, Dr. Sue Ellen Frederick, department of biological sciences, Mt. Holyoke College, "The Relationship Between Glycolate Metabolism and Microbodies in Green Algae," Benedict Auditorium, Marsh Life Sciences Bldg. Coffee at 3:55 p.m. in the auditorium lobby.

5 p.m., VPIRG meets, Conference Room C, Billings Center.

7 p.m., Living/Learning Center Nutrition Program presents an exercise class and nutritional counseling, 115 Commons, L/L. Repeated Wednesdays.

7:30 and 9:30, S.A. Films presents "Le Bonheur," the last film in the French film series, in 101 Votey.

7:30 p.m., "Burlington Scottish Dancers meet at 107 Perkins Geology Bldg. for a beginners class; more advanced dancers gather at 8:15.

8 p.m., Cross Cultural program presents UVM's Dr. Dean C. Corrigan, dean, College of Education and Social Services, who will speak on "School Intergration: Meaning and Implication," D-170 L/L.

8 p.m., gallery talk by Catherine Mazza marks today's opening of a new show at the Fleming Museum which she helped to organize. The show: "John George Brown."

TUESDAY, APRIL 22

12 noon, study habits workshop with Alice D. Outwater at the Counseling and Testing Center.

7 p.m., Inter Varsity Christian Fellowship meets to discuss the book of Colossians, 205 South Prospect St., Apt. 2.

7:30 p.m., Medieval/Renaissance Program presents UVM English Professor Betty Bandel, who will give a lecture/demonstration of Renaissance home skills and handicrafts, A-180 L/L.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center is the site of an hour's relaxation program.

12:15 p.m., the "Lunch Bunch" film at the Church Street Center this week is "the World and Work of Walker Weed." Admission free.

3:45 p.m. to 6 p.m., the Department of English honors retiring Professor Betty Bandel with a reception at the Dewey Memorial Lounge, Old Mill.

4 p.m., "Tertulia" is an informal gathering of those who wish to speak Spanish, third floor, Bldg. D, L/L.

4:10 p.m., Physics colloquium, Fred L. Eisele, "Charge-Exchange Scattering," A-402 Cook Bldg. Coffee at 3:45 p.m. in A-429.

4:30 p.m., Faculty Senate meets in B-106 Cook Bldg. This is the next-to-last meeting of the semester.

7 p.m., Living/Learning Center Nutrition Program presents exercises and nutritional counseling, 115 Commons. Repeated Mondays.

7:15 p.m., 101 Votey. A showing of the film THE LION IN WINTER, sponsored by the Medieval/Renaissance Program. One dollar donation.

7:30 p.m., Outing Club meets, 305 Votey Bldg.

8 p.m., Prof David H. Porter, pianist, gives a concert/lecture on works of Cage, Davidovsky and Ives, accompanied by Jane Ambrose, flute. Admission is free at Ira Allen Chapel.

8:15 p.m., Prof. Frederick Olafson, University of California at San Diego, will discuss the relevance of John Dewey's thought to contemporary work in the philosophy of education. Place is Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

THURSDAY, APRIL 24

9:25 a.m., Prof. David H. Porter will speak on "Classical Literary Form and Modern Musical Structure," 101 Votey Bldg.

12:15 p.m., music department presents a student recital at Ira Allen Chapel, admission free.

L/L Wilderness Suite

Spaces are available for the '75-'76 Year in the Wilderness Sports Program at the Living/Learning Center. There are openings for a boy's suite and a girl's suite. Those interested in rock climbing, canoeing hang-gliding, and caving, with or without experience should contact Joel at X4246.

RISD Art Exhibit

On April 21, 1975 the Rhode Island School of Design will present an exhibit of Black Art by students at RISD of the Third World Program.

The exhibit will be housed in the Royall Tyler Theater and is open to the public. This exhibit is being sponsored by the Third World Organization at UVM.

S.A. Film Survey

During the week S.A. Films will be running a survey to get opinions on what films should be shown next semester. Questionaires can be picked up at the S.A. Desk and at all S.A. film showings (101 Votey) during the week.

Tell Us What Films You Want To See...

Total.
Made especially for people who use spit on their contact lenses.

You really think you're saving something. Like the time it takes for proper lens care. And the cost of different solutions.

But in the long run you may wind up paying for short cuts. There's a chance your contacts will become contaminated. They'll probably feel uncomfortable and bother you. You may even get an eye infection. So why take chances with saliva?

Now there's Total® The all-in-one contact lens solution that does it all. Total® wets, soaks, cleans and cushions. And you only have to use a single solution to get the whole job done.

There are two good ways to buy Total® – the 2 oz. size and the 4 oz. size. Total 2 oz. has a free, mirrored lens storage case, and the new economy 4 oz. size saves you 25%.

Total® is available at the campus bookstore or your local drugstore.

And we're so sure you'll like Total® that we'll give you your second bottle free. Just send a Total® boxtop with your name, address and college name to:

Total, Allergan Pharmaceuticals
2525 Dupont Drive
Irvine, California 92664
(Limit one per person. Offer expires July 31, 1975.)

Total. The easy way to care for your contacts.
UNIVERSITY STORE

Orange Blossom
Symbol of a Dream

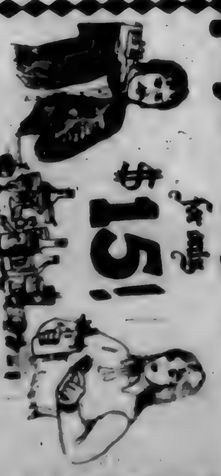
There is a time for love.
There is a time for peace.
There is a time for joy.
And for you the time is now.

Come in and try on Orange Blossom's "Soft Touch" wedding bands, the most comfortable wedding rings in America.

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Prosper's.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1944
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

Learn to BARTEND for only $15!



Acquire all the skills of a professional bartender at a price you can afford!

Learn easy, many as a professional bartender!

(Open to all men and women 18 and over)

Call 655-2000 NEXT CLASS [illegible] for information

ARE YOU
STUDENT AI BOOKS
PI
UNIVERSITY STORE

Student Concerns

Medieval/Renaissance S... Still Open

St. Anselm's Concluding Lecture Sunday Evenin...

Celebration For

all Tyler Theatre box office, Ext. 2094.
leming Museum is "Florence Schmidt and Architecture." The show closes at

UNDAY, APRIL 21
ork are by students at the Rhode Island
n view today at the Craftsbury Room, under the auspices of the Third World

gy seminar. Dr. Sue Ellen Frederick, ral sciences, Mt. Manresa College, "The Glycolate Metabolism and Microbodies medical Auditorium. Marsh Life Sciences p.m. in the auditorium lobby.
meets Conference Room C, Billings

g Learning Center Nutrition Program s' class and nutritional counseling, 115 ated Wednesdays.
A Films presents "Le Rainbow," the last
m series in the Votey.
lington Scottish Dancers meet at 107 ge for a beginners class, more advanced ltural program presents UVM's Dr. Dean College of Education and Social Services, n "School Integration: Meaning and Ed.

talk by Catherine Mazza marks today's show at the Fleming Museum which she
The show "John George Brown."

UESDAY, APRIL 22
habits workshop with Alice D. Outwater
d Testing Center.
ents Christian Fellowship meets to discuss nt, 205 South Prospect St., Apt. 2.
ival/Renaissance Program presents UVM
y Betty Bandel, who will give a tion of Renaissance home skills and
ed.

EDNESDAY, APRIL 23
ding and Testing Center is the site of an gram.
"Lunch Bunch" film at the Church Street
"The World and Work of Walter Reed."

p.m., the Department of English honors tty Bandel with a reception at the Dewey ld Mill.
a" is an informal gathering of those who third floor, Bldg. D, 1-11.
Physics colloquium, Fred L. Eisele, Scattering." A 402 Cook Bldg.
n A 429.
lty Senate meets in B 106 Cook Bldg.
last meeting of the semester.
ng/Learning Center Nutrition Program
d nutritional counseling, 115 Commons.

Votey. A showing of the film THE LION ed by the Medieval/Renaissance Program.

ng Club meets 005 Votey Bldg.
f David H. Porter, pianist, gives a works of Cage, Davidovsky and Tves, e Ambrose, flute. Admission is free at Ira

Prof. Frederick Olafson, University of Diego, will discuss the relevance of John 's contemporary work in the philosophy of Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

THURSDAY, APRIL 24
of. David H. Porter will speak on "Classical d Modern Musical Structure," 101 Votey.

usic department presents a student recital at dmission free.

S.A.
lm Survey

he week S.A. Films will be running a opinions on what films should be emester. Questionaires can be picked A. Desk and at all S.A. film showings during the week.

Us What Films
u Want To See...

Student Concerns And Greivances

The University Senate Student Affairs Committee is charged by the University's Vermont Faculty as follows:

This committee shall consider all areas of student affairs and their effect on the educational progress and academic achievement of the student body and shall recommend policy with respect to honors programs, [illegible] programs, athletics, student financial aid, discipline, health services, placement, [illegible] student activities etc. It shall hold frequent meetings with student governmental groups to determine their attitudes and [illegible]

[illegible] with respect to items of concern to the committee.

At a recent meeting the committee unanimously agreed [illegible] to compile a list of major student concerns and grievances as well as a list of [illegible] goals for the university [illegible] Concerned students are invited to submit by mail what you consider to be the major concerns of students at UVM.

Mail responses to the address given below.

The committee will attempt to consolidate the lists from the students responding.

It is hoped that the consolidated list of student concerns will be made available to each candidate for the position of President of the University of Vermont and that each candidate will be requested to address himself to each concern.

Sincerely,

Robert S. Tyzbut,
Chairperson for the University Senate Student Affairs Committee
P.O. Box 42
Living/Learning Center

"The Culturally Different Child" Lecture Series

"Children's Rights and the Politics of Education" will be examined Thursday (April 17) in an evening talk at the University of Vermont by Joseph Clair, counsel to the Subcommittee on Education of the House District Committee, U.S. House of Representatives.

His 8 p.m. talk in Commons 120 of the Living/Learning Center is free and open to the public.

During his visit Clair will also visit classes and conduct a workshop for Teacher Corps interns.

Dr. Clair is a graduate of Tennessee State University and Howard University, where he received his Doctor's degree in jurisprudence. He taught in public schools and in colleges and universities and retains his position as consultant and lecturer at Howard and as Acting Director of the Graduate School of Education of Antioch College.

As counsel to the House Subcommittee he drafts and reviews legislation dealing with education in the District of Columbia, where he is also a special assistant to the Superintendent of Schools.

His talk at UVM is one of a series on "The Culturally Different Child," and is sponsored by the Vermont Teacher Corps, the Cross-Cultural Alternative Education Committee of the UVM College of Education and Social Services, and the College's teaching and learning specialities area.

Red Square Affair:
A Day Of Fun For All Ages

Once again, the annual Red Square Affair is being planned to provide the UVM Community with a spring day of fun, games, music, food, and crafts. Last year's Affair was met by one of the most beautiful days springtime Vermont has to offer. This year's Affair is planned for Saturday Afternoon, April 26 on the CBW Green behind the Library. (Raindate Sunday - if raining Sunday also, it will be held at Gutterson Fieldhouse)

Games for all ages in a carnival atmosphere will provide enjoyment for all. Pie throwing, Tip-the-cat, Zodiac Wheel, Lollipop Tree, Can-can, Hoop-the-bear, Shooting Gallery, and a Dunking booth, to name just a few.

Numerous local artisans will be there to show their crafts and wares for purchase or just for display. Traditionally, the Affair attracts some of the most creative crafts people in this area.

Saga will provide picnic food for coupons or cash.

A new phase has been added to the Red Square Affair this year. There will be a continuous free folk and traditional music festival all afternoon, preceded by a morning of free musical workshops.

In addition, a special attraction will be present at the Affair this year: a demonstration and game by the UVM LaCrosse Club.

All proceeds from the Red Square Affair go directly to the Burlington Urban Youth Center. I.R.A. has contributed a sizable sum to help sponsor the event.

All in all, the Red Square Affair is a UVM Tradition not to be missed.

Legal Internships In Washington

Each semester Congresswoman Holtzman invites 6 students to work full time in our Washington office. Responsibilities include helping with correspondence, research, and general office work.

Our experience indicates that this semester program is more satisfactory to students and to our office than one lasting a month or six weeks or only a few days a week. The semester program can be combined with a summer internship, if the student wishes.

Because our office receives so many applications for semester internships, we would like to receive applications for the fall semester as early in the spring as possible. A personal interview, either in New York or in Washington, is helpful to us in evaluating each application.

Most students join us on the basis of a work-study or independent study program through which they receive academic credit. There are no outside funds available for defraying expenses. Students make their own living arrangements.

Students who feel they are qualified for our internship program should send a letter and a resume to Ms. Marilyn Shapiro, Administrative Assistant, Office of Congresswoman Elizabeth Holtzman, 1027 Longworth House Office Building, Washington D.C. 20515.

Lecture At Sigma Xi Initiation

"Renewable Material and Energy Resources" will be the topic of a speech by Dr. Elmer L. Gaden, Jr., dean of the UVM College of Engineering, Mathematics and Business Administration, when the Vermont chapter of the national scientific honor society Sigma Xi holds its annual meeting and initiation Thursday (April 17).

Following the initiation and dinner at 6:15 p.m. in the Sheraton Motor Inn the public is invited to hear Dean Gaden at 8 p.m., also in the Sheraton.

Dr. Gaden questions the viability of solutions such as "Project Independence" to the "massive dislocation of our socioeconomic system we now face" because of excessive dependence on petroleum.

He proposes instead a "multi-path system by assembling a variety of realizable solutions to specific problems."

Sigma Xi members are urged to attend the annual meeting; dinner reservations may be obtained from Prof. H. Gardiner Barnum of the UVM geography department, telephone 656-1060. Dr. Gaden's 8 p.m. talk is free and open to the public.

Medieval/Renaissance Suite Still Open

The Medieval Renaissance Program is [illegible] applicants for its [illegible] suites in the Living/Learning Center for next fall. The final week is particularly important for students living [illegible] off campus who "might be interested because after the 25 April, such students would no longer have the option of moving back on campus."

Professor Lane Howe, Director of the Program, therefore urges all students to contact him as soon as possible for information and application forms.

The Program is a two year [illegible] Pictorial [illegible] Live and study [illegible] surrounding their [illegible] courses of study.

It is [illegible] whose students and faculty [illegible] diverse [illegible] and [illegible] Knowledge and [illegible] the common topics the Middle Ages and the Renaissance.

It is a [illegible] program in which students [illegible] the periods [illegible] offering [illegible] to which [illegible] activities of [illegible] are encouraged [illegible] Medieval Fair and [illegible] Renaissance [illegible] the examples of [illegible] students from the Program [illegible] the success of [illegible]

[illegible] Medieval/Renaissance [illegible] Program [illegible] Professor Howe, [illegible] two [illegible] There will be one [illegible] each week, each [illegible] a professional from a [illegible] department. About [illegible] Participants will apply [illegible] approaches to [illegible] humanism in [illegible] Middle Ages and the Renaissance.

Participants whose [illegible] are too tight to [illegible] courses in the fall, [illegible] specialized [illegible] may be [illegible] the Spring semester [illegible] will be negotiated [illegible] Director in the [illegible] of the fall semester.

President Of Overseas Development Council To Speak On World Food Day

The United Nations has declared Thursday (April 17) World Food Day and James P. Grant, president of the Overseas Development Council, will speak at Ira Allen Chapel that day on "The Global Politics of Food and Energy: Two Sides of the Same Coin."

His 8 p.m. lecture sponsored by SA Speakers and the Asian Cultural Exchange is free and open to the public.

Other sponsors are the Dean Fund, the Environmental Program and the Center for World Educations.

Grant has been with the Council since its establishment in 1969, after service as assistant administrator of the Agency for International Development and Director of the AID program in Turkey. He was Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Near East and South Asian Affairs from 1962 to 1964.

In addition to his work in Turkey his overseas assignments include service in Ceylon, New Delhi, and in China, where he was with the U.N. Relief and Rehabilitation Administration and later Acting Executive Secretary to the Sino-American Joint Commission on Rural Reconstruction.

Grant was born in China and studied at Berkeley and Harvard, and saw military service in WWII in Burma and China.

The Overseas Development Council is a non-profit center for study, research, analysis and education that presently concentrates on the study of the global food supply.

Reception For Prof. Bandel's Retirement

Her many friends and colleagues at UVM have scheduled a reception for Professor Betty Bandel of the UVM English department on the occassion of her retirement from teaching this spring.

The reception will be held from 3:45 to 6 p.m. on Wednesday, April 23 in the John Dewey Memorial Lounge, Old Mill. Take a moment to stop in and wish Professor Bandel well in her next endeavors!

Early Inventor In Field To Speak On Digital Computers

Dr. George Stibitz of Dartmouth College, one of the early inventors in the field of digital computers will speak at a general audience colloquium Thursday, April 17, at 7 p.m. in B106 Cook Building, on the University of Vermont campus.

The colloquium is being sponsored by the College of Engineering, Mathematics and Business Administration. Dr. Stibitz's topic is "The Proper Use and Potential for Abuse of the Digital Computer."

The digital computer ranks as one of the most significant technological inovations of all time, on a par with the wheel, the generation of electric power and radio communications. In the few years since its invention, the world has become dependent upon it for space travel, medical practice, business operations and research in almost every intellectual discipline.

Dr. Stibitz designed the first operating program-controlled digital computer to perform useful calculations and is, along with a few other pioneers, credited with its invention. Dr. Stibitz also has unique experience as an innovating user, and as an observer in the field of computer applications.

In addition to giving a first hand account of the early history of the digital computer, Dr. Stibitz will offer his view concerning its proper place in society and its potential for being misused.

St. Anselm's Chapel

Concluding Lecture In Sunday Evening Series

What is the relationship between [illegible] discipline and [illegible] Christian faith? This question will be addressed on April 20 by Wade S. Smoker, Professor of History and [illegible] Peterson, Professor of Counseling and Guidance. These specialties [illegible] Sunday [illegible] sponsored by the Episcopal and Protestant Ministries at St. Anselm's on Redstone Campus. An audio-visual presentation will begin at 7:00 p.m. followed by dessert, coffee and discussion.

For further information contact Chaplain Jon Appleton at 8801 or Jean Reade at 7-7400.

Celebration For St. Anselm

On Monday, April 21 we are celebrating the life and labor of St. Anselm, 11th century Archbishop of Canterbury and theologian. At 5:15 p.m. in the chapel we extend a cordial invitation to one and all to come to the chapel [illegible] there will be a [illegible] at 6:00 p.m. in the chapel.

Sunday, April 20 [illegible] morning there will be a meeting for all those who want to participate in the Rice Drive for World Food Relief. St. Anselm's will be the central collecting point [illegible] volunteers to set up collecting points in the dorms and to help transport the bottles.

At 7 p.m. Professor Wade Schmoker will be the guest professor relating his academic discipline and his Christian [illegible] sharing. Coffee and dessert will be served and all are welcome. Jim Peterson of Counseling and Testing will be our guest speaker next week.

Monday: Confirmation class will meet at 2 p.m. for a [illegible].

At 7 p.m. the [illegible] class will hold its last meeting for dinner.

Tuesday: There will be no Tuesday night Eucharist this week because of the Feast Day at St. Anselm.

Services

Sunday: 9 a.m. -Holy Eucharist with Sermon. 5 p.m. Evening Prayer.

Monday: 6:30 p.m. Holy Eucharist (Feast Day).

Monday-Friday: 7:15 a.m. Morning Prayer. 5:00 p.m. Evening Prayer.

KEEP IN TOUCH THIS SUMMER
READ
THE VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC
DETAILS IN NEXT WEEK'S ISSUE

Collection To Begin For World Food Relief

Starting this week boxes will appear around the campus with this label: "Bottle Drive for World Food Relief." These will be the work of a dozen or so volunteers trying to do some small things toward the world crisis.

We need people who are willing to set up collecting points within the dorms and to help us to collect the boxes. If you are interested, there will be an organizational meeting on Sunday, April 20 at 10 a.m. at St. Anselm's Chapel, Redstone.

St. Anselm's will be the central collecting point on campus and we will collect the bottles weekly for the next three weeks. All the money made by this process will go to immediate food relief and developmental food programs. It will be sent to a world food program which is committed to getting the money to the people who need it and not just in maintaining a large and complex organization.

HELP by looking for the boxes and contributing your bottles.

HELP by passing on the word to donate.

HELP by offering a few hours of time and energy.

HELP — not just ourselves but our neighbors throughout the world.

This project is being initiated by a group of people within the St. Anselm's Chapel. But its effectiveness and success is up to you. The credit we will get is unimportant, the satisfaction you will receive by helping is unimportant when compared to the strength and energy that hungry people will receive.

Hillel

There will be a brunch this Sunday, April 20 at 11 a.m. The topic of discussion following the brunch will be Israeli independence.

There are summer camp counselor positions available at camps: Pembroke in Mass., Jevya in N.H., and Telnoar in N.H. For more information contact Prof. Kahn, rm. 420 Waterman, 656-2430.

1975 summer program of goddard college
ALTERNATE ENERGY AND AGRICULTURE
wind, water, methane, solar
social ecology studies

June 2-August 22 15 credits

An intensive 12 week program in social ecology and environmental sciences, exploring alternative technologies, a no-growth economy, organic agriculture, urban decentralization, the politics of ecology, and the design and construction of experimental models for wind, solar, and methane-powered energy production.

Goodard is located in a rural Vermont community, rich in both natural and human resources, in a state noted for its progressive environmental legislation.

The summer program is directed by MURRAY BOOKCIN, author of Post Scarcity Anarchism, Our Synthetic Environment, and Limits of the City. Visiting Faculty will include outstanding national experts in the fields of alternate technology and communities such as KARL HESS, Community Technologies, SAM LOVE, Environmental Action, JOHN and NANCY TODD, founders New Alchemy Institute, WILSON CLARK, author of Energy for Survival, STEVE BAER, Zomeworks, JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH, publisher of Mother Earth News, ROBERT REINES, Integrated Life Support Systems Labs, and STEWART BRAND, publisher of The Whole Earth Catalog.

For detailed illustrated brochure write:

D. Chodorkoff
Social Ecology Program
Goddard College Box 92
Plainfield, Vermont 05667

ARE YOU PREPARED FOR STUDENT APPRECIATION WEEK
BOOKS SOLD BY THE POUND PRIZES EVERY DAY

SAVINGS ON: POSTERS
GLASSWARE
CERAMICS
SELECTED GROUP T-SHIRTS RECORD SALE
CANDY and many more

See next week's full page ad

UNIVERSITY STORE

BRANDEIS UNIVERSITY
1975
SUMMER PROGRAM
June 9 - August 15
Intensive one and two semester courses with language [illegible]
COURSE OFFERINGS

BIOLOGY
General Biology Laboratory (10 weeks)
Genetics and Molecular Biology (5 weeks)
Cell Biology (5 weeks)

CHEMISTRY
General Chemistry (10 weeks)
General Chemistry Laboratory (10 weeks)
Organic Chemistry (10 weeks)
Organic Chemistry Laboratory (10 weeks)

CLASSICS
Greek Mythology: Origins, Meaning, Structure (5 weeks)
Introductory Greek Grammar (6 weeks)

COMPARATIVE LITERATURE
The Psychological Novel (5 weeks)

ECONOMICS
Introduction to Economics (5 weeks)

EDUCATION
Seminar: Teaching in the Secondary School (6 weeks)
Practice Teaching in Secondary School (6 weeks)

FINE ARTS
Modern Architecture (5 weeks)
American Architecture and Painting (5 weeks)

FRENCH
Beginning and Elementary French (10 weeks)

GERMAN
Elementary German (6 weeks)
Intermediate German (6 weeks)
The Jewish Contribution to German Literature (5 weeks)

MUSIC
Fundamentals of Music (10 weeks)
Theory (10 weeks)
Electronic Music (5 weeks)

NEAR EASTERN AND JUDAIC STUDIES
Intensive Introductory Hebrew [illegible]
History of the Jews from the Middle Ages to the Spanish Expulsion [illegible]
The Patriarchal Period (5 weeks)
Introductory Yiddish (5 weeks)

PHILOSOPHY
Continental Rationalism (5 weeks)
Philosophy of History (5 weeks)

PHYSICS
Introductory Physics (8 weeks)
Physics Laboratory (8 weeks)

PSYCHOLOGY
Introduction to Psychology: Cognitive Processes (5 weeks)
Statistics and Quantitative Methods (5 weeks)
Child Development (5 weeks)
Educational Psychology (5 weeks)
Introduction to Psychological Theory (5 weeks)
Perception (5 weeks)

RUSSIAN (In Translation)
The Hero in Nineteenth Century Russian Literature (5 weeks)
The Hero in Twentieth Century Russian Literature (5 weeks)

SOCIOLOGY
Concepts of the Social Order (5 weeks)
Political Sociology (5 weeks)
Advanced Group Process (5 weeks)
Sociology of Underdevelopment (5 weeks)
Social Psychiatry (5 weeks)

SPANISH
Beginning and Elementary Spanish (10 weeks)

THEATER ARTS
Introduction to Drama and the Theater (5 weeks)
Modern Dance Techniques and Movement Exploration (10 weeks)

For information, please write or call Director, Summer Program
BRANDEIS UNIVERSITY
Waltham, MA. 02154
(617) 647-2811 or 647-2172

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . Randy Jensen
Assistant Editor . . . . Wyatt Kash
Managing Editor . . . . Mark S. Valle
News Editor . . . . Mark Sawyer
Features Editor . . . . Stephen W. Fenner
Arts Editor . . . . Robert DeNike
Sports Editor . . . . Norm Robinson
Copy Editor . . . . Sam Bodi
Advertising Manager . . . . Debbie Powell

What Are We Really Preparing For?

It has become an unfortunate state of social evolution that the university institution has become such a stagnant forum for societal change. Indeed, the current under-involvement in issues beyond those found in books and on blackboards represents an amazing turn about from the Moratorium Era five brief years ago.

Much of this political passivity is due in part to a reorientation of individual direction towards a more self-fulfilling end. It would seem filling career requirements and personal aspirations has become of more importance. This in itself is not to be condemned for the natural turn of events in the past few years has led us to this point through its own destined accord.

But in the transition, "college" has slipped from the crest of the wave of social change to its wake, responding to what is happening instead of directing what is happening. And while financial constraints have had a lot to do with this trend, we must not be so complacent to accept "college 75" and the current issues of concern merely with a shrug of a shoulder.

We must question the education we consume here, especially when the purpose of that education is directed more towards securing the sheepskin than preparing us for life "out there." Our awareness of our present level of existence – of "1975" on this planet – remains but a dreamy conception of what really is "1975." And when so much of what we learn is what our teachers have learned from their teachers without a proper balance from outside sources that made Moratoriums, Earth Days, and Volunteer programs such real educational experiences, one wonders how effectively college does prepare us.

In this vein, we urge the University community to participate open-mindedly in today's Food Day Fair. This is not just a day devoted to information distribution, but is a significant effort throughout the nation in initiating a greater exposure and to instill a greater appreciative awareness of the world food situation and the value of the foods we eat. A very conscientious and concerned effort has been made by many people on campus to make this designated day's experience an enlightening one. Robinson Hall has put many hours into presenting the issues and concerns. SAGA has made a most commendable effort in working out a menu which will allow people to experience food alternatives to just some of the junk we unthinkingly gobble down.

Food Day here at UVM can only be as effective as the people allow by way of their participation. Ideally, our concerns should not end at the stroke of midnight. They should linger on to make us think of what we eat and of those less familiar with the pleasure we Americans are afforded at every meal. To digest one day's food for thought is not too much to ask. The education of students and everyone in the community should not end when we push out way out of classroom doors. Indeed, that is where our education should begin. Experience Food Day.

W.K.

letters to the editor

SAGA - It's Time For Change

To the Editors:

Imagine yourself in any store, anywhere in the country, about to purchase something that costs 80 cents. You hand the cashier a dollar bill. She nonchalantly puts it in the cash register, smiles at you and says, "Sorry, we're not allowed to make change." Not only would you not expect it, you probably wouldn't put up with it. So why then, does Saga do this same thing at its snack bars at UVM?

The Buckham Political Action Committee considers this practice a poor method of wessling a few extra dollars from the UVM community. On the back of every food stamp coupon book it is printed "Remember it is the same as cash" therefore it should be treated as such.

To make matters worse, because of the inadequate labeling system (especially in the deli) it is difficult to figure the total cost of your meal ahead of time, and plan it to come out even. They also refuse to carry any credit, due to coupons, to the person in line behind you.

Although it is true that you can take your change in candy, I'm sure most people would rather not. Assume as one daily 1,000 people go through the Den, with the average change due back .05 (some more, some none), that means $50.00 extra a day for that one snack bar. B.P.A.C. urges strong action against this. We suggest until Saga changes this absurd policy that it is your obligation to steal food, spill sodas, and take extra sips of beverage until they are forced to change their policy on change.

Buckham Political Action Committee

Question Faculty Evaluation

To the Editor:

The Urban Youth Center on North Street and N. Winooski Avenue is a University Extension Service Outpost. We have had over 30 UVM students working here for credits during the year. U.Y.A. students receive 30 credits. These students are mostly from the Education, Child Development and Psychology Departments.

Unfortunately, only one faculty member has managed to come down and check us out since March of '74. This lack of involvement leads us to question the "credits-for-community-work" system.

We do not question the quality of work done here by these students. On the contrary, we would be hard put to function without their time and enthusiasm. We do question faculty evaluation methods, since none seem to exist. Students are frequently required by faculty to keep and submit a journal. We think this is a fine idea. Perhaps it would be more effective if evaluated in conjunction with a faculty visit. We'd feel fine about answering any faculty questions or completing any evaluation forms. We want the volunteers to get the full credit they deserve for their time with us. We really appreciate them.

Sincerely,

Sue Matheson,
Director, Urban Center
Judy Zappia,
Ass. Director

UVM Rescue Squad

To whom it may concern:

It is my pleasure to furnish you with the following information concerning The University of Vermont Rescue squad.

At the recent monthly squad meeting for April, UVM Rescue elected the following slate of officers for the upcoming year:

Director of Operations – Bob Wilkenfeld – Class of 76; Equipment officer – Jim Laning – Class of 76; Financial Officer – Rick Brown – Class of 78; Personnel Officer – Joanne Johnson – Class of 76; Training Officer – Jim Consedine – Class of 77; Public Relations Officer – Dan Manz – Class of 78.

Bob Wilkenfeld and James Laning have been with the squad since the time of its formation, and have served previously as officers. Both hold a Vermont Emergency Medical Technician's rating. Joanne Johnson is continuing in her position from last year.

UVM Rescue is a non profit Emergency Care Ambulance service staffed and operated by students at the University. Headquarters for the squad is the new Campus Infirmary on East Avenue.

Sincerely,
Dan Manz
Public Relations Officer

Hats Off To Hans

To the Editor:

On behalf of the students of Robinson Hall, I would like very much to shine a grateful spotlight on Hans Puck, the manager of Simpson Dining Hall. It is his easy going manner and sincere interest in seeing that people get what they want or need that made the special dinner for three of Redstone Campus' dorms last Friday (the 11th) such an enjoyable success.

It has not been the only time Hans has been so genuinely helpful. If I might relate a previous encounter. Robinson Hall last month invited the family of the late Lisa Rimmer up to the old converted carriage stable for a special dinner. Planning dinner for 55 people in Robinson's living room presented quite a challenging task, requiring tables, chairs, plates, silverware, salad bowls and the rest of an array of culinary paraphenalia. In arranging for all of it, I assured Mr. Puck that pick up and return would be systematic and to his convenience. When we backed the pick up truck to the loading platform and hurried in a bit late – to the point of arriving in the middle of dinner – he informed me calmly that about ten other people had already come and gone with the stuff. All Hans had left, to my astonished reception of the news, was a simple request that I get everything back. No freak-out scene. No huff and puff. Nothing but a well wished "Good luck."

The Rimmer dinner was a very touching success and has remained one of the highlights of this semester's undertakings at Robinson.

Our appreciative hats come off to you, Hans and your staff. You have made such festive gatherings festive indeed.

Wyatt Kash
Robinson Hall

From Our Ad Department

To The Editor:

I am on the advertising staff of the Vermont Cynic. In this issue of the Cynic (4/17/75) there appears an advertisement from the Gallo Wine Co. In clear conscience I can not accept the commision for this ad. Therefore I donate my share of the commission to the United Farm Workers.

Sincerely
Katherine Bowers

"The worst thing cancer did to me was make me sound like a tough cop."

Police Capt. Paul Scriffignano, Newark, N.J.

"Twenty-one years ago when I was a patrolman, I got one of Cancer's Warning Signals, hoarseness. I went to the doctor fast. It was cancer of the larynx. A short while later they operated.

"Seven months later I was back on my beat. Less than three years later I competed with 900 other cops in a physical and mental exam and got my Sergeant's stripes.

"And here I am today, the father of four, full of life and cured of cancer. Know Cancer's 7 Warning Signals and give to the American Cancer Society. We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime.

Cancer's 7 Warning Signals: 1–Change in bowel or bladder habits. 2–A sore that does not heal. 3–Unusual bleeding or discharge. 4–Thickening or lump in breast or elsewhere. 5–Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing. 6–Obvious change in wart or mole. 7–Nagging cough or hoarseness.

American Cancer Society

Photograph by Colin Pantall
The space contributed by the publisher as a public service

A New Tripped Out Card Game

by Sahib Kevin Sanford

These are the rules to a new Neo-American card game entitled Your Money or Your Life. Involving the supreme sacrament LSD and the synchronicity of cards, it is quite an experience. For those who say "I will", it is also quite a trip. It can be played by old and young alike, though a large field should be provided for all happily stoned children. A television is recommended for the adults.

But alas, how many people will play this game? Some may say it's "crazy", and obviously cannot be taken seriously. Some may say that cards do nothing but dull the mind, not to mention psychedelic drugs. Others may play, but when given the opportunity emit a reproachable "not on your life." But for others, the stoned people, the enlightened ones, there is a guaranteed barrel of Buddhas in every pot. And the monetary reward, stemming from a combination of good synchronicity, quick decision making, and getting stoned, is hardly something to be gawked at. All in all, an excellent game to get high by.

Your Money Or Your Life
Official Rules of the Neo-American Church Head Vortex, Box 433, Burlington, Vermont 05401

The numbers in this game are infinitely adjustable. Before the game starts, it must be decided:

(a) What the stakes shall be (every player puts the same amount in the pot).

(b) What cards shall be in the "up" deck and how many hits of LSD each card shall represent. The cards in the "down" deck can be of any variety so long as there are no duplications of value. Both decks shall consist of the same number of cards as there are players in the game.

(c) How many hits of LSD each player must provide – these hits each player puts in front of him on the

(continued on page five)

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

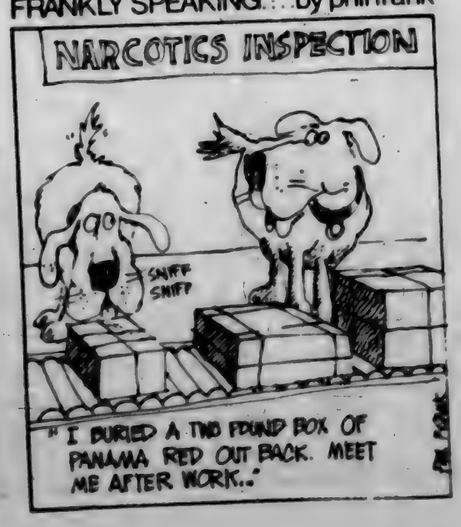
NEWS: Margo Howland, John MacDonald, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Dave Ryan, Peter Duquette.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Seralnick, Jay Williams.
COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Taves.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

FRANKLY SPEAKING... by phil frank



All Things Con

by larry seiden

A carousel of whirling images, of lights, colo grinds, and pinches my head and heart is reeling bu sweep of untangled hair falls past your eyes, brus
the side of your nose and secures itself between gilded lips. It cunningly shields your eyes from spectrum of morning's haze, drawing through m
This time I fell in love with your mouth.

I moved to taste the valleys of your glis pleasure and suckle along the inside roads of y
Your tongue that checks me so tight, clicking, co engulfing my lips, then advancing, drawing small circles within my mouth. Flames and desire release the keen taste of love's pinwheel of sweetness and ebullience.

I stroked the baby skin of your stomach, proud, and so close to me. Drawn midnight te tender whisper leans a feathery mist on my ear your night and now I can taste your morning staggered with succulence and submission. Blaz double burners searing every chance I have to ca can't stumble. I won't take another flat out fall. N angel. I want to go down slow, forgetting t caution lights and straddling the bright white of t giving up my dimly lit corners for the open sp mouth.

Our lives together are changing like the downtown. Our melody is lifting like a child's k way into a balmy summer's breeze. The afterno arms around our minds, weaving its fingers in frivolous affair. As your dance flows on, our drea so do the passions of affection.

I was delighted and touched when you offe and a poem of four words for my own. "Fron Enchanted I left my shoes in the basement and frozen heart, still unthawed from a long winter.

$$$$$$$$$$

Shadow puppet eyes and a corkscrew for a indefineable search for paradise. I turned m

...A New Tripped Out Car

(continued from page four)

table before the game starts.
Example
10 players
Each player contributes $100 to the pot
Each player has 10 hits of LSD
The "up" cards are
A = 30 hits
K = 20
Q = 15
10 = 10
8 = 8
7 = 7
6 = 6
5 = 5
4 = 4
2 = 2

Down cards are J, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, dealt around first, then "up" cards. Playe down cards.

Each player must "declare in turn, fro card holder to the next highest, and so on d

If the player who has been dealt the example says "I will", all down cards ar players with the three highest "down" declarers "down" card out of consideration front of the declarer (3 x 10 = 30) and, afte them with a glass of water, the clock is sta doew not throw up within 15 minutes the p

If the holder of the Ace says "not on and is out of the game.

New "down" cards are dealt.

The choice passes to the holder of th card, in this case the King, who, if he say 20 hits from the holders of the two hig leaving his own down card out of consider the "down" card of the folded Ace holder).

If King says "not on your life" the op who must decide between $1000 and 1
$100 and so on down the line.

If nobody will take the pot, the Ac now gets a chance to take the pot for 20, if not the 8 for 7, etc., until the previous must take one hit less than his previous re take the pot. If not, then back to the A an

If all players reach a hit count of one nobody will take the pot, the participant whole thing to have been a shameful bravado, take back their antes, go hom associating with each other in the future.

Variations

1. A good variation is to agree that take the count called for his "up" card fr other player or players plus one of his o player with the lowest down card (to unreliable drugs into the game). The mini 1-1.

2. One of the cards in the "down" d booby prize, and whoever gets it m agreed upon amount) of his own acid reward.

3. All the acid available can be p center of the table, and the correct amo declarer by the holder of the highest do

4. The prospective declarer is allo the pot to bribe others to join him on will take the 30 hits, and give you half ( 10 of your own). If this kind of ba time-limit must be set – use a three declarer cannot "share" his required nu and if "Fifi" happens to have the hit she holds a high "down" card, the de private deal to obtain her hits from these deals are to be "enforced" by only get their money back if the decl hits for 15 minutes – and he cannot it himself – only promise to do so.

5. Extend the "retention perio suspect some players have stomach pu
LSD is normally absorbed very quickly which follow cannot be stopped by medical science.

6. Along with the ante of money take one hit of someone else's acid by rounds of cards. If this is done, wri hand and, if possible, appoint a "strai game and settle disputes.

ters to editor

tion Faculty Evaluation

...and enthusiasm. We do ...faculty evaluation ...methods since none seem to ...exist. Students are frequently ...quested by faculty to keep ...and submit a journal. We think ...this is a fine idea. Perhaps it ...would be more effective if ...evaluated in conjunction with a ...faculty visit. We'd feel fine ...about answering any faculty ...questions or completing any ...evaluation forms. We want the ...volunteers to get the full credit ...they deserve for their time ...with us. We really appreciate ...them.

Sincerely,

Sue Matheson,
Director, Urban Center
Judy Zappia,
Ass. Director

Hats Off To Hans

...that pick up and return would ...be so systematic and to his ...convenience. When we backed ...the pick up truck to the ...loading platform and hurried in ...a bit late ... to the point of ...arriving in the middle of dinner ...he informed me calmly that ...about ten other people had ...already come and gone with ...the stuff. All Hans had left, to ...my astonished reception of the ...news, was a simple request that ...I get everything back. No ...freak out scene. No huff and ...puff. Nothing but a well ...wished "Good luck."

...very touching success and has ...remained one of the highlights ...of this semester's undertakings ...at Robinson.

Our appreciative hats ...come off to you, Hans and ...your staff. You have made ...such festive gatherings festive ...indeed.

Wyatt Kash
Robinson Hall

...ard Game

...cards shall be in the "up" deck and how many ...card shall represent. The cards in the "down" ...any variety as long as there are no duplications ...decks shall consist of the same number of cards ...sets in the game.

...many hits of LSD each player must ...hits each player puts in front of him on the

(continued on page five)

...welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and ...interested students, faculty, and members of ... All material must be submitted no later than ...before the Thursday of publication. Material ..., names will be withheld upon request. If you ...in writing or perhaps curious about how things ...in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or

ERMONT CYNIC

...Howland John ...Peter Shumlin, ...ave Ryan, Peter ...Paul Ajamian, ...ael Dufault, Mike ...Hegarth, Andy ...kins ...Mandel, Larry ...Seralnick, Jay ...S Peter Cobb, ...eeman, Ken ...Sue Perkins, ...n, Larry Snyder, ...Peter Campbell

PRODUCTION Rick Barney, ...Ellis Cox, Sarah Clay, Beth ...Coulson, John Lunde, Barb ...Tarrien

SPORTS, Randy Briggs, Don ...Rose, Richard Rotthow, Pat ...Taves

ADVERTISING Katherine ...Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, ...Sherry Grancey, Debbie ...Powell

BUSINESS MANAGER ...Nancy Shank

...Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or ...columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ...opinions of the University administration, faculty, or ...staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion ...of the majority of the members of the CYNIC ...Editorial Board.

...Published weekly during the college year by the ...students of the University of Vermont and State ...Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in ...the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone ...656-4011. Deadline for notices is one week prior to ...date of publication.

...Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per ...year, single copy ten cents.

All Things Considered: Fancy Bubbles

by larry seiden

A carousel of whirling images, of lights, colors, giggles, grinds, and pinches my head and heart is reeling bursting. One sweep of untangled hair falls past your eyes, brushes lightly the side of your nose and secures itself between your pink gilded lips. It cunningly shields your eyes from the coming spectrum of morning's haze, drawing through my window. This time I fell in love with your mouth.

I moved to taste the valleys of your glistening oral pleasure and suckle along the inside roads of your tongue. Your tongue that checks me so tight; clicking, containing and engulfing my lips, then advancing, drawing small concentric circles within my mouth. Flames and desire released, scorching the keen taste of love's pinwheel of sweetness and fermented ebullience.

I stroked the baby skin of your stomach, so soft, so proud, and so close to me. Drawn midnight teas, naked, a tender whisper leans a feathery mist on my ear. I've drunk your night and now I can taste your morning dew. I'm staggered with succulence and submission. Blazing fires on double burners searing every chance I have to catch myself. I can't stumble; I won't take another flat out fall. Not this time angel. I want to go down slow, forgetting the flickering caution lights and straddling the bright white of the moon. I'm giving up my dimly lit corners for the open spaces of your mouth.

Our lives together are changing like the chorus girls downtown. Our melody is lifting like a child's kite, forcing its way into a balmy summer's breeze. The afternoon spreads its arms around our minds, weaving its fingers into our dizzy, frivolous affair. As our dance flows on, our dreams come free, so do the passions of affection.

I was delighted and touched when you offered me a smile and a poem of four words for my own. "From me to you." Enchanted I left my shoes in the basement and sold all of my frozen heart, still unthawed from a long winter.

$$$$$$$$$$

Shadow puppet eyes and a corkscrew for a heart, lead my indefineable search for paradise. I turned my phases into poetic phrases that I can find tacked up in somebody's room. It almost drove me out of my mind. Jagged edges, but a corkscrew for a heart and I'm gaining back the flash for gimmicks.

We finally broke it down. "You can slide on ice." I said having been there. "But I can't tear away from you. Your coolness is just a wall to hide yourself away in. You're making me burn inside. It's you babe, and it will be alright, even tomorrow."

"You're crazy. I'm not going to be someone's tattersill fantasy, not unless I'm a kept woman. I'm not starting any fires, not till I'm safe. Anyway, you're a slow poke and you look shy." She was fine and faster than she realized. "It don't come easy, I remember you said that but for me it's easier than hiding in the darkness. Please don't ask, I'm not good at these puzzling dialogues. Give me the covers I'm going to lose my inhibitions." She was drawing me higher.

"I'm a victim for your love." I said, "Laying myself down without undue apologies. This game is going to be won or lost on the playing fields." I slyly remarked as I turned off the lamp. "Just show me where to start, honey."

"Comfort me." Her voice lingered impatient. "Time works the same on everybody's clock but the hands on my watch don't know the way to point at night. I'm beginning to like you but you keep twisting me. I'm tied in knots, all crocked and crooked inside and I can't tell the difference, even apart. And don't call me honey, I don't think I'm that sweet. Please though, turn your heat on one more time."

"Body heat." I was hammering in my last nail. "Will set you free but I'll see you tomorrow night if I can still see. Gotta fly."

The raven was part of the aura I used when my wings shimmered black against the night's shroud. It was all coming true again. Like gift of luxury recalled from a distant time, a gift of spirit from an older lady with a taste like fancy bubbles.

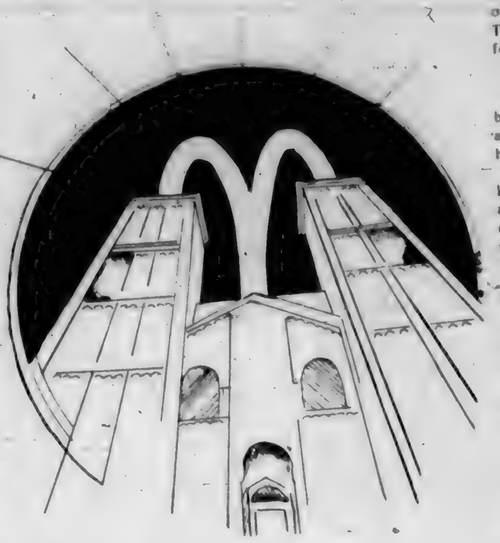
Reflection: I never say done until it's finished. fini.

Food On Campus: Winning Hearts And Stomachs

by Neil Klotz

(CPS) – Tests, papers, seminars, course credits and graduation requirements all occupy students' minds during their watch for the golden degree. But only one thing occupies their stomachs: food. Grades come once a quarter, but cafe food stares up from a plate every day.

For years cafeteria food was equalled only by the weather as one of those issues everyone talked about but no one did anything about. Today, however, cafeteria managers have been faced with a growing number of student revolts as well as rising food costs and the invasion of fast food marauders.



BORED BY THE BOARD

"At least the boycott will save the cost of three Degels today," quipped a student at the University of Connecticut at Storrs, where North Campus residents staged a one-day dining hall boycott last month to protest the "quality" of the food.

Food quality has always been a rallying cry in many cafeteria protests across the country. But "quality" has meant everything from spoiled food to a lack of menu variety.

For instance, a spokesman for a foods committee at the University of Missouri/Columbia complained that, "One type of meat has several different names, but it all tastes the same." The leftovers are usually just popped into a freezer and used for another meal, he grumbled.

The issue is not so much food quality, but student boredom, said a University of Missouri official. Students, like anyone else, tire of eating the same menu in the same dining hall three times a day, seven days a week for months on end.

More serious than such general meal malaise were charges leveled by students at Ramapo State College in New Jersey against their food service, operated by Saga Foods. Most small colleges like Ramapo can't afford to operate their own food service, so they contract the operation out to national firms like Saga, Canteen or Servomation.

At Ramapo, students staged three boycotts against Saga, the largest one occuring after Saga fired two student workers because, according to the protesters, they refused to serve stale food. After more firings and more protests, a Saga facility on campus was closed down by local health officials.

Finally, Saga announced that it has lost almost $40,000 in its last two years at Ramapo and wanted out of its contract with the college.

THE ECONOMICS OF FEEDING

Stomachs aside, students at many schools have also protested rules that require them to live in dorms and take their meals on campus. For instance, with the help of the student union organizing project, students at the University of Massachusetts/Amherst have filed suit in federal court challenging university regulations that force single students under 21 to live on campus and buy a meal ticket unless excused for medical reasons.

School officials have usually argued that such regulations are financially necessary where room and board are tied together, profits in one area can help offset losses in the other.

With rising food costs, however, cafeterial managers have reported that it's increasingly difficult to make a profit feeding students.

Schools that operate their own food service have been hit by rising labor costs, according to Clark Dehaven, executive director of the National Association of College and University Food Services. Dehaven said that increasing numbers of cafeterias are trying to increase the use of self-service and self-busing.

Another change has been the growing utilization of meat substitutes and other food extenders, he said, but usually these require extensive testing.

"If you go real slow, they'll (students) accept it," said Dehaven, "but if you make a radical change, they won't go for it."

Faced with the same economic situation, the large cafeteria chains have cut costs through mass buying and vertical integration, that is, controlling production of an item from farm to table.

These firms can offer board plans ranging anywhere from $1.85 to $3.50 per student per day and usually make money on the steady percentage of students who don't take all the meals offered.

A spokeswoman for Saga Food's Research and Development division denied, however, that Saga has cut costs by using artificial food extenders. She said she doesn't know of any chain that does.

Saga has tested things like fake cheese, chemical tomatoes and artificial eggs and found them wanting. Except for some "special units" Saga food services all use "real things" and cook from "scratch recipes," she claimed.

THE MYSTIQUE OF THE BIG MAC

Mired by student complaints and rising costs, campus cafeterias have also begun to face a new threat: the arrival of fast food chains on campus. Flushed with mercenary zeal, college and university unions across the country have started leasing their space to large-volume food chains like McDonald's, Shakey's Pizza and Hardee's Food Systems.

As an experiment, McDonald's opened its largest outlet on the Ohio State campus last fall and found the operation so successful that it opened another on-campus outlet at the University of Cincinnati. College unions at both schools, which get about a 6 per cent cut from McDonald's have reported that sales have increased dramatically.

A spokesman for McDonald's refused to say how many more college outlets were planned, but said the firm was looking "from coast to coast."

McDonald's chains in particular are so successful that the firm only accepts about 10 per cent of the thousands of franchise applications it receives each year. The average entrepreneur must pay $150,000 to buy in, but he can expect to gross about $508,000 each year.

Because the invasion of the fast food chains is so new, most cafeterias haven't yet felt the crunch, according to Tom Farr, editor of Food Management, a trade journal for food service managers. The fast food franchises need larger campuses to maintain a high volume, he noted.

To try to compete some cafeterias have devised menus similar to fast food chains, he said, but so far it hasn't really worked. "Even if the menu is the same, there's some kind of mystique about having a Big Mac."

"These kids grew up with McDonald's," agreed Clark Dehaven. "The idea of having a commercial establishment on campus is very appealing to them."

Dehaven, however, saw the real debate as between those who are concerned about giving students a balanced meal and those who would just sell them profitable but nutritionally-lacking junk food.

The debate is intense enough that many food service directors are watching carefully the fast food success of giving students only what they want. Plagued by menu complaints and inflation, lured by the profits of McDonald's and others, they have just about been convinced that the way to a student's stomach is through his heart.

...A New Tripped Out Card Game

(continued from page four)

table before the game starts.

Example
10 players
Each player contributes $100 to the pot.
Each player has 10 hits of LSD
The "up" cards are
A = 30 hits
K = 20
Q = 15
10 = 10
8 = 8
7 = 7
6 = 6
5 = 5
4 = 4
2 = 2

Down cards are J, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2. Down cards are dealt around first, then "up" cards. Players cannot look at down cards.

Each player must "declare in turn, from the highest "up" card holder to the next highest, and so on down.

If the player who has been dealt the Ace in the above example says "I will", all down cards are turned over. The players with the three highest "down" cards, leaving the declarers "down" card out of consideration, place their hits in front of the declarer (3 x 10 = 30) and, after he has swallowed them with a glass of water, the clock is started. If the declarer doew not throw up within 15 minutes the pot is his.

If the holder of the Ace says "not on your life", he folds and is out of the game.

New "down" cards are dealt.

The choice passes to the holder of the second highest up card, in this case the King, who, if he says "I will" must take 20 hits from the holders of the two highest "down" cards, leaving his own down card out of consideration (but counting the "down" card of the folded Ace holder).

If King says "not on your life" the option passes to the Q, who must decide between $1000 and 15 hits or the loss of $100 and so on down the line.

If nobody will take the pot, the Ace holder who folded now gets a chance to take the pot for 20, if not, the Q for 10, if not the 8 for 7, etc., until the previous low card holder, who must take one hit less than his previous requirement if he is to take the pot. If not, then back to the A and 15 hits.

If all players reach a hit count of one by this process, and nobody will take the pot, the participants should declare the whole thing to have been a shameful exhibition of false bravado, take back their antes, go home, and try to avoid associating with each other in the future.

Variations

1. A good variation is to agree that the "winner" must take the count called for his "up" card from the stashes of the other player or players plus one of his own, picked out by the player with the lowest down card (to avoid players bringing unreliable drugs into the game). The minimum count would be 1+1.

2. One of the cards in the "down" deck may be declared a booby prize, and whoever gets it must take all (or an agreed-upon amount) of his own acid without any financial reward.

3. All the acid available can be placed in a cup in the center of the table, and the correct amount shaken out for the declarer by the holder of the highest down card.

4. The prospective declarer is allowed to sell off part of the pot to bribe others to join him on his trip. (O.K., Fifi, I will take the 30 hits, and give you half the pot, if you will take 10 of your own). If this kind of bargaining is allowed, a time-limit must be set – use a three minute sand glass. The declarer cannot "share" his required number of hits, of course, and if "Fifi" happens to have the hits he must take because she holds a high "down" card, the declarer must work out a private deal to obtain her hits from someone else. None of these deals are to be "enforced" by the players – they can only get their money back if the declarer does not retain his hits for 15 minutes – and he cannot split his pot until he gets it himself – only promise to do so.

5. Extend the "retention period" to 1/2 hour if you suspect some players have stomach pumps hidden somewhere. LSD is normally absorbed very quickly, however, in the effects which follow cannot be stopped by any means known to medical science.

6. Along with the ante of money require that every player take one hit of someone else's acid by dealing out preliminary rounds of cards. If this is done, write down the rules before hand and, if possible, appoint a "straight" judge to manage the game and settle disputes.

Thoughts And Reflections

by Ken Markowitz

Those Oscar days have come and gone and when the dust cleared Art Carney walked away with the prize for best male actor. It was a bum year like the year the Duke won it for True Grit so the Academy wisely decided to give the Oscar to some deserving actor. And who is more deserving than (Hey there Ralphie boy!) Art Carney? Who can forget the memorable sewer cleaner Ed Norton and his loudmouth bus driver sidekick Ralph Kramden. Carney and Gleason should have been awarded something a long time ago. Nice going, Academy! You done good this time.

Speaking of movies, author William Peter Blatty has filed a $1.5 million suit against Bantam Books for royalties he claims are due him for The Exorcist. His suit alleges Bantam fraudulently converted his book royalties to other uses through accounting procedures. Blatty has also filed a $21.5 million suit against Warner Bros. Inc. alleging fraud and deceit in accounting of film royalties for The Exorcist. It's not them, Bill. It's the devil.

The quote of the week has to go to George Foreman. The former heavyweight champ speaking about his plan to fight five men on the same day stated, "If any one of them, beats me, I'll retire from the ring." What if they all beat you George, what then?

Lief and Chris may have to take a back seat. New evidence states that neither the Vikings nor Columbus were the first visitors to the New World. Markings on the U.S. East coast, in Mexico, South America, and Paraguay indicate according to Dr. H. Fell of Harvard University's Museum of Comparative Zoology, Mediterranean visitors explored these shores before 150 B.C. They are said to be sailors from Cadiz, Spain. Some may have been part of a huge remnant of Alexander the Great's fleet which he had assembled to explore Arabia. Well, don't worry about it fellas. The banks will still close in your honor and kids somewhere will get out of school.

Remember that Japanese soldier who surrendered last year after thirty-three years of waging lonely warfare against the U.S. in the Philippine jungle. Lt. Hiroo Onada is back in the U.S. today pushing his new book My Thirty-Three Year War. When he's through, Onada intends to return to another jungle. Shocked by the gross materialism and pollution of Japanese society, Hiroo plans to farm in the Brazilian jungle where, in his own words, "a man can make his own living and live in harmony with nature." To each his own. Incidentally, the only thing Hiroo didn't miss in his last safari was the bananas.

Did you know 8,000,000 or 8.7 pet cent of the nation's work force is unemployed? Pretty lousy statistic, isn't it.

It's too bad Val Carter died. He had an earthy style which is rare in many disc jockeys today. Every once in awhile you would get up in the morning and humorously flick on his channel cursing poor Val for playing that old fashioned song which he thought was beautiful and you thought was Yecch! But it wasn't Val or his songs that you were really sore at, it was really anger at an upcoming term paper or Bio exam that you had to let out. Val founded WDOT and actually laid the wires himself down in the Winooski. Quite an accomplishment! Wherever you are Val, here's hoping you get serenaded with those old songs you liked so much.

Glad to see a little sunshine. Thought it was mid-December there for awhile.

Saying for the week: The eternal stars shine out as soon as it is dark enough. Thomas Carlyle

WE NEED BULLETS LIKE WE NEED A HOLE IN THE HEAD.

- Hand guns account for 75% of all armed violence.
- A new hand gun is sold in the U.S. every 13 seconds.
- 7 out of 10 policemen killed in the U.S. were killed with hand guns.

We want the Consumer Product Safety Commission to ban the sale of bullets for hand guns only. They have the authority to do this if enough people write, or call them.

WRITE TO: CONSUMER PRODUCT SAFETY COMMISSION, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20207.

and tell them you want the sale of bullets for hand guns to be banned. (Except to police, licensed security guards, the military and licensed pistol clubs.)

Donations are needed and welcome. Please send them to: The Committee for Hand Gun Control Inc., 111 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60601

BAN BULLETS

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Outdoor Sculpture At Fleming

by Mark Seralnick

One of the more interesting contemporary art exhibits has opened this week on campus. "Clarence Schmidt Reconstructed Shrines and Architectural Environment", opened on Tuesday at the Fleming. Professor William C. Lipke and Gregg Blasdel organized the exhibit with the aid of a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Mr. Schmidt is a contemporary artist, now retired, who gained prominence in the early sixties. Such magazines as Cosmopolitan, The Saturday Evening Post, Horizon and numerous art publications focused on this very interesting man. The Walker Art Center in Minneapolis recently included him in the first group show of grass roots artists.

Due to the fact that most of Schmidt's work cannot be completely transformed in a museum setting, visitors must settle for pieces or sections from his now disintegrated structures, and photo-murals. He constructed many of his "environments" at Woodstock, New York, but these structures have either disintegrated due to their materials and weather erosion or have been destroyed in the series of unfortunate fires during 1971-72.

The Fleming is exhibiting fragments of "shrines", outdoor sculpture which was integrated with his environments and the natural landscape of Woodstock. Photomurals are also utilized to present the chronological development of Schmidt's work over a twenty-year period. His first "House of Mirrors", an intricate ziggarut-shaped structure which was constructed from found door frames, window sashes and wrapped in foil and tar. This structure was spatially juxtaposed with "Mark II."

Clarence Schmidt

On April 29, Mr. Gregg Blasdel, a leading authority on the subject of Grass Roots Art and co-organizer of the exhibit, will give a gallery talk about the exhibit and Mr. Schmidt's importance within the context of Grass Roots Art.

The show will run through May 9 and then travel to other museums throughout the country. Since Mr. Schmidt's work has all but disintegrated as it was originally constructed, the exhibit is very important in presenting examples of his now extinct mode of expression. Next week I will continue with an interview of Professor William Lipke and Mr. Blasdel, the show's organizers.

Jagger Stars In Flynn Film

by Jim Reardon

On Saturday, April 19th at 11:30 p.m., the Flynn Theatre will present a special showing of the film Performance. Released by Warner Bros., in 1970, Performance was recognized by the relatively few who saw it as a unique example of cinematographic genius. Because the film was never distributed to a large audience, there have been several misconceptions concerning its content. The explosive portrayal of two 'performers' by Mick Jagger and James Fox can now be appreciated by those who have not experienced it as well as those who have, at this special presentation.

The casting for the film presents a fascinating dichotomy in that it opposed two men who in effect compliment each other. Fox plays Chas, a professional 'strong-arm' who specializes in violence and the exercise of fear. Jagger as Turner, acts out the role of a retired rock n' roll superstar who resides in a bizarre, female-oriented domicile in the company of two women. The two outcasts confront one another and themselves through the medium of music, metaphysics and preposterous ritual.

Chas must flee following his impermissible execution of one of the crime-syndicate's clients. In his attempt to avoid mob retaliation as well as capture by the police, he finds temporary shelter in Turner's fossil-like house, while hoping to discover the means to escape from his dilemma. However, when Turner recognizes that the demonic forces with which he once captured and manipulated vast audiences are embodied in their pure form within the personality of Chas, he embarks on the dissection of the fugitive's human (or inhuman) nature. What emerges from the seductive methods which Turner employs on Chas in his attempt to find the solution to his own paralyzing dilemma, is captured in extraordinary photography as Turner plays his final performance with Chas as his solitary audience.

The music for the film was written by Jack Nitzsche, except "Memo from Turner" which was written by Jagger-Richards, conducted by Randy Newman and performed by Mick Jagger, Randy Newman, Buffy Saint-Marie, Merry Clayton and The Lost Poets. Tickets at the Flynn will be $1.50.

Cheyney College Choir To Give UVM Concert

On April 25, 1975 at 8:00 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel, the Cheyney State College Concert Choir will present a concert under the auspices of the Third World Organization and S.A. Speakers.

The Choir is under the direction of Prof. D. Jack Moses, Chairman of the Music Department and Director of Cultural and Learned Affairs at Cheyney. He is a graduate of Morehouse College and Columbia University, with post graduate work at Julliard School of Music, the University of Hawaii, and the College of Music at Temple University. The Cheyney State College Concert Choir is an inner-group of select voices chosen from the Cheyney State College Choral Society of one-hundred voices. During the spring semester of each year, the choir presents several programs in each state.

Cheyney State College is predominantly black and is the oldest institution of higher education owned by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The College was founded in Philadelphia in 1837 by the Trustees of a bequest made by Richard Humphreys, a Quaker Philanthropist.

Tickets can be obtained from any member of the Third World Organization, Rodger Summers in the Dean of Students Office, or at the door. Donations are $1 for students and $1.50 for others.

Choral works including Negro spirituals will be presented.

Book Review:

Strong Opinions Of Nabokov And Mandell

by David Mandell

In these days, where the bloodiest of bleeding hearts rule, it is rare to find an honest voice. Vladimir Nabokov, perhaps the most prolific writer of this century, is indeed a solitary voice today. Nabokov, author of dozens of works, has full command of several languages and has been successful in all of them. In his half century of writing Nabokov has never failed to challenge tyranny and injustice regardless of its effect on him. More important than Nabokov's political views are his literary skills which he analyzes in his recent book A study of Nabokov provides an insight as to why some writers attain greatness and others remain mired in mediocrity.

Nabokov attributes his great success to his originality. Lolita, his most renown work, was completely derived from his imagination. Lolita's triumph should have served as a model for recent authors. Unwilling to produce propaganda in his native Russia, Nabokov refuses to author crass commercial trash in the West. The Erica Jong-Peter Benchley style of writing absolutely disgusts Nabokov. In Strong Opinions, as might be expected, Nabokov doesn't hesitate to express his revulsion for them, stating, "The sexy, phony type of best seller, the violent, vulgar novel, the novelistic treatment of social or political problems, and in general, novels consisting mainly of dialogue or social comment-these are absolutely banned from my bedside. And the popular mixture of pornography and idealistic humbuggery makes me positively vomit."

When Nabokov says he has strong opinions, he means it. Strong opinions are the trademark of Vladimir Nabokov. Unafraid of the Soviets who forced him out of his homeland, he is equally repulsed by Western elitism, preferring the ducks of Lake Geneva to its "social circle". Another of his virtues is the ability to refrain from self glorification. In responding to a question concerning his most memorable experiences, Nabokov lists learning how to ride a bike in 1909 as one of them.

In the midst of Strong Opinions, this battle-scarred reporter was forced to reconsider a previous review. While those of us in the book reviewing profession are used to intense public scrutiny, it came as a shock to read last week's letter to the editor in the Cynic. The furious tone of one reader was indeed surprising. Relax Comrade Reardon such excitement is not good for the heart. Book reviewing is no bowl of cherries. It's no easy task answering irate phone calls at two in the morning from the likes of Norman Mailer and Alexander Solzhenitsyn. But an honest reviewer has to call the shots the way he or she (thought ole Mandell would forget didn't you Comrade?) sees them. In fact a few years ago this reporter was having martinis at Sans Soucci with John Steinbeck. With a wink, Steinbeck turned to him and said, "Dave, if there's one thing I like about you it's the fact that you don't cower behind defensive cliches and write paltry imitations." A young reporter, just trying to make his way in the world, never forgets such a compliment. Under Steinbeck's guidance this reporter pledged to be honest with himself and his readers. If a book failed to meet his rather modest standards, why, he had an obligation to say so.

Yet when an angry letter arrived he was grateful. At long last a response! So grateful in fact was this reporter that he reread Fear of Flying in search of the mystical allusions to Freud and Sartre so eloquently described. After a laborious exploration, he failed to find anything remotely intellectual in the entire work. Jong's existentialism is limited to comparing genitalia with a map of Italy. The critical point of Fear of Flying finds the story's heroine in a desperate search for tampax. So come now Mr. Reardon, aren't you letting your imagination go a little bit too far? Comparing Erica Jon to Jean Paul Sartre is like comparing Mount Mansfield with Mount Everest. One of them just doesn't make it. It is indeed a sign of troubled times when Erica Jong can even be taken seriously. One can only hope that they will soon leave us. The fact that the back cover of a book says it is great doesn't mean the reader must agree. I may be wrong, but at the present time there isn't anything illegal about using one's brain.

As for Queen Victoria, it seems rather trite to take pot shots at someone long in the grave. A glance at England's position under her as contrasted with it now makes her look pretty good. You can have Queen Elizabeth Mr. Reardon. I'll even throw in Prince Charles and Princess Margaret. On second thought, if you add Erica Jong you can have a nice little foursome.

Au Revoir.

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Earthquake
II Young Frankenstein

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I Murder On The Orient Express
II Lenny

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
The Great Waldo Pepper

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Walt Disney's: Escape To Witch Mountain

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Amarcord
II Towering Inferno

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Godfather Part II
II The Four Musketeers

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, APRIL 17
GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES (1935) – Marilyn Monroe
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

FRIDAY, APRIL 18
YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN (1939) – W. C. Fields
COLLEGE HOLIDAY (1936) – Jack Benny, George Burns
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:30 – $1

SATURDAY, APRIL 19
LONG DAY'S JOURNEY INTO NIGHT (1962) – Kathrine Hepburn, Ralph Richardson, Jason Roberds
101 Votey – 7:30 & 10:00 – Free
(Rescheduled from last week)

MONDAY, APRIL 21
LE BONHEUR (1966) – Directed by Agnes Varda
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – Free

What could be better than The Three Musketeers?
7 + 9:05 PM
It's all new!
THE 4 MUSKETEERS
OLIVER REED RAQUEL WELCH MICHAEL YORK as D'Artagnan FAYE DUNAWAY as Milady CHARLTON HESTON as Cardinal Richelieu
...it's four for fun and fun for all!
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME!

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★ ★ OUR SPECIALS ★ ★
(TEN) 10 CENT NITE EVERY WEDNESDAY
★ FEATURING ★
APRIL 14-20 SPOONFEATHER
APRIL 21-27 BETTER DAYS

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

April 23 thru 29
Cinema 1 & 2 at BURLINGTON PLAZA, SHELBURNE ROAD
One other person was all he needed. One.
time to run starring ed nelson · randell carver · barbara sigel
2 pm Wednesday · Sunday
7 & 9 pm each evening
Advance discount tickets available at UVM Bookstore for more information call: 863-2633
Note:
All passes suspended during this engagement

Rock Climbing & Yosemite SLIDE SHOW with Paul Ross at DAKINS MOUNTAIN SHOP
227 Main St.
FREE
TONIGHT APRIL 17 7 PM

RESEARCH
Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (delivery time is 1 to 2 days).
RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493
Our research material is sold for research assistance only

SPAGHETTI HUT
Specializing in Pizza, Spaghetti & Subs
Free Delivery Available
Open 7 days a week
All Types of Sandwiches Available
Fri. & Sat. open till 4 A.M.
24 Hours On 863-9890

Horror Classics Re

by Leonard E. Benoit

After long, agonizing consideration as to the merit of each of the films below, I have decided to set down my humble impression of each of the thirteen oldies listed below. Though, I am hopelessly addicted to movies, especially old horror movies, I think that I can muster enough objectivity to make my comments of some value to the unwary new-comer to the fabulous realm of gods and monsters.

1. DRACULA – 1930: Though stagey, this picture is well acted, beautifully photographed, and masterfully directed by Tod Browning. The first two reels contain the finest of all horror scenes and have never really been equaled, but much of the credit for the film's continuing success must go to the great Lugosi, whose performance is magnificent.

2. FRANKENSTEIN – 1931: Karloff's superb portrait of the monster is no doubt the best thing about this film but the film itself is amazingly good. The creation of the monster, his murder of Waldman and encounter with a child by the lake are truly excellent. Easily the best horror movie ever made.

3. THE MUMMY – 1933: A vastly over-rated film. The camerawork is good and Karloff is o.k. but the acting, especially that of Zita Johann, the dialogue, and the staging are all rather poor on many occasions. Only the brief resurrection sequence is really good, though a handful of other scenes are flavorful. The remainder is costume melodrama at its most tedious.

Incidentally, the picture is very derivitive of Browning's Dracula but it is hardly as good. Shown with Dracula in October 1974 by the SA Film bureau it was not too well received by the audience. Dracula, of course, was accorded a much warmer welcome. Still, it is chills ahead of most films of its type, but that is not really saying much.

4. KING KONG – 1933: The first part of this film is poor but the remainder is stupendous. Kong's adventures constitute what is certainly one of the most enjoyable films of all time.

5. THE BLACK CAT – 1934: Despite an outrageous plot, Bela, Boris, and director (Edgar G. Ulmer) create a slick, often impressive horror film which is a visual masterpiece. It also benefits from a good musical score. It's much, much better than many critics would have one believe.

6. THE BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN – 1935: This is hardly the masterpiece that some would have it but it does contain some superb sequences. Unfortunately, it contains an equal number of silly, awkward scenes which rehash key points in the original. Thesiger dominates the film, though Boris is good.

7. THE INVISIBLE MAN – 1933: This is an excellent movie in spite of its weak romantic interludes. Rains is most impressive in this dazzling film which is the best of all Universal's thrillers. This picture not the Bride is Whale's masterwork.

8. FREAKS – 1932: Though terrifying, this is an incredibly clumsy picture which is not only tasteless but vastly over-rated. Only a handful of darkly beautiful "pictures" within the film are up to the film's reputation.

9. THE WOLFMAN – 1941: A slick production, the presence of Lugosi, Rains and Ouspenskaya, and a number of good scenes, such as Bela's change, and the arrival of the gypsies, cannot

Chaney's unin or the long du accompany hi screen.

10. THE R
Lugosi has a grim "comedy verbal exch
Lugosi and K
description an but it is also oceans of fun.

11. SON OF 1939. Go this is the horror mo
Lugosi steals but Rathb come close with their m mirror. Lion good as a one police inspe
Kael liked it

12. THE TH excellent some mom terror: the
with the hu unforgettabl
last great sce

13. HORRO
1958 technicolor in making th shocker a s an accept least in this the shock impact. Ho sequence at staged. No Universal c best "mode

S.A

Cor

by Le

TWIN TIT
The S once one c for allo
Associatio miserable existence films have which are shown Frankens Cat were their glor would attempt in one resulted and little H.P. injustice is its chargin crummy movie Frequen question seen such as horror treat:
Friday
pure which one do for this to raise astron Hepbu
shown
Th addicte therefo
the ac like ol herself see Ka
K attend tinker buck.

TONIGHT
TRY
NANSEA'S ('Cause whatev
you, fancie
FAMOUS SEA or one of the 90 combinations at CARB
Live Entertainment Nightly
119 St. Paul Street

R.

...ge Choir

... Concert

...niversity ...ollege of ...niversity ... College ...ber group ...en from ... College ...hundred ... spring ...ear, the ...programs ... ...ollege is ...nd is the ... higher ... by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The College was founded in Philadelphia in 1837 by the Trustees of a bequest made by Richard Humphreys, a Quaker Philanthropist.

Tickets can be obtained from any member of the Third World Organization, Rodger Summers in the Dean of Students Office, or at the door. Donations are $1 for students and $1.50 for others.

Choral works including Negro spirituals will be presented

...nd Mandell

...roblems, ... novels ... dialogue ...ense, are ...om my ... popular ...phy and ... makes his way in the world, never forgets such a compliment. Under Steinbeck's guidance this reporter pledged to be honest with himself and his readers. If a book failed to meet his rather modest standards, why, he had an obligation to say so.

...ys he has ...means it ...ate the ...Vladimir ... of the ...m out of ... equally ...cism. ...Zen ...l circle" ...ues is the ...from self ...anding to ...g his most ...eriences, ...g how to ...as one of

Yet when an angry letter arrived he was grateful. At long last a response! So grateful in fact was this reporter that he reread Fear of Flying in search of the mystical allusions to ... and Sartre so eloquently described. After a laborious exploration, he failed to find anything remotely intellectual in the entire work. Jong's existentialism is limited to comparing genitalia with a map of Italy. The critical point of Fear of Flying finds the story's heroine in a desperate search for tampax. So come now Mr. Reardon, aren't you letting your imagination go a little bit too far? Comparing Erica Jon to Jean Paul Sartre is like comparing Mount Mansfield with Mount Everest. One of them just doesn't make it. It is indeed a sign of troubled times when Erica Jong can even be taken seriously. One can only hope that they will soon leave us. The fact that the back cover of a book says it is great doesn't mean the reader must agree. I may be wrong, but at the present time there isn't anything illegal about using one's brain.

...of Strong ...tle-scarred ...ceed to ...is review. ...the book ... are used ...crutiny, it ... read last ... editor in ...is tone of ...s indeed ... Comrade. ...tement is ...art' Book ... bowl of ... easy task ...ne calls at ... from the ...Matter and ...yn But an ...to call the ...e or she ...bell would ...Comrade") ... few years ...was having ...uccs with ...th a wink ...) him and ...'s one thing ...'s the fact ...wer behind ... and write ... A young ...r to make

As for Queen Victoria, it seems rather trite to take pot shots at someone long in the grave. A glance at England's position under her as contrasted with it now makes her look pretty good. You can have Queen Elizabeth Mr. Reardon. I'll even throw in Prince Charles and Princess Margaret. On second thought, if you add Erica Jong you can have a nice little foursome.

Au Revoir.

TONIGHT APRIL 17 7 PM

...IN ... St.

RESEARCH

Thousands of Topics
$2.75 per page

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage (delivery time is 1 to 2 days)

RESEARCH ASSISTANCE, INC.
11941 WILSHIRE BLVD., SUITE #2
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
(213) 477-8474 or 477-5493

Our research material is sold for research assistance only

SPAGHETTI HUT

Specializing in Pizza, Spaghetti & Subs

Free Delivery Available
Open 7 days a week
All Types of Sandwiches Available
Fri. & Sat. open till 2 A.M.
Sunday 11 A.M.-Mid-night

Horror Classics Reviewed

by Leonard E. Benoit

After long, agonizing consideration as to the merit of each of the films below, I have decided to set down my humble impression of each of the thirteen oldies listed below. Though, I am hopelessly addicted to movies, especially old horror movies, I think that I can muster enough objectivity to make my comments of some value to the unwary new-comer to the fabulous realm of gods and monsters.

1. DRACULA – 1930: Though stagey, this picture is well acted, beautifully photographed, and masterfully directed by Tod Browning. The first two reels contain the finest of all horror scenes and have never really been equaled; but much of the credit for the film's continuing success must go to the great Lugosi, whose performance is magnificent.

2. FRANKENSTEIN – 1931: Karloff's superb portrait of the monster is no doubt the best thing about this film but the film itself is amazingly good. The creation of the monster, his murder of Waldman and encounter with a child by the lake are truly excellent. Easily the best horror movie ever made.

3. THE MUMMY – 1933: A vastly over-rated film. The camerawork is good and Karloff is o.k. but the acting, especially that of Zita Johann, the dialogue, and the staging are all rather poor on many occasions. Only the brief resurrection sequence is really good, though a handful of other scenes are flavorful. The remainder is costume melodrama at its most tedious.

Incidentally, the picture is very derivitive of Browning's Dracula but it is hardly as good. Shown with Dracula in October 1974 by the SA Film bureau it was not too well received by the audience. Dracula, of course, was accorded a much warmer welcome. Still, it is chills ahead of most films of its type, but that is not really saying much.

4. KING KONG – 1933: The first part of this film is poor but the remainder is stupendous. Kong's adventures constitute what is certainly one of the most enjoyable films of all time.

5. THE BLACK CAT – 1934: Despite an outrageous plot, Bela, Boris, and director (Edgar G. Ulmer) create a slick, often impressive horror film which is a visual masterpiece. It also benefits from a good musical score. It's much, much better than many critics would have one believe.

6. THE BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN – 1935: This is hardly the masterpiece that some would have it but it does contain some superb sequences. Unfortunately, it contains an equal number of silly, awkward scenes which rehash key points in the original. Thesiger dominates the film, though Boris is good.

7. THE INVISIBLE MAN – 1933: This is an excellent movie in spite of its weak romantic interludes. Rains is most impressive in this dazzling film which is the best of all Universal's thrillers. This picture not the Bride is Whale's masterwork.

8. FREAKS – 1932: Though terrifying, this is an incredibly clumsy picture which is not only tasteless but vastly over-rated. Only a handful of darkly beautiful "pictures" within the film are up to the film's reputation.

9. THE WOLFMAN – 1941: A slick production, the presence of Lugosi, Rains and Ouspenskaya, and a number of good scenes, such as Bela's change, and the arrival of the gypsies, cannot compensate for Chaney's uninteresting person or the long dull stretches which accompany his presence on the screen.

10. THE RAVEN – 1935: Lugosi has a field-day in this grim "comedy of terror." The verbal exchanges between Lugosi and Karloff are beyond description and so is the movie, but it is slickly made and is oceans of fun.

11. SON OF FRANKENSTEIN – 1939: Good on all counts, this is the last really good horror movie ever made. Lugosi steals the show as Ygor, but Rathbone and Karloff come close to getting it back with their meeting before the mirror. Lionel Atwill is also good as a one-armed, monocled police inspector. Even Pauline Kael liked it.

12. THE THING – 1951: An excellent movie which has some moments of supreme terror: the melting, the fight with the huskies, etc. are all unforgettable. The first and last great science fiction movie.

13. HORROR OF DRACULA – 1958: Lush sets and technicolor aid Peter Cushing in making this fairly well-made shocker a success. Chris Lee is an acceptable Dracula—at least in this one. After a while the shock scenes lose all impact. However, the rotting sequence at the end is very well staged. No competition for the Universal classics but still the best "modern" horror movie.

S.A. Films Condemned

by Leonard E. Benoit

TWIN TITANS OF TERROR

The SA Film Bureau was once one of the better excuses for allowing the Student Association to continue its miserable fee-collecting existence. However, this year's films have come to us in prints which are nearly worn out. As shown by SA Films, Frankenstein and The Black Cat were faded shadows of their glorious former selves. It would seem that the SA attempt to show more movies in one semester than anyone can ever hope to see has resulted in lots of eye strain and little utility.

However, the worst injustice wrought by SA Films is its odious practice of charging admission to its crummy showings of the "big movie" on Friday nights. Frequently, the attraction in question is one of the rarely seen Karloff-Lugosi classics, such as The Black Cat. No true horror fan can pass up such a treat; unfortunately, the Friday showings have been pure torture—torture for which the gullible are soaked one dollar. What is SA's excuse for this outrage? They are trying to raise money in order to rent astronomically expensive Hepburn movies which are shown for free on Saturdays.

Those of us who are addicted to Bela and Boris have therefore been forced to pay the admission of those who like old "box office poison" herself. Let those who wish to see Kate pay their own way.

As for the showings I attended, they weren't worth a tinker's damn—let alone a buck.

Your faithful servant:
Dr Vitus Verdegast

S.A. Rebuttal Above

S.A. Film Bureau Rebuts "Gauche" Commentary

Dear Leonard,

In response to your gauche commentary about S.A. Films, I can only say that you are highly uninformed about the running of the Film Bureau. First of all, you complain that the prints of Frankenstein and The Black Cat are "nearly worn out." I viewed the films myself and they were not. But if your critical eye does not approve, complain to Universal, from whom we rented the films. It is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain good prints of such old films.

You also say that there are far too many films being shown. If we had known that you had wanted to see every one of them, we would have altered the schedule. The program was originally set up to satisfy everyone's diverse film tastes on the campus. We believe it has.

Now you tell us that we shouldn't charge admission on our "big movies" shown on Friday nights. Well, if we, didn't, we'd go broke. Very infrequently do we show films like The Black Cat. As a matter of fact, we have only done this two other times since our first film back in September. It is perfectly reasonable to charge admission for a film like Cabaret, whose rental is $380.00 or Romeo and Juliet, whose rental is $410.00. Films like this would bring charges (and have) of $2.50 in the theaters in town. If you feel you have been "soaked for one dollar" every time you attend a Friday film, that's too bad. Many of the films are rare, and many of them could never have been seen anywhere near Burlington. This not only applies for the Friday series, but for the other nights, Monday, Thursday and Saturday, for which we do not charge admission. For example, King of Hearts, Claire's Knee, The Trojan Women, Le Bonheur, The Bride Wore Black, The Sorrow and and the Pity and the list goes on. Maybe you are being soaked for one dollar, and the rest of the school isn't. To continue bringing rare and expensive films to UVM, we had to implement the additional charge. Our budget may be good, but it is not unlimited.

When you say that "SA is trying to raise money in order to rent astronomically expensive Hepburn movies," you prove your lack of knowledge. In fact, these "astronomically expensive"

(continued on page nine)

AN OPEN LETTER TO CESAR CHAVEZ FROM ERNEST AND JULIO GALLO

Dear Mr. Chavez:

We are surprised that you are requesting an election by the Gallo farm workers, who are the highest paid farm workers in the continental United States with the best package of fringe benefits.

You know that Gallo has a legally binding contract with the Teamsters Union; the union chosen by the Gallo farm workers to represent them.

You know that Gallo cannot unilaterally break that contract any more than Gallo can break its contracts with the three AFL-CIO unions representing other Gallo workers.

You know that, if Gallo yielded to your request, Gallo would violate its contract with the Teamsters and become subject to Teamster strikes, lawsuits and other harassment, including boycotts.

You know that Gallo is now and always has been perfectly agreeable to an election if you and the Teamsters would agree to such an election, and if the results were legally binding and enforceable on all parties.

You know that the answer to this problem is in legislation – not marches, boycotts, and demonstrations.

You know that Gallo has long supported legislation, state or federal, to give farm workers and their employers the same rights, benefits and protection given most other American laborers and their employers under the National Labor Relations Act.

You know that, so far, the only reason we do not have a California labor law like the National Labor Relations Act is because you oppose such a law.

You know that California farm workers need and deserve such legislation, under which most other American labor has grown strong and prosperous.

Isn't it time, Mr. Chavez, that you change your position, and join the rest of organized labor and Gallo in seeking legislation to bring farm labor under the protection of the National Labor Relations Act, or an equivalent state law?

Ernest Gallo
Julio Gallo

WRITE YOUR LEGISLATORS TO INCLUDE FARM WORKERS UNDER THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS ACT OR ITS STATE EQUIVALENT.
FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION WRITE: E. & J. GALLO WINERY, P. O. BOX 1130, MODESTO, CALIFORNIA 95353

TONIGHT
TRY
NANSEA'S FANSEA ('Cause whatever fancies, you, fancies Nansea.)

FAMOUS SINCE 1974

or one of the 90 other unbelievable combinations at CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Live Entertainment Nightly.
119 St. Paul Street 862-4105

Blues Festival Draws Near

Buddy Guy (guitar) and Junior Wells (harp) headline one of five blues bands to appear in April 26 festival

by Dave Horwitz and Ginny Gold

The fourth annual Vermont Blues Festival will take place on Saturday, April 26 in the UVM Patrick Gym. Tickets will be on sale at the UVM Bookstore, Barney's Main Store in the Beach Spuder in Montpelier and The Vermont Bookstore in Middlebury. They will be only $4 in advance, UVM ID holders only, or the Burlington residents and $4.50 for general admission. The festival will be presented by the UVM SA Concert Bureau which has been organizing the event since 1971. Previously the Saturday afternoon performances will be offering free workshops in Billings Center.

Featured on the festival this year will be The Buddy Guy, Junior Wells Band, Mose Allison, the Luther Johnson Chicago Blues Band, the Son Seals Blues Band and Robert Junior Lockwood. All are exciting performers, and the combination of talents should prove to make this years festival an outstanding event.

George "Buddy" Guy was born and raised in Louisiana where he fashioned his first guitar from a wooden box and the wire off a screen door.

In the early 60's he moved to Chicago where his career blossomed. He is appearing set for B. B. King he was immediately recognized as an important talent. He became a studio session man for Chess Records and he backed up virtually all the best blues musicians of the day among them Muddy Waters, Sonny Boy Williamson, and Etta James.

Today he and Junior Wells are successfully touring the nation with their own band. Critics have recognized them as one of the top blues bands in the country.

Junior Wells was discovered by Sonny Boy Williamson playing the "harp" (harmonica) in a small Arkansas town. He too migrated to Chicago and eventually joined the Muddy Waters Band. In the early 60's, he formed his own band, which met with much acclaim.

Wells had toured all over the world. He is a recognized Bluesman as far away as Australia and the Fiji Islands. Some of his better known songs include "Up in Heah," and "Come on in this House."

Mose Allison, a piano player who is also famous for his unique vocal style, has effectively fused blues and jazz. He is a brilliant composer and is famous for a number of tunes including "Parchment Farm" which has been recorded by John Mayall and "If you Live" which was recorded by Brian Auger.

Luther Johnson has been making quite a name for himself in the Burlington area through his club engagements, but his appearance at this year's festival will mark his first straight blues performance in several years. In clubs he is often forced to play dance music which often strays from the pure blues form. It is playing straight blues, however, where Luther shines.

Luther left the Muddy Waters Band five years ago after playing with them for three years, and he continues the long line of excellent musicians to come from that band. Luther now travels with his own band consisting of two guitars, bass, harp, and drums.

Chris Hamel of Boston's Real Paper has called Luther the "best blues guitarist-vocalist in town." He added, "what distinguishes Luther from that canyon full of blues imposters is style, and what gives Johnson style is experience."

Son Seals, whose first album came out on Alligator last year was recently selected as the Chicago Blues Artist of the year. He has been praised by numerous music publications and newspapers. Linda Solomani of Rock magazine said, "The Son Seals Blues Band sure makes Mayall and his ilk look insignificant by comparison." According to the Daily Cardinal of Wisconsin, "Son's music has the sound of the Kings', B.B. and Albert. But where B.B. has mellowed with horn arrangements and fancy nightclub shows, and Albert has cemented himself into his patented riffs, Son Seals at 50 has still refused to put a limit on what he hopes to do with his instrument."

Son was recently quoted as saying, "I used to hear kids say they wouldn't pay money to hear the blues. More are starting to listen now. I believe the future of the blues is going to be alright." Son Seals will definitely be a part of that future.

Robert Junior Lockwood is a guitarist vocalist who has been called one of the few living bluesmen who represent the transition from traditional acoustic blues to the modern

(continued on page nine)

New Jr. Wells L.P.

Junior Wells on Top
by Paul Prior

Yes ladies and gents, this is the column that asks the questions "Can a black man sing the blues?" Or, can a blue man sing the whites? Or vice versa, for the jocular at heart. I'm not too knowledgeable about the blues, we might as well establish this right off. Since my "professorate" are primarily in rock, jazz, and what is deemed "progressive" music, the task of reviewing this new release becomes a bit more challenging than reviewing a release by someone as "heavy" as B.T.O.

I'm not a total stranger to Junior Wells. I saw him perform at the fabled Fillmore East many years back, he played with Buddy Guy, and hopefully this is the same band that will be headlining at the Blues Festival April 26. Though that night remains a little hazy in memory, I'll never forget both Guy and Wells jumping off the stage and into the audience, getting the anxious crowd (there to see the Airplane and Hot Tuna) on their feet and into the aisles. I remember being impressed by the guitar work of Buddy Guy, but little else. So now the ace Arts Editor has requested that I deal with "On Tap" the latest Junior Wells' disk.

The album rocks to a start with "Watch Me Move", a cut that sounds more indigenous to James Brown than to Junior Wells. The cut is enlivened by the fine sax work of A.C. Reed and Charles Miles. "Someday Baby" follows, slow and bluesy (what else?) and featuring excellent guitar work by both Phillip Guy and Sam Lawhorn. Willie Broonzy's famous "Key To The Highway" is next, fine guitar here, but little else. At this point I should probably mention the harp and singing of our hero, Junior Wells. Well, (no pun intended) I'm not exactly overwhelmed with his performance here. Perhaps his interest just wasn't high enough, but there is a definite lack of inspiration on this album. Listening to the version of "Key To The Highway" on the Layla album gives me more of an emotional involvement in the music. here the players just go through the motions, tired riffs you've heard a million times down at "The Sting."

Side Two isn't much better, though at least Wells sounds awake. "You Gotta Love Her With A Feeling" opens the side, but you gotta sing it and play it with a feeling too. "The Train I Ride" moves along pretty well, some good guitar again, with a few nice sax riffs too. "So Long" is more tired than Wells seems to be on the album, perhaps they should have entitled the cut "Too Long." "Junior's Thing" ends side two, my favorite cut on the album, mostly for the nice interplay between the guitars and harp. As a harp player Wells is adequate, not funky enough for my taste. Gimme Paul Butterfield any day.

Perhaps the sluggishness of this disk is due to the insipid playing in the rhythm dept. The bassist and drummer work well together, but fail to inspire the rest of the group to greater heights, as well as failing to inspire the listener. But even a combination of Billy Cobham and Stan Clarke couldn't have helped much - the material is just too familiar. Even with my limited knowledge in the blues field, I recognized many of the guitar passages, and have heard them done by superior musicians as well. Just the same, I wouldn't discourage you from listening and deciding for yourself. The best way to do that would be to truck on over to Patrick Gym for the Blues Festival, and watch Junior Wells playing with Buddy Guy and his band. I'm sure it will be more entertaining than the album, at least you can see them "get down to it." I might also add that the band that appears with them in concert is not the band that appears on the album. So, amid the shouts to "pay your dues and sing da blooze" I shall depart, and will return next week from a supreme Ozone mission. Next week, LITTLE FEAT, ALIVE AND KICKIN' from New York's Beacon Theatre.

At Long Last:

Pestlemaniacs Exposed!

Ho ho ho! We won't say we told you so but we told you so. If this isn't the beginning of Spring we don't know what is. And if it snows again, someone's going to take the blame and be sacrificed to whoever it is who keeps dumping snow around here.

Actually, ritual sacrifice is only a part of ancient traditions for the celebration of Spring. More common (and less gross!) is the custom of presenting comedies in places called Theatres, and there will be one this weekend at the Royall Tyler right here on campus. For those of you who are so out of it that you've missed our earlier releases, this particular comedy is called The Knight of the Burning Pestle and it's a riot. We can't stop laughing!

Last week we tracked down an old professor who has specialized during his career on the soi-disant Pestlian Period of comedy. He told us: "I have found the term Pestlian to be quite comprehensive, and blessedly, vague. It stands, of course, in direct opposition to the more commonly used "Jacobean" (or "Jacobean"). It should be mentioned here that the British Jacobean is in no way to be confused with the positively French Jacobin. On the contrary! Jacobean, by very definition, refers to the reign of Jolly King Jacob of England, Jacob poor soul, throughout his endless reign.

The stigma of Sexual Ambiguity, and is known as jolly only because of his notorious relations with a certain Duke, whose name, if not yet a household work, is at any rate a source of general amusement. I for one find it generally amusing."

When our professor friend vanished under mysterious circumstances, we contacted Pestle's director, the eternal James Wimsatt. Asked about the reason for it all, our James scratched his head and replied wittily, "What the hell do I know about all this? It's a funny play. Tell them to go see it." We'd take that sage advice if we were you.

By the proverbial way, you may have noticed lately a group of brightly dressed characters wandering around England, Jacob poor soul, bore campus crying, "Pestle!" These are members of the cast, in fact, and a merrier bunch couldn't be imagined. If you haven't seen them it's because you've been foolishly studying when you should be outside lying in the mud. Be on the lookout for these roving minstrels. They're coming your way, and are really quite tame.

Once again, The Knight of the Burning Pestle will be in performance this weekend, April 18, 19 and 20, and next week, April 24, 25 and 26. Curtain time is 8:00 (in the evening, dummkopf!). Call 656-2094 for reservations or drop in to see our costume and scene exhibit which runs through April 30.

Remember, folks, that's, 656-2094.
2094
2-0-9-4!

The Real Inspector Hound: 'A Trichotomy of Forces'

by Peter Campbell

XX: Well, what did you think of the Real Inspector Hound?

XY: Oh, a very clever very witty little comedy, and, flawlessly performed, wasn't it?

XX: Is that what you are going to say in your review?

XY: On yes, something like that, 'flawlessly performed ... a gem of a farce with sparkling wit that combined solid play craftmanship with the firm foundation of the script itself to provide good entertainment, with occasionally brilliant flashes of insight as well'. There you have it. Just describe the play in terms of a diamond, and then analyse its structure in terms of a house and you'll do fine.

XX: But you won't do that, will you?

WY: No, probably not, especially after seeing how those two critics in The Real Inspector Hound made asses of themselves - I should hope not.

XX: But then, let's hope it won't be another one of your surrealistic mind-dribbles.

XY: Well, why not? If Tom Stoppard can start getting baroque, then so can I. What can I say when a play is near perfect? That perfection defies meaningful description, and I'm afraid then I will sound like a public relations bulletin.

XX: Yes, but if the performers deserve...

XY: On yes, let's not kid ourselves. The serious ones put all their notices in a scrapbook, which is okay, except that it makes me feel like I have too much responsibility. And in a sense I am performing when I write. I don't see words. I hear voices...Say, you know that's what really stood out in the Real Inspector Hound. The voices. Such rich sounds. The English and Irish playwrights are very aware of sound. John Milligan, the co-director of Hound has that awareness. Both this play and his production of Under Milkwood had that quality where one remembers the voices more than the setting or action. I suppose that is his Shakespearean influences.

XX: What do you mean?

XY: Well, he was in the Shakespearean festival last summer. He was Prospero in the Tempest, remember. A voice like Silver notes from a golden flute, believe me... Now, if you have seen other productions at UVM you will notice a more visual orientation. For example, do you remember Macbett? I cannot remember the voices at all but I do remember people running all over the stage. And I remember Craig Purington dropping his pants at the end. Now, that was visual. But the director must watch out, because then one is competing with movies, and theatre can never keep up with movies in that respect. Too many visual effects in theatre will seem gimmicky. Milligan and Keith Gaylord avoided that very nicely. The voices were great, but the drawing room sequences were essentially parodies where one can over-act: overacting is easier to do, so the two critics "Moon" and "Birdboot" certainly had the harder parts as well as the major parts. Especially, Birdboot. I would imagine, because he was the only character in the play who was not a caricature.

XX: Yes, did you notice how he started out with a heavy accent?

XY: Yeah, he was just searching for the right modulation. Once you start speaking in a certain way you've got to keep it up...

XX: Say, that was great when the phone was ringing. I mean the expression on his face... Why did the reviewers get dragged into the play?

XY: It was pure character portrayal. Pompous critics trying to interpret a play that is not saying anything in the first place, consequently alienate themselves and then are tricked into the plot with absurd results. In the end The Real Inspector Hound was still a whodunit, albeit, a sophisticated whodunit that evolves into absurdist theatre. The critics are punished for their pedantry, and the audience delights in their punishment. Their pedantry is also the "red herring" in this whodunit.

XX: Are you going to say that?

XY: Oh, I might be able to slip that in somewhere... Hey, you know what might be interesting? Socratic dialogue just like this - after all, a critic must traffic in ideas, even if much theatre does not. That's a big conflict. Say, you know I saw a high school play much like the play within The Real Inspector Hound when I was last home.

XX: How was it?

XY: Awful. I mean it made me nervous just to sit there. I had forgotten how bad high school plays really are. I slipped out between the first and second acts, but I had forgotten my mittens and ended up crawling over half a dozen people in the dark to get them. It was really embarrassing.

XX: It served you right, you rat.

XY: Yeah, that was particularly noticeable about The Real Inspector Hound. It was really too short... you know, Tom Stoppard was once a critic. He must have been frustrated into playwriting.

XX: I bet there are a lot of frustrated playwrights inside of critics.

XY: Yeah, particularly after you see so many bad plays. You start saying to yourself; hell, I could do better than that!

XX: Well, there is only one way to find out...

XY: Yeah, I know... Do you want me to turn out the light?

XX: Please.

XY: Good-night... I love you.

XX: Good-night. I love you too.

FRESHMAN! SOPHMORES!

The Navy can give you the opportunity to earn two degrees and learn two careers at once. Be guaranteed a commission as a Naval Aviator after graduation. Check out the Navy's AVROC program. See your Navy Information Team on campus

22 to 25 April 75 at Billings Center or call 518-472-4424

TODAY!

BE SOMEONE SPECIAL

GO NAVY!

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER

40 Church St. Burlington

Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction

Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont

Complete Study Notes

Small presses & some far-out reading

UNIVERSITY YEAR FOR ACTION (U.Y.A.)

APPLICATIONS NOW BEING ACCEPTED!

AVAILABLE AT: The Office of Volunteer Programs
Mansfield House
656-2062

STOP IN FOR INFORMATION AND U.Y.A. PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS

...Big Brothe

(continued from page one)

Descriptive data regarding the Visiting Nurses Association.

Patients Rights Handbook - Vermont Health Rights Committee.

Throughout the year the Coordinating Committee was very concerned with volunteer placement, support and follow up. The Committee trys to contact all volunteers twice a semester to talk about how their relationship is going.

Volunteers are also asked to evaluate the program by means of an evaluation form; in turn the Committee reviews each of these forms and makes changes in the program which we feel will strengthen it. The Coordinating Committee is also in contact with social agencies and other volunteer offices and projects throughout the state giving and receiving feedback about volunteer programs. The Coordinating Committee provides volunteers with as much support as possible. volunteers are encouraged to speak with committee members about any problems they are facing. Big Brothers and Sisters are also encouraged to attend: Big Brother/Sister meetings throughout the year to air concerns, gratifications, and problems which they have encountered. The OVP professional staff offers weekly problem solving practicums for all volunteers. This is an excellent place to develop problem solving skills and it acts as a forum for exchanging and sharing ideas.

The Coordinating Committee is continually trying to attract more volunteers to the program by several means; speaking to community groups, high school juniors and seniors, UVM campus groups, UVM resident advisors and sororities and finally by articles in newspaper and campus.

Once volu interest in Brother or interviewed f 1 hour committee that the volun the type of they are capa do. This invo the child's of the proble will encou exposure the child will g world, value feelings. A interview a depicting th worlds and the children parties. The a volunteer Brother or one year, encouraged they can, been a Big B

We ask they at least once time.

When discontinues the Coordi sends one le and one to originally letting both Brother/Si seeing the still a need child to the

The profes world clos and proje Rogers, O Counselor the OVP leaders, h

S.A. Films Present

The S.A. Film Bureau is in the process of selecting the films series and the individual films to be shown next year. In an effort to choose the films that YOU want to see, they are conducting a survey. Copies of this survey will be distributed at all the S.A. Film showings this week. Also, for those of you who don't have time to attend a movie this week, copies can be picked up at the S.A. Desk. If you have any interest in the film series, please take the time to get one of these surveys and fill it out. This is your chance to tell us what you want to see.

The film schedule for this week begins tonight, Thursday, with Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, a 1935 musical starring Marilyn Monroe, Jane Russell, Charles Coburn, and Elliott Reid. This was directed by Howard Hawks and was based on the musical comedy by Joseph Fields and Anita Loos with two additional songs by Hoagy Carmichael. It tells the story of two showgirls, a blonde and a brunette, who embark for France on the luxurious Ile de France seeking rich husbands, or at any rate the diamonds which are "a girl's best friend." The pursuit of millionaires and rocks takes them into a Parisian police court but the two sirens' resources are ample for any occasion. The film is in color. Showing time is 7:30 p.m. in 101 Votey.

On Friday night there will be a double feature. First comes W. C. Fields in You Can't Ch
This 19
Constan
Bergen, C
Mortimer Larsen
beleague whose w world's fallen brass-kn
Charlie over fi beat-kn with favorite society ping-pon violence, thing of streets
Second College
starring Burns,
Martha drowning to sa collegian
The co heiress' scientifi boys, a comedy number shown both fil
each fir

O Kather up her Journe has bee week, time fo

AUDITIONS

DISNEY FINE ARTS PROGRAM

Male and female singer dancers
Summer Work Experience Pro and Walt Disney World. Salar in an exciting 11 week perfor schedule. Open to all currently Sophomore and Junior college

Auditions to be held Monday, HOLIDAY INN ALBANY (AT 575 Broadway

Times

SINGER DANCERS (for "Kids of the Kin (Be prepared to do given choreography an Bring sheet music, an accompanist will be

CHEERLEADERS (for "All American Co
(Be prepared to perform a routine of your Exposed!

By the proverbial way, you may have noticed lately a group of brightly dressed characters wandering around

England Jacob poet soul bore campus crying 'People' These are members of the cast, in and a merrier bunch could be imagined If you haven't seen them it's because course been foolishly studying when you should be outside Come again Fin Knyghtes Revells will be in April 24 25 and 26 through April 30

Remember folks, that's 1964
1964
1964!

...Big Brother/Sister Program

(continued from page one)

Descriptive data regarding the Visiting Nurses Association.

Patients Rights Handbook Vermont Health Rights Committee

Throughout the year the Coordinating Committee was very concerned with volunteer placement, support and follow up. The Committee trys to contact all volunteers twice a semester to talk about how their relationship is going.

Volunteers are also asked to evaluate the program by means of an evaluation form, in turn the Committee reviews each of these forms and makes changes in the program which we feel will strengthen it. The Coordinating Committee is also in contact with social agencies and other volunteer offices and projects throughout the state giving and receiving feedback about volunteer programs. The Coordinating Committee provides volunteers with as much support as possible. volunteers are encouraged to speak with committee members about any problems they are facing. Big Brothers and Sisters are also encouraged to attend Big Brother/Sister meetings throughout the year to air concerns, gratifications, and problems which they have encountered. The OVP professional staff offers weekly problem solving practicums for all volunteers. This is an excellent place to develop problem solving skills and it acts as a forum for exchanging and sharing ideas.

The Coordinating Committee is continually trying to attract more volunteers to the program by several means: speaking to community groups, high school juniors and seniors, UVM campus groups, UVM resident advisors and presidents of sororities and fraternities, and finally by putting several articles in the campus newspaper and posters around campus.

Once volunteers express an interest in becoming a Big Brother or Sister they are interviewed for 45 minutes to 1 hour. In short, the committee wants to be sure that the volunteer is sure this is the type of volunteer work they are capable and willing to do. This involves talking about the child's background, some of the problems the volunteer will encounter and the exposure the volunteer and the child will get to each other's world, values, attitudes and feelings. As part of the interview a slide show is shown depicting the merging of two worlds and different views of the children at the various parties. The requirement is that a volunteer remain a Big Brother or Sister for at least one year, although they are encouraged to stay as long as they can, (one volunteer has been a Big Brother for 6 years).

We ask they also see the child at least once a week during this time.

When a volunteer discontinues their relationship the Coordinating Committee sends one letter to the parents and one to the agency who originally referred the child letting both know that the Big Brother/Sister is no longer seeing the child and if there is still a need, please refer the child to the program.

The professional staff of OVP works closely with volunteers and project leaders. Marcia Rogers, OVP's new Placement Counselor, in conjunction with the OVP staff and project leaders, has designed a brand new OVP application form (along with a new credentials record). The new application can be used by the volunteer as a way of documenting volunteer experience for professional purposes. It now contains four important sections: 1) A simple biographical information sheet; 2) an interest sheet, so that we can learn more about the volunteer; 3) a contract; and 4) an evaluation. The contract is a tool which can be used by the volunteer in several ways. Basically, the contract agreement is between the volunteer, OVP, and the agency where he wishes to be placed, and its purpose is to make clear at the outset of the experience the expectations that both parties hold, in order that future misunderstandings can be minimized. Another way in which it can be utilized is to have the contract serve as part of the placement file. In this way, it is a specific record of the volunteer experience. And finally, the evaluation form is a tool whereby the volunteer, about a month after being placed, can look at this experience, and record the most important aspects of that experience (both positive and negative). Again, this is another way in which the contract can be used -- to reread the agreement and see if both the volunteer's and the agency's expectations are being met.

••••••••••

The Big Brother/Sister Project Coordinating Committee include:

Mark Palladino (Project Coordinator), Donna Corda, Debbie Crilly, Jill Flanagan, Mary Pat Crowley, Jim Hincks, Nancy Curchin, Lynn Bondy, Robin Hamilton, Jim Collins, Wayne Johnson, and Polly Meyer.

Medieval-Renaissance Fair Is Successful

by Stephen Tanner

Recorders' soft piping floated through the air accompanying the mellow laughter and celebration at the Medieval-Renaissance Fair Saturday at Patrick Gym courtyard.

Costumed beggars, jugglers, and way-faring minstrels moved through the delighted celebrants of this unique re-creation of Medieval jubilation.

Pine boughs decorated the basketball hoops and the balustrades of the balcony railings where King Tim's Gayme Lane sported apple bobbing, a Wheel of Fortune, card games, Missus Merlin's Astrological prognostication, and Ye Olde Dice Game.

"That'll teach ye to play with me" snarled Caliban as two young knaves tried to trick the old master at his "shell delights game". Replete with ragged clothes, grayed hair and hunchback, the bestial Caliban intrigued all whom he encountered.

The University of Vermont's Madrigal Singers lent a soft harmonious music whose theme reverberated throughout the corners of the royal quadrangle, as if to blend all the events of the fair together -- a melodious metaphore.

Trumpeters announced the coronation of the King and Queen as subjects watched the event from the balcony. "Without his subjects what is a king, but a hopeless shadow?" asked the newly crowned prince. Proclaiming more carnival and celebration he declared, "Let us rid with pleasures the by-gone day," and with a flourish of trumpets began the presentation.

A host of Monks entered the yard before the King's balcony chanting a supplication for the long life of the King. Incense tinged the air as the latin murmurs filled the garth with sanctity.

Two miracle plays were then presented for the moral edification of the populous "The Sacrifice of Isaac" and "The Second Shepherd's Play."

Following the demonstrations of piety, the Saturnalia continued. Celebrants probed the wares of local craftsmen; pottery, woodcarving, jewelry and medieval cornbread, honey, bread, butter, and cider were sampled in the outer courtyard.

Several duels broke out, the result of over-indulgence, which gave the crowds a dramatic and instructive demonstration of broad sword technique. No one required the humor of a physician for their injuries. Thank Providence for the lucky devils.

The Medieval Fair was presented by the University of Vermont's Medieval-Renaissance Studies Program and was an inspiration of felicitation for those who participated.

Exam Offered For English Honors

The English Department, in accordance with a recommendation approved by the Arts College in 1963, is offering its majors a chance to be graduated with Departmental Honors. Those interested in trying for such honors are invited to take a three hour comprehensive exam in English and American literature to be offered at the English Department Office on Saturday morning, April 19. The questions are designed so that they may be answered with little regard to the particular courses a major has taken. For example, a question on an earlier exam asked about the changing qualities of "the hero" as portrayed in any three works from three different centuries.

In approving this option of comprehensive departmental exams; the faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences provided a broad route to Honors as an alternative to the narrower year-long specialized study called College Honors, which concentrates on an author or a concept under the guidance of a selected faculty member. UVM pioneered in such studies during the nineteenth century; many other universities now offer such an option to seniors. In addition to Departmental Honors and College Honors, superior performance in all one's courses leads to graduation "with honors"--cum laude, magna cum laude, or summa cum laude. Thus honors are available to those who do well broadly (Departmental Honors), deeply (College Honors or Special Honors) or in all work (cum laude).

Faculty regulations provide that a Comprehensive Exam (usually with a B grade winning Departmental Honors) must be provided on request in each department of the Arts College. In recent years the English Department has not waited for requests, but has announced a comprehensive exam each April. It has done so, according to Littleton Long, chairman of the Department's Honors Committee, because the exam enriches the work of the students in course after course when they know the material must be held in mind for an exam in the spring of senior year. Majors thus tend to accumulate knowledge rather than credit hours. Also they tend to be more alert to comparisons that can be made outside course boundaries, for in such an exam they may be asked to relate the hero of a play studied in the fall of junior year with a hero of a novel read in the spring of senior year.

Although the comprehensive exam is primarily intended for those majoring in English, the Department invites non-majors with a broad background in literature to sign up for the exam in the Department Office. There is no penalty for trying the exam, and it offers an interesting intellectual challenge.

...OVP Leaders Wanted

(continued from page eleven)

Mobilize resources to provide organizational and problem-solving skills.

Be accessible to all projects

To be accountable for the maintenance, continuity and progress of each project.

3) Insuring that a project developer is trained for the following year.

MEETING COORDINATOR

To plan meetings and diverse programs of meetings every other week.

To be responsible for the management of time each meetings.

To make sure the meeting place is open and ready on time.

To insure that the meetings during the last quarter of the year include new PCC personnel.

To notify project coordinators and volunteers of meetings well in advance.

To organize weekly meetings for 3 coordinators.

To prepare agenda and minutes and disseminate same.

PUBLICITY AND RECRUITMENT

To publicize the efforts of the PCC.

To insure that project coordinators are aware of and using available resources for recruitment.

To be sure that projects are visible in the public media

To be accessible and accountable for all projects in terms of their outreach efforts.

Interested students are invited to contact Richie Sobel at the Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, 656-2062.

...S.A. Film Fight

(continued from page seven)

movies are the least expensive movies we rent. For Example Adam's Rib, Pat and Mike, Bringing Up Baby, and Woman of the Year all rent for $75.00, which is as cheap as you'll find a film rental today. Rentals for films of your appreciation, like Dracula, go for $125.00. If you recall, it was shown along with another horror film, The Mummy, and a segment of the Flash Gordon serial, back in October. No artistic comparison will be made between these two genres of film to avoid you further embarrassment.

Finally, Leonard, if you have any questions on what goes on here in the S.A., why don't you come up for a visit? If you want to call instead, the number is 656-2029. We welcome all comments. Thank you very much for allowing me to reply.

Sincerely,
Don Adler
SA Films

SA Referendum In Amendment Process

by David Ryan

The recent SA referendum is presently in the process of being finalized to be presented in constitutional form for student approval.

Peter MacAusland has hired Dick Cassidy to draft the referendum into a form that can be accepted as a constitutional amendment. This is being done in an effort to avoid as many foreseeable problems as possible. Since it is a change from the traditional form of SA Senate there will be a proposal presented to the students in late April or early May setting out the various alternative segments of the amendment. The possibility of open hearings for students to voice their views is presently under consideration.

All budget requests were passed although some by a slim margin. The referendum was passed by an overwhelming 4-1 margin.

The recent voting was considered to be a failure, according to MacAusland, due to the poor turnout and general lack of interest displayed by the student body. MacAusland considered throwing the whole vote out as not even 600 students participated but cooler heads prevailed. Once again, it seems that the SA has run into the now famous stumbling block of UVM -- general student apathy.

S.A. Films Presents... Long Day's Journey Into Night

The S.A. Film Bureau is in the process of selecting the films series and the individual films to be shown next year. In an effort to choose the films that YOU want to see, they are conducting a survey. Copies of this survey will be distributed at all the S.A. Film showings this week. Also, for those of you who don't have time to attend a movie this week, copies can be picked up at the S.A. Desk. If you have any interest in the film series, please take the time to get one of these surveys and fill it out. This is your chance to tell us what you want to see.

The film schedule for this week begins tonight, Thursday, with Gentlemen Prefer Blondes a 1935 musical starring Marilyn Monroe, Jane Russell, Charles Coburn, and Elliott Reid. This was directed by Howard Hawks and was based on the musical comedy by Joseph Fields and Anita Loos with two additional songs by Hoagy Carmichael. It tells the story of two showgirls, a blonde and a brunette, who embark for France on the luxurious Ile de France seeking rich husbands, or at any rate the diamonds which are "a girl's best friend." The pursuit of millionaires and rocks takes them into a Parisian police court but the two sirens' resources are ample for any occasion. The film is in color. Showing time is 7:30 p.m. in 101 Votey.

On Friday night there will be a double feature. First comes W. C. Fields in You Can't Cheat an Honest Man. This 1939 film also stars Constance Moore, Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, and Mortimer Snerd. Fields plays Larsen E. Whipsnade, a beleaguered circus proprietor whose entourage boasts "the world's smallest giant and the tallest midget." The brass-knuckles repartee with Charlie McCarthy is carried over from some of Fields' best-known radio dialogues with "the woodpeckers' favorite pin-up boy." At a society ball, Fields converts a ping-pong game into an orgy of violence, and caps the whole thing off by racing through the streets in a Roman chariot. Second on the agenda is College Holiday, a 1936 film starring Jack Benny, George Burns, Gracie Allen, and Martha Raye. Jack's hotel is drowning in red ink, so he tries to save it by inducing collegians to use the facilities. The confusion results from an heiress' demented attempt to scientifically mate girls and boys, and this lively musical comedy boasts first rate numbers. The films will be shown at 7:30 and 10:30 with both films being presented at each time. Admission is $1.

On Saturday night Katherine Hepburn will wind up her series with Long Day's Journey Into Night. This film has been rescheduled from last week, as it did not arrive in time for its scheduled showing last Saturday. The film also stars Sir Ralph Richardson, Dean Stockwell, and Jason Robards, Jr., and presents master playwright Eugene O'Neill's autobiographical account of his turbulent homelife -- taut with the underlying explosiveness of emotions overwrought by cruel times and unrealized dreams. Reflected through the eyes of the youngest son -- a sensitive, aspiring writer -- the four-member family unfolds as an out-of-joint conglomerate of frustrations, fused by a drug-addicted mother, a father who wallows in drink after realizing he is no longer a famous actor, and an older, emotionally unstable brother who is, in all things a misfit. One of the most critically acclaimed films ever produced, Long Day's Journey Into Night was the first film in history in which all four stars received Best Acting Awards from the Cannes Film Festival, and is generally regarded as two-time Academy Award winner Katherine Hepburn's finest role. The music was composed and conducted by Andre Previn. The film will be shown at 7:30 and 10:00 in 101 Votey.

The Monday night French film series comes to an end with Le Bonheur, a beautiful color film made in 1965 and directed by Agnes Varda. A poetic and sensuous hymn to the happy life, this is the story of one man in love with two women. Director Agnes Varda portrays personal happiness as a force both self-gratifying and pathetically destructive. Lushly photographed in warm Renior colors, Le Bonheur is frequently referred to as one of the most beautiful films ever made, and it established Miss Varda as one of France's most important directors. The film will be shown at 7:30 and 9:30 in 101 Votey.

...Blues Festival

(continued from page eight)

electric blues of today. Robert now plays mostly electric guitar and tours with a four piece band. One person who listened to Robert Junior Lockwood as often as he could during the late 40's was someone named Riley King. Riley is doing pretty well these days using a couple of initials instead of his own first name!

This combination of some of the top names in the blues field is sure to produce an exciting evening of music. That's the fourth annual Vermont Blues Festival Saturday, April 26, in the UVM Patrick Gym. Tickets only $3.50 with a UVM I.D. and $4.50 general admission. Don't miss it!

AUDITIONS
DISNEY FINE ARTS PROGRAM

Male and female singer-dancers and cheerleaders for Summer Work Experience Program at Disneyland and Walt Disney World. Salary plus college credit in an exciting 11 week performance and workshop schedule. Open to all currently enrolled Freshmen, Sophomore and Junior college students.

Auditions to be held Monday, April 21st at:
HOLIDAY INN ALBANY (AT MENANDS), NY
575 Broadway

Times
SINGER DANCERS (for "Kids of the Kingdom") 10 a.m.
(Be prepared to do given choreography and sing your own selection. Bring sheet music, an accompanist will be supplied.)
CHEERLEADERS (for "All American College Marching Band") 4 p.m.
(Be prepared to perform a routine of your own.)

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices (especially for refills)

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

GET READY FOR SPRING
HAVE YOUR BIKE TUNED FOR SPRING AT VALUGA SPORTS

Special Spring Rates: $6.95

Tune-up Includes: Derraileurs adjusted & lubricated. Brakes adjusted & lubricated, Hubs & Headset adjusted, Wheels Tuned, and all nuts & bolts checked & tightened.

ALSO- New shipment of Paris Sports Just arrived.
All sizes & colors Available.

Valuga Sports
1250 SHELBURNE, RD.
South Burlington, Vt.
862-1961
OPEN 9-9 M-F
SAT 9-6
BANKAMERICAN CARD
MASTER CHARGE

TION (U.Y.A.)
ACCEPTED!
rograms
LIMINARY INTERVIEWS

Church Street Center Continued

The Church Street Center for Community Education, located in the old firehouse, next door to City Hall at 135 Church Street has just published its announcement of the April, May and early June mini-courses, workshops and special activities. This session will include 29 mini-courses, 13 workshops and 10 special activities. In addition the Center plans to schedule events throughout the coming summer and [illegible] academic year.

Mini-courses include: Hatha Yoga and Body Awareness, Pendulum Clock Repair, Introduction to Christian Art, Management and Care of Animals for the Part-time Farmer, On Being or Becoming a Working Parent, Psychology of Consciousness: A Radical Analysis of Vermont Politics, Basic Folk Guitar, Creative Activities for Pre-Schoolers at Home, Small Business Accounting, Creative Writing - Prose Fiction, Current Economic Issues, Basic Construction Design, Experiencing Art Through the Ages, Conversational French, Fun Stone Sculpture, Fundamentals of Organic Gardening and Farming, Israel from the Inside, Introduction to Rocks and Minerals, Communication Skills for Couples, Vegetarian Natural Foods, Edible Wild Foods, Guitar for students with a knowledge of major and minor chords on guitar, Basic Italian Conversation, Choreography, Introduction to Bob Dylan, Do You Want to Stop Smoking Cigarettes?, Introduction to Sign Lettering and Life Drawing.

Study Groups include: Mass Transportation in Chittenden County and Land Use Law, Community and Landowners' Rights.

Workshops and Special Activities include: Counseling for People Contemplating or Actually Starting a Small Business, Joining Fibrous and Non-Fibrous Materials and Swings and Things in Indoor and Outdoor Environments, Mime Workshop, Your Consciousness Has Been Raised, Now What? (for women), Basic French Cuisine, Trees, Their Identification and Uses, Speology Workshop and Field Trip, Drawing Marathon, Macrame Your Own Plant Hangers, How to Make French Bread, Bicycle Workshop/Clinic, House Plant Workshop, Aesthetic Awareness, Opening Up and Finding the Beautiful, Burlington Maple Sugar Festival, Planning in Burlington, What's on the Agenda, Lunch Bunch Film Series, Experimental Films from the Gray Film Atelier, Open Poetry Readings, Vermont's Congressmen Address World Issues, Photography in Vermont, The Present and Future of the Art and Craft; and Evenings with Vermont Authors.

People interested in teaching or requesting a specific course for coming sessions should call or stop in at the Church Street Center. Ideas for courses and activities are generated by people who want to teach and by people who want to learn.

For further information including specific details, stop in at the Center or call 656-4221.

You And Your Plants

by Ted Flanagan
Extension Garden Specialist

A spading fork, a steel rake, a common hoe and a piece of string are usually enough to start gardening. Complicated gadgets may be poorly designed or may be adapted only to special purposes for professional gardeners.

You'll need tools only to turn over the soil, move composts and mulches, smooth out the seedbed and mark and cover the seeds and plants you'll be starting.

Use the spading fork to turn over the garden soil in the spring. A good whack or two with the fork will also break up large clumps. But it's really at its best for scraping and spreading manure, compost and organic mulches.

With the rake, smooth the soil and pull out those bothersome sticks, roots and small stones. Dragging it upside down makes an efficient seedbed leveler.

Use your hoe for scratching out seed trenches, covering seed, and then firm loose soil by tapping with the flat part of the blade. With the hoe upside down, the handle itself makes an excellent tool to mark shallow seed trenches for tiny seeds like lettuce or carrots.

The hoe and rake make good season-long weeding tools, too.

The string, long enough to stretch the length of your rows, and fastened to two sharp pointed sticks will help keep rows straight as you plant. If you make each stick as long as the distance you want between your rows, you can also use it as a measuring device.

One other piece of basic equipment might be a garden hose, long enough to water your garden during those dry spells.

If you feel ambitious and are starting out with a really big garden, a garden-preparing machine will eliminate spading and sore muscles.

You may be able to hire the use of a rotary tiller, but an initial investment in one of your own will pay off in the long run--especially for gardens over 4,000 feet. A tiller is very versatile. You can till the soil and do a very through job of incorporating manures and composts at the same time. Run it shallow, and your seedbed is well prepared. It can also be used to cultivate out weeks between rows.

As you get into gardening, you'll find other tools and equipment that may fit your needs, particularly a small hand tool like a trowel. But to get started, all you need is a spade, hoe and rake.

A Case For The Deity, And Relevancy Of Jesus Christ

by Bill St. Amour

I find in talking with college students today about Christianity, they have three basic objections about it. First, that there are no such things as absolutes, that "truth" is relative. Second, that Christianity is not intellectually sound, and third, it is irrelevant and out of step with the times. I would like to offer some comments directed towards the first two objections this week, and deal with the third one next week. It will be noted that my approach is limited to a brief philosophical historical perspective due to space consideration. This commentary may or may not sway any (orthodox?) atheists or agnostics, yet will show that more evidence exists that supports the validity and relevancy of Christianity than they may have encountered, and that any decision to accept or reject Christ should be based upon knowledge, and not upon ignivance.

Augustine, Bishop of Hippo (396 - 430 AD) in North Africa, an influential Church Father, once made a few comments about the existence of certain absolutes to skeptics. He said that "there is only one world, or more than one. I am also certain that if there is more than one, the number of worlds is finite or infinite. That the Universe always was and will be, or it had a beginning and will never end, or if never began but will come to an end, or if had a beginning and will eventually cease to be. That there is a God or there isn't. There are countless other items I know in this fashion about the philosophy of nature..." (The Crime of Skepticism)

Augustine lits in this way an objectively knowledgeable God is only relevant if He has made Himself known in some way. Jesus of Nazareth is the only man of reputation in all history who has claimed to be this absolute revelation of God to man. If this claim is false, then we are reduced to choosing the best human concept of God, which is speculative at best, be it agnosticism, Buddhism, Taoism, or whatever. In this sense we actually determine or create God through our own concepts, thereby allowing God to be no greater than we. If His claims are true we can know there is a God, who He is, and the kind of relationship available with Him. In brief, Jesus is the Hinge as to whether or not God has spoken to mankind.

The historical evidence verifies Jesus claims of Deity. Jesus was an actual person of history as verified by certain Jewish and Roman historians of the time, tacitus Josephus Flevius, Celsus, Seutonius, etc. He is also mentioned in the Talmud. In 95 AD Rabbi Eliezar Ben Hyrcanus records, and refers to the miracles of Christ. (Senhebrin 43 A, 107B) Another early entry records that "Jesus practiced mopic and led Israel astray. (Shabbath 104 B, to Sephta Hullin 2, 22F) Celsus, an early second century critic, attributed Jesus' miracles to sorcery. (Origin Contra Celsus 1.38, ii 48) Josephus Fulvius, a Jewish historian born in 37 AD wrote the following after the destruction of Jersalem in 70 AD

(continued on page eleven)

VA Outpatient News

Veterans without an appointment and seeking Outpatient Treatment at the Veterans Administration Center should, wherever possible, call the center before going there for medical treatment, Mr. W.A. Yasinski, Director, stated today.

The advance notice will enable the center to give better and faster care, the Director emphasized.

Even in emergencies, a telephone call from the veteran or his family or the local physician who has seen the veteran will speed treatment by ensuring that the type of specialist needed and the patient's records are readily available when he arrives.

Veterans also are reminded not to forget to bring their VA patient identification card.

VA Outpatient Clinics are treating an ever increasing patient load, and those who drop in without an appointment may have a long wait while veterans with appointments and those more seriously ill are cared for.

[illegible] appointments usually by veterans [illegible] and the [illegible] to 13 million veterans living in the United States this year.

Scheduling appointments through the mail helps to cut down on the number of parking spaces and waiting room space at the center where Monday mornings are especially busy.

Jose Santana: The UYA And His Job Off The Poster

by Rick Hart and Gloria Wagda

Think ahead, if you can. Two or three years ahead. Do you have any idea, whatsoever, of what you'll be doing? Now don't fantasize--What do you think you'll really be doing?

Of course you'll need a job. That's obvious. But what kind of job, what field of endeavor? If you're like most of us, the work-a-day world is not yet a reality. And neither is the motivation, confidence, and experience that are definite requirements for any job opportunity.

Most of us here at UVM will graduate and move on into the real world with nothing more than a diploma in hand and a blank resume, what else?

The Office of Volunteer Programs, Mansfield House, is the local coordinating body for University Year for Action, a federally sponsored program designed to place student volunteers into state-wide human service agencies. Essentially, the student works 12 months off campus earning full academic credit while in service. The objectives are to get students involved in real work-learning situations before they graduate, have them gain experience and then return to the University with more insight and motivation.

The following profile hopefully illustrates the UYA program as it relates to our place in society.

Jose Santana came to UVM three years ago from Union City, New Jersey. He enrolled as a communications major with many delinged goals per se. Like most undergrads he floated through his freshman year getting used to SAGA food, counting rows along the interstate and generally settling down to a four year academic sabatical from real life. It was sometime during his sophomore year that

(continued on page eleven)

VA Loans Available

Mr. W.A. Yasinski, Director of Veterans Administration Center White River Junction, Vermont, advised that GI Bill students who can't make ends meet despite recent increases in Veterans Administration education payments are eligible for VA loans to meet necessary education expenses.

The loans are not automatic to all students but applicants who demonstrate a clear need can qualify for loans up to $600 per academic school year under a recent law.

A December 3, 1974 law (PL [illegible]) which raised monthly education payments by [illegible] per cent stipulated that loans could be extended only to those students who were found to be in need after the "actual cost of attendance" was computed to the student's total financial resources.

Eligibility was limited further to students eligible for VA education assistance for attendance at an educational institution on at least a half time basis. The law specified also that the course must lead to a standard college degree or that it be a course of six months or longer duration that leads to an identified and predetermined professional or vocation objective." Still another provision was that the student must have sought a loan under the guaranteed student loan program of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

Mr. Yasinski pointed out that repayment of both the principal and interest is deferred while the student is enrolled on at least a half time basis, and no interest accrues until the beginning date for repayment is determined.

Installment payments must start within nine months after the student ceases to be enrolled on at least a half time basis. Interest at the rate of 8 per cent per year begins at that point, and full payment must be made within 10 years. There is no penalty for prepayment. A 3 per cent loan fee is deducted from the face amount of the loan to provide a fund to insure against defaults. Defaults are to be considered overpayments to be recovered in the same manner as other debts due the government.

Students may apply through the VA regional office through which they are now receiving education benefits.

Middlebury College Conference On The World Food Crisis, April 18-26

FRIDAY, APRIL 18

7:30 p.m., Welcome and Opening Remarks: Dr. James I. Armstrong, President, Middlebury College.

Keynote Address: James P. Grant, President, Overseas Development Council, "Food, Energy, and the Changing World Order," Mead Chapel

SATURDAY, APRIL 19

9:30 - 10:00 a.m., Introduction: Randy Eppler, '75, Dana Auditorium

10:00 - 11:30 a.m., Workshops: First Session, Munroe Hall

1. Win Way, Vermont State Agronomist, "Natural Resources and World Food Production"
2. Dr. Robert Huke, Dartmouth College, "After the Green Revolution"
3. Ed. Lazar, American Friends Service Committee, "Nutrition: A Decentralizing Approach to the World Food Crisis"
4. Paul Kram, Director of Planning, Swift Chemical Co., "World Food Distribution: The Agri-business View"
5. Dr. Joyce Livak, University of Vermont, "The Declining Quality of the American Diet and What You Can Do About It"
6. Richard Haedrich, Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, "Food from the Sea"

The workshops will run simultaneously. They will be repeated at 1:00 and again at 3:00.

11:30 - 1:00 p.m., Lunch for a Small Planet: vegetarian cooking, Social Dining Units

1:00 - 2:30 p.m. Workshops: Second Session, Munroe Hall

3:00 - 4:30 p.m. Workshops: Third Session, Munroe Hall

5:00 - 7:00 p.m. Dinner for a Small Planet: vegetarian cooking, Social Dining Units

7:30 p.m. Panel Discussion: "What Can Be Done About the World Food Crisis? Questions and Answers," James P. Grant and workshop leaders, Dr. David Rosenberg, Middlebury College Moderator, Dana Auditorium

10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m., Facts on Food: An information center and library of hand-out and reference literature, audio-visual displays, and exhibits by concerned organizations, Munroe Faculty Lounge.

SUNDAY, APRIL 20

11:00 a.m., Communion Service: Rev. Charles P. Scott, Chaplain, Middlebury College, Mead Chapel

1:00 - 4:00 p.m., "Star Power": A game learning game on personal values, power, and the distribution of scarce resources; Dr. David Rosenberg, Middlebury College Coordinator, Munroe Faculty Lounge.

MONDAY, APRIL 21 - THURSDAY, APRIL 24

4:00 - 5:30 p.m., Films on Food, Science Center 11: "Tomorrow's World: Feeding the Billions," "The New Alchemists," "Diet for a Small Planet," "And Who Shall Feed the Hungry?" "Tragedy or Triumph"

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23

7:30 p.m., What You Can Do: Working with International Organizations," Videotape (NBC White Paper: "And Who Shall Feed the Hungry?") and discussion with Miss Margot Biddle Duke, International Red Cross Delegate to the Rome Food Conference, Proctor Lounge

THURSDAY, APRIL 24

7:30 p.m., "What You Can Do: Ideas on Food [illegible] Middlebury Community." Discussion and action on food co-ops, community gardens, home canning, reducing food waste, and other good ideas. Jim Robinson, Co-Coordinator, Proctor Lounge

FRIDAY, APRIL 25

7:00 p.m., Keynote Address: Dr. William Sloane Coffin, Chaplain of Yale University, "The Ethics of Survival," Mead Chapel

8:30 p.m., Panel Discussion and Reception for Dr. Coffin, Proctor Lounge

SATURDAY, APRIL 26

7:30 p.m., Black Student Union Lecture: Dr. M. Joel Lerner, Holy Cross College, "The Food Crisis in Africa," Commons Lounge, Adirondack House.

CLASSIFIED

Apartment for Summer
3 bedrooms, fully furnished, 2 porches, garden, parking, excellent location, animals, males or females or both. Call Peter, Bill or Larry, 862-6832.

Ride Needed to Boston or vicinity, on Friday, April 18 after 12 noon. Help with expenses and driving. Call Brad, 863-6277.

Apartment to Sublet
3 bedroom, 2 baths, living room, dining room, kitchen. Sunny, lots of windows. 2 blocks from downtown & campus. Females only. $225/month. Call 863-6550, after 5:00 please.

Looking for 2 roommates, male or female, within walking distance to UVM and downtown. $33 per month. Own bedroom. Call Reuben, 862-4224 after 5 p.m. or Dave, 863-2493.

N.Y. professional couple desire house for July & August: 2 bedrooms and baths; piano if possible. Call 864-5464 evenings.

For Sale: 1973 CL 175 Honda, 6800 miles, highest offer. Call 658-1898 between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m.

For Sale: 10 speed triumph bike good condition, highest offer. Call 658-1898 between 6:30 & 7:30 p.m.

Apartment to sublet May to August. 1 bedroom, $150, 1 block from campus. Call 863-1450.

Home wanted: Couple looking for place to live within 15 mile radius of Burlington. Prefer lots of space for dog, garden & play. Please call 985-8575 or 864-7244. Ask for Phelps or Kacey.

Reviewer Needed for cock-eyed comedy "Knight of the Burning Pestle." Must be as of yet unafflicted by highly infectious disorder, pestilemania. Ed Artsitor, Rm. 318, 656-2036.

For Sale: 10 speed Recordman Bicycle 1 year old - excellent condition. Price negotiable. Call Debi, 656-4256.

House for Sublet (June-August) - Burlington - 4 bedrooms, partially furnished, near lake, rent negotiable - phone 655-2000, ext. 275.

Needed: 1 or 2 roommates to share house from May 15 - August 15. Rent $68.75/month. Call 658-3804.

Wanted: Bear Rug. Call 655-0245.

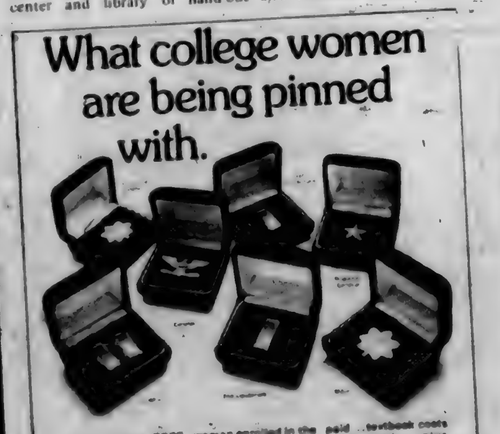
Apartment to Sublet, May 15 - Sept. 1. 3 bedroom, large kitchen & living room. Fully furnished. Ground floor, porch, yard, 10 minute walking distance from campus. Maple Street, $200/month. Call 862-6832.

College Campus Representative - Needed to sell Brand Name Stereo Components to students at lowest prices. Hi Commission. No investment required. Serious Inquiries ONLY! FAD COMPONENTS, Inc. 20 Passaic Ave. Fairfield, New Jersey 07006. Jerry Diamond 201-227-6814.

For Sale: Better than any rebate. A '67 Firebird Convertible. Tops down for Summer '75. Call 863-6277 and make an offer. Offer expires May 17th. Hurry!

For Sale: Skis 190 cm with cupco bindings and boots size 8-8½ very good condition. $35. 655-2159.

Found: Ring at Coon Hill, Saturday night. Call 878-8316.



THE GAP
Appalachian
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbbers

dunham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZE
194 North St.

Super Vee Te

It's a new team, it's a young team, and it's an advanced team. It's probably the only team that can boast a 23-year-old driver, a 21-year-old chief mechanic, and an 18-year-old assistant mechanic. And undoubtedly it's the only Super Vee team that sets up its car by means of a computer!

It's the Essex Chemical Super Vee team in its first season of competition in the exciting VW Gold Cup Series. Team driver, William Cameron McConnell III, who prefers to be called "Billy", is a recent graduate of the University of Vermont, where he earned his Bachelor of Science degree in mechanical engineering, basing his senior thesis on "Computer Application to Race Suspensions". The paper served two purposes: 1) It got him an

A

(continued from page ten)

"Now there was about this time Jesus, a wise man, if it be lawful to call Him a man, for he was a doer of wonderful works, a teacher of such men as receive the truth with gladness. He drew over to him both many of the Jesus, and many of the gentiles. He was the Christ, and when Pilate, at the suggestion of the principle men among us, had condemned him to the cross, those that loved Him at the first did not forsake him; for he appeared to them alive again the third day as the divine prophets had foretold these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him...and the tribe of Christians so named from him are not extinct to this day (Josephis Antiputies xvii 33)

Jesus made some remarkable claims about Himself such as:

1 Claiming to be God - "I and the Father are One" (John 10:30) "He who has seen me has seen the Father" (John 14:9) and "I am the way, the Truth and the life" (John 14:6)

2 He claimed to be able to deal with man's sin problem by being perfect and sinless Himself (Mark 2:5)

3 He claimed to have conquered death by virtue of a physical resurrection (John :19)

These claims are not incidental to Jesus' life, but rather formed the very heart of His teaching. To follow Jesus' teaching must involve acceptance of the deity

CLASSIFIED

Apartment for summer
3 bedrooms, fully furnished, 2 patches, garden, parking, excellent location, animals, males or females or both. Call Peter, Bill or Larry, 862-6832.

Ride Needed to Boston or vicinity on Friday, April 18 after 12 noon. Help with expenses and driving. Call Brad 864-3677.

Apartment to Sublet
3 bedroom, 2 baths, living room, dining room, kitchen, many lots of windows, 2 blocks from downtown & campus. Females only. $225 month. Call 862-6550 after 5:00 please.

Looking for 2 roommates male or female, within walking distance to UVM and downtown. $33 per month. Own bedroom. Call Reuben 862-4224 after 5 p.m. or Dave, 863-2493.

N.Y. professional couple desire house for July-Aug. August 2 bedrooms and bath, patio if possible. Call 864-5464 evenings.

For Sale 1973 CL 175 Honda 6800 miles highest offer. Call 658-1898 between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m.

For Sale 10 speed Triumph bike good condition, highest offer. Call 658-1898 between 6:30 & 7:30 p.m.

Apartment to sublet May to August 1 bedroom, $150 1 block from campus. Call 863-1450.

Home wanted. Couple looking for place to live within 15 mile radius of Burlington. Prefer lots of space for dog, garden & play. Please call 985-8575 or 864-7244. Ask for Phelps or Kacy.

Reviewer Needed for cockeyed comedy "Knight of the Burning Pestle." Must be as of yet unafflicted by highly infectious disorder, posthemania. Ed Artistor, Rm. 418, 656-2016.

For Sale 10 speed Raleigh Record 1 year old, excellent condition. Price negotiable. Call Debi, 656-4286.

Housing for Sublet
UVM, Burlington
3 bedrooms partially furnished near lake, rent negotiable, phone [illegible] Ext. 225.

Needed 1 or 2 roommates to share house from May 15 - August 15. Rent $68.75 month. Call [illegible] 8804.

Wanted Bear Rug. Call 658-0145.

Apartment to Sublet, May 15 - Sept 1, 3 bedroom, large kitchen & living room, fully furnished, Grandfather home, 5 and 10 minute walking distance from campus. Maple Street. $200 month. Call No. 6852.

College Campus Representative Needed to sell Brand Name Stereo Components to students at lowest prices. Hi Commission. No investment required. Serious Inquiries ONLY. FAD COMPONENTS Inc. 20 Passaic Ave. East Rutherford, New Jersey 07073. Harry Diamond (201) 227-6814.

For Sale Better than any rebate. A 67 Firebird Convertible. Tops down for Summer '75. Call 864-6272 and make an offer. Offer expires May 17th. Hurry!

For Sale Skis 190 cm with cubco bindings and boots size 9 AA very good condition. $45. 655-2189.

Found Ring at Coon Hill Saturday night. Call 878-8316.

durham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZEL'S
194 North St.

Super Vee Team Relies On Computer

Billy McConnell in the Essex Chemical Tui Super Vee

It's a new team, it's a young team, and it's an advanced team. It's probably the only team that can boast a 23-year-old driver, a 21-year-old chief mechanic, and an 18-year-old assistant mechanic. And undoubtedly it's the only Super Vee team that sets up its car by means of a computer!

It's the Essex Chemical Super Vee team in its first season of competition in the exciting VW Gold Cup Series. Team driver, William Cameron McConnell III, who prefers to be called 'Billy', is a recent graduate of the University of Vermont, where he earned his Bachelor of Science degree in mechanical engineering, basing his senior thesis on "Computer Application to Race Suspensions." The paper served two purposes: 1) It got him an 'A' on the subject, and 2) it helped set up one of the quickest Formula Fords in the central division of the SCCA. In 1974, his first season of racing, Billy won his last three races, winding up 1st in the Supernationals and 2nd in the Central Division.

For the 1975 VW Gold Cup Series, the Essex Chemical Super Vee will be modified by WMR Enterprises using a computer program, with major consideration given to wing design. Wings have recently been approved for use in Gold Cup competition. Consistency with the builders in Europe, spectator appeal, better handling, and the desire to keep Formula Super Vee an international class are some of the reasons for their approval.

At present, the WMR computer, located in Howell, Michigan, is programmed for 'roll couple distribution' analysis. "I start with the car the way it arrives from the factory. I test drive it and decide how it's handling," says Billy. "Then I dial the dimensions into the miniature program I've acquired from some very reliable sources (one notable one being Billy's friend and mentor, Mark Donohue), and it tells me the improvements that can be made. The car may not necessarily go faster", he continues, "but it gives me a better understanding of what it's doing."

The entire car, a '75 Tui Bh5, is engineered by WMR Enterprises (for William McConnell Racing), located on the family's 98-acre farm in Whitmore Lake, Michigan. Billy is president, and his father, William McConnell, is secretary-treasurer. It's a unique father-son relationship; Billy's the engineer-driver while his father manages the funds and balances the books - not unlike the Penske-Donohue relationship, which Billy admits to emulating.

Daniel Campbell, 21, is chief mechanic on the Essex Chemical Super Vee, and Ed Hamlin, 18, a University of Alaska student, is assistant mechanic. Engines are by Quicksilver of Rockville, Md., exclusively for the Essex Chemical team, and the entire crew is outfitted in HEAD sportswear. Essex Chemical Corporation, of Clifton, N.J., and its affiliates develop specialty chemicals for the automotive and aerospace industry.

Jose Santana: The UYA

(continued from page ten)

he realized something was amiss. He talked with college graduates who likewise were disillusioned with their undergraduate years. Jose concluded that some "hands-on" experience within his major was needed to make his remaining years at UVM more meaningful, especially in terms of preparation for future job opportunities.

By word of mouth Jose learned that Windsor State Prison was seeking a UYA volunteer to continue work in two-way interactive television programming. He applied to UYA and after successfully meeting requirements and making arrangements with his department at UVM, he moved to Windsor to begin a twelve month commitment as Media Education Coordinator for the Vt. State Department of Correction.

Jose has been responsible for programming at the Windsor terminal of the Vt/N.H. interactive television network. This network is a two-way closed circuit television system which connects Mary Fletcher Unit in Burlington, Mary Hitchcock Memorial in Hanover, Central Vermont Hospital in Berlin, Claremont Hospital in Claremont, Rockingham Hospital in Bellows Falls, and Windsor State Prison in Windsor. Some of these terminals are permanent, others are set up periodically. It has been Jose's job to channel educational, consultive and entertaining programs to the prison from other terminal locations within the network. He has also coordinated staff-administrative meetings for the Department of Correction via interactive television.

Jose has coordinated confidential lawyer-inmate consultations over the interactive network. Some inmates have received community college credits for taking televised educational courses.

Recently, due to the closing of Windsor, Jose and Jane Kast, another UYA student volunteer, produced a series of "transition tapes" for prison inmates and employees who are being transferred to other correctional facilities around the state. These video-tapes are designed to familiarize them with the various centers and to make the change easier.

Presently Jose is working on the production of a documentary film with film-maker Bill Lewis from Hanover on the closing of Windsor Prison. Actor Martin Sheen will be doing the narration.

Jose feels that, more than anything else, it is the documented experience that counts when you go looking for a job. This, coordinated with academic achievement while in college, he maintains, is most beneficial.

While at Windsor Jose learned how to design educational television programs, use equipment, and more importantly how to accept and handle the responsibilities of coordinating an ongoing educational programming system for those in prison who usually would not have this opportunity available yet most definitely need it desperately.

Jose's academic goals have gained clarity and he feels that his remaining year at UVM will be far more fulfilling now that he has been able to see how theory and practice fit together and complement one another. He encourages all undergrads to work one year off campus, as a liberal arts education is incomplete without the combination of theory and practice. Furthermore, Jose adds that he has learned to work within a bureaucracy, not be a bureaucrat and still get things done.

Stop in at the Office of Volunteer Programs for more information on University Year for Action!

...OVP Leaders Needed

(continued from page one)

coordinators, OVP staff, Project Coordinators and community.

Assure that SA funding is intact.

To delegate responsibilities.

Ultimate responsibility for all PCC program responsibilities including: Van, funding, program support and development, recruitment, evaluation, resources.

TREASURER

To administer PCC funds including:

Distribute purchase orders.

Review project budgets semi-annually.

Plan new project budgets.

Keep the books.

Contact with SA and AA in OVP.

Plan next year's PCC budget.

Available for project consultation at posted hours.

PROJECT DEVELOPER

1) Assist students to implement new projects through:

Proposal and budget development;

To insure that the project proposals are handed out to the project leaders 1 week prior to the actual presentation.

Mobilize related resources from the OVP staff, UVM community, Burlington community and agencies which would: a) provide organization skills; b) problem-solving modes;

2) Assist project coordinators of on-going projects:

Maintain frequent contact with coordinators;

See that project criteria are met and set time frame for (attendance, proposals, evaluation, etc.)

(continued on page nine)

...Women's Sports

(continued from page twelve)

But now, those proposed rules are in final form and ready to be sent to the President for his signature. The final draft very clearly strips the "R" from "revolution," and leaves a set of guidelines far less stringent than those feared by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Specifically, the rules state that women will not be allowed to try out for men's teams in contact sports such as football, basketball, hockey, rugby, boxing and wrestling. Furthermore, schools will not be required to initiate teams for women in those sports.

The proposed rules also stipulate that phys-ed classes will not have to be integrated if they involve contact sports or sex education. All other classes will be subject to the sex discrimination ban.

What the rules do provide for women's sports is fairly unclear. In a memorandum accompanying the rules, HEW Secretary Caspar Weinberger notes that a "reasonable number" of athletic scholarships will have to be awarded to women, based on the number of women involved in athletics. The memorandum also states that the rules provide "flexibility while requiring that, where interest exists in having a women's team, that women be afforded access to that sport on the same terms as men as to athletic facilities, travel allowance and the like."

HEW officials say they anticipate lawsuits from women's groups challenging the rules, as well as the timetable for compliance. The rules are not scheduled to go into effect until three years from July 1.

Officials also predict that the rules may run into trouble in the House of Representatives, where some members have already complained that they do not comply with Congressional intent in the passage of Title 9. Next week, more on Title 9 and a talk with Athletic Director Dennis Lambert.

RAP CORNER

by Jeff Twiss

Well, maybe in last week's issue of the Cynic, I was a little hasty in saying that the Bruins should trade Phil Esposito. The guys on my floor and other obvious Bruin fans voiced their opinions and I agree with them that Espo did score 60 goals and it looks like the Bruins will hang onto him. But, they do need more firepower. Cashman, I still feel will be going and who knows maybe Hodge instead of Espo. (?)

Let's get on the subject of baseball. That man, Richie "Dick" Allen. The Atlanta Braves have got him, yet he doesn't want to play in Atlanta and has not signed a contract so what does Allen want, to play with one of his old ballclubs, the Philadelphia Phillies. He was dumped by the Phils several years ago and since has bounced around with a few clubs. Yet, it's odd, he's had tremendous years with everyone he's played for, but he either quits or fails to do this or that. The reason he wants back with Philly is that they've got a good ballclub. Good Lord, imagine if every pro baseball player did it. I think Allen has played his little game too much, I say he should sit out for awhile and let some of his $145,000 be absorbed. Let someone else have the upper hand.

While we're on baseball, isn't it great to see Tony Conigliaro swinging the bat with the power and authority of the old days when he won the HR title. He battled back several times and failed; this time it looks like Tony C. is here to stay. It sure doesn't hurt Boston fans.

Now, alot of people think the Yanks will take the AS/East over Baltimore. Let's compare. Granted, the Yanks have "Catfish" and Bonds; but lack of right handed relief, and a very weak defensive left side of infield (Nettles at third and Mason or Leon at short). The Orioles have their golden-gloves infield (Robinson, Grich and Belanger). Lee May at 1st, plenty of depth on both clubs, but I feel Baltimore's defense will prevail in the long run.

A Case For Deity

(continued from page ten)

"Now there was about this time Jesus, a wise man, if it be lawful to call Him a man, for he was a doer of wonderful works, a teacher of such men as receive the truth with gladness. He drew over to him both many of the Jesus, and many of the gentiles. He was the Christ, and when Pilate, at the suggestion of the principle men among us, had condemned him to the cross, those that loved Him at the first did not forsake him; for he appeared to them alive again the third day as the divine prophets had foretold these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him...and the tribe of Christians so named from him are not extinct to this day (Josephus Antiquties xvii 33)

Jesus made some remarkable claims about Himself such as:

1 Claiming to be God - "I and the Father are One" (John 10:30) "He who has seen me has seem the Father" (John 14:9) and "I am the way, the Truth and the life" (John 14:6)

2 He claimed to be able to deal with man's sin problem by being perfect and sinless Himself (Mark 2:5)

3 He claimed to have conquered death by virtue of a physical resurrection (John 2:19)

These claims are not incidental to Jesus' life, but rather formed the very heart of His teaching. To follow Jesus' teaching must involve acceptance of His deity... Moreover, His claims separate Him from such men as Mohammed, Buddha, or Ghandi and others, none of whom claimed deity, perfection, or life after death.

In view of His claims there are only three logical conclusions to draw about Jesus:

A. Either He knew His claims were false and He was a liar.

B. He falsely believed His claims and was therefore a lunatic

C. His claims were true and He is God.

We are allowed only these three alternatives for if Jesus were not who He said He was, which formed the core of His teaching, He would be the greatest imposter the world has ever known. If He was a liar, He would also have to be the most stupid man who ever lived to allow Himself to be crucified for something He knew wasn't true, namely what He was saying about Himself. If He were a lunatic, it would be hard to explain the soundness, insight, balance and self-possession which characterizes His teaching and life.

Probably the most persuasive evidence for Jesus' deity is the manner in which He fulfilled History. For hundreds of years, the great Prophets of Israel foretold the coming of a unique man who would be the absolute revelation of God to man - a God-man, a Messiah. The Dead Sea Scrolls Carbon date the bulk of these prophecies to 150 B.C. There is a picture these men print of this Messiah over 200 years before a man named Jesus ever came outo the stage of history.

A. According to Micha 5:2, a person of eternal existence would be found in Bethlehem, a little village outside Jerusalem.

B. Jeremiah 23:5,6 states that this man would possess a dual nature, human and devine. He would be of David's lineage but would be called "Jehovah."

C. Isaiah 7:14 asserts this man would receive His deity by way of a virgin birth.

D. According to Psalm 22 written by David in 1000 BC this man would ultimately die of asphyxiation, his hands and feet pierced, and His clothes gambled over - an incredible description of a crucifixion especially in light of the fact that it wasn't a means of punishment until late in the second century B.C.

E. Isaiah 53 declares that this man while dying, would take upon Himself the sins of the world, although he Himself was innocent and judged unfairly.

F. David, in Psalm 16:10 states that this man would experience a physical resurrection shortly after his death.

G. And finally, Daniel predicted all these things would take place before the destruction of the second temple - History records that the second temple was destroyed by the Roman legions of titles in 70 AD, so that the Messiah would come. Daniel wrote about 550 BC in Babylon, where he was held captive with Jesus after the destruction of Jerusalem. Daniel predicted a decree would go forth to rebuild Jersalem's wall. From that date, it would be 484 years until the coming of the Messiah. History records that the decree went forth from Artoxerces I, King of Persia in March 445 BC. On a Hebrew Calendar, 483 years later, falls, to the day. Palm Sunday 29 A.D. whence a man named Jesus rode into Jersalem declaring Himself to be the Messiah. Next week, I'd like to tie it all together and comment on the relevancy of Christ today.

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

BULLETIN
EUROPE at prices you can afford from $299!
TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHTS • RAIL PASSES • TREKKING ACCOMMODATIONS • ALL INCLUSIVE "TWO WEEKERS" Spend less for the air... more when you're there! For SPECIAL low rates, members contact:
NATIONAL ASS'N OF STUDENTS AND TEACHERS
National Office (212) 661-1330
(800) 223-5267 Toll free outside of New York State
OR mail coupon to NAST, Box 1961, Grand Central Station, N.Y., N.Y. 10017
Name
Address
Telephone ( )

WE SPECIALIZE IN REPAIR ON ALL MAKES OF BICYCLES
the Ski Rack BIKE SHOP
85 Main St. Burlington
658-3313
HOURS
Mon-Wed 9:30-6:00
Thurs-Fri 9:30-9:00PM
Sat 9:00-5:00

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

SIZZLING STEAK
THE BEST STEAKS! GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
Salad Bar Included with Dinner

Baked Stuffed Shrimp	4.95
Baked Filet of Sole	3.95
Fried Scallops	3.75
Surf and Turf, a combination of baked stuffed shrimp and tenderloin steak	6.75
Golden Brown Fried Chicken	3.75
8 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip Steak	3.99
12 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip Steak	4.99
10 oz. Choice Top Butt Sirloin Steak	5.99
8 oz. Chopped Sirloin Steak	2.99

1216 WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

sports

Women's Sports On The Rise

WASHINGTON, DC (EARTH NEWS) — High school and college football coaches can stop wringing their hands, gnawing their teeth, and holding their breath. They will NOT have to allow women to try out for the team next year.

Since last June, when a draft of the new Health, Education and Welfare rules to enforce Title 9 of the Educational Amendments Act of 1972 was released, college administrators and coaches have fretted that the sex discrimination ban would virtually revolutionize athletic programs. The initial draft indicated that women would be permitted to try out for all men's teams, provided there was no team for women in the particular sport. And, if enough women wanted to play the sport, the school would have to start a women's team.

The draft also seemed to indicate that all physical education classes would have to be fully integrated, including classes in boxing, wrestling, rugby and other contact sports. Failure to comply to the new rules would result in suspension of federal funds to the institution.

(continued on page eleven)

THE SPORTS SCENE

by Norm Robinson

It's time somebody woke up. There is an attempt being made to legalize gambling in high schools, colleges and the professionals and it must be stopped!

The Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling must realize, or be made to realize that legalized gambling is not a cure for illegal gambling, it's just the opposite.

Arguments against gambling were presented by a representative of every major professional sport in the nation and the NCAA last month in Washington.

What happened? The chairman of the Commission, Charles H. Morin said the arguments were "not convincing." What does it take!

NCAA AGAINST GAMBLING

The NCAA constitution and bylaws have many provisions against gambling. Policy No. 8 of the NCAA's Recommended Policies and Practices for Intercollegiate Athletics specifically speak of gambling in college sports. It recommends actions to be taken by members to fight gambling and the bribery that often accompanies betting.

Good examples of how the NCAA attempts to cut down on gambling are such rules as the prohibition of post-season basketball practice, limitation of the basketball season, and the insistance that all games of the playoffs except the finals be played on a campus where regular season games are played.

WHY NOT?

It is wrong to allow legalized betting, especially in non-professional sports. Because of the large number of high schools and colleges, it would be impossible to protect participants from attempts to change the outcome of events that are being betted on.

Secondly, legalized gambling would bring betting onto the campus to a far greater extent than at the present time. This cannot be good.

Another reason against gambling is the pressure that would be applied to athletes. Now they not only must win "for the school" but they must win for anyone that bet on them. Could you imagine what would happen if the 90,000 people watching a college football game all had money on the game as well? Just imagine the riots that would break out in a close game. Or think of what an athlete would go through if he made a mistake that cost his team the game.

YOU'RE NOT BETTING ON A HORSE

It doesn't seem possible that people could think of betting on fellow human beings. Dealing with the lives of thousands of men and women like animals is unbelievable.

Professional sports are no different. Point shaving and the actual throwing of a game are definite possibilities. Pro sports have already become commercialized with the coming of radio and TV. The emergence of legalized gambling can only make things worse.

Betting is a plague that must be driven out of sports. Making it legal won't take care of illegal gambling. The pressures of betting at a sports event would be too great and destroy the game, and the sport.

Vermont Racketmen Nip UMass, 5-4

Kirk Dice — a winner again

The University of Vermont tennis team came from behind Saturday, to pull off a stunning 5-4 victory over the University of Massachusetts Minutemen.

Down 3-2, UVM got a singles win from freshman Scott Turban and two wins in the doubles competition to nail down the win.

Vermont took a quick 2-0 lead behind the strong performances of Jay Moorehead and Kirk Dice. Moorehead defeated Dave Abramhoff 6-4, 6-0 and Dice beat Chris Post by an identical margin.

U. Mass. pulled off the next three singles as Tom Lenci fell at the hands of Bill Karol, 1-6, 6-2, 7-6.

Kevin Delaney of UVM had a tough time, losing in straight sets 6-5, 6-3 and John Koerner fell 6-2, 6-4.

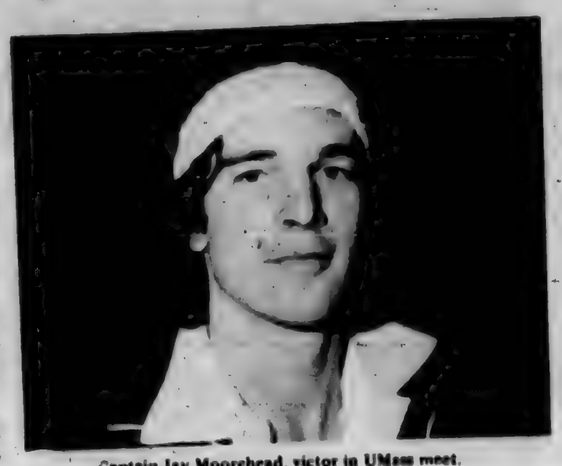
Turban turned in a fantastic performance with a 5-7, 6-0, 6-7 win to tie the match going into the doubles.

Kirk Dice and Tom Lenci moved up to the number one spot due to an injury to Dick Hilmer and soundly defeated Garahan and Koral 6-3, 6-4.

Delaney and Moorehead, playing together for the first time beat Oulette and Post to clinch the win, 6-2, 6-3.

Koener and Tim Beal dropped the final match 7-6, 4-6, 6-3 in a tough three sets.

The fans must be congratulated for the large turnout the biggest ever. Vermont is now 2-0 overall and 1-0 in the conference. Friday is the next meet when Vermont meets New Hampshire in the Gutterson Courts.



Captain Jay Moorehead, victor in UMass meet.

Alumni Tracksters Lose To Varsity

by Bob Stoehr

On Saturday, April 12, the UVM Track Team entertained an Alumni Track Team whose members dated as far back as the class of 1922. The current Varsity Team won the meet by a score of 74-71, the closeness of which raised many eyebrows, both among the alumni and our team.

Most of the events were held in the Gardner-Collins Cage as the Archie T. Post Field was still snow covered. However, the hammer throwers were able to clear their circle outdoors, as the alumni showed their greatest strength, sweeping the event. Sandy Magid, Ralph Alexander, and Avery Seaman who all threw in the late 1960's showed their strength, skill, and endurance as so many of the alumni did all day.

In another of the events held outdoors, Jon Dimick won the 3-mile cross-country run in a time of 14:53. Jon, who recently broke an American record for the 30 kilometer run, and is an Olympic hopeful in the Marathon in Montreal in 1976 also took the 2-mile run with a 9:42.9 clocking.

In the 1-mile run Peter Wieth of the Varsity ran an effortless 4:23 to win the event, and looks very strong at this time. Rob Mullin ran a 4:36, good for second place.

In the shorter events the varsity showed good strength and depth with Tom Harrington winning the quarter-mile in 52.8 with Eric Nisenson taking second in 54.1. Hank Meyers won the 50-yard sprint with a 5.6 for the varsity. The Current Cats also took the 4 by 1 lap relay and the mile relay from the Alumni. This turned the tide of the meet to their favor.

Mike Biiza won the Discus and the Shot for the varsity, again proving to be UVM's most consistent point-getter, as he has for most of his career here.

This was the Track Team's first meet of the season, and proved to be a good warmup for the team as they travel to the Boston College Relays on April 19.

Lacrosse Team Starts To "Put It Together"

The University of Vermont Lacrosse Team again took to the road This past weekend. The club travelled to Boston where they were to play three games in two days. The team met at 7:30 at Patrick Gym and after a trip that could best be described as hectic, the caravan pulled into bean town at 2:00. The team then split into two groups and went their separate ways. The first team travelled crosstown to play the Harvard B-team. Having only fourteen men at the game put UVM at a decided disadvantage. The Catamounts played outstandingly, outshooting Harvard 31 to 19 and out hustled them on ground balls 47 to 28. Spike Jenkins tallied three times and Mark Stephenson was superb in the goal as the Cats held a 4-2 lead into the fourth period. A costly slashing penalty allowed Harvard to start their comeback, getting three goals in a one minute period. UVM pushed hard in the end, but could not manage to put the ball in the goal and suffered defeat, 5-4. Despite the loss the team looked markedly improved from their Long Island trip, a highlight being the stellar defensive play of Bruce Moffat.

Across town the B-team was facing Tufts University B-team. They were playing with only ten men, and since there are ten players on the field at one time, this did not leave a whole lot of bench support. The Cats were playing with two crippled defensemen, a goalie who was knocked out in the third period, and only one midfield line. The three reinforcements that pulled in during the third period were too few and too late as the Lacrosse Club dropped their second game of the day, 7-4.

The next day, with a rejuvenated team, the UVM Catamounts were not to be denied. They traveled to Bolton, Mass. to play the Massachusetts Lacrosse Club.

The statistics only tell part of the story. UVM came up with 76 ground balls to MLC's 37, and took an amazing 59 shots (an average of one per minute of play) to MLC's 25. The teams entire play was by far the best of the year as the Cats rolled to an 9-0 lead before Mass. scored on a man down situation. The Lacrosse Club did not let up the pace and the final score was 15-4. For those of you who want to hear it the scoring went as follows: Spike Jenkins, 3; Jeff Davis, 2; Tom Humphries, 2; Gil Lowe, 2; George Varga, 2; and Todd Brown, Angus Hodge, Trip Shel and Gary Watts all had one apiece.

Fine performances were put in on attack by Angus Hodge, Trip Shel, and Todd Brown. Mark "the rat" Stephenson shut MLC out in the first half and Chuck Sheketoff was excellent in the goal the second half, the only goals scored being on penalty situations.

The Lacrosse Club really started to pull together during this weekend trip. All aspects of their game showed improvement, especially the teamwork which was the key to the Massachusetts Lacrosse Club victory. Although there were no Sinbad's in Boston, the trip was a successful adventure. The Lacrosse Club looks forward to meeting Middlebury College Thursday at Middlebury and then begins their four-game home stand with St. Lawrence University at 2 p.m. on Saturday, then St. Michael's College on Monday at 4 p.m. All games are behind Gutterson Field House and you better be there when the Lacrosse Cats stick it to 'em.

HAPPINESS IS...

Happiness is Woody Hayes coming to UVM to coach a flag football team.

Happiness is Bobby Riggs playing Billy Jean King for charity.

Happiness is Muhammed Ali getting laryngitis three weeks before his next fight. And keeping it afterwards!

Happiness is a UVM–UCLA basketball game at the Patrick Gym. And the Cats winning!

Happiness is the Tennis team winning the Yankee Conference again, and then defeating the World Team tennis All-Stars.

Happiness is UVM playing baseball in April and not freezing to death.

Happiness is Tim O'Connell turning professional. After he graduates!

Happiness is finding out Roger Mallette and Bill Koch are only juniors.

Happiness is Vermont's basketball team making the top 10 in the polls.

Happiness is having a national champion. And next year could be it, both in hockey and skiing!

Intramural Racquetball

"B" TOURNAMENT: -
Thomas Wyand/Robert Torres (Delta Psi) defeated
Bill Michaud/Andrew Oxenhorn (WASTED) 15-12, 15-12

"C" TOURNAMENT: -
Howard Nadworny/David Potash (MED '78) defeated
Kenneth Hadley/Michael Paquette (Delta Psi) 15-6, 13-15, 15-12

ALL-CAMPUS CHAMPIONS: - DELTA PSI

PFG -Schedule

Patrick – Forbush – Gutterson Recreation Schedule
Weekend of April 18, 19, 20

FRIDAY, APRIL 18
GYM – Faculty-Staff none.
POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15)
TENNIS – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, APRIL 19
GYM – Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.m.
POOL – Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.m.
TENNIS – Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.m.
TRACK – Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.m.

SUNDAY, APRIL 20
GYM – Students 3:30–5 p.m.
POOL – Students 3:30–5 p.m.
TENNIS – Students 3:30–5 p.m.
TRACK – Students 3:30–5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL – Students 8:30–10:30 p.m.
ALL OTHER FACILITIES – Students 7–8 p.m.

THE FAN SPEAKS OUT

To the Sports Editor:

Let's get a lot more UVM news in your columns! This is a University paper not the New York Times. You probably know your stuff on professional sports, but I think most readers want more University news.

Could you tell me where all seven seniors ended in all-time scoring at UVM?

Thanks,
B.M.

I'll try to get more UVM news in the paper. As far as the seniors go: Roger Mallette finished 2nd with 160 points; Bill Koch (6), 124; John Murphy (12), 85; Ted Curtis (39), 32; Andy Rickard (42), 26; Jack Clifford (43), 25; Peter Brady (43) 25.

Dear Norm:

I have to disagree on Jeff Twiss' idea on hockey. Jeff states that Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman should be traded by the Bruins. How utterly absurd!

Cashman is one of the top forwards in the league and perhaps the best in getting the puck out of the corners. A steady performer, Wayne gives you 20 goals nearly every year and is the "enforcer" on the team.

Esposito—what can you say about him! A tough man in front of the net and a top goal scorer. Maybe Jeff thinks Bobby Orr should be traded too!

I also like the way Jeff goes out and picks a winner for the Stanley Cup. Either the Canadiens, Flyers or Sabres, huh? Who else is there!

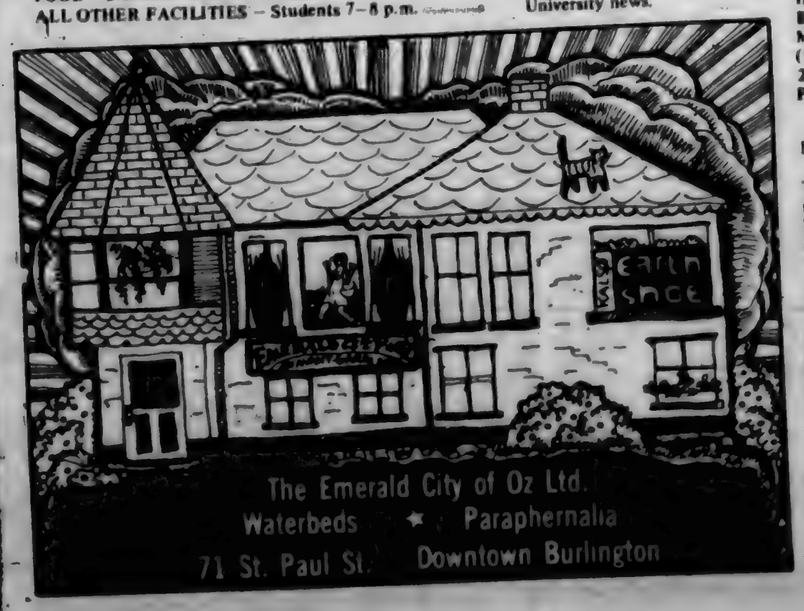
One other note, I agree with him that the Orioles will repeat in the AL east.

To each his own. I'm not sure if Jeff thinks Orr should be traded or not. Who else is there? Probably no one.

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

MONDAY-THURSDAY 9 a.m.-7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m.-1 p.m.
152 Church St. 862-4045
The Bread Shop
You take care of the inside of your head... We'll take care of the outside.
For Men & Women
We'll work it out



Bachelor Caps & Gowns
Now Available
University Store

VERMONT CYNIC

'Tis a Privilege to Live in Vermont

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 14 — FOUNDED IN 1883 — APRIL 24, 1975

Dayan Seeks Aid From U.S.

by Peter Duquette

The moral obligation of the United States to aid Israel in its struggle against the Arabs was the main topic of the lecture given by Moshe Dayan Friday night at the Patrick Gym. According to Dayan, the United States is the only other nation with sufficient political and military strength to oppose the Russian backed Arab states. The lecture, entitled The Middle East and World Powers, was divided into two main topics, the situation in the Mid-East now that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy has apparently failed, and secondly, the relationships between the United States, the Soviet Union, and Israel in the post-Vietnam era.

The first point made by Dayan was that the United States is already involved in the Mid-East Situation. The attempts by Henry Kissinger to mediate a settlement is one example of this involvement. To put the situation in the Middle East in its proper perspective, Dayan gave a brief history of the Israel. In the mid-1940's, with the aid of David Ben-Gurion, a Jewish state to be called Israel was set up. The United States was one of the first nations to recognize the new nation. At the time, it was planned to divide the area between the 600,000 Jews and the Palestinians already in the area. If this arrangement had been carried out, Dayan asserted, there would be no difficulties in the area today. The Arab states, opposed to this agreement, started a war against Israel. The war, which lasted for one year, was won by Israel. The end of the war came through the efforts of United Nations negotiator Ralph Bunche who traveled extensively and worked hard to end the first Arab-Israeli war.

During the fifties, a change came over the Mid-east situation. During this time, there had been no influence by an outside power. Egypt's leader Abdul Nasser asked for the aid of the Soviet Union, aid which the U.S.S.R. readily sent. This situation led to the second Arab Israeli war which occurred in 1957. The war began when Nasser closed the Suez canal, a waterway vital to the interests of the Israeli state. The interest of the United States in the matter was to see that the Canal remained open to traffic. By U.N. mediation, the war ended.

In 1967 war came again, this was the famous six-day war. It also began when Nasser of Egypt blocked the Suez Canal to traffic. At this time according to Dayan, the United Nations was a symbolic agency with no real military power to back it up. The Israeli government came to the United States to ask the U.S. to back up its pledge to keep the Suez canal open. According to Dayan, the United States did not back up its promise, since it was made by Dwight Eisenhower, and was not a binding agreement. The Suez Canal issue thus led to the war known as the Six-Day War. The war resulted in the Israeli take-over of much territory in the Middle East.

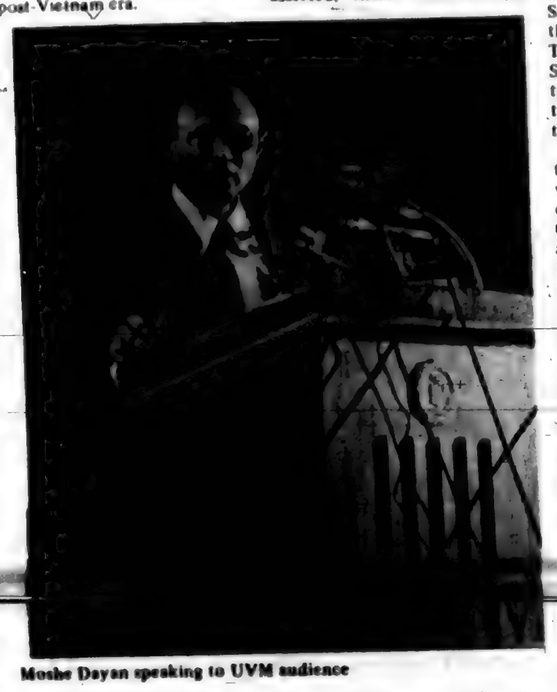
In 1973 another war began, known as the Yom Kippur war. This was a conflict launched by the Arab States and came as a complete surprise to the Israeli's. When the war ended, a conference was held in Geneva. The situation has remained virtually unchanged since the end of the Geneva Conference and the breakdown of the peace talks by Henry Kissinger.

Although Dayan admits that getting a written agreement from the Arabs is difficult, he is optimistic for a satisfactory end to the conflict in the Mid East. He does not consider the breakdown of the peace talks a disaster. He cited the example of Ralph Bunche working for almost a year to end the first war in 1947. His solution is to keep trying to reach an agreement, no matter how long the discussions might take. He wants a new agreement and a new Geneva Peace Conference, anything in this direction would be preferable to a resumption of armed conflict.

He also feels that such an agreement is within grasp. In his opinion Sadat is willing to negotiate, and willing to change the status of the Suez Canal from a military objective into a waterway. With this fact in mind, Dayan feels that attaining a final solution to the conflict depends upon long negotiations and not military action.

Dayan also asks for political and military aid from the United States. He feels that the U.S. is the only political organization with enough power to oppose the USSR. He feels that this power may be useful during the negotiations. He also asks for military aid in the form of arms and supplies, to improve Israel's defense position. He was careful to ask only for arms, not for the intervention of American troops. He asserts that Israel is capable of fighting its own wars, and only needs the material to fight with.

He closed with the hope that the United States would not forget its moral obligations to the Israeli state simply because Israel is unable to supply oil in payment of its debts.



Moshe Dayan speaking to UVM audience

SPS Photo by BILL BUSBY

ROTC Fire Ruled Arson

by Margo Howland

Fire which broke out in several locations in the Military Studies Headquarters on the fourth floor of the Williams Science Hall Sunday afternoon has definitely been ruled arson.

There were no injuries and little damage in the incident, which is still under investigation by the Burlington Fire Department, police, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. FBI agent John Curran was reportedly on the scene investigating late Sunday night, and later reports indicated that two detectives had joined the probe.

The automatic sprinkler system located in each room had doused the fires by the time the Fire Department arrived shortly after 4:30 p.m., officials said.

Fire and water damage were confined to the ROTC offices and classrooms on the fourth floor in the south wing of the building. There was minor damage on the fifth floor, consisting of a broken window next to the Military Studies supply closet. The broken window was apparently an attempt to get into the closet.

Campus security officials were first notified of the fire at 4:25 p.m. Sunday by the Waterman switchboard operator, who said that a girl called to report a fire on the fourth floor, then hung up without giving her name. Campus police immediately received a second phone call, this one from a male who said he was an art teacher, but who hung up before he could be identified.

Deputy Fire Chief Emerson Bouchard ordered the entire building closed until Monday morning. The Williams Science Hall also houses the Art and Anthropology departments, and students often go in after hours to use the pottery and woodworking room facilities. Sunday evening, only UVM officials and ROTC cadets previously cleared by campus police were permitted to enter the building.

University of Vermont Academic Vice President Alfred B. Rollins, Jr. and Associate Executive Vice President Richard Powers were on the scene Sunday night surveying the situation. According to Rollins and Powers, there was little fire damage, and no structural damage to the building. There was, however, significant water damage.

When asked if it might be arson, Rollins replied, "All those locations – it had to be somebody." Powers also agreed it might have been arson. Powers was notified of the fire by Dean of Students Keith Miser, who noticed the water from his office in Waterman.

Deputy Fire Chief Emerson Bouchard confirmed these reports Tuesday morning, saying, "It definitely must have been arson. A wastebasket doesn't just burst into flame by itself for no good reason." Bouchard indicated that the fires were intended for the ROTC offices, as none of the other departments were touched.

Small fires were started in at least four different locations, including the library, the faculty storage closet, bookcases and several wastebaskets.

The cadet student lounge and one of the two main classrooms had extensive water damage; a smoky wall showed where a bookcase filled with periodicals had been set afire. There was also a wastebasket fire in the fourth floor men's room.

The faculty offices of Major Duane Baker and Major Donald B. Safford, and the office of Master Sgt. Eric Anderson and Staff Sgt. Charles Campbell sustained noticeable water damage.

In the Military Studies library, another bookcase was charred, as well as a ceiling beam and the wall above the door. In the library wall was a square scorched hole, where firemen had to remove an open-ended cupboard. The area was used for a projector unit.

Charred fragments of periodicals littered the library floor. The light fixtures were broken by the heat and bits of broken glass were scattered around. A box of military handbooks was damaged, and according to ROTC cadet Clair Conzelman, two cabinets were also lost.

Officials said there was water damage in almost every room. The carpets throughout were very damp, because of the sprinklers that were activated.

"With 500 gallons a minute, in a matter of two minutes you could have two inches of water on the floor very easily," said Richard Scott-Smith, Acting Chief of Campus Security.

Insufance officials inspected the area Monday afternoon, and have been given the go-ahead to make the necessary adjustments.

FBI officials are investigating the case because it involves damaged federal property. There was some concern Sunday that military documents might have been damaged. The officials apparently did not believe that documents had been stolen.

There has been no report of possible suspects, although authorities said a number of people have been questioned.

A UVM art student complained that the woodworking room on the first floor was affected by the water.

"It looks like they sprayed the hell out of the wood room," he said.

Sunday's fire was the third since Christmas to be classified of suspicious origin. A small fire at Sigma Phi Epsilon

Aftermath of arson in ROTC offices

SPS Photo by BOB GAYDO

About four years ago, the FBI was called in to investigate a similar fire in the Air Force ROTC headquarters at St Michael's College in Winooski.

Cadet Clair Conzelman told the Cynic, "It took them two years, but they found out it was a girl and three of her friends in Air Force ROTC who set it."

Christmas eve was ruled arson, and another fire at Alpha Tau Omega the same night was "suspicious" but the cause was never fully determined. That fire severely damaged the building.

Williams Science Hall, built in 1896, was considered the first fire-proof building on the UVM campus.

S.93 Dies In House, Tunnel Lives

by Margo Howland

A bill which would have blocked construction of the UVM underpass was killed by the Vermont House on a 59-86 roll-call vote on Friday, April 18 during the last hectic hours of the 1975 Vermont General Assembly.

The defeat of S. 93 means that the construction of the tunnel under Main Street near the Redstone Walk will proceed as scheduled.

The bill was sponsored by five of Chittenden County's six senators and was supported by the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) and according to SA President Peter MacAusland, by a significant number of UVM students. At one point, some 2000 students had signed a petition opposing the underpass.

The University of Vermont Administration, who with Burlington Mayor Gordon Paquette, members of the Board of Aldermen, and members of the Burlington Planning Commission, had lobbied against S. 93, breathed a collective sigh of relief Friday afternoon.

"I'm delighted," responded University of Vermont Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson in a Cynic interview.

"If we had lost it, my guess would be that within a year we'd have had somebody killed or badly hurt; and within two years we would have had a bill to put it on the books. And think of all the money we'd have spent," speculated Patterson.

Patterson declared that the action of the House "confirms the view that the majority of the people down there feel the way we do about it."

One of the students complaints against the tunnel was that it was a waste of money better spent elsewhere. Actually, the $500,000 earmarked for the tunnel construction was appropriated by the General Assembly last year and, according to Patterson, could not be spent on anything else. If it were not spent on the tunnel, it would be lost, he said.

"It's been a year sitting there. It's part of the capital budget: there's no way that money can flow from the capital budget to the operating budget," Patterson explained.

The University of Vermont Vice President for Development, Barbara Snelling, felt that the committment indicated by the existence of the capital appropriation was a deciding factor in the decision to retain the tunnel.

"It would certainly create a precedent if they reneged on a capital appropriation," Snelling declared. Snelling's husband, Shelburne businessman Richard Snelling, is a member of the Vermont House of Representatives.

The concensus among University officials has been that if the underpass were not built, it would amount to ignoring a requirement of the District 4 Environmental Board, a move which could have serious consequences.

This was expressed by Snelling, who said, "I think the most important thing to keep in mind throughout any discussion of the underpass is that the University had two obligations. The University had a moral obligation to work for a safe crossing, and secondly, the University had a legal obligation to comply with the regulations of the District Environmental Board and the Burlington Planning Commission. The legislative decision means that both of these obligations will be accomplished."

Construction of an underpass was a specific requirement of the Living/Learning Center land use permit, according to Director of Administrative Resources Larry Snyder.

"Two permits were involved. The certificate of appropriateness issued by the Burlington Planning Commission said there had to be two pedestrian crossings, one on-grade and the other a grade separation, which would mean either an underpass or an overpass," said Snyder.

The land use permit issued by the District 4 Environmental Board on April 17, 1972 stated "The applicant shall provide two pedestrian crossings across Main Street, one of which shall be an underpass (below the grade of Main Street)."

Patterson said that the Campus Security offices would be moved to the tunnel location and housed in an underground building, except for the Traffic Division which will remain in Waterman.

"The twenty-four dispatchers will be looking straight down the tunnel. There was a lot of talk about needing additional security personnel and that's not the case," Patterson stated. There will also be an elevator for wheelchairs.

Bids have gone out, and were scheduled to be received May 12, pending the defeat of the bill, Patterson said.

University of Vermont Student Association President Peter MacAusland who has fought the tunnel construction for over a year, reluctantly conceded defeat when contacted Sunday night.

"I'm upset. I think the University Administration kind of applied too much pressure," MacAusland declared. He indicated that there seemed to be some shenannigans afoot in the treatment of the bill in that anti-tunnel people were not contacted for meetings.

"The bill was voted favorably out of the House Institutions Committee by a 9-2 margin and Chairman Rouse said they would delay voting on the floor so that the opponents and proponents of the bill could get together with the Senators who sponsored the bill and work out their differences.

"Two days later there was a Saturday morning meeting of the Chittenden County Delegation with Barbara Snelling and none of the Senators sponsoring the bill were contacted," MacAusland revealed.

"I met with President Andrews and Frank Gerred (the Burlington City Planner)" continued MacAusland. "I kept my part of the agreement."

"There's not much we can do now," he sighed.

SPS Photo by STEVE LESNESKI

Red Square Affair Arrives Saturday

What is the Red Square Affair?

The fourth annual UVM Red Square Affair is planned for this coming Saturday afternoon, April 26 (Rain Date Sunday -- if raining Sunday also, it will be held at Gutterson Fieldhouse) on the CBW Green behind Bailey Library. Evidently there is some confusion as to the derivation and meaning of the "Red Square Affair".

The Affair was originally contrived by Jim Prietrovito, the Resident Advisor in Chittenden Hall (1971-1973), in an effort to create an annual UVM spring tradition which would help ease the tensions of a long winter. Prietrovito arrived at the name "Red Square" because the event fell so close to "May Day", the May 1 event celebrated in Communist countries with the center of attention being Moscow's famous Red Square. Hence, the original name was spelled "Red Square, A-fair".

Somehow, however, the original meaning lost its significance and the name took on a new dimension: the CBW Green, the site of the Affair, is surrounded on all four sides by red brick buildings (Bailey Library, Cook Science, Fleming Museum, and the Shoebox Residence Halls) forming a red square, as illustrated on the many Red Square Affair posters around campus.

In any event, the Red Square Affair is a fun filled day with many kinds of activities for all interests and for all ages.

Numerous games in a carnival atmosphere will provide enjoyment for all. Pie throwing, Tip the cat, Zodiac Wheel, Lollipop Tree, Can-Can, Hoop the Bear, Shooting Gallery, and a Dunking booth, to name just a few. (Got a suggestion for possible Dunking booth victims? Tell Lynn Bitzer at ext. 2664)

Many local artisans will be there to show their crafts and wares for purchase or just display. Traditionally, the Affair attracts some of the most creative crafts people in this area.

SAGA will provide picnic food for coupons or cash.

In addition, a special attraction will be present at the Affair this year: a demonstration and game by the UVM LaCrosse Club.

I.R.A. has contributed a sizeable sum to help sponsor the event, as have the individual Halls on Main Campus. All proceeds from the Red Square Affair go directly to the Burlington Urban Youth Center.

All in all, the Red Square Affair is a UVM tradition not to be missed.

A new phase has been added to the Red Square Affair this year. There will be a continuous free folk and traditional music festival all afternoon, preceded by a morning of free musical workshops.

Featured This Week:

Future In Doubt pg.9

O'Connell Named Athlete Of The Year Pg. 16

Utah Phillips To Appear At Red Square Affair pg.7

Raft Race Pg. pp 9

calendar annoucements

Mark Lane To Speak At UVM

On Tuesday, April 29 Lee Harvey Oswald's lawyer, Mark Lane, will speak at UVM's Patrick Gymnasium on the topic "Who Killed J.F.K.?" Mark Lane, lawyer and author of the best selling book and movie Rush to Judgement and co-author of the book and film Executive Action, is the foremost critic of the Warren Commission and the most knowledgeable investigator into both the conspiracy to assassinate J.F.K. and the resulting CIA and FBI coverup.

He was the only investigator to testify before the Warren Commission regarding his own exhaustive study of the assassination.

The lecture, which includes a showing of the suppressed Zapruder film, is a must for everyone who is concerned about the state of the nation a decade after the assassination. Starting time is 7:30 and admission is $1 with UVM ID, $2 general admission. Mark Lane is being presented by the Billings Center Governing Board.

Music Department Sponsors Concert

Two newly-formed student string quartets will be among performers in a concert Saturday (April 26) by the UVM music department's "small ensembles." The concert at Ira Allen Chapel will begin at 4 p.m., and the public is invited.

The small ensembles are just that — small groups of performers who perform one or two numbers, giving the audience a wide variety of listening pleasure.

The string quartets will perform a Hayden quartet, and the Lark quartet by Schubert.

Two ensembles will feature soprano Stephanie Hahn, a voice student, who will perform a 16th century work by Danzel, instrumentated for voice, guitar and cello, plus "Cantante Domino" scored for soprano, two violins and harpsichord.

A harp ensemble will also play.

Admission to the concert is free.

Schedule For Senior Week 1975

All members of the Class of '75 and their guests are invited to the following activities.

Senior week begins Saturday evening May 10 at 9 p.m. in WDW Lounge (since on-campus seniors will be moved to this complex) WRUV will be broadcasting from the lounge please BYOB.

Sunday May 11. Kite flying will begin at 1 p.m. at the A.W. Post field. In case of low winds "bring a frisbee!"

At 8:00 p.m. in 235 Life Sciences the movie Stealth will be shown. An admission of $1 will be charged.

Monday, May 12, beginning at noon at Centennial Field will be the Senior Class picnic catered by Saga. Hamburgers, hot dogs, chips, salads, cookies and soda will be included in the $2.50 price person. Beer will also be provided, quantity depending on finances. Activities will be varied — frisbee, softball and soccer! or whatever else gets going. Bring your gloves with you. Tickets for the picnic are on sale at the Bookstore. They may also be purchased at the gate. For those who want to use their coupons, the price is 8 coupons and tickets must be gotten at the Coupon bank in Waterman BEFORE the picnic. Raindate will be Tuesday.

An overnite will be held in WDW lounge beginning at 11:00 p.m. Besides the cartoons Road Runner and Sylvester and Tweety, the movie Berserk with Joan Crawford will be shown. Free popcorn.

Tuesday May 13, will be a bike ride leaving at 10:00 a.m. to Sandbar State Park — if it's not flooded. Bring along a bag lunch.

Wednesday May 14 there will be a Senior Banquet and dance at the Ramada Inn. It will begin at 7:30 p.m. and be featuring Downpour. Tickets will be $6.00 a person and MUST be bought before the banquet. They are on sale at the Bookstore. This is not a purely couples affair — bring your friends.

Thursday May 15 the Patrick Gutterson athletic complex will be open to all. Volunteers are needed to help in the organizing of Athletic Day. Call Ken Currier at 656-3828 if interested.

Gay Student Union News

The UVM Gay Student Union will present a spring dance on Saturday, May 3. The dance will be at 9:00 p.m., in Southwick Gymnasium, and admission will be $1.00. Previous dances have been attended by both men and women, including some sympathetic non-gays, and the atmosphere has been friendly and relaxed. Generally 100-150 people are in attendance. The dance will replace the previously scheduled lecture by Rep. Elaine Noble as the last Gay event of the semester. Ms. Noble called up last week and cancelled her lecture due to an important but unexpected commitment. Hopefully she will be able to visit Burlington next semester. Anyone desiring further information or just wanting to rap can call the Gay switchboard at 656-4173 from 7-10 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Also anyone interested in joining a Gay and Bisexual men's rap group should call 658-3830 for further information.

Reward!

Two bags of clothes and 1 pair of boots lost at Raft Race starting site. Call Steve at x-2516 with any information.

John G. Brown Painting Exhibit

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum, UVM, announces the opening of a new exhibition entitled, "John George Brown (1831-1913): A Reappraisal" Organized by Philip N. Grime and Catherine Mazza, two second year graduate students in the University's Webb Graduate Program in American Cultural History. The exhibition will remain on view through May 9, in the Front Gallery.

This is the first exhibition since the artist's death that reappraises the craftsmanship and scope of this significant 19th century American genre painter. Brown's paintings reveal a strong concern for glorifying the shoeshine boy and other young urban waifs while finding delight in homespun country settings as well.

With the addition of various pieces of furniture and plants, the Brown paintings are displayed in a gallery that attempts to recreate in part the Victorian elegance with which the paintings originally hung. Several panels placed in the center of the gallery visually interpret Brown's work in relation to other prominent artists of the period. Also, by-juxtaposing images of city life with examples of Brown's urban subjects, one can understand the liberty Brown took in revealing few of the problems of late 19th century urban existence.

On view at the Fleming Museum through May 9 are: "Clarence Schmidt: Reconstructed Shrines and Architectural Environment," and "John George Brown (1831-1913): A Reappraisal."

THURSDAY, APRIL 24

12:15 p.m., music department presents a student recital at Ira Allen Chapel; admission free.

1 p.m., Richard Recusen defends his Ph.D. thesis in Botany, "Mechanism of Phytochrome Action in Plants," 122 Marsh Life Sciences Bldg.

1-3 p.m., Open House and dedication at your new infirmary; 284 East Ave. All are welcome to attend.

7:00 p.m., Chester Liebs, from the Division of Historic Sites will conduct a seminar dealing with "Historic Resource Preservation and its Relationship to Town Planning" in room D-107 Living/Learning. An open discussion will follow Mr. Liebs presentation. This seminar is sponsored by the graduate students in Natural Resources Planning. All interested persons are invited to attend.

7:30 p.m., "A Tribute to Frances Frost," Dewey Lounge, Old Mill, will feature readings from her works, a brief slide show and a small display of her books. All are welcome.

7:30 p.m., Third World Organization African dance workshop, Southwick Ballroom. Registration at 7:15 p.m.

8 p.m., "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" is performed at the Royall Tyler Theatre under the auspices of the department of communication and theatre. Box office is Ext. 2094.

8 p.m., "The Problems and Joys of Working in a Museum," a gallery talk at the Fleming Museum for members only, by members of the staff. If you'd like to attend, but aren't a member, call Bernice Cohen now at Ext. 2090, and find out about becoming a Museum member.

8:30 p.m., The Ananda Marga Yoga Society presents an introductory lecture on meditation at the Unitarian Church.

FRIDAY, APRIL 25

3 p.m., in conjunction with the "culturally different child" lecture series, the department of psychology and the cross cultural education alternative committee host Richard DeCharmes, social psychologist from Washington University, St. Louis, the author of "Personal Causation." Prof. DeCharmes will speak on the subject, "Educating for Self-Direction" in Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg.

4 p.m., Scenes from American Theatre, Royall Tyler Theatre.

7:30 and 9:30 p.m., SA Films present "King Kong", 101 Votey, Admission $1.

8 p.m., folk dancing at Southwick Ballroom, open to all.

8 p.m., "The Knight of the Burning Pestle," Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office 656-2094.

8 p.m., Cheyney State College Concert Choir appears at Ira Allen Chapel, hosted by UVM's Third World Organization. Tickets are $1. for students, $1.50 general, from Third World members, from Rodger Summers in 330 Waterman, or at the door. See story this issue.

8:15 p.m., Prof. Mortimer Kadish, Case Western Reserve University, will address himself to the relevance of John Dewey's thought to contemporary work in the field of aesthetics, Dewey Lounge, Old Mill. Open to all.

SATURDAY, APRIL 26

10 a.m.-5 p.m., "The Red Square Affair," features arts and crafts, fun and games, et cetera, on the green between the Fleming Museum and Bailey Library. In case of rain, the fair will take place April 27 and if it rains April 27, you'll find the fair in Gutterson Field House. Presented by the residence halls in the area mentioned, to benefit a charity.

8 p.m., concluding performance of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle," at Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office 656-2094.

SUNDAY, APRIL 27

7 p.m., St. Anselm's Chapel presents Prof. James Peterson, guidance and counseling, who will discuss the relationship between his academic discipline and his religious participation, at the Chapel.

8 p.m., concert at the Fleming Museum features the UVM Madrigal Singers under the direction of Prof. Francis Weinrich and a student wind group conducted by Prof. Frank Lidral. Among the songs to be sung by the Madrigal group are four in foreign languages: "Musica Lieblich Kunst" by Widman, "Musiciens qui Chantez" by Waelrant; "Speme Arorosa" by Gastoldi; and Palestrina's "Quando dal Terzo Cielo." In English, the singers will perform Greaves' "Sweet Nymphs that Trip Along;" Morley's "Hark Alleluiah" and "In Pride of May" by Weelkes. The finale will be a bouree of Bach arranged by Ward Swingle. Admission is free and the public is welcome.

MONDAY, APRIL 28

Students, can you believe only four more days of classes? They end May 1; and exams are slated for May 5 through 10, with Commencement following on May 16, 17 and 18!

Elections for Senior Class Council, Class of '76, are scheduled April 28 and 29 as follows: 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Billings and Bailey Library; 5 to 6:30 p.m. at Wright Dining Hall; 4:30-6 p.m., at Harris-Millis Dining Hall (Monday only); and 5:30 to 7 p.m. at MAT Dining Hall (Tuesday only).

9 a.m. to 4 p.m., The University Store hosts a visit from "College Marketing Group, Inc." They'll have a van full of new books parked outside the store, and faculty are welcome to browse, select complimentary and examination copies, or talk about books.

2 to 4 p.m., Church Street Center mini-course begins, "Hatha Yoga and Body Awareness;" details by calling Ext. 4221 or visiting the Center at 135 Church Street.

4 to 6 p.m., informal reception honoring President and Mrs. Edward C. Andrews, Jr., North Lounge, Billings Center; hosted by Student Association, the Academic Council, the Faculty Senate and the Non-Academic Employees Council. All are welcome.

5 p.m., VPIRG meets, Conference Room C, Billings Center.

7-8 p.m., Living/Learning nutrition program meets for an exercise class and nutritional counseling, 115 Commons, L/L, open to all. Repeated Wednesdays.

7 p.m., fiction reading by Ward Just, hosted by the English department, Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

7:30 p.m., for beginners, 8:15 p.m. for the more advanced class in Scottish dancing, 107 Perkins Geology Hall. Details from Ben or Dot Stein, 863-4105.

7:30 - 9:30 p.m., Church Street Center mini-course begins, "Introduction to Christian Art," details by calling Ext. 4221.

8 p.m., Cross Cultural Program, L/L, concluding lecture in this semester's series: L/L Director H.N. Muller, III addresses this question: "Is There a Vermont Culture?" Place is D-170 L/L.

8 p.m., Philosophy department hosts Jerrold Katz, professor of philosophy at MIT and professor of linguistics at CUNY, "The Aim and Structure of Semantic Theory," D-107 L/L.

TUESDAY, APRIL 29

Senior class council elections; details under April 28.

12 noon, Study habits workshop (now or never!) at the Counseling and Testing Center, conducted by Alice D. Quitwater.

12:15 p.m., student music recital at Ira Allen Chapel; admission free; all welcome.

6:30 p.m., Christian Science College Organization Meeting. Special meeting dealing with exams.

7 p.m., Intervarsity Christian Fellowship meets at Apt. 2, 205 South Prospect St., to study the Book of Colossians.

7:30 p.m., Billings Center Governing Board presents attorney Mark Lane, author of the best selling book and film, "Rush to Judgment," who will speak: "Who Killed Kennedy?" and show the Zapruder film of the assassination, at Patrick Gym. Tickets available in advance at Billings Center sales desk; $1 with UVM I.D., $2 general admission.

7:30 to 9:30 p.m., Church Street Center mini-courses begin on the following subjects: "Creative Writing: Prose Fiction" and "Experiencing Art Through the Ages," details from Ext. 4221. Register in advance! It helps with planning the courses.

8 p.m., presentation of Lambda Cup and awards to outstanding Greek men and women are on the agenda of a semiformal reception and awards presentation, North Lounge, Billings Center. Story this issue.

8 p.m., Latin American Studies Program and the Department of Romance Languages present Professor Raul H. Castagnino, Universidad Nacional de La Plata, Argentina, and SUNY at Albany, "La suerte del cuento," a talk in Spanish, Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

8 p.m., Fleming Museum gallery talk: Gregg Blasdel on "Clarence Schmidt in the Context of Grass Roots Art," all welcome. See the Schmidt show while you're there.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30

All-day meeting of the Board of Trustees' ad hoc planning committee, beginning at 9 a.m., Memorial Lounge, Waterman Building. Another meeting is set for the same time and place on Thursday, May 1; and the group will also meet May 8 and May 28.

10 a.m., lecture in Spanish by visiting Prof. Raul H. Castagnino, "Situacion actual de la critica literaria," Area and International Studies Bldg., 479 Main Street, question and answer session following. Open to all.

12 noon, Counseling and Testing Center presents a "relaxation" hour - come and meditate.

(continued on page three)

Awards To Be Presented This Tuesday

Awards to UVM's outstanding Greek man and Greek woman will be presented at a public ceremony and reception Tuesday evening (April 29) at North Lounge, Billings Center, beginning at 8 o'clock. These awards recognize seniors who have exhibited notable and exceptional service to the community and to the University.

Also to be awarded is the Lambda Cup, which goes to the sorority on campus which has exhibited outstanding Greek and community involvement, together with scholarship, during the past year. An award in memory of Andy Towle, who died in the Kappa Sigma fraternity fire, will also be presented, and a "Greek skit" award will be given to the sorority which presented the best "Greek Week" skit in last fall's competition.

Refreshments will be served; and the public is invited to join with students, Greek alumni, faculty, advisors, housemothers and parents who will gather to recognize the contributions of the Greek system at UVM.

Bookfair In A Truck

The College Marketing Group's Booktruck, a bookfair in a truck, will visit UVM April 28 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Booktruck will be parked in back of the University Store and will feature, available works by hundreds of publishers. Sponsored by C. Hosmer Graham, Director UVM Bookstore.

Financial Aid Information

If you wish to apply for Financial Aid for the 1975-76 school year, be sure to submit the appropriate forms as soon as possible. Even if you received aid during the previous year at UVM, you must apply again at the Financial Aid Office, 330 Waterman Building. Although there is no formal or final deadline by which you must return the forms, please consider that a) due to the necessity of allocating limited funds, PRIORITY WILL BE GIVEN TO APPLICATIONS SUBMITTED PRIOR TO JUNE 1, 1975 and b) applications submitted AFTER June 1, 1975 will be reviewed according to the date of submissions, subject to the availability of funds. Since educational costs are increasing and most scholarships and grants are NOT increasing, we urge you to apply to any other sources you may know about as well as making every effort to find summer work.

Cheyney State Gives Concert

On April 25, 1975 in Ira Allen Chapel at 8:00 p.m., the Cheyney State College Concert Choir will give a concert under the auspices of the Student Association and the Third World Organization. Tickets are available at the door and donations are $1 for students and $1.50 for the general public.

Springtime Film Festival This Weekend

This weekend the University will celebrate the arrival of spring with a film festival. On Friday evening April 25th at 8 p.m. at the Church St. Center for Community Education the Gray Film Atelier will present an evening of eleven short films. They will also show their controversial studio production P.I.N.S. (Persons in Need of Supervision) a documentary filmed at an institution for problem children and juvenile delinquents in New York State.

On Saturday the 26th at 8 p.m. at Rowell Medical Building there will be the premiere showing of films by Doreen Kraft and Robin Lloyd. There will be three short films; "Medusa" a mythological drama, "The Red Fall of Time" — an alchemical dance film and "Moving Pictures" — a visual poem of Haiti. Doreen and Robin under the name of Orchid Films also teach filmmaking in the public schools and make commercials for local television. At present they are working with two other filmmakers from Burlington, Jim Taylor and Brian Doubleday to create a film and art center for the Burlington community.

On Sunday the 27th also at Rowell Building, Rm 103 at 2 p.m. there will be contemporary animated films and special effects photography. In the evening at 8 p.m. there will be a showing of surreal animated films.

Set $200

Set $150

Set $250

Femininity is the Keynote of two matched sets with a delightful aura of youth and charm. Simply and beautifully executed, they have a feminine air in the daintiness of their designs, yet are wonderfully and beautifully effective on the hand.

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1864

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.

17 Upper Church Street

Member American Gem Society

The Village Cobbler

60 PEARL STREET
ESSEX JUNCTION
879-7202
9:30 - 6 daily
Wednesday 'til 9

"Your family Shoe Store"

FEATURING

hottest item on college campus

The Original COPENHAGEN CLOG

COLORS

Made in Denmark of the Finest Quality Leather and Wood

Ladies Sizes 5-10

There is only one Earth brand shoe. You will experience its comfort as soon as you try it on. And the longer you wear it, the more you'll appreciate its quality and value.

the Earth shoe

Available only at:

139 BANK STREET

"Ziggy's" Burlington Shoe repair "Smoke Stack"

BURLINGTON PLACE

"The Mini Mall"

101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401

864-9555

CIGERETTES: 43¢ PACK, $3.89 CARTON

Leather goods Jewelry candles clothing Jokes

. . . Calend

(continued from page two)

12:15 p.m., Church Street Lunch Bu... continues with "A Dylan Thomas Memoir." ... bring your own lunch to 135 Church St.

4 to 5:30 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal ... the purpose of speaking Spanish. Third floo...

4-6p.m., the Department of German and... friends and colleagues to a reception honori... M. Webster on the occasion of his retirement... stop in at Dewey Lounge, Old Mill to wish him...

7 to 8 p.m., L/L Nutrition Program ex... nutritional counseling, 115 Commons.

7-9 p.m., Church Street Center mini... "Fundamentals of Organic Gardening and Far... calling Ext. 4221.

7:30-9 p.m., Church Street Cen... "Vegetarian/Natural Foods" starts today. ... calling 656-4221.

7:30 p.m., Outing Club meeting, 305 Vo...

THURSDAY, MAY 1

Last day of classes. Examinations be... conclude May 10. Commencement is May 1... those caps and gowns at the University Sto... already done so!

9 a.m., ad hoc planning committee ... Trustees meets, Memorial Lounge, Waterman ...

Women of UVM hiking group recon... Details from Barbara Wilson, 658-4216 or ... 863-4107.

12 noon, Non-Academic Employees ... Morrill Hall conference room. Open to ...

MAT Donates $ To Bottle Dri...

This past Sunday afternoon Marsh-Austin-Tupper gave one thousand and forty-eight bottles to the Bottle Drive for World Food relief, and all that in about twenty-five minutes. That's one heck of alot of bottles, moving real fast.

Volunteers working on the Bottle Drive were coordinated by St. Anselm's Chapel. There will be at least three more similar pick ups and anyone who would like to help is needed and welcome to join. On Tuesday at 4:00 in the afternoon, volunteers will be meeting at the main desk in Simpson. The work will take about an hour for collecting and sorting. Then on Thursday, we will meet at 4:00 in the afternoon at the main desk in Buckham. And finally, on Sunday the 27th of April, we'll meet at 4:00 at St. Anselm's for our final run.

If you see liquids to get to ... any of these concentrated drives, please try to do what you can to get bottles to St. Anselm's. We have a large collection bin in the Commons Room. Also there are a number of dorms which have set up collecting drops inside the dorm. If you are able to organize one of these, you can then redeem the bottles yourselves ... to any age... world food... bring the... Anselm's a... the grand ... sending If... redeem yo... will try to... redeem the... time is get... us if you n...

We ... collected f... Bishop's ... (Church) ... Relief. H... 100% of t... be used t... food-pro... people in... will cove... collecting ... monies ... because ... going to ... hungry ... some fam... would su... to suppl... other or... set up ... you can ... check fo... money to ... gets to t... The addr... The Pre... for Worl... Avenue, ... 10017.

Cunningham

As the end of the school year comes closer, we hope you have had a chance to stop by the Newman Center on Redstone Campus. If for any reason you haven't you might find time during these last few weeks, and we would really like the opportunity to meet you! So, given the time - hope you will stop in to say hello!

Weekday... Mon... p.m.: H... 10 p.m. ... Weekend... Sat... p.m.: Su... a.m. and... Faith ... people ... commun...

St. Anselm's C...

This coming Sunday we have three confirmations which we happily announce. Krikit Wheeler, Linda Del Hagen, and Barbara Johnson are being confirmed by Bishop Kerr of the Episcopal Diocese of Vermont. All are invited to attend this service at 9:00 a.m. Chaplain Appleyard will preach.

Sunday evening Jim Peterson will speak as the final of our faculty presenters. Things will get under way at 7:00 p.m. Dessert and discussion will follow.

The Bottle Drive is alive and well. It is going better than expected. Please keep bringing your bottles through exam period. Call St. Anselms (x-3882) if you can help out.

Celebrate the last week of class.

SERVIC... Su... Euchar... Confirm... Tue... Euchari... We... Morning... Evening...

REMIN... A L... PERIOD... BAILE... 10, T... SEMES...

Last C... Ariel. C... Lower ... Kick ... Mouth...

LEVI'S

Pants Plus

12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401

802 • 864-0181

10% OFF WITH

DAY, APRIL 28
elove only four more days of classes!
ams are slated for May 5 through 10.
owing on May 16, 17 and 18!
Class Council, Class of '76, are 29 as follows: 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at ry; 5 to 6:00 p.m. at Wright Dining rris-Millis Dining Hall (Monday only).
T Dining Hall (Tuesday only). . .
er-University State hosts a visit from p, Inc." They'll have a van full of new e store and faculty are welcome to ntary and examination copies, or talk h Street Center mini-course begins, Awareness," details by calling Ext.
se at 135 Church Street.
al reception honoring President and n, Jr. North Lounge, Billings Center.
sociation, the Academic Council, the Non Academic Employees Council.
eets. Conference Room C, Billings rning nutrition program meets for an itional counseling, 115 Commons, L/L. rdwerdays ding by Ward Just, hosted by the ey Lounge, Old Mill mers, 8:15 p.m. for the more advanced
s. 107 Perkins Geology Hall. Details 863-4105.
. Church Street Center mini-course
n Christian Art," details by calling Ext.
ral Program, L/L, concluding lecture in /L Director H.N. Muller, III addresses
e a Vermont Culture?" Place is D-170 hy department hosts Jerrold Katz, at MIT and professor of linguistics at Structure of Semantic Theory," D-107
ESDAY, APRIL 29
l elections, details under April 28.
bits workshop (now or never!) at the ng Center, conducted by Alice D. ast music recital at Ira Allen Chapel;
ome.
ristian Science College Organization
g dealing with exams.
y Christian Fellowship meets at Apt. 2,
. to study the book of Colossians.
gs Center Governing Board presents
uthor of the best selling book and film, who will speak: "Who Killed Kennedy?"
er film of the assassination, at Patrick in advance at Billings Center sales desk;
general admission.
. Church Street Center mini-courses ng subjects "Creative Writing" Prose ncing Art Through the Ages." Details tter in advance! It helps with planning tion of Lambda Cup and awards to en and women are on the agenda of a and awards presentation, North Lounge, this issue.
American Studies Program and the nce Languages present Professor Raul H. ad Nacional de La Plata, Argentina, and La muerte del cuento," a talk in Spanish, Mill.
Museum gallery talk Gregg Blasdel on n the Context of Grass Roots Art," all midt show while you're there.
EDNESDAY, APRIL 30
of the Board of Trustees' ad hoc planning at 9 a.m., Memorial Lounge, Waterman eeting" set for the same time and place and the group will also meet May 8 and e in Spanish by visiting Prof. Raul H. on actual de la crítica literaria," Area and Bldg., 479 Main Street, question and ssing. Open to all nseling and Testing Center presents a come and meditate.

(continued on page three)

al This Weekend

26th at 8
Medical be the films by d Robin be three duse" a
"The Red
lchemical
"Moving poem of bin under Films also the public mmercials
for local television. At present they are working with two other filmmakers from Burlington, Jim Taylor and Brian Doubleday to create a film and art center for the Burlington community.

On Sunday the 27th also at Rowell Building, Rm 103 at 2 p.m. there will be contemporary animated films and special effects photography In the evening at 8 p.m. there will be a showing of surreal animated films.

epair "Smoke Stack"
ON PLACE
Hill
t on Vermont 05401
$3.89 CARTON
dles clothing Jokes

. . . Calendar

(continued from page two)

12:15 p.m., Church Street Lunch Bunch Film Series continues with "A Dylan Thomas Memoir," admission free, bring your own lunch to 135 Church St.

4 to 5:30 p.m., "Tertulia," an informal get-together for the purpose of speaking Spanish. Third floor of Bldg. D, L/L.

4-6p.m., the Department of German and Russian invites friends and colleagues to a reception honoring Prof. Truman M. Webster on the occasion of his retirement from teaching. Slup Hall Dewey Lounge, Old Mill to wish him well.

7 to 8 p.m., L/L Nutrition Program exercise class and nutritional counseling, 115 Commons

7-9 p.m., Church Street Center mini-course begins: "Fundamentals of Organic Gardening and Farming," details by calling Ext 4221.

7:30-9 p.m., Church Street Center course on "Vegetarian/Natural Foods" starts today. Find out more by calling 656-4221

7:30 p.m., Outing Club meeting, 305 Votey Bldg

THURSDAY, MAY 1

Last day of classes Examinations begin May 5 and conclude May 10. Commencement is May 16, 17 and 18. Get those caps and gowns at the University Store if you haven't already done so!

9 a.m., ad hoc planning committee of the Board of Trustees meets, Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg.

Women of UVM hiking group reconvenes for a hike. Details from Barbara Wilson, 658-4216 or Shirley Sargent, 863-4107

12 noon, Non Academic Employees Council meets, Morrill Hall conference room. Open to all employees.

MAT Donates $52.40 To Bottle Drive

This past Sunday afternoon Marsh-Austin-Tupper gave one thousand and forty-eight bottles to the Bottle Drive for World Food Relief, and all that in about twenty-five minutes. That's one heck of alot of bottles, moving real fast.

Volunteers working on the Bottle Drive were coordinated by St. Anselm's Chapel. There will be at least three more similar pick-ups and anyone who would like to help is needed and welcome to join. On Tuesday at 4:00 in the afternoon, volunteers will be meeting at the main desk in Simpson. The work will take about an hour for collecting and sorting. Then on Thursday, we will meet at 4:00 in the afternoon at the main desk in Buckham. And finally, on Sunday the 27th of April, we'll meet at 4:00 at St. Anselm's for our final run.

If you are unable to get to any of these concentrated drives, please try to do what you can to get bottles to St. Anselm's. We have a large collection bin in the Commons Room. Also there are a number of dorms which have set up collecting drops inside the dorm. If you are able to organize one of these, you can then redeem the bottles yourselves and send the check to any agency you choose for world food relief or you can bring the money to St. Anselm's and we'll include it in the grand total that we are sending. If it is impossible to redeem your own bottles, we will try to collect them and redeem them for you but our time is getting tight, too. Call us if you need help (x-3882).

We are sending our collected funds to the Presiding Bishop's Fund (Episcopal Church) for World Food Relief. He has pledged that 100% of the money sent in will be used to supply food and food-production methods to people in need. The Church will cover the overhead of collecting and distributing the monies. We chose this fund because our money will be going to the people who are hungry and not to support some fancy organization which would use half of our donation to support itself. There are other organizations which have set up similar programs. If you send in any donations, check first to see where your money is going and how much gets to the intended purposes. The address for the Fund is: The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, 815 Second Avenue, New York, New York 10017.

Reception In Honor Of Andrews

University of Vermont President Edward C. Andrews, Jr., and his wife will be honored at a Monday (April 28) reception hosted by the University's Student Association, Academic Council, Faculty Senate and Non-Academic Employees' Council.

Dr. Andrews will leave UVM in June to accept the newly-created post of president of the Maine Medical Center at Portland.

University students, faculty, staff and members of the community have been invited to take part in the reception in honor of the Andrews' from 4 to 6 p.m. in the North Lounge of Billings Center on the UVM campus. Representatives of each of the host groups will make brief presentations starting at 4:15 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

Dr. Andrews has served since 1970 as the University's 20th president. He said in a letter to the UVM Board of Trustees at the time of his resignation "The Andrews family will leave UVM and friends and colleagues here with the greatest reluctance, for we have invested 17 years of our lives on this campus and love both the University and the State and what they stand for. Our commitment is great and our faith in their future profound."

He joined the Vermont faculty as a member of the pathology department in 1958; was named associate dean of the College of Medicine in 1964; and dean of the College and of the Division of Health Sciences in 1966; becoming president in 1970 when he succeeded Dr. Lyman S. Rowell.

Senior Class Council Election

Attention Class of '76

The elections for Senior Class Council will be held Tuesday and Wednesday April 28 and 29. Voting places will be as follows:

Billings Center and Bailey Library. Both days, 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

Wright Dining Hall 5:00-6:30 both days.

Harris-Millis Dining Hall 4:30-6:00 Wed., and

MAT Dining Hall 5:30-7:00 Thurs.

There has been an unexpected large number of nominations for the four positions. The Class Council of '75 will be getting in touch with all nominees to affirm their commitment to run. The list of nominees is as follows:

President - Cyndy Barber, Cindy Bedell, Cathy Chamberlain, Rick Fischer, Richard Frothingham, Martha Hoffman, Gary Jacobs, Sheldon Roasch, Kerry Ryan, Edward Sali, Alan Schaffer, Kathleen Uhelhart, Eddie Mae Woodley.

Vice President - Jackie Baldwin, Amy Christensen, Pat Daley, Jeff Davis, Mary Dumas, Philip Engle, Dennis Lawler, Fred Lux, Gail Rich, Nancy Shank, Mark Soufleris, Karl Vonberg.

Secretary - Nancy Dean, Becky Dingle, Fred Fruit, Ann Marie Harrity, David Landry, Karen Meyers, Karen Miller, Cynthia Murray, Joanne Puente, Debbie Russell, Andrea Thompson.

Treasurer - Diane Ehrlich, Norman Giroux, Gaven Kugler, Louise Lord, Richard Sears, Kathleen Waterman, Paula Yankavskas.

If anyone in the above lists would not like to run please call Ken Currier 656-3828. The ballot will consist of all serious contendors for the office. There will be only one election and the winner will be that person with a simple majority. All campaign materials are left up to the discretion of each contender. Let's all get out and vote.

Joint AAUP And VEA Statement

The AAUP and VEA today announced that they are withdrawing from further participation in the NLRB-conducted hearings concerning the determination of a bargaining unit for UVM faculty. Representatives of the two groups explained that this significant step was taken in an effort to stop the drain on severely limited university funds and to eliminate the extensive demands on the time of many faculty and top administrators who have been required to participate in the hearings.

The two groups stated that the initial two weeks of NLRB hearings have made it clear that because of numerous disputed issues raised by the UVM administration and the faculty organizations, the NLRB proceedings will be unnecessarily lengthy and complex. Each day of hearings requires a substantial expenditure of funds by the University for its Boston labor attorneys, labor relations specialists, preparation of documents and exhibits for the hearings, and the purchase of official transcripts. Such expenditures are most unfortunate at a time when the University needs to conserve every possible dollar.

In order to eliminate the need for further unit determination hearings and to bring about an early election, the AAUP and VEA suggested to the AFT and the UVM administration that the parties work out an acceptable compromise agreement on the composition of the bargaining unit. Although the AAUP and VEA indicated their willingness to compromise on certain key issues, the AFT rejected the notion of compromising and refused to join in a consent agreement.

The AAUP and VEA indicated to the NLRB that they intend to participate as individual organizations in any election ordered by the NLRB. They stated, however, that rather than participating in the hearings they would devote their time and organizational resources to conducting a campaign which would provide UVM faculty members with information about the issues involved in collective bargaining. The two organizations believe that their decision to withdraw from the hearings will dramatize to the people of the State and the faculty and students at UVM the unnecessary waste of precious funds and institutional resources that will continue for many months unless a reasonable agreement is reached to bring the hearings to a speedy conclusion.

For further information: AAUP-Vermont Chapter; John Kice - 656-2594, Virginia Clark - 656-3056; VEA-Charles Ochmanski - 223-6375.

The Exchange

by Andres Lethonen
Alice D. Outwater Counseling and Testing

Our EXCHANGE mail brought rumblings from many students about the change in the Academic Calendar for the next year. We hopped right over to Jack Little of Microbiology and got the following clarification. The Academic Affairs Committee, of which he is a member, wrestled with this for weeks. He said: "We are all aware of the excrutiating costs of energy; there has been a dire need to maximize the energy savings and this meant rearranging the academic calendar." In talking with students, this Committee felt many liked the idea of a six week winter interim (others did not because they felt it hampered their summer job chances with the end ending in June.) However, the hard facts are that a $40,000 saving will be realized in electricity and oil bills (according to the present prices - which are likely to rise in the future.) For those few wishing to academically use the time usefully and interestingly, imaginations went wild!

Unusual kinds of courses could be offered - perhaps dealing with social problems in the State and Nation; special areas such as race, poverty, crime, etc. to which one might not choose to devote a full semester. It could be an opportunity to experiment with new types of learning, teaching a smaller group of students rather than having 130 to a class. It could be an intensive experience with six hours of classes a day, running back and forth to the library for material. Hey, I'm signing up for this one! Tossed around was the idea of credit for work associated with a course - perhaps in industry during this period? Another possibility would be workshops or conferences taught by doctors, engineers, lawyers collaborating with faculty on interdepartmental subject materials. Everyone on the Academic Affairs Committee (including two student representatives) were concerned that this proposed calendar get the widest possible circulation. It would be a new innovation and they wanted everyone, but everyone to be aware of it; in fact dozens and dozens of students, faculty were consulted to get their opinions and suggestions. It was discussed in the Faculty Senate Meeting (do you students realize you have representation there also?) As I talk with faculty and administration I am impressed with the amount of caring and involvement in doing what is best for the students and the University. Yet communication is not what it could be and misunderstandings occur too frequently.

One student wanted a LOVE-IN. Does this mean Spring is on its way? What is a LOVE-IN? Is it like a Fete-Champetre, where we all bring little baskets and gather mushrooms, dancing about on the green? What does one wear to a LOVE-IN? (Or shouldn't I ask?) Goodness, would we more conservative-types qualify? A faculty member requests more park benches around the campus, so she can eat her sandwich without perching on the soggy ground or having ants nipping her. Isn't it lovely to think of being able to do these warm weather things? No wonder we all go wild in Vermont when Spring finally comes! Keep your comments coming to the EXCHANGE or call X2068.

A Weekend Of Affairs

An exciting weekend of charitable activities has been planned for UVM students this weekend. The fun starts at 6:30 Friday night with Pat's Affair at the Patrick Gymnasium, and continues Saturday morning at 10:00 on the CBW green.

Dance contests, pizza eating contest, betting on your favorite team or player, relay races, tug-o-war, volleyball, shooting gallery, bingo, and blackjack are a few of the activities taking place at Pat's Affair. A raffle of a bicycle, gift certificate to local beverage warehouse of 20.00, backpacks, and other prizes will be held. In addition to this, an auction of dinners for two, bean bag chairs, tennis equipment, radio, wind breakers, and other valuable items will occur. A money exchange, where 50 cents will buy 50 dollars of currency for use at the affair, will take place with the doors opening at 6:30. Get there early to place your bets and enter the contests. All proceeds go to the Special Olympics.

Saturday morning's activities start at 10:00 with a variety of carnival-type-games. Crafts people displaying their goods, picnic-type food, cotton candy, beverages and many game booths will be only a few of the events. Saul Broudy, Utah Phillips with Rosalie Sorrels, and Banjo Dan and the Midnight Plowboys are three of the groups participating in the folk-blues festival. A pie-throwing contest and dunking contest will occur with prominent UVM figures as the "victims." (How about your R.A.??) Proceeds from the annual Red Square Affair will go to the Burlington Youth Center.

Entry forms for Pat's Affair relay races, tug-o-war, and volleyball games are available from Meg Phillips, 215 Harris, x 3858. Don't miss out on the fun!!! Attend a weekend of affairs you'll never forget - or regret!!!

Magazine Needs Volunteers

The Vermont Children's Magazine is looking for a fare breed of individuals anybody! Preferably, people that would like to participate in organization, production, and/or distribution of a magazine by and for the children of Vermont.

Come, see us at the Red Square Affair, browse thru our first issue an issue that went from conception to reality in only five short weeks. A feat that was accomplished solely by volunteers from all facets of the community with one essential binding force - a love of children and a concern for their education.

The original idea for the magazine came from Ed Osborn, a junior at the University. Through his determination and a massive poster campaign a staff of 15 dedicated people was recruited, including teachers, artists, writers, and organizers.

The magazine will be distributed to 70 schools in Vermont, for children in K-3rd grades. If this first issue proves valuable, then quarterly production will begin in the fall.

The content of the magazine is based upon suggestions made by teachers and principals in a questionnaire which was mailed to them over the winter. The final product is being offered to the teachers in the state to either supplement their curriculum, or simply to serve as leisure material that the children can relate to.

If you have an interest in Vermont, and like to communicate with kids, put your energy into this magazine. For instance, in the first issue we have included poetry, short stories, illustrations, and suggestions for student activities in arts and crafts, ecology, field trips in the state, and bicentennial tidbits.

Come and talk with us on Saturday at the Red Square Affair. Everyone has a potential to contribute in some way!

Florida's Milkshake Man

Miami, Florida. College graduate John Poster was this week forced into accepting a demeaning position as head milkshake man in a local Macdonald's chain. The baffled English major said he'd been hunting for two months trying to find work as a writer, but was finally forced into accepting this position for lack of funds. Says John, "The task lies not so much in the looking as it does in the making."

On the bright side, John says he can eat all the fries he wants and is allowed two hamburgers and three milkshakes a day. He is also allowed time off if he calls in before 10 a.m.

Though disappointed with the lack of opportunity to use his skills, John says he's going to make the best of it. Fascinated by the different character types drawn to the various milkshake flavors, John has decided to start a new work entitled, "Flavor me Strawberry."

Cunningham Newman Center

As the end of the school year comes closer, we hope you have had a chance to stop by the Newman Center on Redstone Campus. If for any reason you haven't you might find time during these last few weeks, and we would really like the opportunity to meet you! So, given the time - hope you will stop in to say hello!

Weekday Liturgies:
Monday - Friday: 4:15 p.m.; Each Tuesday evening: 10 p.m.
Weekend Liturgies:
Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.; Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Faith Community: Young people in our worshipping community who are of, or beyond the graduate school age and who would be interested in getting together for prayer, dialogue, social and apostolic activities, as well as any one else on Campus, are invited to join us at the Center every other Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Next meeting: April 30.

St. Anselm's Chapel

This coming Sunday we have three confirmations which we happily announce. Krikit Wheeler, Linda Del Hagen, and Barbara Johnson are being confirmed by Bishop Kerr of the Episcopal Diocese of Vermont. All are invited to attend this service at 9:00 a.m. Chaplain Appleyard will preach.

Sunday evening Jim Peterson will speak as the final of our faculty presenters. Things will get under way at 7:00 p.m. Dessert and discussion will follow.

The Bottle Drive is alive and well. It is going better than expected. Please keep bringing your bottles through exam period. Call St. Anselms (x-3882) if you can help out.

Celebrate the last week of class.

SERVICES:
Sunday: 9 a.m. Holy Eucharist with sermon and Confirmation
Tuesday: 10 p.m. Holy Eucharist
Weekdays: 7:15 a.m., Morning Prayer and 5:00 p.m. Evening Prayer.

REMINDER..
ALL BOOKS AND PERIODICALS ARE DUE AT BAILEY LIBRARY BY MAY 10, THE END OF THE SEMESTER.

Ariel

Last Chance to get a 1974 Ariel. Only $1.00. Ariel Office, Lower Billings Center. Don't Kick a Gift Horse in the Mouth!!

Last Chance For Pestle

Ok, folks, admit it. You haven't bought your tickets for The Knight of the Burning Pestle yet, have you? It's no good pretending. What do you think we are stupid? We know who's seen this show and who hasn't. We also have friends in high places and access to certain records and transcripts which we wouldn't hesitate to doctor if need be. So get on the stick! This is the last time we're going to tell you:

The Knight of the Burning Pestle

April 24, 25, 26. 8:00 p.m.

Royall Tyler Theatre, 656-2094

While we're at it, we might as well announce the upcoming One-Act Play Festival, to be held April 30, May 1, 3, and 4. The student directed plays will be Genet's Deathwatch and Lorca's The Love of Don Perlimplin and Belisa in the Garden on April 30 and May 1, to be followed by Synge's Riders to the Sea and Miller's A Memory of Two Mondays on May 3 and 4. Admission to these plays is absolutely free!

Saga Sez

The New Meal Plan

With the spring comes a lot of new things not the least of which is the new meal plan cost. A number of questions have arisen on this subject, particularly in the area of billing and extra books.

The pre-bill sent out by the University is for the entire school year, however, you will be billed for your meal plan by the semester. Also you will have the option of changing the number of extra books you purchase from semester to semester.

Extra books will cost 30 cents per coupon with a variety of book sizes available depending upon your individual needs.

Lastly an expanded line of non-food items will be offered in the stores along with the Steak Houses and other services.

Also, a note was received asking if the cost of the Simpson Dining Hall renovation is included in next year's meal plan costs. The answer is NO.

Federal law requires the setting aside of funds in a reserve account each year for dormitory/dining hall units that are financed by HUD monies.

These Funds are to be used to repair, maintain and upgrade the physical plant of the unit. The Simpson renovations costs will be paid for from these reserves and not from the food plan budget.

Last week's Cynic contained a query from a Buckham group concerning the policy of not giving change at the Den when coupons were spent. This is a point well taken. We'll not be giving change next Fall but we will be making every attempt to do the following: 1) clearly indicate what each item costs, 2) try to fix the portions so that a 40 cent sale price will be appropriate and 3) have a supply of items handy in the 10-15 cent range that are more useful nutritionally than candy and gum.

Car Wash This Saturday

Spring has finally arrived and now's the time to give your car a spring cleaning at the UVM Band Car Wash this Saturday, April 26th from 9:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. Two locations will be available, Ron's Sunoco at the corner of North Street and North Avenue, and in front of the Dairy Building on Main Street.

For a mere dollar your car can sparkle again.

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181
10% OFF WITH UVM ID.

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

FREE
This Friday (April 25)
The Latest Fling
A Whiz-me/whiz-you special
Buy the whizme platter for $1.00
(includes fries, burger, and sm. soda) and keep the whiz-me available at the Den, and Walter's, and Monday (April 28) at the Hub.
(Whiz-me is approved by the FDA for use as a plate)

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC

Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jensen
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyeth Kash
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Valle
News Editor . . . . . Mark Sawyer
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen W. Tanner
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeMike
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bodi
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell

Good Riddance To Thieu

The resignation of South Vietnamese President Nuygen Van Thieu is a fitting end to a corrupt regieme marked by scandals, black marketeering, ineffective political leadership, attempts to disgrace the United States, and gross neglect of the welfare of the Vietnamese people.

The United States has supported the corrupt Thieu administration for too long. We have sent Thieu "humanitarian" aid that never got to the oppressed people who so desperately needed it. President Ford has made reconciliatory gestures in the face of South Vietnam's imminent takeover by Communist forces but he knows there is no way Congress will tolerate wasting any more money on a country who demands money and bombers with one hand while stabbing us in the back with the other.

The attempts to evacuate refugees from Indochina are in themselves extraordinary. Probably nothing like it has ever been done before in this country.

We will not attempt to moralize on the repercussions of a Communist takeover of South Vietnam or Cambodia, but with Thieu gone and Congress firmly against sending U.S. forces and U.S. dollars to Indochina to continue this farce, perhaps the people will finally have the kind of government that they want.

M. M. H.
(Guest Editorial)

Raft Race Dilemma: Solution Necessary

This year's Winooski River Raft Race has raised doubts in the minds of many about the prospect of seeing another race next year. The safety of many rafters' lives due to an overload on the rescue services points out that the Raft Race has grown to be too large. Yet for thousands of students and members of the Vermont community, the race is a thrilling and important event that should not be stricken from the UVM tradition. It is a dilemma that must be solved in favor of sparing the Raft Race.

A number of factors contributed to the problems encountered at the race. 'Unpreparedness' typified each of them. Organizers were unprepared for early arrivals which created greater problems when crowds of unexpected spectators appeared. Rafters were unprepared for frigid, rising waters which chilled as many as fifty at once.

The race experience should provide an increased awareness for everyone in the power of the environment. We must be prepared to respect that power in the future. — Most importantly, to note that we coexist with our environment and are not out to conquer a river with a show of broken boards and stray barrels strewn across the riverscape, the result of a losing battle.

The fact that about fifty of the sixty entries to embark on the course finished successfully cannot be overlooked. Organizers cannot be culpable for high winds and icy waters. Spectators who crossed Interstate 89 to watch at the trestle and rafters whose debris cluttered the Winooski's banks must be responsible for themselves.

The solution may lie in greater restriction of entries next year and greater regulation of the types of rafts and the competency of their personnel or choosing a new site. In any case, the creativity and excitement of the raft race must be preserved.

S.T.

letters to the editor

Above And Beyond The Call

To Frederick A. Barrett, Chief of Security:

I think you ought to know of the extraordinary service one of your men, David Harvey, has recently rendered our University. He has, in the last few weeks, organized approximately fifty students into the highly enthusiastic and varied group which put on the Medieval Fair in Patrick Gymnasium on April 12. Every imaginable kind of activity suitable to a fair was arranged, from the staging of plays to children's games, from musical entertainments to provision of food. Mr. Harvey's total hours in preparing this huge undertaking are nearly incalculable in the several hundreds.

The Fair was a success. Three to four hundred people wandered its large area. Townspeople brought their children. Professors were delighted at the historical interest and research so obviously displayed. It was an event to delight in, and also to learn in.

It seems to me particularly fortunate that one of the University's non-academic people would get so involved with students' interest, and with a partly academic enterprise. This event has brought together the diverse parts of our campus in a common endeavor-an all-too-rare occurrence on this as well as other campuses.

And so I think it fitting that you be made aware of David Harvey's contribution to campus life this spring.

Sincerely yours,
James Howe
Associate Professor of English

Thanks For Support

To You,

B.B. King Concert was over, I wondered how I had done in the S.A. Presidential contest. Driving home, Barbara said, "Stalie Davis won." Perhaps, B.B. said it best..."The Thrill is Gone," I cried.

It took much effort and dedication by many people to run my campaign for S.A. President. I didn't win, but, when contemplating: was it worth it? I'd have to say yes. I'll let some of my friends give you the reason it was worth it:

1:25 a.m. Thursday

Dave,

I really don't know what to – I'm so very sorry you guys didn't win – You should have. Sorry – Nancy

Even in defeat,
There is victory,
In knowing you gave,
All you could...

Yea, from the heart –

Getting anywhere,
Especially to the top,
Is a long, lonely walk,
Amid the onlookers,
And these silent moments,
Wondering why you even tried

Yea, from the heart –
But, baby, you tried,
So take pride –
And let yourself ride,
Who else led the way?

Yea, from the heart –

The Simpson Night Owl

Wait till Next Year! – anonymous.

Everyone who helped me, thank you. Thank you 235 people who voted for me. You're all beautiful. You're why it was worth running for the office. Thank you poets for softening the blow of defeat.

Appreciatively,
David Schwartz

Wake Up AMERICA

To the Editor:

At the present time when so much is heard from the few, I think that it is my duty as an American to speak up and voice what I feel I have a right to voice – my opinion. I wish to reaffirm that I do not speak for everybody, but only for myself and those that feel as I do.

On Friday April 18, I went to the Patrick Gymnasium to hear Moshe Dayan speak on "The State of Affairs in the Middle East and Future Prospects for Peace." In his talk Mr. Dayan stated that it is in the best interests of the United States to continue sending arms and money to Israel, a dwarf among giants. Mr. Dayan asserted that the United States must, through this support, help Israel throw off those that oppress her – to help her remain a haven for all Semitic people of the world.

As an American, I could not agree more with Mr. Dayan, that Israel should remain an open home for all Semitic people (both Palestinian and Jew). However, when Oriental Jews are treated as third class citizens, and people are uprooted from their homes, it is here that I state that this form of Zionist expansion must cease.

I would like to state that I can not with a clear conscience donate money to a cause that openly oppresses people in this world. Living in the United States, where one is supposed to believe in freedom and democracy, has taught me, if nothing else, that all people should be given a chance to live, to breathe. I realize that the Jewish people have been the scapegoats of societies in the past, and yes, in the present. But why must one, in fighting for the rights and the lives of the Jewish people help Israel oppress others.

How can one justify the stealing of land that the Palestinians have inhabited for thousands of years? (True, they were given a choice conform to the Israeli way – a love it or leave it type of philosophy.) Above all this, how can one justify a situation such as exists in Israeli where the Jew in Power oppresses the Oriental Jew not in power?

I would like to ask all Americans (be they student, professor or average citizen) one question. Wouldn't it be better to build a society in the Middle East where all Semitic people are free to live and breathe in their own homes?

Until such a time, I feel that I could not, with a clear conscience, give any money to Moshe Dayan and his cause. Why should I have my tax dollars supporting a state that does the intolerable (namely oppression)? Why should the tax dollars of more than two hundred Americans support the cause of a very vocal minority? I think that it is about time that we wake up and stop promoting Zionist expansionism and start building peace and harmony for BOTH sides.

Above all I say, Wake up America, get up off the ground and deal with this situation in a justified manner.

S. Moore ('76)

Goodbye To UVM Catamount

To the Editor:

Good move by SAGA! We students of the Redstone campus would like to thank Mr. Fred Smith, Director of SAGA Food Service at UVM and Mr. Hans Puck, director of SAGA Foods on Redstone campus for making such a magnificent move by appointing Mr. Mike Dilmaghani as the manager of the Wright Dining Hall known as "The Hub."

Mr. Dilmaghani has been one of the unknown coordinators for infinite number of UVM's special events. He has been offering his valuable supervisory services at special occasions such as President Gerald Ford's dinner at Patrick Gym, Senator Aiken's dinner and the UVM Hockey Banquet at Simpson.

We'd like to give Mike our best regards for bringing the smiles back on the faces of the student body during this past semester.

Even though Mike is leaving our campus this coming May, we will always remember him as a UVM Catamount.

For Resident Advisors and students on Redstone Campus
Craig Miller

Recognize A New Cambodia

To the Editor:

On this historic day, we in the Vietnam Veterans Against the War/Winter Soldier Organization wish to express our profound sense of joy and celebration, and to extend our warmest congratulations to the heroic People of Cambodia and their leaders, Norodom Sihanouk and Khieu Simphan. In this unprecidented triumph of the human spirit over technology, the patriots of Cambodia have successfully perservered in the face of unbelievable hardships in winning their great victory against the US-CIA installed Lon Nol Puppet Regime.

US invasions, genocidal bombings, defoliation and billions in aid have all proved futile substitutes for the support of the Cambodian People who, from the beginning, rallied behind the call of their legitimate leaders against our governments determined efforts to intervene in, and subvert, the internal affairs of their sovereign country.

Through a strategy of forced urbanization implimented by terror bombings, ground attacks, and defoliation which caused indiscriminate death, maiming and starvation, our government and its puppet created the conditions necessary for raising an unwilling mercenary army of desperate Cambodians who couldn't survive physically in the countryside or economically in the cities where they fled seeking food, safety and a reprieve from the war. Lon Nol's army was primarily composed of refugees and the urban poor who had no visible alternative other than to join his army in order to feed their families. An army raised under such duress could hardly be expected to perform well in the field...it met those expectations. Desertions and defections became epidemic with whole units simply melting away or going over to the other side. In short, Lon Nol had no base of support for his cause of serving American interest.

Penom Penh has fallen, the traitors are fleeing, the liberation forces have been genuinely welcomed into the capitol as heroes, and there is no bloodbath! One by one the lies of America's "leaders" fly in the face of truth and reality. The pattern will be the same in Vietnam.

Our own revolution was the first of modern histories great "people's wars of national liberation" and had long been a source of inspiration for freedom loving peoples, including the Cambodians and Vietnamese. Yet the grieviences of the American colonialist were neither so severe as those of the Indochinese, nor their suffering so horrible in winning their freedom and independence. As we celebrate our own great revolution, should we not also be celebrating the heroic victories of the Indochinese Peoples? And, should we not be asking ourselves what alternatives we must pursue in order to regain our own political power which has been usurped by a new breed of tyrants in Washington? VVAW/WSO calls for the immediate recognition of the Cambodian Government and an end of all aid to the Thieu Regime.

Sincerely,
Dave Ross
VVAW/WSO

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, John MacDonald, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Dave Ryan, Peter Duquette.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Seralnick, Jay Williams, Paul Prior COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markovitz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Taves.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shanik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

S.A. Film Critic's Rebuttal

Dear Don Adler, SA Films Director,

At the time I wrote my article, I had in mind The Trojan Women as an admission-free, astronomically expensive Hepburn film. You showed this biggie on Saturday, March 15 but charged to see a 1934 Lugosi film. Please do not tell us that this adaption of the Greek play was rented for seventy-five dollars. But I was surprised, and please, to learn that the other Hepburn films are so reasonably priced. Though these are generally good movies, I think the low rental for these films says something about the number of people across the country who want to see them. The answer is of course not many.

Furthermore, you obviously missed the point I was trying to make, for I do not dispute the logic of charging for high rental films. Indeed, the main point of my polemic was that the less costly films, such as The Black Cat, ought to be shown free of charge, while the films which are fresh from the movie halls should pay for themselves. As for wanting to see all the movies, I have difficulty getting to see any of them because I live way off campus. The six movies I did come to were all Friday night horror films, and you charged for every one of them. I did not consider the poor prints, which your projector blurred, to be worth a dollar charge. You speak of trying to satisfy everyone, but you have not been too successful in your non-existent attempt to satisfy horror fans. Quite frankly, you have a very generous budget and should be able to stay within it.

If my comments were "gauche", yours were among the most haughty, and frantically defensive I have ever read. Your last slam about wishing to avoid causing me further embarassment by not comparing horror films with the other movies you have been showing is quite significant. It betrays your condescending attitude toward fantasy films which have long been recognized as some of the best films of the 1930's. Compare Frankenstein with most other films of the decade and you will find it to be among the best. Indeed, both Frankenstein and The Invisible Man were chosen for the "Ten Best" list by the New York Times in 1932 and 1933 respectively. I did say that Hepburn was box office poison, for she was voted this "honor" by the Motion Picture Distributors of America in 1938. Though Katherine Hepburn is a major artist, she and her movies have often been hard to take.

Note that I do not "condemn" SA Films, only their perverted sense of fairness. I would also like to thank the Cynic for printing my mini-reviews of the famous fright films. Finally Don, don't ever rent anymore worthless serials, like Flash Gorden, again.

Leonard E. Benoit
Class of 1975

S.A. Films Presents Its Side

Dearest Leonard,

You obviously missed the point of what I was saying. The rental of the Hepburn film was higher because it is more recent and a lot more in demand than The Black Cat, Dracula, etc. When you say "low rental for these films reflects the number of people who wish to seen them," you understand little about film rentals. Anyway, the rental on The Black Cat, The Mummy were even less expensive than the most inexpensive Hepburns.

If you are the horror film buff you say you are, why would a free charge less offend you than the one dollar you paid. The horror films we did get seem to be within the range of your favorite choices, yet that did not satisfy you. Reading some of the tabulations of our recent survey, by the way available in 101 Votey after each showing and in Billings lobby, I counted over fifteen people whose additional comments were complimentary. There wasn't one who disliked our choice of series. These people felt the "general choice of films have been excellent." I'll show them to you if you wish.

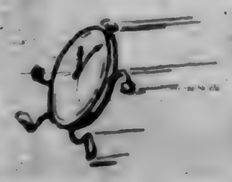
"My condescending attitudes towards fantasy films" leads me to believe ya don't know anything about previously shown SA Film series. The first one implemented in the Fall of 1973 was a Sci-Fi series, including Things to Come and Forbidden Planet. And if you do compare Frankenstein with the other films of the 1930's you'll find that it stands nowhere near the top films of the decade.

From an objective standpoint, films of other genres outnumbered horror films criterially. After the five or six good horror films were made, including Frankenstein, Dracula, King Kong, horror film quality declined rapidly with the production of highly unoriginal and opportunistic Son of..., Daughter of..., Mother of... sequels.

Personally, I do not find "Kathryn Hepburn movies hard to take." Her serious screen performances are among the most sensitive, while her comic roles are the most hilarious and enjoyable to watch. I guess you would rather watch Bela Lugosi's smile in Dracula than Kathryn Hepburn's in The Philadelphia Story. Contrary to your beliefs, Leonard, the Flash Gordon serial was rather successful.

Don Adler
SA Films
(Director in matters dealing with perverted senses of fairness)

P.S. Watch for The Sting, Chinatown, Gone With the Wind and more in 1975—76. Have a good summer, everyone.



All Things Cons

For Carolyn and Louis: Two who know the

by Larry Seiden

We are all aware that those of Oriental p practitioners of the Kama Sutra, consider th the shoulders and the head (from hereon in "neck") as the erogenic center of the body remain some of us having been baptized by V still regard the underarm as the flaming sensual olfactory longings. Being that this period of the year, it is necessary to burn previously hushed-up issue.

It is time to get serious about the phy that are blighting our social relationship speaking, these monuments to our never vehemence and desire are becoming more spring/summer weather starts to alter our with our annual shedding of the down an been the unveiling of a new crop of flowe them as passion flowers. Now isn't that "hicky" (hickee) or that ugly blotch of sensitive area of your neck. As has been s these saplings of amour are much more s that a zit on the end of your nose.

Yes friends, that distinguished status has made its official springtime debut. Du can be so crafty as to hide our medals of away in the upright folds of a turtleneck sw shaky to wear a turtleneck sweater when it time to discard the cloak of intensely physi it is time for hicky liberation. Let us sho really happens when the lights go out. giggling stops we could have the Wide W sorts cover our Invitational Hicky Champ break it down to the largest, the da endurance, with the crowning of the Crim around title. Could anyone beat the weeks, 3 inches and maroon?

"Aw gee, Ma, I really have no idea wh mark on my neck. Maybe it came from sh

"Uh huh, sure. Why don't you run u bandaids on it before your father sees it. think we're going to let you watch TV wi basement anymore. And think about wh

U.F

by Willy Pearson

With conviction that this paper's " Gallo and the United Farm Workers will respond to last week's 'Open Letter To has recently hired two new Public Relat York at an extra cost to them of $7,00 months alone, and that letter was expertise.'

(a) Gallo claims that their farm w paid workers in the continental Unite package of fringe benefits.'

FACT: The minimum wage fo Gallo-Teamster contracts

FACT: The minimum wage fo UFW-Almaden contracts

FACT: Under Gallo-Teamster and lettuce contracts pesticide control in procedures instituted by worker, and representati The Teamsters Union, are FACT: Under UFW contracts, them parathion (a nerve aldrin, and dildrin, are from use. Workers m protective clothing in pesticides, and cannot after 21 days.

FACT: Under UFW contracts Joseph Guimarra in the make specific charges f each ranch - a worker before he or she can be

FACT: Under UFW contra Workers Service Cente instituted, run, and st workers, which provide Huelga School; suppl children, many of w families under present crop. And the Cam handle 2,000 cases a m welfare cases, pol community, and ever translation into English

(b) Gallo claims that their cont Union were 'chosen by the Gallo fa that they cannot 'unilaterally break t

FACT: Gallo's 'contract' wit

tters to e editor

ke, Up AMERICA

...re when ...the few. ...ity to an ...up and ...a right ...I wish ...ot speak ...only for ...feel as I

...I went ...nuum to ...peak, on ...s in the ...Future ...In his ...that it is ...of the ...ontinue ...ney to ...gants ...hat the ...through ...l throw ...ther – to ...n for all ...ould ...I could ...th Mr. ...should ...for all ...(both ...owever, ...treated ...nt, and ...m their ...Fifiate ...Zionist ...e that I ...nscience ...ause that ...e in this ...United ...opposed ...m, and ...me, if ...people ...ance to ...ize that the Jewish people have been the scapegoats of societies in the past, and yes, in the present. But why must one, in fighting for the rights and the lives of the Jewish people help Israel oppress others.

How can one justify the stealing of land that the Palestinians have inhabited for thousands of years? (True, they were given a choice... conform to the Israeli way – a love it or leave it type of philosophy.) Above all this, how can one justify a situation such as exists in Israel where the Jew in Power oppresses the Oriental Jew not in power?

I would like to ask all Americans (be they student, professor or average citizen) one question. Wouldn't it be better to build a society in the Middle East where all Semitic people are free to live and breathe in their own homes?

Until such a time, I feel that I could not, with a clear conscience, give any money to Moshe Dayan and his cause. Why should I have my tax dollars supporting a state that does the intolerable (namely oppression)? Why should the tax dollars of more than two hundred Americans support the cause of a very vocal minority? I think that it is about time that we wake up and stop promoting Zionist expansionism and start building peace and harmony for BOTH sides.

Above all I say, Wake up America, get up off the ground and deal with this situation in a justified manner.

S. Moore ('76)

e To UVM Catamount

...AGA! We ...Redstone ...o thank ...rector of ...at UVM ...irector of ...Redstone ...such a ...ove by ...Mike ...anager of ...ll known ...has been ...known ...infinite ...s special ...ffering his ...services at special occasions such as President Gerald Ford's dinner at Patrick Gym, Senator Aiken's dinner and the UVM Hockey Banquet at Simpson.

We'd like to give Mike our best regards for bringing the smiles back on the faces of the student body during this past semester.

Even though Mike is leaving our campus this coming May, we will always remember him as a UVM Catamount.

For Resident Advisors and students on Redstone Campus
Craig Miller

...comes and encourages articles, columns, and ...terested students, faculty, and members of ...l material must be submitted no later than ...ore the Thursday of publication. Material ...mes will be withheld upon request. If you ...riting or perhaps curious about how things ... we are downstairs at Billings Center – or

MONT CYNIC

...rland, John ...e Sherwin, ...Ryan, Peter ...d Ajemian, ...Sault, Mike ...arth, Andy

...ndel, Larry ...rstock, Jay ...sor ...Peter Cobb, ...man, Ken ...e Perkins, ...Larry Broden, ...ian Colquhoun

PRODUCTION Rick Barnaby, Elly Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarabis

SPORTS Randy Bruce, Don Rose, Richard Rotkov, Pat Tawes.

ADVERTISING Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.

BUSINESS MANAGER Nancy Sherik.

...ions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or ... in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the ... of the University administration, faculty, or ... the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by ...umnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion ... majority of the members of the CYNIC ...l Board.

...shed yearly during the college year by the ... of the University of Vermont and State ...ural College. Editorial and Business offices in ...ings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone ...11. Deadline for notices is one week prior to ... publication.

...shed in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per ...ngle copy ten cents.

All Things Considered

Excuse Me But Is That A Pickle In Your Pocket?

For Carolyn and Louis: Two who know the discoloration of pain and can still smile.

by Larry Selden

We are all aware that those of Oriental persuasion, known practitioners of the Kama Sutra, consider the region between the shoulders and the head (from hereon in referred to as the "neck") as the erogenic center of the body. Yet there still remain some of us having been baptized by Madison Ave., that still regard the underarm as the flaming pit of desire and sensual olfactory longings. Being that this is the transitional period of the year, it is necessary to burn the light on this previously hushed-up area.

It is time to get serious about the physical disfigurations that are blighting our social relationships. Confidentially speaking, these monuments to our never-ending thirst for vehemence and desire are becoming more apparent as the spring/summer weather starts to alter our icicles. Coinciding with our annual shedding of the down and wool layers has been the unveiling of a new crop of flowers: let us refer to them as passion flowers. Now isn't that a lot nicer than "hicky" (hickee) or that ugly blotch of blood under the sensitive area of your neck. As has been scientifically proven, these saplings of amour are much more socially debilitating that a zit on the end of your nose.

Yes friends, that distinguished status symbol of affection has made its official springtime debut. During the winter we can be so crafty as to hide our medals of sweet submission away in the upright folds of a turtleneck sweater. But it is very shaky to wear a turtleneck sweater when it is 63 degrees. It's time to discard the cloak of intensely physical Saturday nights; it is time for hicky liberation. Let us show the world what really happens when the lights go out. Possibly when the jiggling stops we could have the Wide World of Sports and sorts cover our Invitational Hicky Championships. We could break it down to the largest, the darkest, and overall endurance, with the crowning of the Crimson Hicky for the all around title. Could anyone beat the French record of 2 weeks, 3 inches and maroon?

"Aw gee, Ma, I really have no idea where I got that funny mark on my neck. Maybe it came from shaving this morning."

"Uh huh, sure. Why don't you run upstairs and put some bandaids on it before your father sees it. And besides I don't think we're going to let you watch TV with that girl down the basement anymore. And think about what you're doing, you know that always leads to the harder stuff."

Ah yes that was safe at home. But now the sanctity of college offers spatial anonymity. Of course we all profess to be nonchalant about those gross irregularities in our blood clotting systems but we are aware of the caddy corners that still exist in dorms. Status being of all things, status, even Holmes could tell you the origins of evidence were not self-inflicted. It takes two to master missionary position.

Still I wonder how many of the collars I see daily are hiding something personal. A large discoloration that first brought a morning smile may bring then a stifled curse for "what are they going to say in the cafeteria? or in the classroom?" "I'll have to turn my head when the professor looks at me." It's funny how we advertise our mouths with lipstick and toothpaste but pay no heed to the damage these oral vacuums may do when left in the bite of those who can't control themselves.

("Pay attention to me. Keep control of yourself, larry, or you're going to do something I'm going to be sorry you did.")

So what? It's time to air our hickees. Hickees should be acknowledged on the society pages of the Free Press. We should scan Reader's Digest for "My Most Unforgettable Hicky" or Life's exclusive pictures (color) of man's first hicky on the moon (lunar drool). Wait patiently for Hollywood Gazette's "Cher's real story-I saw it in the mirror and it wasn't Sonny's" or Mad will tongue it with "The Lighter Side of Hickees". Please don't miss Walter Cronkite's daring expose on plastic hickees that can be transplanted in a doctor's office. ("Don't be the social outcast of your clique"). Leave it to science and advertising to market dyes so you can match the color of your hicky to your outfit. I'm sure Levis are working on a denim one now.

Keep in mind there are still many delicate, tender necks that remain untouched by passion's lips. So if you're wishing to break the ice with someone you yearn for, donate the trademark of fondness. Hopefully they will have the courage to display it. Keep your chapstick handy, you never know when you'll have that urge to do a friend in. And remember to say your prayers, E Pluribus Unum, That Richard Nixon is immune to them. Who would really want to spread a social distinction on his stubbled neck anyway?

Flaunt your hicky - wear a see through collar.

Inverview With Art Buchwald

"Humor Is Hostility"

by Richard Rasnick

(Ed. Note: Richard Rasnick is a reporter for the Student Life at Washington University in St. Louis, Mo., writing here for the College Press Service.)

R.R.: Do you find that you have always been a humorous person?

Buchwald: Yes - all the time.

R.R.: As a child?

Buchwald: Yes, I was the class clown and I was always getting into trouble when I was in school. And in the Marine Corps I got into trouble for being funny. All my life I was doing it and it has only paid off in the last few years.

R.R.: What did your parents think of you as a child?

Buchwald: Well, I had sort of a checkered career. I was a foster child. So my foster parents could not make heads or tails of me. And my father wasn't too sure about me either. At a very early age I went into my own fantasy world. Which is what you have to do if you are going to be a writer. You have to go into fantasy awfully early.

R.R.: Would it be appropriate to characterize your writing as political-social humor? Or how would you characterize your own writing?

Buchwald: A political cartoon in words. Instead of using a sketch I use my typewriter. But occasionally I write something that isn't political just to prove that I can do it. When I started out for the first fourteen years in Europe I wasn't writing political stuff, just humor about Europe.

R.R.: What type of journalistic devices do you use in your writing?

Buchwald: Usually I write dialogue because I like dialogue. If there is any formula involved it is to treat serious things lightly and light things seriously. I might treat the Fanny Foxx going into the Tidal Basin incident very seriously and I might treat aid to Vietnam lightly. It seems to work doing that.

R.R.: What purpose and function do you find humor and satire serve?

Buchwald: They relieve the tension. It's quite a life to laugh at and people do it in different ways. Comedians do it on television; other people do it on the stage, and I try to do it in writing. The whole thing is to try and make people feel good.

I don't have a real purpose in mind, because I wouldn't be doing it if I didn't get paid for it. It's the only way I can survive. It's all defense for me.

R.R.: Writing?

Buchwald: Yes. Humor is hostility. Getting it out of your system. I'm in a perfect position because everybody in this country is so angry and sore at everything and I'm one of the few people who three times a week can get it off my chest.

R.R.: But in a constructive way.

Buchwald: Well yes, but if you're destructive it doesn't bother me.

R.R.: Do you find that humor and satire, at least in your writing tends to expose and correct the foibles and prejudices of society?

Buchwald: I doubt it. I doubt it.

R.R.: Do you think that your writing makes people aware of them?

Buchwald: I don't think that deeply about it. All that I know is that I have to get out three columns a week and I never sit down and say "This morning I am going to save the world." I just sit down and say I've got to do a column and I better get it finished before lunch otherwise I'll have a lousy lunch.

R.R.: Do you think that this country now needs more humor than anytime since World War II or the Depression because of the great number of seriously unresolved problems?

Buchwald: Well, I wrote a column about that in which I said that there is a shortage of humor, and therefore we have to charge more for it. It used to be that a barrel of laughs was about four dollars, but now because of the shortage, Baker, Iron and Harpie have raised it to about $14 a barrel.

R.R.: So that in actuality humor does tend to aid the country?

Buchwald: I guess so. I haven't thought about it. But you are competing with Jerry Ford, the budget, and Congress when it comes to humor. It used to be you write the humor and they would write the straight stuff. Now they're writing humor and you're writing straight stuff.

R.R.: What is the actual process of writing a column? Do you have steps that you go through in turning one out?

Buchward: I read the papers and in the papers I see the story. And then it occurs to me I've got to do something on that story. And then I think very hard – maybe a day, maybe two days, maybe two minutes, how do I say that in a different way?

R.R.: Your schedule and format for writing – as to a specific time of day and location – is eclectic and varies from day to day?

Buchwald: I try to get it done in the morning so I can relax for the rest of the day.

R.R.: Do you go out and investigate all the subjects you are writing about?

Buchwald: No. No, I was up there on the Hill the other day, which was the first time I was up there in a long time. I just did a piece about... do you know the Bermuda Triangle? You've heard about it?

R.R.: Yes.

Buchwald: Well I did a piece about the Washington triangle between the White House and the Capital and the Jefferson Memorial. And all the bills and all the trial balloons and everything gets lost in the Tidal Basin, and are never heard from again.

U.F.W. Responds To Gallo Advertisement

by Willy Pearson

With conviction that this paper's 'epic battle' between Gallo and the United Farm Workers will soon be over, let me respond to last week's 'Open Letter To Cesar Chavez'; Gallo has recently hired two new Public Relations firms out of New York at an extra cost to them of $7,000,000 in the last four months alone, and that letter was an example of their 'expertise.'

(a) Gallo claims that their farm workers are the 'highest paid workers in the continental United States with the best package of fringe benefits.'

FACT: The minimum wage for field workers under Gallo-Teamster contracts is $2.95/hour.

FACT: The minimum wage for field workers under UFW-Almaden contracts is $3.10/hour.

FACT: Under Gallo-Teamster contracts (as in the grape and lettuce contracts with the same party), pesticide control in the fields, grievance procedures instituted by the union for a fired worker, and representation and participation in the Teamsters Union, are virtually non-existent.

FACT: Under UFW contracts, eleven pesticides, among them parathion (a nerve gas derivative), DDT, aldrin, and dildrin, are permanently banned from use. Workers must be provided with protective clothing in fields sprayed with pesticides, and cannot go into the fields until after 21 days.

FACT: Under UFW contracts, growers (eg. Gallo, Joseph Guimarra in the grape industry), must make specific charges to the union steward on each ranch- a worker is guaranteed a hearing before he or she can be fired.

FACT: Under UFW contracts, a National Farm Workers Service Center (NFWSC) has been instituted, run, and staffed by and for farm workers, which provides such benefits as: The Huelga School; supplemental education for children, many of whom move with their families under present conditions, from crop to crop. And the Campesino Centers, which handle 2,000 cases a month, and provide aid for welfare cases, police brutality in the community, and even language schools for translation into English.

(b) Gallo claims that their contracts with the Teamsters Union were 'chosen by the Gallo farm workers'; furthermore, that they cannot 'unilaterally break that contract.'

FACT: Gallo's 'contract' with the Teamsters, signed July 9, 1973, was a 'sweetheart' contract, with no worker participation. The so-called Teamster authorization cards, 'presented' to Gallo before the 30th, have never been verified by a third party, as was the case for the United Farm Workers.

FACT: It is true that Gallo's sweetheart contracts are 'legally binding', however: (1) there is past precedence for a company 'dropping' one union for another, and furthermore, (2) under AB 1, the Farm Worker's bill (see below), which Gallo refuses to support, those contracts are null and void.

(c) Gallo says that they will agree to third-party supervised elections if the Teamsters and the United Farm Workers are willing.

Query: Why did Gallo not negotiate in good faith with the UFW in the spring of '73? Why the false authorization cards?

FACT: The Teamsters stated that they would not be party to any 'Mickey Mouse elections.' (June 28)

FACT: Cesar Chavez publicly asked for such elections (carried in the Fresno Bee, May 21)

(d) Gallo castigates the United Farm Workers for not supporting the National Labor Relations Act, or an equivalent state law, as opposed to 'marches, boycotts, and demonstrations.'

FACT: Under the present NLRA, with the two anti-union Amendments attached to it (i.e., Taft-Hartley and Landrum-Griffin): (1) The company can file objections to all elections held under the NLRA, and appeal up to and including the five-man NLRA board itself, thus delaying election results until the harvest (in many cases one to two months), has passed. (2) The average time for a hearing with the NLRB is 316 days, and there is presently a back-log of 14,000 cases.

FACT: (1) Under the Tunney Bill, supported by Gallo, an automatic ninety-day cooling-off period preventing all strikes can be decreed by order of the President, if the crop is deemed of 'national importance.' (2) Gerald Ford and the Republican Party are not friends of the Farm Workers, but work much more easily with the anti-union Farm Bureau.

FACT: The United Farm Workers have proposed a bill before the California legislature and the entire Congress (AB 1), which:

(1) Requires 50 per cent of the workers on a ranch to file for an election.

(2) Requires elections seven days after such filings.

(3) Allows companies the right to file objections and appeals of an election after it is over and

(4) new elections must be held a maximum of three weeks later.

(5) Local courts cannot issue injunctions against strikers unless the company agrees not to employ illegal strikebreakers.

(6) Does not outlaw secondary boycotts, a needed tool against any Grower (Gallo) - Teamster collusion.

Gallo is feeling the effects of the Boycott: Business Week reports that their sales dropped 19 per cent during the 1974 year. With continued pressure and support from students across the country in not buying Gallo wines, we can expect Gallo's sales to drop even further, forcing them to negotiate contracts with the United Farm Workers union.

Viva La Causa!

L/LC PHOTOGRAPHY COOPERATIVE

PRINT SHOW
ROOM 218

8am-4pm
April 28 – May 2

"One year after I was operated on for cancer of the breast, David Sawyer fell in love with me."

Pat Sawyer, New York, N.Y.

"When I was told the lump that I found in my breast was cancer I thought my life as a woman was over. About a year after the operation I met David. A few months later we were married.

"And here we are, ten years later, living proof that cancer not only can be cured but that you can live happily ever after.

"Listen to me, life is so precious, so beautiful. Don't allow vanity to kill you. Learn breast self-examination and get regular checkups.

"And please, give to the American Cancer Society. We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime."

American Cancer Society

Photography by Color Florence

This space contributed by the publisher as a public service

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

LSD —Induced Vision Teaches Marino Guitar

A highly unique rock band performed live in concert at Burlington's Flynn Theatre Friday night, April 18. Mahogany Rush reassured the youth of Burlington that hard rock is alive and kicking as furiously as ever.

One distinguishing feature of the band is its size. Mahogany Rush remains as one of the few existing "power trips," consisting solely of an electric lead and bass guitar and drum set, a phenomenon that died with Cream and Jimi Hendrix years ago. As is customary with professional, three - man bands, mountains of speakers tower above each artist to compensate for the lack of a second lead instrument (a keyboard, rhythm guitar or both are usually adopted by bands for harmonizing purposes or for reasons of deficient individual talent). It is necessary therefore, that the lead guitarist dominate the music with profuse professional prowess. And here Mahogany Rush's second distinct feature enters.

Frank Marino learned to play from an acid trip.

Frank Marino has been playing the electric guitar for a mere five years and already has reached monumental fame and fortune as the leader of this band of Montreal origin. The band has just returned from a nation - wide tour as the opening act for Queen and are now headlining their own tour throughout Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois. Marino, in a psychic and fantastical tale, attributes his sudden success to the effects of LSD.

"It (success) is where I'm coming from and that's acid", Marino confesses. As a teenager Marino did a lot of acid. Once, he overdid it.

"I freaked out and ended up in the hospital", he tells. When Marino went in, he had never played the guitar in his life. Yet when he left, he could play with a proficiency that came very close to duplicating the music and technique of the late electric guitar genius, Jimi Hendrix.

Whether or not Marino saw himself as a reincarnated Hendrix while hallucinating in the hospital is part of the long and complicated story of Marino's recovery, which he himself seems to be piecing together still. The fact remains that this 20 - year - old prodigious guitarist gained his musical knowledge and skill from a vision, a dream, a sudden LSD-induced revelation.

"I do a lot less Hendrix in concert now than I used to", says Marino, though this was hardly evident in the recent local performance. "Red House", "Purple Haze", "The Star-Spangled Banner" and an extended, wandering jam, unmistakable reminiscent of Hendrix's spacey" style, were the highlights of the concert.

"I used to strangle myself with scarves", Marino says, referring to his former mode of dress, also an imitation of Hendrix and the costume he frequently appeared in. "I was satin and silk all the way." Marino wore a conservative, light-colored suit on the night of the Flynn concert in contrast to the loud and wild colors characteristic of Hendrix's and Marino's now-abandoned clothing fashions.

With the use of feedback, a wah-wah pedal and wah-wah bar on the guitar itself (devices and techniques Hendrix pioneered the exploration and development of), Marino perfectly imitated the lost and all but forgotten Hendrix style. He moved and contorted his body also in a way reminiscent of the late Stratocaster master, thrusting the guitar in a joust-like motion, twirling the instrument at crescendoes and even playing with his teeth during "The Star-Spangled Banner", all while evoking sounds of hurtling, whistling bombs and synthesized explosions from the guitar (which also is the same Fender model Hendrix owned and sported).

"I'm put down a lot for what I do", Marino states yet understandably feels no qualms about continuing, and this does indeed raise some vital questions. Is Marino justified in copying the Hendrix style? Does he regard himself as a true devotee to the late, great guitar master and see this as a method of reviving interest in the music of Hendrix, or is Marino recycling Hendrix material purely for commercial exploitation?

For this reviewer, who is a worshipper of all that Hendrix and his compositions stood for, Marino's act is sacriligious gimmickry. Though Marino has achieved an impressive feel for Hendrix's music and can adequately and pleasingly relay it, I cannot integrate the image of this long blonde-haired rock guitarist in 1975 interpreting the music of the black, afroed musician who assisted in originating a revolutionary music trend one decade ago.

S.A. 's Blues Artists Appear Saturday

Robert J. Lockwood

Muse Allisón

Luther Johnson

Junior Wells and Buddy Guy

B.B. King: Blues Master

B.B. King showed Memorial Auditorium listeners last Wednesday evening that blues is more than just a series of G, C and D chords played in succession. He showed us that blues is as developed and enjoyable a style as the jazz, classical or rock styles.

Although the mechanics of King's guitar techniques were not as impressively complicated as that of other guitar masters, the blues king proved a more dynamic performer than can ever be imagined.

"I expected a super-guitarist", commented a co-listener who plays guitar as a hobby four hours per day. "He was not that at all". King exhibited this expected nimbleness and quickness of fingering mostly in spurts towards ends of songs, breaking loose to cover the guitar neck with a cataclysm of notes just before bringing each number by the band to a halt.

Only B.B. King however, can make Lucille (the name he has christened every guitar he has owned since he first began playing professionally 29 years ago), whine, squeal, cry and giggle with the intense emotion and expressiveness he intends. When King plays, listeners feel exactly the emotions King is experiencing inside himself and we are easily induced to empathize wholly with the message he so accurately and powerfully conveys with his guitar alone.

King's main strength in guitaring lies in an often-used vibrato effect which makes a note tremble, echo and pulsate while sustained for many beats. He expertly bends strings, a favorite method of modern electric guitarists of all styles used to achieve a variety of moods. Yet King bends them with a touch and tact that only 29 years behind the guitar could have produced.

His band, consisting of an alto and tenor sax, trombone, rhythm guitar, piano, organ, bass and drums (comprising a group of nearly orchestral proportions), opened King's set without their leader, playing a spirited version of "Mellow Yellow" (an ancient Donovan tune) and "Ode to Billy Jo (McAllister)". From the start it was evident that these back-up musicians were well-matched to their leader's degree of talent. The second guitarist was given his customarily sole opportunity to solo before the King appeared, in an exposition of viable guitar excellence (he soloed once more, later, when King took time out to replace a broken string). The brass proved worthy as individual musicians

Vermont Cynic MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET

I Earthquake

II Shampoo

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON

I Capone

II Scenes from a Marriage

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET

The Great Waldo Pepper

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET

Walt Disney's: Escap
To Witch Mount[illegible]

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.

I Harry & Tonto

II Escape to Witch Mountain

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD

I Godfather Part II

II Time to Run

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights
or special showings

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
(TEN) 10 CENT NITE EVERY WEDNESDAY
★FEATURING★
APRIL 21-27 BETTER DAYS
April 28 - May 4 WIDE OPEN

SA FILMS PRESENTS

THURSDAY, APRIL 24
AN AMERICAN IN PARIS (1951) –
Gene Kelly, Leslie Caron
101 Votey – 7:30 – Free

FRIDAY, APRIL 25
KING KONG (1933) – Robert Armstrong, Fay Wray
7:30 & 9:30 –
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – $1

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
Retail outlet
FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS
145 EAST ALLEN WINOOSKI

Utah Phillips F[illegible]

UTAH PHILLIPS

by Aardvark

The "Golden Voice of the Great Southwest" – U. Utah Phillips will be the featured artist at the first annual UVM Folk and Bluegrass festival this Saturday at the Red Square Affair on the CBW green behind Bailey Library. (Rain site for the festival part of the Red Square Affair is Southwick gym.). This first annual Folk and Bluegrass festival has been developed as an experiment to demonstrate to the forces behind the Concert Bureau that a growing and receptive audience exists at UVM and in the Burlington area to support alternatives to

Book Review:

World [illegible]

by David Mandell

In 1969 Norman Mailer and Jimmy Breslin entered politics in New York City in a quest to win back the mayoralty from John V Lindsay. Regrettably, the two failed to win the Democratic nomination and were forced to take a back seat while Lindsay was re-elected. When asked how he felt about the electoral process Br[illegible] was mortif[illegible] any event [illegible]bats in N[illegible] Breslin's [illegible] reason so[illegible] people pr[illegible] ticket to [illegible] Breslin, [illegible] campaign[illegible] crowd. Br[illegible]

Edsel Pe[illegible]

by larry seiden

I used to think critics complained too much about the dearth of originality on the new vinyl. But after hearing a dozen or so new records every week I'm adding my chorus onto their song. The giants of the recorded groove (Clapton, Chicago, Jeff Beck) are all trying to grow new coats and all they're doing is exploring everyone else's fields without changing anything. It just can't be strawberry fields forever, everything must change. Maybe I better start with myself. Adaptation is the true note for survival

BLOW BY BLOW/jeff beck – Beck has given up his crown of roses and sustained thunder to further strenthen his claim as THE electric guitar player. George Martin, ex-Beatle producer, is on hand to spread his knowledge around t[illegible] some lust[illegible] Yes you [illegible] Beck is te[illegible] to the [illegible] McLaughl[illegible] guitarist [illegible] Les Paul[illegible] Wonder [illegible] few off [illegible] can't teac[illegible] else's tric[illegible] growin' [illegible]

TH[illegible]
EVERY [illegible]
It is a [illegible]
Those wh[illegible] this. Tho[illegible] post-Ber[illegible] more fu[illegible] The alb[illegible] balanced [illegible] is what [illegible] Slowhan[illegible] stagnan[illegible] (George [illegible]

....B.B. Kin[illegible]

and val[illegible] complim[illegible] tone of [illegible]

Kin[illegible] followin[illegible] opener[illegible] Lucille [illegible] brown [illegible] subtle [illegible] suits an[illegible] his ban[illegible] the m[illegible] musicia[illegible] umes M[illegible] visited[illegible] song-f[illegible] Know [illegible] "Living [illegible] and I[illegible] Thrill [illegible] the BI[illegible] Loves

LITTLE FI[illegible] BOOK[illegible]
Largest Paperba[illegible]
Complete [illegible]
Small presses & [illegible]
40 Church St Burlington
Essex Jct Shopping Center Essex Junction

ar Saturday

d Buddy Guy

ERAGE
AREHOUSE
Retail outlet
NTASTIC SELECTION
BEERS, ALES, AND RICAN & IMPORTED WINES
GREAT SAVINGS
145 EAST
WINOOSKI

Utah Phillips Featured at Folk & Bluegrass Festival

UTAH PHILLIPS

ROSALIE SORRELS

by Aardvark

The "Golden Voice of the Great Southwest" – U. Utah Phillips – will be the featured artist at the first annual UVM Folk and Bluegrass festival this Saturday at the Red Square Affair on the CBW green behind Bailey Library. (Rain site for the festival part of the Red Square Affair is Southwick gym.). This first annual Folk and Bluegrass festival has been developed as an experiment to demonstrate to the forces behind the Concert Bureau that a growing and receptive audience exists at UVM and in the Burlington area to support alternatives to star oriented rock groups manufactured by record companies and AM and FM radio stations. It is the hope of the organizers of this modest festival that next year a big two day festival can be held at UVM.

U. Utah Phillips is no stranger to this campus having given a benefit for the President "Fraud" reception committee last October 7 outside of Patrick Gym and having made an appearance at the Simpson Hall Coffee House. Both times he impressed audiences with the diversity of his material and the humor and pathos behind his thousand and one tall tales, jokes and stories.

For those of you who are asking who the hell is Utah Phillips, I'll let Luke Baldwin describe him to you. (Luke wrote the cover notes on Phillips' first album.)

"Utah Phillips? Bruce Phillips? I guess Utah is the best known of the two, the one I first met, the one people really talk about." He first showed up in the East a few years ago, wearing buckskin pants, raising hell and flipping knives around with a reckless abandon that scared a few people pretty good, but never seemed to lose him any friends. He's the guy who for the last few years had lied and punned his way through an unending string of folk festivals, coffeehouses and bars. But Bruce is the man who writes the songs. Utah drinks the whiskey. Bruce has the ulcer. It is Bruce Phillips who has done the real bumming, organizing, gandy dancing and dish washing. But it is Utah's great sense of romanticism that turns hard times into good ole' days, that lets a man laugh at himself, that turns a freezing – ass – cold boxcar rattling through Wyoming into an air conditioned, streamlined express cruising through majestic mountains."

Some people think "Utah" Bruce Phillips is a combination of Mark Twain, Will Rodgers and Woody Guthrie. This founder of the Utah Science Fiction League and Intermountain Rocket Society; this professor of poetry, IWW organizer, Korean War veteran, railroad expert and student of ancient Chinese dynasties is the featured artist to be sure, but not the only performer.

Also appearing will be Vermont's most popular blue grass band – Banjo Dan and the Mid-Night Plough Boys with Dan and Willy Lindner on banjo, guitar, mandolin and vocals. Big Al Davis accompanies them on bass, vocals and jelly fish guitar. A well known Vermont chicken and pig farmer, Big Al is sometimes referred to as the backbone of the band. The other member is Pete Tourin on vocals, bass and viola da gamba. Their first record is out on Philo Records called Snowfall.

Philadelphia is being represented by a former sideman of Utah Phillips – Saul Brody, a very fine "harp" and guitar player who has done studio work for a number of recording artists (i.e. Jim Ringer). Saul is easily recognized by the ammunition belt he wears that is filled with all kinds of harmonicas. A familiar figure on the Folk Festival and Coffeehouse circuit, Saul has an unusually varied repertoire that includes traditional music, blues, bluegrass and a medley of old

(continued on page eight)

Art Horisons

Clarence Schmidt, Part II

by Mark Seratnick

The current exhibit at the Fleming "Clarence Schmidt Shrines and Architectural Environments" offers most of the remaining art pieces from Schmidt's twenty-year effort to shape his environment. As mentioned last week, a series of fires from 1968–1971 destroyed his work and now little remains of Schmidt's colossal environment. Therefore, the documentation that was fortunately taken over the years by the organizers of the exhibit – Professor William Lipke and Gregg Blasdale, is important not only for its putting Schmidt in perspective within the contexts of Grass Roots Art, but it also conveys the life of one hell of an interesting man.

Schmidt was a 'back to nature' man thirty years before it became fashionable. In 1938, he left New York City and moved to Woodstock, New York. He constructed a log cabin called "Journey's End" from railroad ties. Later, it was transformed into a tar and cracked glass covered structure which served as the foundation for further additions and finally culminated in the massive seven-story structure that became part of his shaped environment. The house was fashioned to blend into its site with the shape being forced to conform to the topography of the mountain.

Words would be an inadequate description to describe the chronological development of Schmidt's environment. The large photo-murals, slide show, and the keynote of the exhibition, the catalogue, are far better conveyors' of Mr. Schmidt's development. The catalogue, illustrated in color as well as black and white, is crucial to the exhibit for a number of reasons. First, it is a pictorial as well as descriptive analysis and biographical material is provided to give an accurate picture of Schmidt. Although Schmidt looks more like a Santa Claus figure, he actually had a talent for articulating himself in writings concerning his goals and reasons for making his art which are provided in part in the catalogue. "I've got to live to be 185 to complete what I want to do and I'll startle the world with what I'm going to say and do." Hoping his work to benefit society, Schmidt said "If it could only help society, that's all... I'll leave it here for posterity. I'd rather leave things here. It's like a child of mine... It's a dedication on my part... I didn't live in vain if this takes the edge off a person's trials and tribulations.

SPS Photo by Bob Gayde

Since the photo-documentation is the only means to reproduce what has been destroyed, the catalogue is important in giving the public the only present means to view his ambitious work. In this respect, the organizers of the exhibition have been very noble in attempting to emphasize the importance of the catalogue by offering it for cost. That's right, for cost! The price is a mere two dollars and if you were to purchase it in a major museum without subsidation, the price would be closer to eight dollars. Therefore, I can't emphasize enough the importance of the catalogue to the exhibit. After reading it, a second visit to the exhibit will put things in much better focus and the viewer will come away with the feeling that he understands the intentions of Mr. Schmidt better than by just viewing the exhibit minus the catalogue.

In addition to the remarkable documentation by Professor Lipke and Mr. Blasdel, they have also done us a service by placing Mr. Schmidt within the larger context of Grass Roots Art in a fine essay entitled "The Perception of Primitivism." It places Schmidt within the primitivist art category because he had no academic art training and was naive to the 'finer styles' of the century. It also notes that Schmidt's work was not ignored by the art world when such luminaries as Henry Gelzhalder, Alan Kaprow and Lawrence Alloway came out to see what this strange man was assembling in the hills of Woodstock. As Professor Lipke notes, Schmidt's life and art stand as one of the paradigms of the Grass Roots phenomenon." Even Schmidt's 'sculptured environments,' which contained everything from aluminum foiled trees, The Silver Forest, plastic dolls, human rubber face masks, broken glass and mirrors, a seven storied ziggarut shaped structure, and architectural shrines surprised Schmidt sometimes, "Look! Look! Look! God Almighty, has anyone living or dead done anything like this? Would you believe that I done all this?"

Book Review:

World Without End Portrays Life of Struggling Policeman

by David Mandell

In 1969 Norman Mailer and Jimmy Breslin entered politics in New York City in a quest to win back the mayoralty from John V. Lindsay. Regrettably, the two failed to win the Democratic nomination and were forced to take a back seat while Lindsay was re-elected. When asked how he felt about the electoral process Breslin replied that he was mortified to participate in any event which caused the bars in New York to close. Breslin's remark represents the reason so many "respectable" people preferred the Lindsay ticket to that of Mailer and Breslin. Not catering his campaign to the country club crowd, Breslin exhibited a style which he continued in his recent book World Without End, Amen.

World Without End, Amen has been criticized by many reviewers as vulgar and senseless. Behind this criticism lies another reason. Breslin's characters are real people with human emotions. Unlike the authors destred by ivory towes literary editors, Breslin writes frankly and bluntly. He is concerned with creating a realistic portrait of men and women; the main theme behind his book. World Without End, Amen follows the life of Dermot Davey, a New York policeman. Depressed and frustrated he turns to liquor and is on the brink of destruction. Ultimately the scene shifts to Northern Ireland, where amid the violence and destruction of that religious conflict he finds his father. Davey's world is completely violent, and survival, both physically and spiritually, is a continuous struggle. Life consists of many. Dermot Daveys. The Dermot Daveys aren't found at exclusive country clubs and don't receive invitations for Senator's cocktail parties. Critics and writers tend to stay away from the characters and settings employed by Breslin. After all, a Dermot Davey doesn't play golf or tennis at the local club. Worst of all Davey's descendents didn't come to America on the Mayflower or become local bankers.

World Without End, Amen is not likely to be remembered years from now. It does however mark the emergence of Jimmy Breslin as a major writer. Breslin is concerned with life and people. Staid scenes of rustic mountains and farmlands don't fascinate him. Rather, the people who make the country move interest and touch Breslin. For this reason World Without End, Amen appeals to some and is totally foreign to others. Mired in the Yankee tradition which castigates displays of emotion, they are incapable of appreciating Breslin's honesty.

With this review, your humble book critic puts his pen aside for another season. Looking back at a rather brief but hopefully not innocuous career, all one can do is repeat an early question of Jimmy Breslin's: Can't Anybody Here Play This Game?

Edsel Peacock's Guide to Recent Rock Recordings

by larry seiden

I used to think critics complained too much about the dearth of originality on the new vinyl. But after hearing a dozen or so new records every week I'm adding my chorus onto their song. The giants of the recorded groove (Clapton, Chicago, Jeff Beck) are all trying to grow new coats and all they're doing is exploring everyone else's fields without changing anything. It just can't be strawberry fields forever, everything must change. Maybe I better start with myself. Adaptation is the true note for survival.

BLOW BY BLOW/jeff beck – Beck has given up his crown of roses and sustained thunder to further strenthen his claim as THE electric guitar player. George Martin, ex Beatle producer, is on hand to spread his knowledge around the studio. He adds some lustre to this jazz album. Yes you heard me right, Jeff Beck is trying to add his name to the clouds of Coryell, McLaughlin, Benson, etc., This guitarist extrordinaire turns his Les Paul loose on 2 Stevie Wonder tunes, a Beatles tune, a few off his pen. Who says you can't teach an old dog someone else's tricks. (B, a grown man's growin' colors)

THERE'S ONE IN EVERY CROWD/eric clapton – It is a matter of expectation. Those who liked 461 will like this. Those who think anything post-Derek is drek will have more fuel for their argument. The album is a meticulous, balanced production, and that is what you expect from ol' Slowhand. But it is also sterile, stagnant and predictable. George Terry's chicken scratch rhythm guitar holds the album together and Yvonne Elliman's voice is still worth two wet dreams, and she's stepping out more as a lead vocalist. Other than that it's an album of church music, blues and reggae and the best word to sum it all up is mellow. (B-, definitely not a bad boy anymore colors)

CHICAGO VIII/chicago – They have never been one of my favorite bands and nothing changes here except the number. Chicago has always relied more on a total sound than on good songwriting or talent. This band still has a bad case of stunted growth. Call it greenback complacency. I mean when you're getting fat on minimal effort, why toy with success? So here we have another Chicago album and it has a couple of hit singles and the rest is just that, the rest. I admit though I am glad to see Terry Kath has found that you can bend a note and sustain it at the same time, provided you don't try to slur more than one note together. These paupers try so hard to be kings and all they can show is a diamond jester's crown. P.S. There is nothing more trashy than Harry Truman nostalgia. (C, like Richard Daley, institutional colors)

HAIR OF THE DOG/nazareth – One of the most popular bands in Canada and Britain, although no one knows Nazareth here. So while they score gold elsewhere, they remain too heavy to pound away on the mainstream of American commerciality. On their 3 previous albums they have shown themselves to be excellent interpreters of other folk's material (i.e., Joni Mitchell, Little Feat, Yardbirds) but their originals were lacking in pizzaz. On Hair that all changes. They still disguise Nils Lofgrin's "Beggars Day" in their own style, but their 7 originals are snappy, crackass, raw, drunk, rowdy rocking and hard core to the bone. Their fuzz boxes are mean, nasty and for real. Dan McCafferty sounds like he sandpapers his vocal chords before he sings. The band is getting their manure together. Best cuts are "Miss Misery", "Love Hurts" and very competent "Beggars Day". "Please Don't Judas Me", the least strong of the songs, sounds like a thin slice of the Stones' "Play With Fire." (B, this dog doesn't need a leash colors)

WHERE THE GROUPIES KILLED THE BLUES/lucifer's friend – My pre-judgment was: with a title like that, it had to be halfass or halffast. I was right. It's a German band on a King Crimson extravagance—off meter, space, excursion songs and on the whole a very progressive album. Like Steely Dan, penetrating lyrics written in black ink, except twice as cryptic. John Lawton, though not a Jon Anderson (of Yes), has a strong voice and delivers his vocals at breakneck speed which matches the frentic pace of the music. The songs are all very good except they all arrive at the same temperature. This is their second album and their experience in a studio shows off for the production and stereo spacing is excellent, though this is not an album for all tastes. (C+, an electric strudel colors) rhythm guitar, piano, organ, bass and drums (comprising a group of nearly orchestral proportions), opened King's set without their leader, playing a spirited version of "Mellow Yellow" (an ancient Donovan tune) and "Ode to Billy Jo (McAllister)". From the start it was evident that these back-up musicians were well-matched to their leader's degree of talent. The second guitarist was given his customarily sole opportunity to solo before the King appeared, in an exposition of viable guitar excellence (he soloed once more, later, when King took time out to replace a broken string). The brass proved worthy as individual musicians and valuable collectively as a complimentary addition to the tone of B.B.'s blues.

....B.B. King Performance

King walked on stage following the two instrumental openers, bearing a brown Lucille to coincide with his brown jacket and trousers, in subtle contrast to the black suits and white shirts worn by his band members (they were the most primly trimmed musicians seen in Burlington since Mercer Ellington and Co. visited). Ensuing B.B. King song-favorites included "To Know You is to Love You", "Living in the Blues" (Parts I and II), "Caledonia", "The Thrill is Gone", "Why I Sing the Blues", "Someone Really Loves You" and "I Like to Live the Love".

The voice of B.B. King is used in his music as much as his guitar and in fact serves as significantly as a second instrument would to him. And his vocal quality is no less gutsy and expressive than his guitar-playing. It is deep, low and rich, perfectly suited to the lyrics of his compositions.

With the trinity of his vocal quality, lyric messages and guitar technique, B.B. King stands as a masterful artist who demonstrates that blues don't have to make the listener respond bluely. On the contrary, B.B.'s blues make the listener want to sing them back to the King on stage.

Condom Boutique Opens

SEATTLE (EARTH NEWS) – The Zero Population Growth organization, dedicated to limiting population expansion, has gone into the retail business here, selling – but what else? – condoms.

The organization opened what they call a "contraception boutique," specializing in just about every sort of non-prescription method under the sun to avoid unwanted pregnancies. The business is operated as a non-profit enterprise, and so can sell its wares at substantially lower prices than the drugstores down the street.

Julie Forbes, manager of the shop, claims it's the only one of its kind in the country. She says the business will also get into free family counseling and a referral service for the community. The name of the shop: "The Rubber Tree."

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZ
134 North St.

SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
EVERY WEDNESDAY!
All You Can Eat! SPAGHETTI $2.65
All You Can Eat! PIZZA $1.35
EVERY THURSDAY!
W.I.N. NITE - 10% off ENTIRE MENU
(Beverages Excluded)
from 7:00 P.M. until Closing
HAPPY HOUR DAILY 5:00 'til 7:00 P.M.
OPEN TILL 4:00 A.M. on FRI & SAT.
College Students Welcome!

Get off on the DOUBLE e-z wider
Why take the time to roll with two papers, and lick twice for one smoke? With double-width e-z wider you roll one, lick once and you're off! There's no faster easier way to roll your own. And there's no better gummed paper made. So roll with e-z wider and get off on the double.
© 1975 robert Burton associates, Ltd

The Godfather: Part II...

by Sandy Campbell

Do the six Academy Awards for this movie merit its viewing? Were they earned because of the relevance and entertainment ability of this movie or the overwhelming success of the original Godfather?

Do you remember how the blend of bloody violence and the internal "Mafia traditions" translated you to the screen during your first viewing of the original Godfather? Do you remember how easy it was to second guess Vito Corleone and to flow with the rapidly expanding expose of the sanguinary exploits of a hypothetical "Mafia family"? If you didn't see the original movie you've lost out and if you have, you can forget about the aforementioned niceties if you plan on enjoying the Godfather Part II.

To fully appreciate Godfather II you must be prepared to deal with it as a movie which requires close attention, unlike the original Godfather which demanded it.

The movie begins with a powerful dichotomy of symbolism as seen through the eyes of young Vito Corleone. It deals first with the cruel injustice of the Sicilian "Black Hand" and then transgresses to an awe-inspired view of America, symbolized by the Statue of Liberty.

The liberal use of gutteral Sicilian with adequate sub-titling tends to dilute the intensity of the first 25 minutes of the film, but the powerful imagery, backed up by the same type of shotgun butchery prevalent in the original film, succeeded in sustaining a background and basis for this movie.

The opulent sets, for which an Academy Award was presented for art design, provided an excellent and enlightening contrast between the "Little Italy" section of New York where Vito Corleone, the original Godfater, initiated the "business" and the quasi-modern, near feudal estate where his son and heir, Michael Corleone, continued administration of his father's "family".

A Necessary Conclusion

Unfortunately, the transitions from one era to the next were sometimes sloppy and confusing. To fully comprehend the director's implied meaning at the end of each flashback sequence, a viewing of the original Godfather is mandatory.

If one reads the book, you will realize that making this movie was probably a necessity for Mario Puzo, the author, and Frances Ford Coppola, the director of the two Godfathers.

The second movie fills in the gaps and butresses the explanations that were only hinted or intimated in the original Godfather.

The Godfather: Part II allows Puzo to bring before the mass audience the less dramatic, but equally important facets of the original book which, due to the time factor involved, could not be included in the original movie.

Cashing in on a successful idea, Puzo and Coppola combined their talent to extend beyond the book and carry the characters to a more updated conclusion. In doing so, the author/director team chose to stick with the successful structural techniques and sequence of events utilized in the first film. The similarities include an opening scene party which, in fact, is used as an excuse to get underworld associates together, under cover, so that the "Don", Michael Corleone, can conduct "family" business.

Also carried over from the first film was an elaborate though confusing series of events leading to a spate of "necessary" killings at the conclusion of the movie. If you're a "gore and violence" fan, it's a long time to wait (nearly 3 hours) for the inevitable.

Are 6 Academy Awards enough? If you've seen the original movie or read the book, then this movie will provide entertainment worthy of its awards, as the logical conclusion of a sequel. If you haven't dealt with either the book or the original Godfather, prepare yourself for a somewhat entertaining, but equally confusing, 3 hours in an uncomfortable chair.

Pestle Charming, Superior Show

by Peter Campbell

The theater department's new production, Knight of the Burning Pestle in every way a pleasure. With a charm delightful to succumb to, this seventeenth century comic-farce takes its audience to an enchanted inner world that has been trecked only by a few (Tolkien, Lewis Carroll, and Shakespeare's Mid-Summer Night's Dream come most readily to mind.) The play concerns an acting troupe who present a typical entertainment of the time, about a pretty girl (Sarah O'Neill) destined to be married off by her tyrannical father (Peter Kurth) to a strutting fop (Kevin Marconi), while she secretly loves another (Bill Jameson) who was born into less fortunate circumstances. This play-within-the-play is viewed by a London grocer (Chip Towers) and his wife, (Sarah Brooke) who try to manipulate the play to fit their own view of how things should be. Immediately they insist that their apprentice "Ralph" (Jon Bourne), a good natured lout, get a piece of the action. He is consequently dubbed "Knight of the Burning Pestle," a Don Quixotieish fellow who, with his master's and mistress's encouragement, manages to bumble in and out of the play with entertaining results.

This delightfully chaotic plot is amplified by some fine theatricality. The dancing, singing, and accompanying music are precise performances that draw the line between fulfillment and excess at just the right point. Technically, this production is superior as well.

The costumes (designed by Christianson and Reit) are not only beautiful, their beauty drew one into the fantasy. likewise, the set (designed by Lisa Devlin and constructed by Patrick Ort), which has the kind of inventiveness and beauty one associates with a rare Swiss toy.

Finally, I would like to credit everyone in the cast with strong and consistent acting. Though I personally enjoyed the eternally competant Chip Towers and Sarah Brooke, as the grocer and his wife, Jon Bourge as "Ralph" and Melanie Donovan as the scolding "Mistress Merry weather" the most, I really cannot remember when I saw a cast work so well together. My congratulations to Pestle's director, James Wimsatt, and all for a superior show.

Knight of the Burning Pestle runs through this weekend, so if you are interested in good theatre, good fantasy, good comedy, or just a good two hour mind massage, then Knight of the Burning Pestle is for you.

Folk And Bluegrass Festival

(continued from page seven)

Everly Brothers hits.

The second bluegrass group appearing will be a six piece band from the Catskill Mountains in New York. Fiddle guitar and five-string banjo combine with string bass, mandolin, and dobro guitar in playing material ranging from traditional Southern Mountain tunes to contemporary vocal harmonies and novelty numbers that have been billed as a "Blue-Grass Music version of the Mothers of Invention." Also featured is the hammered dulcimer, an ancient instrument resembling the zither. Bottle Hill has an album out on Biograph called Rumor In Their Own Time.

Jerry Jenkins and his contra dance band hail from the Albany, N.Y. area and in addition to being well known for their playing at many contra dances also has a growing reputation for their familiarity with traditional music. An unusually good sound!! They will be finishing up the afternoon with a contra dance around 5:30 or so.

Female Folkist Plays Sat.

Rosalie Sorrels is the only woman performer appearing Saturday. She is a good friend of Jerry Jeff Walker, Hunter S. Thompson and Utah Phillips whom she is presently touring with.

Originally from Boise, Idaho, she is a singer and guitarist of proven ability (she has three records out, one on Folk-Legacy, one on Sire Records and her latest on Paramount) whose stories prefacing her songs are just as much a part of her as the songs themselves. Stories of being on the road and the people she has come to know and love are touching, funny and real. They force the audience to deal with her as a person rather than an "image" or a "star".

Saturday's FREE Folk and Bluegrass Festival has been organized by an ad hoc committee of people interested in exposing people to some of our vanishing musical heritage without the inhibitions of rip-off prices. Co-Sponsored by the SA Concert Bureau, the festival is part of Saturday's Red Square Affair which is raising money for the Burlington Urban Youth Center. Starting time is around noon for this FREE afternoon of music. If you're feeling bad about getting something for nothing, you can do an anti-rain dance and pray for sunshine!!

Mem. Aud. Closed To Rock

Because of extensive damage inflicted upon Burlington's Memorial Auditorium last Wednesday during B.B. King's performance, there will be no more rock concerts held at the auditorium.

"The kids act like maniacs, not human beings", one auditorium official heatedly cited as the reason for the concert hall's closing.

Fifteen college and high school students reportedly were positioned on the roof and others on the ground throwing rocks at windows following the start of Wednesday's concert. Usually, kids smash windows in the process of sneaking into the auditorium but rarely vandalize with malicious intent. Surprisingly, the vandalistic occurrence was not evident to B.B. King's audience during the performance. Neither sounds of breaking glass nor loud noises were heard by those listening to the concert.

Memorial Auditorium will from now on house only events of a more conventional nature that draws predominantly older, more mature crowds. Boxing and wrestling matches, in addition to the Lane Series' classical concerts and theatrical productions, will continue to be scheduled but the twang of electric guitar strings or the unflagging beat of a bass drum shall be heard...nevermore.

Ultimately, the vital question arises as to where future rock concerts will be held, if at all. Memorial Auditorium is Burlington's sole facility for housing large-scale musical events. In a town comprised largely of youthful music lovers, this recent closing of the doors to rock is unbelievable and unrealistic—both esthetically and economically.

Earthquake Is A Gimmick

by Jay Williams

I've just gotten around to seeing Earthquake! and the only part of it I care to criticize is a gimmick called sensurround. Now I am one for new gimmicks but all this sensurround thing did for me was cause my stomach to crave more popcorn. Could be that's what movie house proprietors across our nation anticipate because their popcorn costs 60 cents a cup. I won't tell you how much the candy costs. I think you already know.

The overgrown city of Los Angeles gets it and my friend Charleton Heston is the man indirectly responsible. He's an architect who builds skyscrapers that shake loose from their foundation when accosted by an earthquake. He also grunts out a love affair with Genevieve Bujold after his own marriage goes on the rocks (His wife is clobbered by a boulder.) Typical B-picture. Although it is not a cheat like The Poseidon Adventure was.

World's Most Complete Hi-Fi & Electronics Center

LAFAYETTE RADIO ELECTRONICS ASSOCIATE STORE

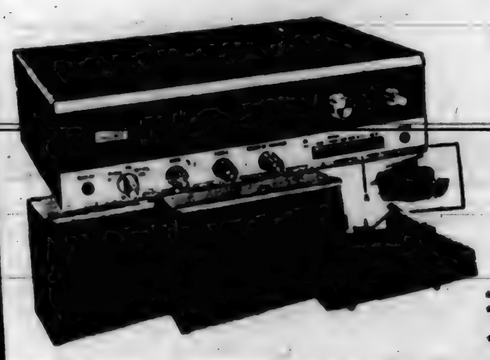
157 Pearl St., Essex Jct.

Sale Prices In Effect Thru Sat., March 22

A WORLD OF SOUND AT DOWN-TO-EARTH SALE PRICES!

We reserve the right to limit quantities

LAFAYETTE Criterion PICKERING Garrard



SAVE

Lafayette-Garrard-Pickering-Criterion Stereo System — Save a BUNDLE on Fine Sound

Great system for apartments, smaller setups where high power is not needed. The LR-200A stereo FM-AM receiver is a fine performer with excellent credentials: tuning meter; stereo light; tape monitor; speaker selector; all the inputs and outputs you need for fine stereo sound from any source. The Garrard SLX2 used for this stereo sound from any source. The Garrard SLX2 turntable is a popular model with every feature for fine record play — it comes with a base and installed Pickering P/ATE-1 elliptical magnetic cartridge. And the Criterion 333 speakers make any shelf sound great — each has an 8" woofer and 3" tweeter for stirring wide-range sound. And, of course, you get the plugs, cables and wires you need for fast, easy setup.

SAVE $84.75 from individual component prices

• SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
• LAFAYETTE HI-FI COMPONENTS GUARANTEED 2 YEARS
• CRITERION SPEAKERS GUARANTEED 5 YEARS
• 60-DAY EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES

If Bought Separately, $336
YOU SAVE $84.75

$289.95

SAVE

Here's Stereo for '75 from Lafayette — Featuring our new LR-310 Stereo FM-AM Receiver

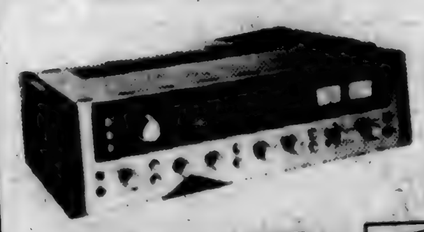
A fine stereo system for setups where extra power is not needed. The LR-310 puts out 12.5 watts RMS per channel (into 8 ohms from 20-20,000 Hz at 0.8% THD). It has the features you need for truly excellent stereo reproduction: like front panel tape out, monitor, main and remote speaker outputs for a very sophisticated setup. The Garrard SLX-2 turntable is complete with base and a Pickering P/ATE-1 elliptical stylus stereo cartridge. It plays records quite nicely.
The Criterion 333 acoustic-suspension speaker systems have an 8" woofer and a 3" tweeter for fine full-range sound reproduction. They're walnut-finished and great for shelf mounting. Cables and hookup wire too. Stereo sound, savings and satisfaction in what you get at Lafayette.

SAVE $57.00 from individual component prices

• SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
• LAFAYETTE HI-FI COMPONENTS GUARANTEED 2 YEARS
• CRITERION SPEAKERS GUARANTEED 5 YEARS
• 60-DAY EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES

If Bought Separately '356
YOU SAVE '57

$299



SAVE

Lafayette-Garrard-Pickering-Criterion Stereo System. Save another BUNDLE on Fine Sound!

The heart of this matched system is our new-for-'75 LR-3500 AM/FM stereo receiver, regularly $399.95 by itself. The specs are fantastic: 67 watts RMS per channel power, both channels driven into 8 ohms; from 20 to 20,000 Hz; 0.5% total harmonic distortion; all solid state; phase-lock-loop FM multiplex circuit for maximum stereo separation; FM interstation muting; two tape monitors (for dual recording or tape duplicating); front panel mike input. Convenient left/right channel balance controls; two tuning meters; walnut-finish wood case; 19¾"x5¾"x16½".

TURNTABLE: Garrard Model SLX2: 2-speed, matching wood base; anti-skating and damped cueing controls. With Pickering V-15 P/ATE-1 cartridge; tracking force 4 ± 1 gram; elliptical stylus; Dustmatic groove-cleaning brush.

SPEAKERS: 2 Criterion 555's with 10" woofer (4-lb. magnet structure); 5" sealed-back mid-range speaker; 3" air-cooled super tweeter. Home brilliance control. ¾" wood enclosures; walnut-finish vinyl. 15"x21"x10".

SAVE '109 from individual component prices

• SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
• LAFAYETTE HI-FI COMPONENTS GUARANTEED 2 YEARS
• CRITERION SPEAKERS GUARANTEED 5 YEARS
• 60-DAY EXCHANGE PRIVILEGES

If bought separately '608
YOU SAVE '109

$499

Pioneer PL-10 Belt-drive TURNTABLE $79.95 with coupon

Texas Instruments SR-11 electronic slide rule calculator with pi and constant Original Price - 89.95
WITH COUPON - 49.95

TDK SD-90 CASSETTES
1-9 Pcs. 3.59 each
10 Pcs. or more... 2.59 each

FEATU

Raft Rac

by Stephen Tanner

"May I remind you that if you dump in the drink, it's 36 degrees and you can only stand about three minutes so get your asses out fast."

The crew of the raft labelled with "ABC News" posters rebuked the admonition with an assortment of disdainful remarks.

"For eight years we've been the sturdiest raft on the river. We're prepared, steady, and not worried."

Then a crewman quipped: "Shall we get the rest of our bodies out, too, if we tip? The crew went into a hearty uproar and one spoke for the rest saying, "These men have liquid courage."

With a unified shout, the crew launched their craft into the cold muddy waters of the Winooski River and paddled out of the inlet to catch the rising current. It was travelling at about 13 miles per hour.

The raft had a second story tower to which the "ABC News" posters were tacked. Members of the crew began climbing it to better view the menacing waters.

Suddenly the river caught the listing raft, and in a top-heavy roll, it turned turtle, leaving its crew in a floundering scatter. Most managed to crawl back, dripping onto the barrels, but one lost soul splashed towards shore until the rubber rescue raft pulled him out.

For many, the episode of the "ABC News" was par for the Winooski River Raft Race course Saturday, April 19. An optimistic start, but a gloomy finish. Beginning at 8 a.m., it was cancelled at 2 p.m. due to high waters and massive capsizings.

One hundred rafts entered the race this year, which was the limit set by race officials

Many raft starting Waterbury to prepare next day's traffic pro
the river closed to race. Only to run betw

The
around morning.
at the bot of about yellow lif woods an the starting

It a intermit sawing of of styro eleventh were co their crew which sa woods t tracks to

On Montpelie like a Another hinged accomm of the absorber

A
came fro Environm
the UVM recycled liners bandin light-we named Derrigib watched nearly gust

A
the st inflamm under rapid succes

National C

The National Council for Exceptional Children is an organization which seeks out the needs of exceptional children and special educators and then acts to meet those needs. They are an advocate for those children who need special help and for those persons who want to advance the educational opportunities of exceptional children.

Any handicapped child is guaranteed the right to education. However, school alone cannot educate any child. Experimental learning is as equally essential as a formal education. College students also need a variety of experiences above and beyond the daily classroom education. Provided are various opportunities outside the classroom for both the children and UVM students, all learning from one another.

We have three main goals, the first of which is to increase children's exposure to various events and people providing experimental learning. Our second goal is to provide student volunteers with opportunities to work with handicapped children and other learning experiences. The third goal is to provide parents with a resource - i.e., meetings

and hav wit

of inv mo an is a

e Charming, perior Show

department's night of the every way's a charm amb to, the century its audience inner world ed only by a ...ss Carroll, Mid Summer come most The play g troupe who ntertainment. t a pretty girl estined to be er tyrannical Kurthi) to a ...vin Marconi), loves another who was born ortunate ...es. This day is viewed grocer (Chip wife, (Sarah to manipulate their own views ...s should be ...y insist that "Ralph" (Jon natured lout. ...e action. He is ...bbed "Knight Pestle, a Don ...w who with ...nd mistress ... manages to ...out of the play ...g results ...tfully chaotic plot is complified by some fine theatricality. The dancing, singing, and accompanying music are precise performances that draw the line between fulfillment and excess at just the right point. Technically, the production is superior as well.

The costumes (designed by Christianson and Reid) are not only beautiful, their beauty drew one into the fantasy. Likewise, the set (designed by Lise Devlin and constructed by Patrick Orr), which has the kind of inventiveness and beauty one associates with a rare Swiss toy.

Finally, I would like to credit everyone in the cast with strong and consistent acting. Though I personally enjoyed the eternally competant Chip Towers and Sarah Brooke, as the grocer and his wife, Jon Bourge as "Ralph" and Melanie Donovan as the scolding "Mistress Merry weather"" the most. I really cannot remember when I saw a cast work so well together. My congratulations to Pestle's director, James Wimsatt , and all for a superior show.

Knight of the Burning Pestle runs through this weekend, so if you are interested in good theatre, good fantasy, good comedy, or just a good two hour mind massage, then Knight of the Burning Pestle is for you.

And Bluegrass Festival

...page feature ...hits ...nd bluegrass ...g will be a six ...m the Catskill ...s New York ...nd five string ...with string bass, ...dobro guitar in ...l ranging from ...thern Mountain ...mporary vocal ...and novelty ...have been billed ...as Music version ...of Invention" ...the hammered dulcimer, an ancient instrument resembling the zither. Bottle Hill has an album out on Biograph called Rumor In Their Own Time.

Terry Jenkins and his contra-dance band hail from the Albany, N.Y. area and in addition to being well known for their playing at many contra dances also has a growing reputation for their familiarity with traditional music. An unusually good sound!! They will be finishing up the afternoon with a contra dance around 5:30 or so.

le Folkist Plays Sat.

...rrels is the only ...rmer appearing ...is a good friend ...Walker, Hunter S. ...d Utah Phillips ...recently touring ...ly from Boise, ...is a singer and ...roven ability (she ...rds out one on ..., one on Sue ...d her latest on ... whose stories ... songs are just as ...of her as the songs ...stories of being on ...the people she has ...ew and love are ...ny and real. They ...hience to deal with her as a person rather than an "image" or a "star".

Saturday's FREE Folk and Bluegrass Festival has been organized by an ad hoc committee of people interested in exposing people to some of our vanishing musical heritage without the inhibitions of rip off prices. Co-Sponsored by the SA Concert Bureau, the festival is part of Saturday's Red Square Affair which is raising money for the Burlington Urban Youth Center. Starting time is around noon for this FREE afternoon of music. If you're feeling bad about getting something for nothing, you can do an anti rain dance and pray for sunshine!!

...Aud. Closed To Rock

...e of extensive ...inflicted upon ...n's Memorial ... last Wednesday ...B. B. King's ..., there will be no ...oncerts held at the ...ds act like maniacs, ...n beings", one ...official heatedly ...e reason for the ...s closing.

...n college and high ...students reportedly ...tioned on the roof ...rs on the ground ...rocks at windows ...g the start of ...'s concert. Usually, ...h windows in the ...d sneaking into the ...n but rarely vandalize ...alicious intent. ...ely, the vandalistic ... was not evident to ...s audience during the ...ow. Neither sounds of breaking glass nor loud noises were heard by those listening to the concert.

Memorial Auditorium will from now on house only events of a more conventional nature that draws predominantly older, more mature crowds. Boxing and wrestling matches, in addition to the Lane Series' classical concerts and theatrical productions, will continue to be scheduled but the twang of electric guitar strings or the unflagging beat of a bass drum shall be heard...nevermore.

Ultimately, the vital question arises as to where future rock concerts will be held, if at all. Memorial Auditorium is Burlington's sole facility for housing large-scale musical events. In a town comprised largely of youthful music lovers, this recent closing of the doors to rock is unbelievable and unrealistic--both esthetically and economically.

...thquake Is A Gimmick

...y Jay Williams ...just gotten around to ...'Earthquake' and the ...rt of it I care to ...is a gimmick called ...and Now I am one for ...mmicks but all this ...ound thing did for me ...r my stomach to crave ...popcorn. Could be that's ...ove house proprietors ...ber nation anticipate ...three popcorn costs 60 ...cup. I won't tell you ...ch the candy costs. I ...ou already know.

The overgrown city of Los Angeles gets it and my friend Charlton Heston is the man indirectly responsible. He's an architect who builds skyscrapers that shake loose from their foundation when accosted by an earthquake. He also grants out a love affair with Genevieve Bujold after his own marriage goes on the rocks (His wife is clobbered by a boulder.) Typical B-picture. Although it is not a cheat like The Poseidon Adventure was.

FEATURE

Raft Race: Optimistic Start, Grim End

by Stephen Tanner

"May I remind you that if you dump in the drink, it's 36 degrees and you can only stand about three minutes so get your asses out fast."

The crew of the raft labelled with "ABC News" posters rebuked the admonition with an assortment of disdainful remarks.

"For eight years 'we've been the sturdiest raft on the river. We're prepared, [illegible] and not worried."

Then a crewman quipped, "Shall we get the rest of our bodies out, too, if we tip? The crew went into a hearty uproar and one spoke for the rest saying, "These men have liquid courage."

With a unified shout, the crew launched their craft into the cold muddy waters of the Winooski River and paddled out of the inlet to catch the rising current. It was travelling at about 13 miles per hour.

The raft had a second story tower to which the "ABC News" posters were tacked. Members of the crew began climbing it to better view the menacing waters.

Suddenly the river caught the listing raft, and in a top-heavy roll, it turned turtle, leaving its crew in a floundering scatter. Most managed to crawl back, dripping onto the barrels, but one lost soul splashed towards shore until the rubber rescue raft pulled him out.

For many, the episode of the "ABC News" was par for the Winooski River-Raft Race course Saturday, April 19. An optimistic start, but a gloomy finish. Beginning at 8 a.m., it was cancelled at 2 p.m. due to high waters and massive capsizings.

One hundred rafts entered the race this year, which was the limit set by race officials. Many rafters arrived at the starting site below the Waterbury Dam Friday night to prepare themselves for the next day's ride. As a result, traffic problems developed on the river road which was to be closed to all traffic for the race. Only shuttle buses were to run between start and finish.

The race got underway around 8 a.m. Saturday morning, the first raft arriving at the bottom with a fine time of about one hour. Orange and yellow life jackets dotted the woods and the launch line at the starting point.

Hammers sounded intermittently between the sawing of beams and squeaking of styrofoam flotation as eleventh hour preparations were completed. Rafts and their crews formed a long line which snaked up through the woods beyond the railroad tracks to the river road.

One group from Montpelier had a raft shaped like a Sugar Maple leaf. Another had a two-part raft, hinged in the center to accommodate the rolling swells of the river like a shock absorber.

A highly original design came from Robinson Hall, the Environmental Dormitory on the UVM campus. The design recycled empty milk carton liners by inflating them and binding them all in a light-weight netting. It was named the "Robinson Derrigible" and as this reporter watched it in the waiting line it nearly blew away in a sudden gust.

A short way down from the starting point is the infamous "trestle bridge" under which flows the trickiest rapids. About 60 rafts successfully navigated the rushing waters without glancing the cement pilons supporting the bridge.

As the day wore on, a large tree branch floated down and became lodged on a rock upstream of the trestle. At least three rafts ran up against the branch and spilled their crews as the rafts partially overturned. In one case the branch snagged a raft and caused it to collide with the trestle becoming wedged between the pilon and the rapid current.

Soon another raft followed the same course and collided with the first, dislodging it and sending broken fragments of styrofoam, wood planking, barrels, and crewmen under the bridge.

Some liberated crew members made their way to trees which were growing off shore in the flood waters where they remained high and dry with no easy way to shore.

Still another two were stranded on the pilon of the trestle where they remained until UVM Rescue could extricate them using a rope and pulling them to the top of the trestle.

Many rescues were achieved by rafters themselves, pulling drenched comrades from the water. One lone tuber helped to bring a rafter stranded in a tree to shore to warm up.

Crowds of 6-7,000 on the Interstate 89 side of the river looked on with awe as more rafts collided with the trestle.

UVM Rescue provided the base for the Rescue operation at the Winooski River. They reported pulling over 40 water-logged rafters from the river, five of whom were seen at the hospital and one of whom was admitted with a broken ankle. Many more were aided.

Robert Wilkenfeld of UVM Rescue reported that "the main problem was hypothermia and second degree frostbite." When asked how his operation went, he replied "Everything worked quite well. Our only big problem was that the Rescue boat got caught in a current and overturned. Waterbury Rescue eventually brought another boat, however."

Race officials had planned for there to be three boats at the race, unfortunately only one turned up for the majority of the race.

The race was stopped twice due to the numbers of floaters who were dumped into the freezing temperature waters. As many as 51 people were reported in at one time.

A number of problems finally cancelled the race with about 52 of the entries started. Race officials cited 36 degree temperature water, 51 people in the water, people unprepared for the weather, a predicted 50 mile per hour wind and storm approaching.

A car crash and a small brush fire added to the organizers' problems, in addition to the hypothermic dilemma.

When asked about the prospects for next year's race, Ken Bartlett, chief organizer, remarked "today has to put the Raft Race in serious jeopardy for next year."

Bill Root, Director of Student Activities at UVM said, "It's the last officially UVM sponsored race.... Everyone said we didn't like what happened last year, this year's your last chance." This does not mean that another organization will not sponsor the race next year.

Root cited three problems: 1) Safety problems of rescuing all people at the same time. 2) The problem of keeping the race supervised and going all the time. 3) Spectator and traffic problems.

Root said there was a "coincidence factor" which finally halted the race. "Rafts at the start, finish, and the trestle turned over at the same time, placing an unbelievable burden on Rescue services. At about the same time, Waterbury traffic backed up."

UVM Horse Show Coming

This Sunday April 27, the University of Vermont Horse Club will hold its' second Annual Spring Schooling Show. The show will be held at the UVM Farm on Spear Street and will start promptly at 9:00 a.m.

For those of you who are unfamiliar with the Horse Club and its activities (I'm sure there are many) the Horse Club is an organization consisting of about thirty members, eighteen of whom stable their own horses at the Farm on Spear Street. The Club was formed with the intent of 1) getting students together on campus that were interested in horses, and 2) helping local 4 H and Pony Clubs with clinics and talks. So far Horse Club activities have included such things as field trips to Madison Square Garden, Clinics with Denny Emerson (a member of the Gold Medal 3 Day team) and sponsoring a clinic with the Charlotte Pony Club.

Last year's Horse Show brought about 50 entrants, including UVM students and local Pony Clubbers and it is expected to draw even more this year. The Club has the use of its indoor arena, in case of rain, or one of its many corn fields for the outside courses. In addition to the usual equitation and hunter classes, the Club this year added two dressage classes, novice and training, to add a little variety to the show. For those of you unfamiliar with dressage, it is a test performed individually by horse and rider in a small ring. Various tests are performed at different areas in the ring, and they are marked on a penalty basis by a judge.

The judges for this years show are Terry and Sarah Gibson of Strafford, Vermont. Terry is the Farm Manager for Huntington Farms in Strafford, a small breeding farm and event stable, while Sarah is employed by Edward Emerson, also in Strafford, a well known 3 Day rider. Both are quite well known in Vermont for their 3 day eventing.

The show should prove to be an exciting and interesting event to watch; and it is an excellent opportunity for students to see how the Horse Club operates. Students are reminded that there will be empty stalls next year in the barn, and applications are now being taken for next September.

If there are any questions, they may be addressed to the Club President Verne Batchelder at 863-5944.

Mozart Festival

The 1975 Mozart Festival will return to some of the unusual concert sites that were featured in the 1974 inaugural season for its series of 15 concerts starting July 20 and concluding Aug. 9.

The opening concert will be held in the Show Barn at the University of Vermont, where the first season opened, and the Festival will move on to concerts aboard the S.S. Champlain, Shelburne Farms, and the Royall Tyler Theatre at UVM as well as in several area churches and University concert halls.

Programs, artists and locations have been announced for the 1975 Festival by the University of Vermont Lane Series Office.

There will also be workshops in chamber music, flute, and piano; a Mozart Institute of lectures on the composer's music; a five-day seminar in the formal equestrian technique of classical dressage; and a free concert at Battery Park.

A new Festival feature this year will be a "preliminary" free concert Saturday, July 19 from 7 to 8 p.m. in Battery Park, "A Mozart Sampler."

In a repeat of one of last year's most popular events, the American School of Dressage will formally open the Festival Sunday, July 20 at 6:30 p.m. at the UVM Show Barn with a free public "carousel with horses," followed at 8 p.m. at the Show Barn by the opening concert with the New York Chamber Soloists.

Tuesday, July 22, two pianists will perform in a concert for "Four Hands" at 8 p.m. in the UVM music building recital hall, and on Wednesday at 8 p.m. the Fine Arts Quartet will play the "Hayden" quartets by Mozart on the "Grand Porch" at Shelburne Farms.

The same Quartet will perform Friday three Mozart quintets at 8 p.m. in the Royall Tyler Theatre, and on Saturday, the New York Chamber Soloists will play two concertantes at 8 p.m. in the Shelburne Farms Coach Barn.

The Coach Barn will also be the scene Sunday for an 8 p.m. performance of flute concerti by the Soloists, and on Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the UVM recital hall sonatas and airs will be offered by pianist, tenor and violinist.

Wednesday the Festival will move out on Lake Champlain with an 8 p.m. cruise, "Winds on the Water," with the Festival Winds. At 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 1, the First Congregational Church of Burlington will be the scene for flute quartets by the New York Chamber Soloists.

St. Michael's College Chapel is the site Saturday at 8 p.m. for two Mozart masses by the Mozart Festival Orchestra, the UVM Choral Union, and soloists, and on Sunday piano concerti will be offered with the Mozart Festival Orchestra at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel.

(continued on page thirteen)

SPS Photos by STEVE LESNESKI

National Council For Exceptional Children Works For Special Education

The National Council for Exceptional Children is an organization which seeks out the needs of exceptional children and special educators and then acts to meet those needs. They are an advocate for those children who need special help and for those persons who want to advance the educational opportunities of exceptional children.

Any handicapped child is guaranteed the right to education. However, school alone cannot educate any child. Experimental learning is as equally essential as a formal education. College students also need a variety of experiences above and beyond the daily classroom education. Provided are various opportunities outside the classroom for both the children and UVM students, all learning from one another.

We have three main goals, the first of which is to increase children's exposure to various events and people providing experimental learning. Our second goal is to provide student volunteers with opportunities to work with handicapped children and other learning experiences. The third goal is to provide parents with a resource -- i.e., meetings and a variety of activities to have their children involved with.

We offer a wide spectrum of activities for everyone to get involved in. We have monthly meetings with the volunteers and a speaker who discusses an issue related to special education. This year, in the spring, we will hold an Exceptional Children's Art Show. During this we will display the artwork of children from neighboring special classes. Once a month volunteers get together with the children and engage in a "Fun Day," which includes activities, food, and games. Halloween and Easter mark special parties and a banquet for the student volunteers. The children also participate in Special Olympics. Through these special activities the children are able to actively get involved in athletic events.

The program also acts as a resource center for placing volunteers in various special classrooms. This includes taking volunteers to special schools throughout the Burlington area, which are (a) Howard Mental Health Service, (b) Champlain Sheltered Workshop, (c) Baird Children's Center, (d) Waterbury State Hospital, (e) Brandon Training Center, (f) Austine School for the Blind.

We feel that the above activities have contributed in making the first year of the CEC at UVM a great success. We also feel we have achieved our goal of strengthening communications and interactions between special children, student volunteers, parents, and professionals.

We would like to thank all the student volunteers that have participated in the CEC this year and we welcome them and all other interested students next year.

WHEN YOU THINK OF SPRING;
THINK OF MILLS AND GREER FOR
THE BEST IN SPORTING GOODS:

Tennis Rackets BY- DUNLOP, DAVIS, BANCROFT, WILSON, MACGREGOR, SPAULDING & SEAMLESS
Balls By- DUNLOP, TRETORN, WILSON

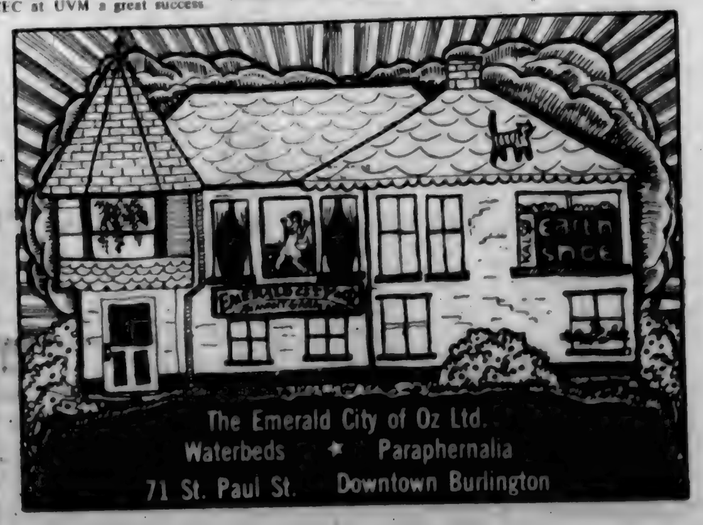
TRETORN TENNIS SHOES TENNIS HATS AND VISORS
TIGER & ADIDAS RUNNING SHOES

Casual Shirts By- JANTZEN, MUNSINGWEAR, ADIDAS

BASEBALL CAPS-SOFTBALLS- BATS & BALLS-GLOVES



UVM Food Day Fair - A Successful Learning Experience

A WEEKEND OF AFFAIRS

by Stephen Tanner

The Food Day celebration in Billings North Lounge last Thursday proved to be one of the most educational experiences of its kind yet to touch students about a subject so essential and yet so taken for granted by most of us.

Organized state-wide by Vermont Tomorrow, the national observance of Food Day abounded with many displays at UVM. Throughout the North Lounge an atmosphere of spring time good spirit pervaded.

Robinson Hall, UVM's Environmental Dormitory, displayed types of wild plants indigenous to Vermont which can be highly nourishing. Believe it or not, dandelions were first on the list. When Ann Gardner, a Robinsonite was asked about their flavor she replied "They're really good, but you should boil them about three times to get all the bitterness out."

Also on display was Plantain, a lawn weed, and Cat-tails, whose roots taste like celery when sauteed. Recipe books for home made wines, sprouting beans, and composting pile displays created fine ideas for the self sufficiency minded.

Not only did students have the opportunity to discover new ideas about the quality of life, but SAGA (and the Robinson Hall chefs) provided them with the culinary experience of a meatless natural foods meal in most of their dining halls.

This reporter had the delightful pleasure of attending the lunch held in Living and Learning. Sesame seed salad, sprouts, soy bean casserole, zucchini and a yogurt bar supplied an unorthodox but delicious and healthy meal for students.

The absence of meat went unnoticed by most, who gloated over the natural yogurt bar complete with honey and raisins. By cutting out the meat, a step in the food chain is eliminated, and grain used to feed cattle is potentially available for starving people.

An exhibit at the Fair by the Vermont Public Interest Research Group revealed some startling facts about the world food problem.

1. America, which comprises 7% of the world's population, consumes 35% of the world's food.

2. Americans throw an average of 600 calories per day into the garbage can.

3. Food production is completely dependent on oil products for fertilizer; and of this fertilizer, Americans spend more on their gardens and lawn than the rest of the world does on food production.

Visitors were allured into the fair by a T.V. Monitor outside the North Lounge which aired Wyatt Kash, interviewing participants in the festival. Children from the School House in Shelburne were entertained by being on television between performing pantomimes and cutting out magazine photos relating to Food Day activity. Kash managed to elicit nothing but favorable reactions to the educational experience of the fair.

Students from the South Burlington Middle School displayed their cookbook, survey of on world food problems, and an enlightening cost analysis of raw foods versus their processed counterparts which revealed $1.20 difference between potatoes and potato chips per pound.

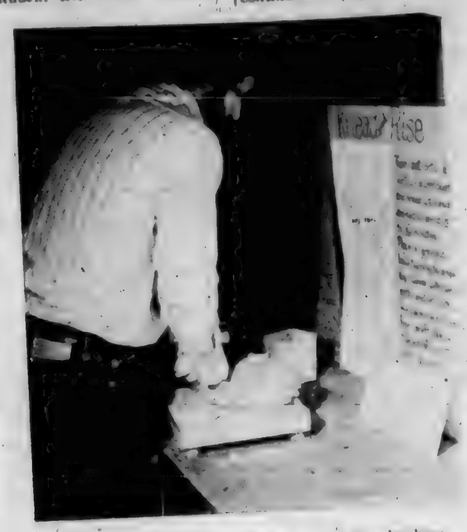
University Year for Action student Ken Schatz, working for the Bread and Law Task Force, (BLT) was enthusiastic about the fair. As far as his work with BLT he said, "a lot of work is being done."

He and his group are working on a plan for Community Food Preservation Centers which envisions cooperative canning groups in towns throughout Vermont. This would stimulate increased

(continued on page fourteen)

Robinson Hall's Paula Skwara talks on nutritious candies

Food Day Fair draws both the interested and the curious SPS Photos by BILL BUSBY



Richard Grousell puts a little muscle into his breadmaking

Burlington Celebrates First Maple Sugar Sugar Festival

By Margo Howland

The sky was cloudy and the wind was cold, but the wonderful smell of wood smoke rose up from the fire where an old Vermont pioneer was stirring a cauldron of boiling maple sap in the middle of Burlington's City Hall Park.

As hundreds of spectators watched in rapt attention, the stirring background music took on an ominous note. A group of Green Mountain Boys, their rifles at the ready, sprang out of the crowd to defend the pioneer from attack by a group of ominous, menacing Indians!

The stalwart pioneer, University of Vermont Professor Emeritus Leon Dean, brandished his trusty hatchet, and the Indians, a group of youngsters from Polly Nutty's Dance Studio, drew back and decided to be friendly. The crowds cheered.

The occasion was Burlington's first annual Maple Sugar Fest, organized by Reginald Muir in cooperation with the Downtown Burlington Development Association, as a salute to the Vermont Maple Syrup Industry.

Muir, who thought up the idea, said it would be "appropriate" for the city of Burlington to sponsor a maple fest.

"It would stimulate interest, attract more producers and better sales, and create a greater awareness of the industry as a whole," Muir explained.

The festivities began Friday afternoon and continued through Sunday. As a preliminary to the festival, Vermont's former U.S. Senator, George D. Aiken, planted two maple trees in Burlington's City Hall Park on Wednesday, April 16.

Fifth and sixth grade students from Burlington area public and parochial schools drew posters for the event. The posters were on display in the shop windows all along Church Street.

One poster proclaimed, "It's maple syrup time!" Another poster declared, "Boiling sap tastes good! Yum!"

A maple sugar shack on upper Church Street offered maple cotton candy -- "spun gold" -- for .40 to delighted youngsters.

The sign on the maple sugar house in front of City Hall read, "Sugar on snow, donut and a pickle, .75." But Saturday was a mild April day in Burlington, and not a speck of snow was to be seen.

Dancing by the Covered Bridge Stompers SPS Photos by BILL BUSBY

That didn't bother Marjorie Palmer of Shelburne, who with her daughter-in-law and grandchildren was busily ladeling out the traditional Vermont treat from steaming kettles. For snow, she used crushed ice from a handy electric grinder nearby.

"This belongs to the State Department of Agriculture, but they let any sugar making organization use it," she said, looking at the sugar house.

Mrs. Palmer and her husband Loren are members of the Chittenden County Sugar Makers Association.

"This is our first year at this, and it's sort of a trial run for the Bicentenniel next year. We hope to have a sugar house at the fair this year," Mrs Palmer said.

The Champlain Valley Fair is held in Essex Junction during the summer.

Next to the sugarhouse, the Ethan Allen Fire Station on Church Street displayed a number of exhibits from the UVM Proctor Maple Research Farm in Underhill and the United States Department of Agriculture George D. Aiken Maple Sugar Laboratory.

A slide projector depicted maple sugaring information and a movie projector showed a continuous film on the maple sugaring industry. The film was produced by the Vermont Maple Industry Council.

A very popular exhibit was the maple tasting booth provided by the State Department of Agriculture. Containers of Vermont Fancy, Grade A and Grade B syrup were on display with a number of samples of each grade.

Agricultural Inspector Bruce Martell explained the differences in grades to passersby and answered questions. One little girl asked if it hurt the trees when they took the sap out.

"No," Martell reassured her. "They've been sticking spouts in these big old trees for over 100 years and they're still standing right there."

The season had been good this year in the lower elevations, Martell said, but the excessive snow and cold temperatures in the higher elevations have created problems.

"I was up in Johnson the other day; I know of people that really depend on it, good hardworking people -- and they still have snow up to their bellies. It warmed up some but they only had one run and no sugar to speak of," Martell said.

Sunday afternoon festivities at City Hall Park included the faceoff between the pioneer and the Indians, a demonstration of old-fashioned square dancing by the Covered Bridge Stompers of Shelburne, headed by Danny Pitts, and barbershop singing by the Champlain Echoes and the Battery Parkers.

The Indians, all of Polly Nutty's Dance Studio, were Tim Muir, Greg Gelineay, Mark Polin, Jerry Fields, and Candy Gelineay. The Green Mountain Boys were members of the Vermont National Guard.

Bob Sedlor did the calling for the square dancers, and several members of the audience joined the fun, forming a square of their own.

Vermont's Maple King and Queen, Brett Harlow of Ludlow and Mary Gow from Warren, drew the 24 names of winners of Vermont Maple Syrup donated by the Burlington Free Press.

Mayor Paquette announced the ten winners of the 1975 Maple Fest poster contest. The ten prizewinning posters will be on display in the Old Firehouse windows on Church Street. The first through fourth place winning entries will be submitted to the statewide poster contest sponsored by the Vermont Council of the Arts, to be judged later this year. Four $500 cash prizes will be awarded at that contest.

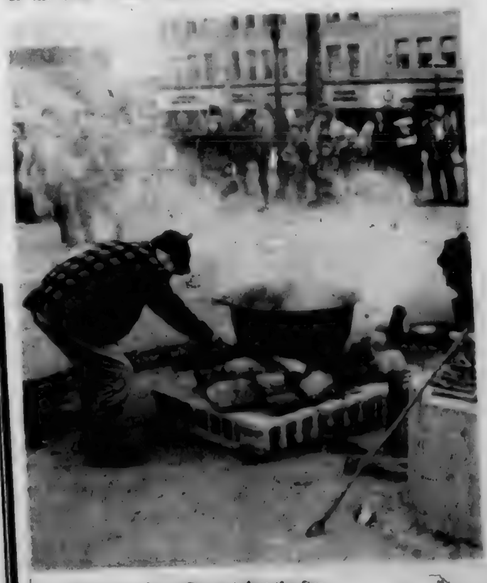
First place winner of $25 and a ribbon was Susan Crooks of Christ the King School; second place winner of $15 and a ribbon was Reina Keranen of Smith School; third place winner of $10 and a ribbon was Kim Babel of Christ the King School; and fourth place winner of $5 and a ribbon was Arthur Sebastiano of Christ the King School.

"Spun Gold" at Maple Sugar House

"Honorable mentions" were awarded to Christopher Antell, Christ the King School; Cindy Roy, Champlain School; Jean Kirby, Thayer School; Jeanne Trinko, Christ the King School; Tim Keough, Champlain School; and Brian Wood, Christ the King School.

Judges were Monique Ale, of the Four Winds Gallery in South Burlington; Jean Pierre Lascoumes, Burlington High School teacher in the Total Immersion French program; Marjorie Palmer of the Vermont Maple Sugar Makers Association, and George Keiser of the George D Aiken Maple Sugar Laboratory.

The Maple Fest was considered a great success. Speaking from an economic viewpoint, Muir commented, "I understand we've had a better weekend of business this week than the weekend of the Freedom Train."



Leon Dean stokes the fire

WRUV

T-SHIRTS ARE IN

AND ON SALE FOR JUST $3.00

AT: Boyd's Music Studio, 206 Main Street and Bailey's Music Rooms, 88 Church Street (Supply is Limited)

CLOGS from DENMARK with a back . . . or without

Men's and Ladies Sizes Available

the SKI shop, inc.

388 SHELBURNE ROAD BURLINGTON, VERMONT 862-5466 OPEN 9-9 Mon-Fri 9-5 Sat.

EXXON

Ralph's Exxon

on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189

Complete Auto Service

Expert Tune up and Repairs

All Work Fully Guaranteed

Free pickup and delivery

Phone: 862-9200

APRIL 24, 1975

University Store

10% OFF ALL T-SHIRTS AN (EXCEPT THOSE ALREADY

ALL JACKETS ½ P

ORANGE T-SHIRTS

ALL POSTERS AND ART

This coupon ent drawing for a Polaroid Square Name Address Phone Drawing 4PM M

University Store

perience

...for the Board and Law Task Force. Bill Jr. was enthusiastic about the fair. As far as his work with Bill Jr. he said "a lot of work is being done."

He said his group are working on a plan for Community Land Preservation Covenants which empowers cooperative renting groups in towns throughout Vermont. The group members received

(continued on page fourteen)

...a little ... and ... speaking val

Gold" at Maple Sugar House

...Jean Pierre ... Burlington High ... teacher in the Total ... French program, ... Palmer of the ... Maple Sugar Makers ... and George Keiser ... D. Aiken Maple ... Laboratory.

...Maple Fest was ... great success. ... an economic ... Moir commented. ... we've had a ... and of business this ... the weekend of the ... Gallery in ...

Leon Dean stokes the fire

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

UNIVERSITY STORE

Fifth Annual Student Appreciation Days

SALE STARTS TOMORROW

10% OFF ALL T–SHIRTS AND SWEATSHIRTS
(EXCEPT THOSE ALREADY REDUCED)

ALL JACKETS ½ PRICE

ORANGE T–SHIRTS ½ PRICE

ALL POSTERS AND ART PRINTS ⅓ OFF

"We've got deals you can't refuse!"

10% OFF GLASSWEAR WITH OLD UVM SEAL

SELECTED PEWTER ⅓ OFF

SOME CERAMIC ITEMS ½ PRICE
(ALL OTHERS 10% OFF)

The University Store would like to take this opportunity to express our appreciation for your patronage throughout the year.

To the graduating seniors - we wish you the best of luck in the future; to those returning in September - we look forward to being of service to you once again.

We hope each and every one of you has a good summer.

THANKYOU

VAN HEUSEN
KNIT SHIRTS
⅓ OFF

TOOLS 10% OFF

LAMPS 20% OFF

SELECTED GROUP OF RECORDS
$2.99 AND $2.49

$5 Candy drawing from Sweet Shoppe Mon-Fri

Coupons availlable available at candy cart day of drawing

STUDENT APPRECIATION DAYS

BOOKS
79¢/LB

$5 OFF JOSTEN'S
CLASS RINGS
FRIDAY APRIL 25 ONLY

ALL DANSKIN ITEMS
⅓ OFF

PLUS MANY OTHER UNADVERTISED SPECIALS

SELECTED GAMES
½ PRICE

You must be a UVM student to win, but you do not have to be present to win.
Present coupons to a cash register operator on the day of the drawing.

This coupon enters you in the drawing for a Polaroid Square Shooter II
Name
Address
Phone
Drawing 4PM Monday

This coupon enters you in the drawing for a Sony cassette recorder.
Name
Address
Phone
Drawing 4PM Tuesday

This coupon enters you in the drawing for a desk lamp
Name
Address
Phone
Drawing 4PM Wednesday

This coupon enters you in the drawing for a variable speed electric drill
Name
Address
Phone
Drawing 4PM Thursday

This coupon enters you in the drawing for a calculator TI2550
Name
Address
Phone
Drawing 4PM Friday

The UVM Summer Times Has Arrived!!!

A scene from a recent Shakespeare Festival play -- a highlight of every summer session.

In recent years, the University of Vermont has developed a reputation for consistently having one of the finer summer session catalogs in the country. This year is no different. Everyone who has had a chance to browse through the UVM Summer Times will testify to its distinction.

Since this summer's theme program features America, its past, present and future, the catalog design resembles that of an Early American newspaper. Authenticity in the design and lay-out is a result of the work of Kevin Osborn and the staff of the Shelburne Museum who researched old newspapers.

The catalog is illustrated (thanks to Shelburne Museum, Fleming Museum, the Wilbur Collection of Bailey Library, University Archives and University Photo Service) with both modern day photographs and reproductions of 19th century ads, handbills, and tintypes. Each was selected to depict a different facet of life in Vermont. Be it an outdoor concert on the UVM campus today, a horse and buggy scene, or a handbill advertising an event from the past - each illustration highlights a way of life that has become a tradition in Vermont.

The UVM Summer Times is designated to show you Vermont in the present, and from an historical perspective, to speak of our concern for the future, and to invite you to discover that a summer in Vermont can be intellectually stimulating, culturally enriching and personally intriguing.

Overview of Summer Session Programs

A story on UVM's summer session could cover much more than just the uniqueness, humor and interesting illustrations in the summer catalog. Pages could be written on the simple mechanics of registering, the low costs involved, the recreational and cultural offerings, or the diversity of such program offerings as the demonstration school, contemporary family courses, field courses, the seminar in studio arts, the living and learning center workshops, the Shelburne Museum Cooperative Program; the early session intensive courses, the Vermont courses; the distinguished visiting faculty or The American Experience.

Until you receive your copy of the UVM Summer Times, or if you want additional information, feel free to call the Office of Continuing Education at 656-2085. Better yet, feel free to stop by the office located at Grasse Mount on the corner of Main and Summit Streets.

Bunny Lift

New York - (Earth News) - For 45 Vietnamese orphans, their reception to the U.S. may have proved a little overwhelming. They were passengers on Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner's private, customized DC-9 jet, the Big Bunny, on a flight from San Francisco to New York. A Playboy spokesperson said Hefner provided the plane as a gesture of goodwill, and didn't really expect any publicity. Since the plane is only equipped to seat 39 passengers, some of the kids had to stretch out on Hef's 7-foot circular bed.

What Is The Other Palestine?

by Jim Reibel

Many people who attended the speech by Moshe Dayan received information from the various groups leafletting outside the gym, or were given a hand-out one page newspaper on campus for several days preceeding the speech Friday night, the eighteenth. This article was initiated by the Cynic in an attempt to inform its readers of the background and motives of the groups publishing The Other Palestine and the Jewish Anti-Zionist position papers.

This reporter received a copy of The Other Palestine, the newspaper published by Vermonters for a Democratic Palestine, and in reading it, noticed that the organization's address was c/o L.U., with the same box number in Essex Junction as Liberty Union. As my interest was aroused, I called Martha Abbott, a chairperson of the Liberty Union Party, to ask her what the connection was, if any. She told me that Liberty Union provided their post office box to the group as a favor, as they have done for many others in need of an address while first starting out. Martha let me know quite clearly, that Liberty Union has never taken a position on the Middle East. Anticipating my next obvious question, as to how to get in touch with Vermonter's for a Democratic Palestine, she gave me the number of Bob Mueller, the founder.

I got in touch with Bob that afternoon, (Friday), and set up an interview on Saturday, where he provided me with all the information pertaining to his group that follows. Bob, while attending UVM, took his junior year abroad at the American University in Beirut, Lebanon in 1971-72. During that year he traveled extensively in the Middle East, describing Syria as one of his favorite countries in the area. Bob returned to UVM after the completion of his junior year and graduated in 1973.

He described to me the creation of Vermonters for a Democratic Palestine as follows, learning about a month ago that Moshe Dayan was invited by the SA Speakers Bureau to talk at UVM, he was outraged and got together with a number of like-thinking friends to form a group. Then he sat down and wrote The Other Palestine expressing their view-point.

I asked Bob how the publication was financed and learned the funds came from local people, and some Lebanese and Palestinian-Americans. When asked if there were any native-Arabic peoples involved with the financing, the response was no comment. It was pointed out to me that the group was a very loose organization that has never had a mass meeting and with less than 50 members. A joint bank account is maintained for the group's purposes and 3 people are able to withdraw funds.

Bob, in speaking of the background of Israel, said, "Israel was set up as a tool of the imperial powers to control the Arab Revolution". He observed that as a result of this, instead of a petit-bourgeois revolution that the Palestinians were in the process of undergoing, they now demand a People's Revolution, a total revolution.

He outlined for me the two steps that the Palestinians must achieve.

1. The establishment of a unified Palestinian policy, which he feels has been accomplished under the aegis of the PLO.

2. The recognition by the Israeli's that a democratic, non-secular state is their best hope.

I pressed Bob about the proposed effect of the organization he's a member of, in the Burlington area. He responded by saying the more real the ideal of a democratic, non-sectarian state is made, the more real its possibility. When I asked him to be more explicit, he listed the group's aims as twofold, both quotable.

1. "To make it as difficult as possible for Imperialist and Zionist leaders in this country to launch a war against the progressive forces in the Middle East-Israeli and Arab."

2. "Rather than spending our resources to support a racist state, Israel, or allow them, (American Zionists and Imperialists), to encourage more racism here and abroad instead of supporting a racist hierarchy, we want to destroy it."

At the same time I interviewed Bob Mueller, I talked to a member of the Jewish Anti-Zionist group that was also handing out a position paper at the Friday night speech. He asked me not to identify him personally in view of the strong sentiments that the issue raises.

He said that his group was made up of from 20-30 friends who believe that the anti-zionist viewpoint is the hope for the Jewish people. The fellow characterized for me their aims in the community as:

1. self study to be able to talk to the issues.

2. working against racism towards Sephardic Jews and Palestinians.

3. educating community people

4. actions motivated by the circumstances.

When asked for a quotable summation of the Anti-Zionist Jewish view, he wrote, "Jewish people are starting to realize that Zionism is racist by its nature and oppressive to both Jews and Palestinians as well as other nationalities, like Blacks and Third World People in the U.S. As Anti-Zionist Jews we work for a world where there is no racism, where one class or race does not use the labor of another for profit for itself."

Summer Archeologic Digs In England

Students are urgently invited to help in archaeological excavations in England next summer. Deadline for applications is May 15.

City center redevelopment, new road building programs and rapidly changing land use are threatening the disappearance of prehistoric graves, iron age settlements, Roman villas, fascinating relics of mediaeval towns, all over Britain.

American students free from mid-May, and with previous archaeological experience, are invited to join an international team on a dig of the important neolithic flint mines at Grimes Graves in Norfolk. Experienced volunteers will receive free board and lodging for helping in this important work.

Other students without experience are invited to join the British Archaeology Seminar at Lincoln College, Oxford, organized by the Association for Cultural EXchange. Six academic credits can be earned from participating in this low-cost program which ends by three weeks' participation on digs in different parts of England and Scotland.

Write now for further details to Ian Lowson, 539 West 112 Street, New York, N.Y. 10025.

Folksinger To Be At L/L

The Vermont Cultural Program will sponsor an evening of traditional and folk music performed by Margaret MacArthur Friday, April 25, at 8:00 p.m. in the Fireplace Lounge of the Living/Learning Center.

Mrs. MacArthur, who plays the harp, dulcimer, and autoharp, will present a programme including both music and discussion. She is registered with the Vermont Council on the Arts (which presented her with a citation in 1973) as a touring artist. She has recorded two albums - Folksongs of Vermont and On the Mountain High and has recently returned from a singing tour of the West.

While in college Mrs. MacArthur became interested in folk music and zither. It was at this time that she began performing. She has worked with folk music from many regional areas and ethnic groups including the cowboys of Arizona, the people of the Missouri Ozarks, the Cajuns of Louisisana, and the Mexicans of California. She became interested in Vermont and New England music when she settled in Marlboro after her marriage.

Mrs. MacArthur and her son Daniel performed in St. Michael's College Chapel in 1972.

CLASSIFIED

Apt. to Sublet - Option to rent for next year. 2 bedrooms, living room, large kitchen, porch and plenty of parking space. 863-6913.

Wanted: Apartment to sublet for summer. Close to campus. Pets allowed. Must be cheap! Call Gloria 656-2619 days.

Why live in an apartment this summer when you can live in a HOUSE. This large 5-bedroom house is 1½ miles from campus in a nice neighborhood in S. Burlington. Nice lawn for messin' around. Large modern kitchen. Large living room with functional fireplace. It's furnished too! Downstair lounge - TV room with built-in bar. $325 per month... negotiable.
Call 656-3845 or 864-7788

Apartment to Sublet: May 15 thru summer, one block from UVM at 8 North Williams St., corner of Pearl Street. Two large rooms plus kitchen, quiet, high ceilings, beautifully and fully furnished, including kitchenware. $160/month. Call Susan at 863-3942.

Single Apartment for Rent - Sublet mid-May through August. Furnished, 3 rooms, heat and hot water included, off street parking. Good location - South Union. $135.00 monthly. Call 862-9114.

Large apartment to sublet at 231 South Prospect. Ideal location, one minute walk to UVM. Rent cheap and negotiable. Available June 1 - Sept. 1. Call 656-4393 or 862-6848.

Ride needed to California Squaw Valley - Lake Tahoe area. Can leave after May 5th. Share driving & expenses, call Jeanne 864-6604.

Apartment to sublet - June 1 - Sept. 1, 7 rooms, fireplace, close to campus. Call Paula B. 862-1437.

Lost and Found - Men's medium Navy blue found at men's soccer field, at Southwick.

Needed: two people for family type live in experience starting September 1975. Opportunity to trade Room and Board for some child care and assistance in keeping the house together. If interested, call Dale Goldsager at x4050 or 864-4847.

Apt. to Rent: June 1, 2 rooms, furnished, $175/mon., all utilities. Downtown. 864-5437. Linda or Patti.

Home wanted: Couple looking for place to live within 15 mile radius of Burlington. Prefer lots of space for dog, garden, play, etc. Need as soon as possible, please call 985-8575 or 864-7244 ask for Phelps or Kacey.

Penney's brand 1000 watt blower hair dryer, 6 months old. $15.00 (new $20.00) Call Elly 656-4266 after 6 p.m.

Singer zig-zag sewing machine. Portable, has carrying case. Less than 6 months old. $100.00 (new, $130.00) Call Elly 656-4266 after 6 p.m.

Summer sublet - 3 bedroom, furnished apartment, pets, parking, porch, close to campus. Rent negotiable. Call 862-3403.

Summer sublet - 4 bedrooms, large kitchen, large living room located between campus and town, completely furnished. Rent negotiable. Call 862-7855.

Summer sublet - 3 bedrooms, very large kitchen and living room. Completely furnished - very comfortable. Rent negotiable. Call 864-7788.

Four room apartment, completely furnished, close to main campus, and downtown, May 20 - August 31. $160/mo. price negotiable. Contact Peter (rm. 403) or Jim (rm. 401) at x-3493.

1971 Ford F100 Van - Must sell before June 1 - $1500.00, 46,000 miles. Call Reid if seriously interested, 496-2318.

Sony HP-149 stereo system. Has turntable, am/fm radio, cassette tape player/recorder, 10½ speakers. All attachments except microphones included. Ideal as a first stereo. 1½ yrs. old. $150.00 (new, $190). Call Elly 656-4266 after 6 p.m.

Apartment to sublet May - August, 4 bedrooms, dining room, living room, kitchen, and parking space. $200 a month. Call Mike Spero or Carl at 656-3874 on South Union St.

Wanted: 1 or 2 people to share a comfortable home in North Burlington for the summer. $68.75/month. Call 658-3804.

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

Monday-Thursday 9AM-5:30PM
Friday 9AM-7PM
Saturday 9AM-1PM

The Head Shop
hair has no sex

152 Church St. 862-4045

You take care of the inside of your head...
We'll take care of the outside

MAGRAMS It's An Experience

THE RUGBY SHIRT

SALE 8.90 reg. 12.00

This is our famous rugby short sleeved shirt in beautiful blend of Dacron & polyester knit. It's the current fashion. Smart and up-to-date. Stripes white and green, yellow, red, navy. Solids, Navy, green, yellow and blue.

MEN'S SHOP

Student Grant To

Burlington calls it waste and has been burying it for years.

A group of University of Vermont students thinks it is valuable, and that, given a chance, area residents will come running for it.

The "it" is sewage sludge -- the product of Burlington's three sewage treatment plants.

There's no question that there are nutrients -- nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium, in that sludge, nutrients that are getting more and more costly as the price of commercial fertilizers goes up and up.

But put sludge on a vegetable garden? And then eat the produce of that garden? For many, the answer is ugh. What about those dangerous organisms in the sludge?

Sewage sludge is processed and used throughout the world as a safe and satisfactory fertilizer. Some cities give it away. Others, like Milwaukee, bag it, give it a fancy name and sell it. Melbourne, Australia, a city of more than 2 million persons, pumps its sewage onto what were once 26,000 unproductive bleak acres, that now support huge herds of sheep and cattle.

A group of five UVM students have been awarded a $6,890 grant to study these sewage sludge. They'll also try using it in a garden, on a variety of

Administration Is Silen

by Peter Duquette

The University of Vermont Administration is continuing its policy of silence on the position of Dean Raymond Phillips of the Continuing Education Division, despite widely circulated reports that Phillips is being forced out of his post. According to published reports Dean Phillips will not continue in his capacity beyond July 1, 1975.

The first indication of Phillips' impending ouster came on February 12 when the administration announced that he would no longer be responsible for the public broadcasting station (Vermont Educational Television). At this time, both Dr. Andrews and Dr. Phillips declined comment.

Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr. Academic Vice President confirmed these reports. As of February 12, Vermont ETV officials were told that they were no longer to report to Phillips, but to the office of the Academic Vice President. "The change," according to

Mozart

(continued from page nine)

Sonatas and fantasias will be offered Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the UVM recital hall, followed on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel by Mozart trios with the Beaux Arts Trio.

The Festival will return to the Shelburne Farms Coach Barn Friday at 8 p.m. for "The Salzberg Mozart," and will conclude Saturday at 8 p.m. in the First Congregational Church with a final concert by the New York Chamber Soloists, vocal soloists, and the UVM Choral Union.

Workshops and master classes, another feature of the Vermont Mozart Festival, will be offered with members of Festival performing groups and visiting musicians.

ROOM TO BOS

...estine?

...ments and ...encourage ...nd abroad ...g a racist ...to destroy

...time I ...Mueller, I ...r of the ...group that ...a position ...day night ...me not to ...lly in view ...ments that

...group was ...IU friends ...that the ...nt is the ...ish people ...erized for ...in the

...Digs In England

...building ...ly changing ...tening the ...prehistoric ...settlements, ...nating relics ...e, all over

...West ...ollege Mrs. ...interested ...ther. It was ...she began ...has worked ...from many ...and ethnic ...the cowboys ...ople of the ...e Cajuns of ...e Mexicans ...She became ...ent and New ...when she ...o after her

...ur and her ...rmed in St. ...Chapel in Britain.

American students free from mid May, and with previous archaeological experience, are invited to join an international team on a dig of the important neolithic flint mines at Grimes Graves in Norfolk. Experienced volunteers will receive free board and lodging for helping in this important work.

Other students without experience are invited to join the British Archaeology Seminar at Lincoln College, Oxford, organized by the Association for Cultural Exchange. Six academic credits can be earned from participating in this low-cost program which ends by three weeks' participation on digs in different parts of England and Scotland.

Write now for further details to Ian Lowson, 539 West 112 Street, New York, N.Y. 10025.

1 self study to be able to talk to the issues.

2 working against racism towards Sephardic Jews and Palestinians.

3 educating community people

4 actions motivated by the circumstances.

When asked for a quotable summation of the Anti-Zionist Jewish view he wrote, "Jewish people are starting to realize that Zionism is racist by its nature and oppressive to both Jews and Palestinians as well as other nationalities, like Blacks and Third World People in the U.S. As Anti-Zionist Jews we work for a world where there is no racism, where one class or race does not use the labor of another for profit for itself."

...MS

It's An Experience

THE RUGBY SHIRT

SALE 8.90 reg. 12.00

...is is our famous rugby short sleeved ...irt in beautiful blend of Dacron & ...olyester knit. It's the current fashion, ...mart and up-to-date. Stripes white and ...reen, yellow, red, navy. Solids, Navy, ...reen, yellow and blue.

MEN'S SHOP

Student Grant To Study Sludge Usage

Burlington calls it waste and has been burying it for years.

A group of University of Vermont students thinks it is valuable, and that, given a chance, area residents will come running for it.

The "it" in sewage sludge, the product of Burlington's three sewage treatment plants.

There's no question that there are nutrients – nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium, in that sludge, nutrients that are getting more and more costly as the price of commercial fertilizers goes up and up.

But put sludge on a vegetable garden? And then eat the produce of that garden? For many, the answer is uggh. What about those dangerous organisms in the sludge?

Sewage sludge is processed and used throughout the world as a safe and satisfactory fertilizer. Some cities give it away. Others, like Milwaukee, bag it, give it a fancy name and sell it. Melbourne, Australia, a city of more than 2 million persons, pumps its sewage onto what were once 26,000 unproductive bleak, acres, that now support huge herds of sheep and cattle.

A group of five UVM students have been awarded a $6,890 grant to study these and other methods of using sewage sludge. They'll also try using it in a garden, on a variety of crops. They'll measure its value, in terms of nutrients, as well as its drawbacks, such as health hazards and a built-in repugnance among many people, and try to overcome them.

The grant, for a summer of work, was awarded them by the National Science Foundation. Across the nation college students submitted 207 proposals requesting more than $2.9 million for these summer projects. The University project was one of 86 approved for grants totalling nearly $1.1 million.

Students involved are headed by John Caulo as project director. Majoring in economics and environmental studies, John will try to formulate a workable plan for making the sludge more readily available to the community.

Jennifer F. Ely, studying biological sciences and environmental studies, worked with John in seeking the grant.

She is familiar with the subject, having been involved in a study of composting.

Janet E. Morris has a major in pre-veterinary studies and a minor in philosophy, and has a background in biochemistry and microbiology. Richard J. Villamil, a graduate of Drew University, is a graduate student and soil scientist. A fifth person will be chosen. This person will have a science background and a familiarity with growing scientifically controlled gardens.

Discussing the project, John commented on the growing interest in gardening in the Burlington area, and the rising costs of fertilizer. He said he believed the sewage sludge would be used here as fertilizer "if it were proven that there is no danger for persons working with the sludge as far as the existence of pathogens."

The research will test the sludge for its nutrient content, its cost as compared with chemical fertilizers, and whether existing health standards can be met when sludge is used.

The research team will have a garden near the University Infirmary on East Avenue. There the students will raise a root crop, a leaf crop, and corn, and analyze plant tissues to see whether any pathogens are absorbed by the plants.

By the end of the summer they hope to have evolved a system so that this sludge can be made available to gardeners, and so it will provide the gardeners with a fertilizer that is both cheap and safe.

Administration Is Silent On Future Of Dean Phillips

by Peter Duquette

The University of Vermont Administration is continuing its policy of silence on the position of Dean Raymond Phillips of the Continuing Education Division, despite widely circulated reports that Phillips is being forced out of his post. According to published reports Dean Phillips will not continue in his capacity beyond July 1, 1975.

The first indication of Phillips' impending ouster came on February 12 when the administration announced that he would no longer be responsible for the public broadcasting station (Vermont Educational Television). At this time, both Dr. Andrews and Dr. Phillips declined comment.

Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr. Academic Vice President confirmed these reports. As of February 12, Vermont ETV officials were told that they were no longer to report to Phillips, but to the office of the Academic Vice President. "The change," according to Rollins, "was designed to shorten lines of communication, and to tighten up accountability." According to Dr. Lawrence McCrorey, Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs, the change was designed to "bring ETV more into the academic affairs of the University."

According to reports published on February 15, Phillips was being forced to resign his post no later than June 30, 1975. The report went on to say that he was being forced to resign by UVM President Edward Andrews during the course of a conference February 11. This information, supplied by an anonymous source said that "Under no circumstance will Phillips continue as dean of Continuing Education by July 1. He will be out." Continuing Education is the University's eighth largest department with a budget of $1.5 million, responsible for summer and evening programs.

The source said that the administration had been dissatisfied that ETV programs and services have not expanded through the state, that Phillips had not gone far enough in exploiting the potential of public broadcasting. The source also revealed that the University is considering the elimination of the office being vacated by Phillips, and the institution of an agency designed "to bring ETV and other service related programs together operationally, to expand educational services to Vermonters."

A month later, it was reported that Phillips was reviewing his legal position at the University with lawyer Phillip Hoff, former governor of the state of Vermont. Phillips stated at the time, "To say that we haven't taken any action is inaccurate."

Phillips' legal position is complicated by the fact that he is a tenured member of the faculty and as such can only be dismissed for reasons of gross misconduct or financial exigency.

(ma hot' ma jug day' o)

BIOGRAPHY

NAME: Mahatma Jagdeo (ma hot' ma jug day' o)

BORN: August 23, 1930, Bihar State, India

OCCUPATION: The word Mahatma is derived from two Hindi roots meaning "great soul". This title of respect is given to certain close disciples of Guru Maharaj Ji. Mahatmas are distinguished by the fact that they have been chosen to transmit to people the meditation called "Knowledge" which he reveals.

A Mahatma's duties include the preparation and selection of persons who wish to receive Knowledge, the actual initiation into the practical techniques of this meditation, and nurturing the growth of disciples through spiritual discourses.

Mahatmas live under traditional monastic vows. Their lives are spent travelling throughout the world to where there are persons seeking greater self-knowledge. Among followers of Guru Maharaj Ji Mahatmas are accorded great respect because of the social service which they perform and the close rapport they develop with other disciples of Guru Maharaj Ji.

BACKGROUND: Mahatma Jagdeo has been a member of Divine Light Mission since September 1969. At this time he was working for the Indian Government Service. Immediately after becoming a member of the Mission, he became very active in doing service for the Mission in Calcutta, India. Within one month he became President of the Calcutta branch of Divine Light Mission. During this time he also taught Hindi at Eastern Railways Headquarters in Calcutta.

In September, 1973 he left his teaching position, wishing to completely dedicate his life to serving humanity through selflessly serving Divine Light Mission.

In October, 1973 the Patron of Divine Light Mission, pleased with his capabilities and complete dedication, gave him permission to act and perform the duties of Mahatma, initiating people into practical spiritual Knowledge.

At that time he came to the United States, beginning to serve in the full-fledged capacity of Mahatma. He speaks fluent English.

Hear "Knowledge"

Mahatma Jagdeo, a close disciple of Guru Maharaj Ji will speak Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Room B112 of the Cook Physical Science Building, University of Vermont. The topic of discussion will be the meditation called 'Knowledge" which is revealed by Guru Maharaj Ji.

This "Knowledge" allows us to directly experience the pure conciousness within us. It does not involve blind faith in any philosophy or theory. It is a matter of experience, not of any attitudes or beliefs. It is also possible to practice this meditation without interrupting one's normal activities. It can be practised while eating, walking, talking, working, playing--24 hours a day.

In order to give this Knowledge to those who sincerely want it, Guru Maharaj Ji has trained and appointed 500 instructors, called mahatmas. Only a mahatma is able to impart this inner experience. The word 'mahatma' is derived from two Hindi root words meaning 'great soul.' This title of respect is given by Maharaj Ji to certain disciples who have been chosen to transmit the meditation he reveals.

A mahatma's duties include the preparation and selection of persons who wish to receive Knowledge, the actual initiation into the practical techniques of this meditation, and nurturing the growth of disciples through spiritual discourse.

Mahatmas live under traditional monastic vows. Among followers of Guru Maharaj Ji, mahatmas are accorded great respect because of the special service they perform and the close rapport they develop with other disciples of Guru Maharaj Ji.

The public is invited to attend. Admission is free. Mahatma Jagdeo is being sponsored by the Divine Information Center, Marsett Road, Shelburne.

Computer Students Outwit "Big Mac"

LOS ANGELES -- (EARTH NEWS) -- Twenty six students at Caltech University here stand about a one-in-two chance of winning most of the prizes in a massive giveaway contest sponsored by the McDonald's hamburger chain.

The students took advantage of a loophole in the contest rules that did not specify that all entry blanks had to be handwritten. Armed with a university computer, they ran off 1.2 million entry blanks with each student's name on no less than 40,000 blanks. Handwritten entries numbered around 2.4 million, giving the students a probability of winning half the prizes.

The prizes include five automobiles, a five-year supply of free groceries four three-months supplies of groceries, and 1,850 $5 gift certificates to McDonald's.

McDonalds officials, who first considered cancelling the contest, have now decided to go ahead with it. However, to neutralize the effect of the ballot-stuffing, the company will have two drawings. Every time a student wins a prize, the company will award a duplicate prize to a non-student or at least to a handwritten entry.

A spokesperson for the McDonald's advertising firm commented, "They're obviously bright students, but I don't think they clearly understood what we were trying to do."

Military Studies Presents Awards

At the April 16 107th annual University of Vermont's ROTC Military Awards Ceremony at the Ira Allen Chapel, 20 cadets and a former English professor, received awards for their contributions to the Military Studies Department at the University.

The cadets' military and scholastic achievements were recognized as they received awards from professional and patriotic societies.

The one special award went to Dr. Betty Bandel, a Shakespearian scholar, who served as a major in the Women's Army Corps and has worked closely with the University's military studies program.

The special guest speaker was Lt. Col. Lewis S. Sorley, III, of the U.S. Army War College. Representing the University administration at the ceremony was Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, while Maj. Gen. Reginald Cram, Vermont's State Adjutant General, represented the state. Also in attendance was Brigadier Gen. Phillip A. Allicon, Deputy Vt. State Adjutant General, who presented The Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America Medal.

Award winners were:

The Wadsworth Smith Saber Award: To the outstanding senior cadet, Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Maurice J. Morey.

The General Douglas MacArthur Medal of the Retired Officers Association Award: To the Sophomore Cadet for high academic achievement and outstanding leadership potential, Cadet Corporal Charles F. McMaster.

The Army Superior Cadet Award: For outstanding leadership and academic proficiency in ROTC, Cadet Major Francis L. McVeigh, Cadet Major Theodore P. Landry, Cadet Corporal Winston G. Curtin and Cadet Private First Class Clair E. Conzelmen.

The Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America Medal Award: For Academic Achievement, Cadet Private First Class Miriam J. McCarthy.

The Association of the United States Army Award: To the Cadet who has contributed most, through Leadership, to the ROTC Program, Cadet Master Sergeant Robert H. Twitchell.

The Association of the United States Army Award: For Excellence in the study of Military History, Cadet Corporal William G. Cioffi, Jr.

The Daughters of the American Revolution Award: To a senior cadet who has demonstrated qualities of Dependability, Good Character, and Leadership Ability, Cadet Major Dane W. Shortsleeve.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars Award: To the most proficient member of ROTC, Cadet Private First Class Frances E. Olmsted.

The Reserve Officers Association Medal Award: To the cadet in the senior or junior class who has shown the greatest versatility and participation in the ROTC Program, Cadet First Lieutenant John C. Schmidt.

The Sergeants Medal Award: To the Cadet selected best at drill, Cadet Sergeant First Class Jeffery J. Rosinda.

The 1975 Distinguished Citizen Award: For exemplifying the qualities which the ROTC of the University of Vermont most desires to emulate, Dr. Betty Bandel, Professor of English, University of Vermont.

The American Legion Award: For military excellence, Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Maurice J. Morey and Cadet Master Sergeant Alan L. Moloff.

The American Legion Award: For scholastic excellence, Cadet Major Francis L. McVeigh and Cadet Sergeant Major Theodore P. Landry.

The American Veterans Reserve Officers' Training Corps Award: In recognition of devotion to duty and willingness to serve God and Country, Cadet Captain Donald K. Naramore.

The Most Improved MS IV Cadet Award: In leadership, Cadet First Lieutenant Craig L. Robinson.

The Sons of the American Revolution Award: For outstanding traits of character and ROTC proficiency, Cadet Corporal Dean P. Terry and Cadet Private First Class Gregory J. Bradner.

The National Sojourners Award: To the Cadet who has contributed most to encourage and demonstrate Americanism at UVM, Cadet Corporal Martha Bauver.

The Military Order of the World Wars Merit Award: For military and scholastic excellence, Cadet First Lieutenant Brett P. Hoffman.

The Mouseketeers Revisited

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. -- (Earth News) -- To a lot of people, growing up in the Fifties meant ducktails, malt shops, jitterbugging, and the Mickey Mouse Club. The daily visits with the Mouseketeers had most of us squatting in front of our nine-inch screens with glazed eyes fixed upon the likes of Cubby, Karen, Cheryl, Bobby, Darlene, Doreen, and Annette as they tap-danced their way to "Mouseketardom."

That was 20 years ago, but those young, freshly scrubbed faces are still with us today. The original Mickey Mouse Club is back on the air this year, syndicated nationally. The return of the series has caused many of the original twelve Mouseketeers to renew their friendships, and their observations about the Mickey Mouse years include some rather spicy revelations.

Karen Pendleton, who always was coupled with Cubby O'Brien, recalls that "Cubby was really my best friend -- I didn't have anyone else -- but we had off-camera fights all the time. Cubby was a grade ahead of me in school, but I talked him into staying back so we'd be together... I'll bet he never forgave me."

Cubby, who was eight when the show began in 1955, says that while the Mouseketeers were protected by the Disney staff ("No dirty words were allowed to be spoken on the set"), they still "went through normal growing up problems." Among them, puberty.

Doreen Tracey, who now works for Frank Zappa's record label Disc-Reet, reveals, "At the time, I thought of Annette and Cheryl as my closest friends. We were all very big on these senior classmen (at Van Nuys High) who belonged to a car club called the 'High Hats.' We would all go out drinking and smoking and necking and kissing. We would make out in the cars and then go back to the house and play little obscene games."

Bobby Burgess remembers that Annette Funnicello, whom Darlene Gillespie now refers to as "the one with the really good ears," was extremely boy crazy all of her life." But, concedes Bobby, "she didn't like the (boy) Mouseketeers. She liked the older cameramen or Tim Considine (Spin of the "Spin and Marty" segment of the show)." Bobby is now a dancer on the Lawrence Welk Show.

Lonnie Burr was only 12 when he became a mouseketeer, but he remembers the extracurricular activities of the group well. "We were at the Disneyland Hotel (shortly before it opened), and the kids somehow -- I don't know how they managed this because the parents were pretty heavy -- but they arranged an unchaperoned party with most of us in one room having what was called at the time a necking party, or petting party."

Lonnie, like several other of the boy Mouseketeers, made repeated plays for Annette. "We were the first Mouseketeers to go steady," he laughs. "It was a very short time. Her father did not like the idea of her going steady. I gave her the ring, and she gave it back to me at a party about two hours later."

But, aside from their social memories, the Mouseketeers universally believe that they were part of an excellent children's television show. Cubby, who has gone on to become a musician for both Carol Burnett and the Carpenters, says, "While 'Sesame Street' is a very educational show, our show was special because kids can relate to young people performing. That's why our old shows still work today."

Or, as Darlene -- now 23 -- puts it, "My own kids are watching the show now. It's tough for them to understand that they're watching their Mommy when she was 14. They just like the show. That today's kids can still appreciate a show we made 20 years ago indicates that we did something right." (NOTE: This story was compiled from interviews by Larry Balmagia of the UCLA Daily Bruin, and Lew Erwin for Earth News Radio.)

Mozart Festival 1975

(continued from page nine)

Sonatas and fantasiast wil be offered Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the UVM recital hall, followed on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel by Mozart trios with the Beaux Arts Trio.

The Festival will return to the Shelburne Farms Coach Barn Friday at 8 p.m. for "The Salzberg Mozart," and will conclude Saturday at 8 p.m. in the First Congregational Church with a final concert by the New York Chamber Soloists, vocal soloists, and the UVM Choral Union.

Workshops and master classes, another feature of the Vermont Mozart Festival, will be offered with members of Festival performing groups and visiting musicians.

Chamber music workshops will be held between July 21 and 26 with members of the New York Chamber Soloists, the Festival Winds and the Fine Arts Quartet.

Flutist Julius Baker will conduct master classes July 28 – Aug 1, and Pianist Menahem Pressler will conduct master classes Aug 4 – 8.

A series of courses and lectures on "The Music of Mozart," the Festival Mozart Institute, will be offered July 14 – Aug 1.

For horsemen and horsewomen, the American School of Dressage will conduct a series of workshops from July 21 to 25. In addition to the free, public carousel preceding the formal opening concert July 20, the School will present a formal dressage exhibition at UVM's Centennial Field Sunday, July 27 at 3 p.m., for which admission will be charged.

The Vermont Mozart Festival is sponsored by the University of Vermont and takes the place of the UVM Lane Summer Series.

The Festival Director is Melvin Kaplan. UVM Prof. William Metcalfe directs the Mozart Institute, and the Festival business administrator is Jack Trevithick, director of the UVM Lane Series.

Further information including registration forms for classes and workshops, and admissions, may be obtained from the Lane Series Office, Waterman Building at the University of Vermont, telephone 656-3418.

Argentina Professor To Speak

SPEAKER: Professor Raul H. Castagnino, Universidad Nacional de la Plata (Argentina) and State University of New York at Albany

TOPIC: "La suerte del cuento"

DATE: April 29, 1975

TIME: 8:00 p.m.

PLACE: John Dewey Lounge, Old Mill

"Situacion actual de la critica literaria".

DATE: April 30, 1975.

TIME: 10:00 a.m.

PLACE: Area and International Studies Bldg., 479 Main Street.

Professor Castagnino, who is a member of the Argentine Academy of Letters, has published several books and numerous articles on Latin American writers, literary criticism, and theatre. Among his most significant works are: El analisis literario (1953); Teoria del teatro (1956); El tiempo y la expresion literaria (1967); Escritores hispanoamericanos desde otros angulos de simpatia (1971) Semiotica, ideologia, y teatro hispanoamericano contemporaneo (1974).

The lectures will be given in Spanish and will be followed by a question and answer period. Sponsored by: Latin American Studies Program, Department of Romance Languages.

Down To Earth Vegetable Gardening

by Dick Raymond, Garden Way Pubs., 160 p., 8 x 11 quality paperback, many illustrations, $4.95.

Dick Raymond is a gardener, not an author, and therein lies all the difference! An author can tell you what he researched; an experienced, old-time gardener can tell you exactly what he does. Dick Raymond is a practical, devoted full-time gardener and has been for 40 years – a real, serious, hands-in-the-earth gardener, who brings gardening down to the simple realities.

And of his fantastically successful wide-row planting (it actually triples yields, and simplifies your efforts), he says, "Wide-row planting, which makes old-fashioned single rows seem anemic and downright wasteful, is but one example of the results of creative thinking and effort in your garden."

Vegetable Gardening Know How is loaded with this kind of invaluable advice, the kinds of things Dick has been testing and doing for years now.

This is not a book of fads and tricks, it's basic gardening at its best! A distillation of years of collective experiences – of experiences handed down from generation to generation and shared among neighbors and friends.

The reader will be amazed at the never before experienced results you can have as you apply the advice and recommendations crammed into every page.

Commencement Exercises, Where To Go

Commencement exercises for 1975 have been planned with the individual student in mind. Seven ceremonies have been scheduled in an attempt to eliminate the lengthy and overcrowded ceremony of previous years. The emphasis is on maintaining the individual touch, i.e. each student will receive his or her degrees individually. Each ceremony is expected to last approximately an hour with exception of the College of Arts and Sciences which shouldn't exceed two hours. Remarks will be brief.

It has been decided through the Senior Class Committee, the Commencement Committee and the University Store, that souvenir or "one-time" caps and gowns and hoods will be used for the ceremonies May 16, 17 and 18. The University Store will be offering these outfits for sale at the following prices. The color of all outfits will be black with the exceptions of green for associate degrees.

To assist the University Store in ordering the wide variety of sizes necessary for such a program it has been requested that you fill in the necessary information and return this slip to any register operator. Measurements of cap size will be taken at the store.

NAME _____

CHEST _____ CAP SIZE _____

WEIGHT _____ HEIGHT _____

PURCHASE RATES PLUS TAX
Bachelor's outfit (cap, gown, collar and tassel)	6.25	.19	6.44
Master's outfit	13.75	.42	14.17
cap, gown, and tassel only	6.75	.21	6.96
hood only	7.00	.21	7.21
hood for other than UVM graduate (for Faculty)	9.25	.28	9.53
Doctor's outfit	21.00	.63	21.63
cap, gown, and tassel only	12.50	.38	12.88
hood only	8.50	.26	8.76
hood for other than UVM graduate (for Faculty)	10.75	.33	11.08

While you are returning your slip the bookstore also has available samples of the announcements and you can make your arrangements for this at the same time. Tickets will not be needed for admission to the Commencement ceremonies.

The schedule for the seven ceremonies is as follows:

FRIDAY, MAY 16
9 a.m. – Ira Allen Chapel
School of Home Economics
School of Natural Resources
College of Agriculture

1 p.m. – Ira Allen Chapel
College of Education

4 p.m. – Ira Allen Chapel
College of Engineering, Mathematics, and Business Administration

SATURDAY, MAY 17
10:00 a.m. – Patrick Gymnasium
School of Allied Health Services
School of Nursing
2:00 p.m. – Ira Allen Chapel
College of Medicine

SUNDAY, MAY 18
10:00 a.m. – Ira Allen Chapel
Graduate College
2:00 p.m. – Patrick Gymnasium
College of Arts and Sciences

The academic procession for those commencement ceremonies to be held in Ira Allen Chapel will form on the first floor of Votey Hall, one-half hour prior to the start of the ceremony. The processions for ceremonies at Patrick Gymnasium will form in Gutterson Field House, also one-half hour before the commencement. There will be signs posted and faculty will be present at each location to assist you.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

by Arnold Werner M. D.

Address letters to Dr. Arnold Werner, Box 974, East Lansing, MI 48823

QUESTION: Recently, while home on vacation, I had a strange and frustrating experience. I went out again with an old boy friend, and as the evening progressed we renewed old intimacies...or at least tried to. We had not been together for over a year during which time he had been having relations with his current lady friend.

We had a very poor time of it and he thought he had gotten into a sexual rut. Because I wasn't responding as his girl friend does, he couldn't become aroused. Do you think this could be possible or could he have been having guilt feelings from being with me again when he felt it was wrong to be doing so? We have been friends for over four years and have been lovers on and off for 2 1/2 years.

ANSWER: Such a complex question! If he wasn't aroused why was he trying to have sex with you? The rut theory doesn't impress me too much. People in sexual ruts usually are more aroused by a change of pace, at least for a little while. The guilt theory might have something going for it, although it need not be a full blown, teeth gnashing and hand wringing affair. Men are very susceptible to having sexual performance inhibited by psychological factors and even a small preoccupation could do the trick.

Possibly, over the period of time that you have known each other, he has changed or perhaps both of you have changed. A sexual relationship between the two of you may not make as much sense now as it once did and this was reflected in your current meeting. People and friendships change with time.

QUESTION: I have heard that wearing platform shoes and high heels can cause varicose veins. Is that medically correct?

ANSWER: If platform shoes and high heels cause varicose veins, I am sure it occurs subsequent to fracturing an ankle after losing one's balance in those hideous contraptions. By themselves, they should not cause varicose veins although I understand that some people get backaches with them. While all high heel shoes and all platform shoes make one more vulnerable to ankle twists, the ones with inadequate heel support or entirely open heels are the most dangerous.

QUESTION: I have a chronic case of blood shot eyes whenever I smoke marijuana. I'm representing a lot of stoned students by asking "Why do people get red eyes and how can we correct the situation without reducing our consumption?"

ANSWER: In a sense, the answer is obvious in that there is something in the marijuana which causes the small blood vessels in the whites of the eyes (sclarae) to dilate. Normally, these blood vessels are so small that they are not visible to the naked eye, but when they dilate, they become quite apparent.

There are a variety of eye drops on the market which contain blood vessel constrictors which clear up the red eyes. My understanding is that they are a stock item in the medicine cabinets of marijuana users.

As you probably know, the occasional use of marijuana has so proved to be a harmless activity for most people, though illegal. Daily or frequent consumption of marijuana however, might be associated with a variety of psychological problems and/or changes.

...Food Day

(continued from page ten)

self-sufficiency gardening in communities which in turn would lower Vermont's almost exclusively imported food bill.

BLT is also pushing for a re-institution of the "Free Breakfast Program" started 2 years ago, then dropped. The School Board will decide the issue in May.

Camping foods, including granola and Logan Bread, contrasted against the "Terrible Ten", a collection of instant edibles charged with chemical preservatives in another of the Fair's displays.

Other groups represented were Mother Nature's Health Food Store, UVM Extension Service with ideas on making ice-cream and keeping land in Agricultural use, Living and Learning Nutrition Program and an exhibit entitled "What's in Your Candy Bar?" which revealed carnuba wax as an ingredient in commercial candies. Of the natural foods candy bars, the "Goody Yeast" deserves high praise.

The films Eat, Drink and Be Wary and Hunger captivated audiences who learned valuable facts about the foods they eat.

In sum, the Food Day observance was experienced by several thousand people, either by the dining halls or in the Fair. A freshness of attitudes and an evolving sense of values pervaded the day's activities. One observer left the Fair noting "We have accepted the fact that a new era has come upon us; now all we have to do is to live it." For all, the Food Day events were a new lesson in how to live.

Robinson Hall Places Available

Robinson Hall has several openings available for the coming academic year. The old converted carriage stable on Redstone campus has been the dorm at this university for the past several years which has fostered an atmosphere for people wishing to pursue Environmental interests.

The students this year have worked, too often without recognition, on a variety of concerns from the recently passed Nuclear Power bill to campus wide paper recycling to the notable Food Day Fair.

If you would be interested in living and working in Robinson Hall, drop by or give us a call at 656-3085 or 656-3086. Please act soon – there isn't much time left.

Sigmund Freud

by Hillary Jameson (4/4/75)

Dedicated to Sigmund Freud, No. 2
A relationship with me is as deep and hot
As bubbling water boiling in a kettle pot
Disguised as ice I'm sometimes cool...
Acting "gay" like a frigid fool.
When I melt out I sometimes feel
No man who's touched me has been real.
He comes to me with sour kindness
Echoing that love is blindness.
The passionate carress I crave
Splits the strips of my sturdy stave
Sinking into my fluid soul
He plunges deep to reach his goal.
Never to return, the man goes.
Am I blind? Are friends really foes?
Seething inside, my soul churning,
I feel my heart in need yearning
A tender, urgent longing still possesses me
Because loving and leaving I just cannot see

Tracksters Lose Tough One To UNH

The UVM Track team traveled to Durham New Hampshire on April 16 to take on the UNH Wildcats on their quarter mile oval. The Cats were overtaken in the meet 82–72 by a technicality in the form of a new NCAA rule. The rule allows no false starts in any of the running events and if it occurs the participant is disqualified from the event. In the first running event the 4 x 110 yard relay the UVM team jumped the gun, therefore the Cats lost five points, the UNH gained five, which proved to be the margin of victory. This is just another case in which the NCAA makes a ruling, yet is so far removed from the actual playing field that they have no conception of what is going on.

Otherwise, a really good track meet took place with many excellent performances by Catamount Cindermen.

Mike Bilza came up with his usual great performance taking three events, the shot put (48' 4½"), the hammer (153'9") and the discus (141' 10").

Peter Wieth showed good strength coming off the indoor season, beating Yankee Conference Cross-Country Champion, George Reed, with a strong kick in the mile run, with a time of 4:22.9. One half hour later Pete ran a strategic half mile, doing it in a bad way to Totarian in 2:02.6.

Another bright spot in the day was our 440 yard runners, which are the backbone of any track team. It was the first time in UVM history (at least as long as this reporter can remember) that a UVM team swept the quarter mile run. Jeff Beck won the race in 51.2, followed by Tommy Harrington, and Eric Nisesson.

Hardworking Billy Wright took the javelin with a mighty throw of 191'8". Mike Berry took the 2-mile run in 9:31, and Jeff Lindgren topped the high jump with a 6'4" effort. The mile relay team looked good, winning with a time of 3:30.6.

Last Saturday, April 19, while Paul Revere made his historic ride, Gerald Ford attended the Boston College Relays where UVM competed. The high-jump crew won their event with Jeff Lindgren leading the way at 6'7". Steve Lynch at 6'0", and Mike McLane at 5'10". The sprint medley team was going for a UVM record until Jeff Beck pulled up with a hamstring strain and was put out of the event.

This Saturday the UVM team travels to Orono, Maine to renew their classic rivalry with the Black Bears of the University of Maine.

Remember, all you UVM track fans, the Yankee Conference Outdoor Championship track meet which features the best track talent in New England, will be held in Burlington, at the Archie T. Post Field on Saturday May 3.

Results:
1. Long Jump
1. Fetzner (NH) 19'10"
2. Pendry (NH) 19'5½"
3. Lindgren (VT) 19'3½"
2. Hammer
1. Bilsza (VT) 153'9"
2. Partridge (VT) 149'5"
3. Daniels (NH) 146'2"
3. Triple Jump
1. Broll (NH) 41'3½"
2. Macklin (NH) 40'4½"
3. Lindoren (VT) 40'0"
4. 4x110 Relay
UNH 47.4
5. One Mile Run
1. Writh (VT) 4:22.9
2. Reed (NH) 4:24.5
3. Caruccio (NH) 4:26.9
6. Discus
1. Bilsza (VT) 141'10"
2. Irving (NH) 133'3"
3. Burgess (NH) 119'2"
7. 120 High Hurdles
1. Fetzner (NH) 14.9
2. Kauffman (VT) 16.0
3. Looney (VT) 16.4
8. 440 yd. Dash
1. Berk (VT) 51.2
2. Harrington (VT) 51.6
3. Nisesson (VT) 52.2
9. 120 yd. Dash
1. Farnsworth (NH) 12.5
2. Buckley (NH) 12.6
3. Hinchey (NH) 12.8
10. Shot Put
1. Bilsza (VT) 48'4½"
2. Sauchelli (NH) 43'9"
3. Chase (NH) 42'2½"
11. 880 yd. Run
1. Writh (VT) 2:02.6
2. Tatarian (NH) 2:03.5
3. Kolor (NH) 2:05.1
12. 440 Intermediate Hurdles
1. Finger (NH) 59.0
2. Kauffman (VT) 59.2
3. Macklin (NH) 61.4
13. Pole Vault
1. Rich (NH) 14'0"
2. Marcotte (NH) 13'6"
3. Iverson (VT) 12'0"
14 220 yd. Dash
1. Farnsworth (NH) 23.4
2. Harrington (VT) 23.5
3. Berk (VT) 23.5
15. High Jump
1. Lindgren (VT) 6'4"
2 Fetzner (NH) 6'2"
3 Lynch (VT) 6'0"
16. Two Mile Run
1. Berry (VT) 9:31.0
2. Madden (NH) 9:33.0
3. Suomi (NH) 9'42.4
17 4x440 Relay
Vermont 3:30.6
UNH 3:33.3
18 Javelin
1. Wright (VT) 191'8"
2 Letourneay (NH) 176'6"
3. Tear (NH) 160'9"

Final Score:
UNH 82 UVM 72

RAP CORNER

by Jeff Twiss

This will be the final issue of Rap Corner. To start off, it is pretty "bush" that the Los Angeles Dodger fans and other fans have to throw "debris" at left-fielder Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds. Rose has created the image that he is a bully in the eyes of the fans, yet really he's just displaying his hustle. If fans keep it up, I can see why Rose doesn't want to play in Dodger Stadium.

To create another storm, I feel that CBS can do a better job in getting announcers for their basketball NBA games. Oscar Robertson was a fantastic player, but as an announcer he just doesn't make it. He's like a cheerleader. He "ooh's" and "ahh's" at every play. He could give better insight and strategy to the game instead of being like he is.

Well, as the final weeks boil down, it looks like the Flyers or Canadiens for the Stanley Cup. I'll go out on the limb and say the Flyers. Parent and Dryden have "their shit together", so to say. But Phylly's defense is strong and they are getting balanced scoring.

One final issue is: I have a conditioning class with track Coach Ed Kusiak and believe me everyone should take it to fulfill their PE requirement. Our class ran 3 440's all under 75 seconds. Okay, now that is 2½ laps around the indoor track for just one 440. Now all of us were beat after running these three and just imagine someone running a mile (10 times around indoor track) in 4 minutes, try it sometime. Try and push yourself—it's amazing the athletes that can do it in that time. They certainly deserve recognition. Have a great summer!

... Dennis Lambert

(continued from page fifteen)

could go out for it because there isn't a man's team, is that equality? So what is the answer?

"Certain things must be equal and the problem is figuring out how the practical aspects are to be worked out. Title 9 is still going through the early stages and things must be ironed out."

The answers are complicated. Women deserve to get an equal amount of expenditures, according to their needs. Yet title 9 should not destroy men's athletics.

Educational institutions can not allocate equal amounts of funds at the present level and would have to chop the budget of men's sports by a substantial degree if pure equality is used as a measuring stick.

It seems that it would be possible to have women get their share without destroying men's sports. One only hopes HEW doesn't go overboard with title 9.

Capen Is Captain Of X-Country

Junior Lynn Capen (So Londonderry, Vt.) has been elected captain of the 1975 University of Vermont cross country team, it was announced recently by Vermont athletic director, Denis Lambert.

Capen, also a two-miler on the indoor and outdoor track teams, was one of the mainstays of last year's 8–2 cross country team that also finished second in the Yankee Conference meet hosted by Vermont last November. The Catamount harriers also finished seventh out of 73 teams in the New Englands.

"We are very pleased with the choice of Lynn as our captain for next fall. A very hard worker, his enthusiasm will undoubtedly rub off on the other runners," said head coach, Bill Nedde.

Capen succeeds Burlington's Mike Berry, the lone senior on last year's club, as the harrier captain.

Intramural Volleyball

Five teams competed in a round robin playoff to determine the All-Campus Champion. The following teams were the winners of their respective leagues:

League A – Quacks A (Med '78)
League B – Quacks AA (Med '78)
League C – Harris Hall
League D – B.B. Dodge
League E – Wasted

Quacks A won the playoff tournament with a record of four wins and no losses. B.B. Dodge finished in second place.

Members of the All-Campus Championship Volleyball team, Quacks A (Med '78) are as follows: Bob Revere, Ray Chagnon, Bob Shaw, Chris Snow, Jeff Lovitz, Chuck Abrams, Mark Helms, Phil Feveroda, Rick Morris, John Burke.

DAKINS MOUNTAIN SHOP
227 MAIN ST.
Backpacking
Mountaineering
Outdoor clothing

FOR SPRING & SUMMER TRIPPING
CAMP 7
High Country Sleeper warm to 10°, 32 oz. down fill
An excellent 3 season bag
Three sizes from 73.95
Free Parking parking in rear

Dennis Lam

by Norm Robinson

-(Editors Note: This is a follow up on last week's article – "Women's Sports on the Rise" and Title 9. It is an attempt to understand this controversial bill and to make some of its ideas a little clearer. The University of Vermont's Athletic Director, Dennis Lambert, gives some of his opinions on Title 9.)

It is widely believed that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) has sent a final draft of regulations implementing the prohibition of sex discrimination in title 9 of the Education Amendments Act of 1972 to the White House.

Although many educational institutions are very interested in the draft, it appears as though HEW doesn't intend to make it public until after the President's approval has been secured.

If the regulations are approved, they will go to Congress, which has 45 days to decide if they are consistent with the statue from which they draw their authority.

Because of the mystery surrounding the final draft, there are still many question marks as to what title 9 will encompass. As last week's article stated, high schools and colleges will not have to allow women to try out for men's teams in contact sports. Physical education classes won't be intergrated either but there are still a number of queries about title 9.

This reporter went to Dennis Lambert, the Athletic Director of the University of Vermont to get his views on title 9.

"There are aspects that both men and women didn't like in title 9. good, but the must still be answered Lam

This is the being worked have an athlet 95% is for m only 5% is for problem is, wh

"Certain equal, and y sports receive either What is

At the Vermont, women's spor It's true the more money

Baseb

by Deb Oakley

With most of the snow already melted and with Spring in the air, the UVM baseball club anxiously looks to the upcoming Spring '75 season. Coach Paul Trono has 11 returning club members from last fall which will form the nucleus of the team.

The team leaders this season will be captains Tony Skorput and Jim Edgerton. Tony, a senior, batted .407 last season while holding down the position of short stop. Jim, a sophomore who manned third base last season, batted .424 with six home runs.

Manning the mound will be Senior Skip Van Dine whose earned run average was 1.72, Senior Phil Branon with a 2.49 E.R.A., Sophomore Tony Segale with an E.R.A. of 2.58, and Sophomore Malcolm Kimbell with an E.R.A. of 4.33. A new pitcher joining the club's p Wright, who will asset to t

The this sea grabs. L Sophomo been Snodgra thrower team.

Join Jim Edg be Jeff has com to take position being b Glen B newcom

The manned Skorput sophom They b

Water Polo A

Water polo at UVM? That could very well be the case next year, if the enthusiasm displayed by the combined forces of the men's and women's swim teams continue.

For the past few weeks the group has been gathering on Friday afternoons for a somewhat informal game of water polo. Even though these are all apparently good swimmers, it seems somewhat miraculous that both teams leave the water all in one piece. The game itself is played entirely in the deep water, so persons playing have to exhibit some amount of stamina, when it's usually required to tread water time. conta drowne or you that m get the tiring b The improv since game f own profes team

The team's so the turn playing

DAVE' AUTOMO
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
VW BUG BRAKE JOB
$49.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOST SERVICE

...nund Freud

...by Hillary Jameson (4/4/75)

...igmund Freud, No. 2
...with me is as deep and hot
...ter boiling in a kettle pot
...I'm sometimes cool
...ke a frigid fool
...t I sometimes feel
...touched me has been real
...e with sour kindness
...ave is blindness
...carrion I crave
...s of my sturdy stave
...y fluid soul
...p to reach his goal
...n, the man goes
...re friends really foes"
...e, my soul charming,
...it is need: yearning
...ot longing still possesses me
...g and leaving I just cannot see

...gh One To UNH

...ccess (141)'
...owed good
...the indoor
...Yankee
...Country
...Reed, with
...mile run,
...(One half
...a strategic
...a bad way
...spot in the
...rd runners.
...one of any
...the first
...y (at least
...sporter can
...UVM team
...mile run
...ce in 54.2.
...Tommy
...Niemann.
...lly Wright
...a mighty
...Mike Berry
...n in 9'31.
...topped the
...'4" effort.
...am looked
...a time of
...April 19,
...made his
...erald Ford
...on College
...competed
...ow three
...Lengthen
...6'7", Steve
...and Mike
...The sprint
...going for a
...Jeff Beck
...hamstring
...out of the
...the UVM
...rono, Maine
...ssic rivalry
...ears of the
...
...ll you UVM
...he Yankee
...Outdoor
...track meet
...e best track
...land, will be
...ston, at the
...t Field on

...NH) 19'10"
...NH) 19'5½"
...) (VT) 19'3½"

2. Hammer
1. Bilsza (VT) 153'9"
2. Partridge (VT) 149'5"
3. Daniels (NH) 146'2"
3. Triple Jump
1. Broll (NH) 41'3½"
2. Macklin (NH) 40'4½"
3. Lindoren (VT) 40'0"
4. 4x110 Relay
UNH 47.4
5. One Mile Run
1. Writh (VT) 4'22.9
2. Reed (NH) 4'24.5
3. Caruccio (NH) 4'26.9
6. Discus
1. Bilsza (VT) 141'10"
2. Irving (NH) 133'3"
3. Burgess (NH) 119'2"
7. 120 High Hurdles
1. Fetzner (NH) 14.9
2. Kauffman (VT) 16.0
3. Looney (VT) 16.4
8. 440 yd. Dash
1. Berk (VT) 51.2
2. Harrington (VT) 51.6
3. Nisenson (VT) 52.2
9. 120 yd. Dash
1. Farnsworth (NH) 12.5
2. Buckley (NH) 12.6
3. Hinchey (NH) 12.8
10. Shot Put
1. Bilsza (VT) 48'4½"
2. Sauchelli (NH) 43'9"
3. Chase (NH) 42'2½"
11. 880 yd. Run
1. Writh (VT) 2'02.6
2. Tatarian (NH) 2'03.5
3. Kolor (NH) 2'05.1
12. 440 Intermediate Hurdles
1. Finger (NH) 59.0
2. Kauffman (VT) 59.2
3. Macklin (NH) 61.4
13. Pole Vault
1. Rich (NH) 14'0"
2. Marcotte (NH) 13'6"
3. Iverson (VT) 12'0"
14. 220 yd. Dash
1. Farnsworth (NH) 23.4
2. Harrington (VT) 23.5
3. Berk (VT) 23.5
15. High Jump
1. Lindgren (VT) 6'4"
2. Fetzner (NH) 6'2"
3. Lynch (VT) 6'0"
16. Two Mile Run
1. Berry (VT) 9:31.0
2. Madden (NH) 9:33.0
3. Suomi (NH) 9'42.4
17. 4x440 Relay
Vermont 3:30.6
UNH 3:33.3
18. Javelin
1. Wright (VT) 191'8"
2. Letourneau (NH) 176'6"
3. Tear (NH) 160'9"
Final Score
UNH 82 UVM 72

...ls Captain Of X-Country

...n Capen (So...
...t.) has been...
...of the 1975...
...Vermont cross...
...m, it was...
...recently by...
...letic director.

...a two miler...
...and outdoor...
...as one of the...
...st year's 8-2...
...team that also...
...in the Yankee...
...et hosted by...
...November. The...
...harriers also...
...th out of 73...
...w Englands.
...ry pleased with...
...Lynn as our...

captain for next fall. A very hard worker, his enthusiasm will undoubtedly rub off on the other runners," said head coach, Bill Nedde.

Capen succeeds Burlington's Mike Berry, the lone senior on last year's club, as the harrier captain.

Intramural Volleyball

Five teams competed in a round robin playoff to determine the All-Campus Champion. The following teams were the winners of their respective leagues:

League A - Quacks A (Med '78)
League B - Quacks AA (Med '78)
League C - Harris Hall
League D - B.B. Dodge
League E - Wasted

Quacks A won the playoff tournament with a record of four wins and no losses. B.B. Dodge finished in second place.

Members of the All-Campus Championship Volleyball team, Quacks A (Med '78) are as follows: Bob Reven, Ray Chagnon, Bob Shaw, Chris Snow, Jeff Lovitz, Chuck Abrams, Mark Holme, Phil Peverada, Rick Morris, John Burke.

ER TRIPPING
P7

Dennis Lambert Talks on Title 9

by Norm Robinson

(Editors Note: This is a follow up on last week's article "Women's Sports on the Rise" and Title 9. It is an attempt to understand this controversial bill and to make some of its ideas a little clearer.

The University of Vermont's Athletic Director, Dennis Lambert, gives some of his opinions on Title 9.)

It is widely believed that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) has sent a final draft of regulations implementing the prohibition of sex discrimination in title 9 of the Education Amendments Act of 1972 to the White House.

Although many educational institutions are very interested in the draft, it appears as though HEW doesn't intend to make it public until after the President's approval has been secured.

If the regulations are approved, they will go to Congress, which has 45 days to decide if they are consistent with the statue from which they draw their authority.

Because of the mystery surrounding the final draft, there are still many question marks as to what title 9 will encompass. As last week's article stated, high schools and colleges will not have to allow women to try out for men's teams in contact sports. Physical education classes won't be intergrated either but there are still a number of queries about title 9.

This reporter went to Dennis Lambert, the Athletic Director of the University of Vermont to get his views on title 9.

"There are aspects that both men and women didn't like in title 9. The concept is good, but the practical aspects must still be worked out", answered Lambert.

This is the question that is being worked on. Some schools have an athletic budget where 95% is for men's sports, and only 5% is for women. The big problem is, what is equality?

"Certain things must be equal, and yet not all men's sports receive equal funding either. What is equality?

At the University of Vermont, there are 13 women's sports and 9 men's. It's true the men receive much more money but they bring in much more as well," said Lambert.

It doesn't seem feasible for title 9 to demand equal expenditure for women's athletics as for men's at institutions with major football and basketball programs.

At many Universities, the two programs make enough money to keep the entire athletic budget going. Yet, the women certainly deserve their fair shake.

"The question is, how do you do it without destroying things. Many of the women don't want to get into the recruiting game and the whole thing with scholarships.

The women haven't been treated fairly, but they don't want to get into the financial hassles.

"Everyone recruits," Lambert continued, "in men's sports. None or very few women do. They have a good time and don't get into the troubles that men's programs do.

UVM's women's basketball team plays before very few people and gets little recognition, and maybe that's the way sports was meant to be - I don't know.

There's a women's field hockey team at UVM. A man

(continued on page fourteen)

Soccer Co-captains

Halfback Bob Cleverdon (Wellesley, Mass.) and goalie Jim Taft (Essex Jct., Vt.) were elected co-captains of the 1975 University of Vermont soccer team, it was announced by Denis Lambert, Vermont's Director of Athletics.

Cleverdon, a junior, and one of the co-captains last fall, is considered one of the best halfbacks in the Yankee Conference. In addition to being named a co-captain for the second straight year, he was the recipient of the Hal Grieg Award, presented annually to the player who has contributed "over and above what is expected by the head coach." Says Paul Reinhardt, Vermont's new varsity soccer coach and last year's "B" squad mentor, "Bob was probably one of the steadiest performers on the team last season and I'm very pleased that the players elected him to captain the squad again this year," added Reinhardt.

The other co-captain is netminder Jim Taft, who completed his first season as a regular goalie with the Catamounts, after battling back from knee surgery in 1973. He allowed 1.6 goals a game, registering 102 saves in 12 games, an average of 8.5 saves a game.

The Taft tradition is well known at Vermont and New England, as his older brother, Jeff, captained the soccer team in 1966 and 1967, when he was an All-Yankee Conference and All-New England pick.

At the awards dinner last week (April 8), freahman fullback, Carl Christensen (Essex Jct., Vt.), son of UVM's Director of Physical Education, Charles Christensen was named the team's MVP. Christensen was an All-Yankee Conference first team selection last fall.

Women's Lacrosse

The University of Vermont women's lacrosse team opened up their spring season last Thursday with an exciting victory over Lyndon State. Though the Southwick field was still dotted with muddy areas and even a small patch of snow, Coach Cathy Schiller managed to get the field ready for play.

The first center draw was won by UVM and a goal was scored within the first minute of play. After the first goal, the UVM attack dominated the first half play. The Catamounts defense had little chance to test their skill in the first half. The score at the end of the first twenty-five minute period was an impressive 0-1 for the UVM team. Polly Peterson, UVM goalie relaxed in the sun for most of the game allowing one goal in the first period, by Lyndon State's Sue Howe.

Five more UVM goals in the second period, and two Lyndon State scores ended the game with a 14-3 UVM victory. Scoring by the Catamounts in the game went as follows: Carey Haskell 4, Lynn Lakosa 3; Bev Biar 3, Debi Bloom, 2, Julie Houlbolt 2.

With this decisive win behind them the women's lacrosse team has high hopes for their road trips to Castleton on Tuesday (4/28). If you missed last Thursday's home game, you can watch the lacrosse team on home field against Castleton on May 1, the last day of classes.

Lacrosse Team Wins Two, Loses One

Since the last issue of the Cynic came out, the UVM Lacrosse team has played three games. On Thursday they went down to Middlebury. After getting the run around because they are "only a club," UVM went out on the field and beat them 14-7.

On Saturday the team faced St. Lawrence, probably the toughest team that they will play this season. UVM played a good game tallying more shots, ground balls, clears, and face offs than their opponents. Unfortunately, UVM was not able to put the ball in the goal as many times as St. Lawrence. The final score was 8-3. The UVM scores were two by Todd Brown and one by Mark (Burt) Baynck. Mark Stevenson played a fine game in the goal. With a few breaks, the game might have gone the other way.

After the game, the St. Lawrence coach remarked that he was glad his team wouldn't face us again this year because he thought the score might be different.

On Monday UVM played St. Mike's. It was not much of a contest. By the end of the second quarter UVM was on top 7-0. St. Mike's commanded by their football coach was more of a physical team bent upon knocking around the Cats. But the UVM stickmen weren't intimidated and stuck to their original game plan, which was that of working the ball and taking the good shot. The finesse of the Cats outclassed the St. Mike's bulldozers by a long shot. When it was all over UVM walked off the field with a 9-1 victory. The scoring was well distributed with Todd Brown, George Varga and Spike Jenkins each having two goals.

Doing a top job on defense after a long vacation was Chris (D.B.) Hancock. Chuck Checkatov was super in the goal allowing only one goal.

Late in the fourth period, he was relieved by George "The Hungarian" Varga. Bruce Moffat did a fine job on the midfield.

Today the Cats face a tough Plymouth State team and on Saturday they meet New Hampshire College at the Red Square Affair. Both games should prove to be good contests.

Women's Athletic Advisary Committe Nominess

The Women's Athletic Advisory Committee has announced their Sport Representative Nominees. The 13 women will be narrowed down to a final three in elections held on April 30, by all the members of women's athletic teams. They are:

Karen Archer, a basketball team nominee, from Barrington, Rhode Island. A Physical Education major the sophomore is involved in J.V. Field Hockey, Volleyball, basketball manager and other interests as well.

Sharon Farquharson is the field hockey nominee, from Guilfor, Connecticut. An education major, the freshman is active in softball as well as field hockey.

The Lacrosse team nominee is Jane Griffith. A resident of Burlington, the Phys. Ed. major plays lacrosse and is a cross-country runner as well.

Darlene Maih is a native of Bennington and is the soccer team's nominee. Soccer, basketball, and softball are the sports that the sophomore Phys. Ed. major participates in.

Softball is represented by Lynn Delbianco: From Center, Rutland, Vermont, the Secondary Education major plays soccer and J.V. Basketball.

Alice Lajoie is from Richmond, Vermont and is the volleyball team's nominee. A Phys. Ed. major, she participates in basketball, softball, and volleyball.

The Alpine Ski Team's nominee is Anne Ainsworth. The Fort Wayne, Indiana native is part of the swim team as well.

Janet Lynch is the Gymnastics nominee. The Phys. Ed. major lives in Burlington and is active in both gymnastics and track programs.

Cross-country ski is represented by Lynne Larose. A native of Brattleboro, Vermont, the Phys. Ed. major plays field hockey, lacrosse and ski.

Barbara Matheson is from Wardsboro, Vermont and is the Synchronized Swim team's nominee. The Linguistics major competed in competitive swimming as well.

Competitive swimming is represented by Jeannie Crane. Majoring in Human Nutrition, the junior lives in Guelph, Ontario. She competes in X-C Skiing, Synchronized and competitive swimming and track.

Debi Bloom is a nominee for the tennis team. A native of Longmeadow, Mass., the English and Environmental Studies major is on the tennis team, lacrosse and ice hockey squads.

Carol Degan is the Cross country nominee. The Phys. Ed. major is from Manlius, N.Y. She is also on the track team.

The winners of the election will take part in the voting procedures along with the faculty and coaches on issues involving women's sports.

Baseball Club Eyes New Season

by Deb Oakley

With most of the snow already melted and with Spring in the air, the UVM baseball club anxiously looks to the upcoming Spring '75 season. Coach Paul Trono has 11 returning club members from last fall which will form the nucleus of the team.

The team leaders this season will be captains Tony Skorput and Jim Edgerton. Tony, a senior, batted .407 last season while holding down the position of short stop. Jim, a sophomore who manned third base last season, batted .424 with six home runs.

Manning the mound will be Senior Skip Van Dine whose earned run average was 1.72. Senior Phil Branon with a 2.49 E.R.A., Sophomore Tony Segale with an E.R.A. of 2.58, and Sophomore Malcolm Kimbell with an E.R.A. of 4.33. A new pitcher joining the club's pitching staff is Bill Wright, a Senior, left hander who will hopefully be a great asset to the team.

The position of catcher on this season's club is up for grabs. Last season's catcher, Sophomore Gary Orloff, has been joined by Duke Snodgrass, a strong-armed thrower from the football team.

Joining Tony Skorput and Jim Edgerton in the infield will be Jeff "Scratch" Sadler who has come in from the outfield to take over first base. The position of second baseman is being battled for by Senior Glen Bolster and sophomore newcomer Robbie Gilligan.

The outfield will be manned by Sophomore Jeff Skorput, junior Rick Lavin and sophomore Tom MacNamara. They batted .333, .298 and .333 respectively last season. Helping out in the outfield will be new members to the club, left-hander George Chicanis and Ed Barry.

The baseball club is looking to improve last year's Spring/Fall record of 22-13. Even though the fall season's record was poor (9-9 after starting off 5-1), the club did post big victories against North Adams State (who later beat UMass), Albany State and St. Anselms. It must be remembered that although UVM baseball is only a club, they compete against only varsity teams from the various schools.

The UVM diamond men opened the spring season on Friday, April 18 with a doubleheader at Albany State. Other scheduled games are UVM at RPI in a doubleheader on Tuesday, April 22 and a doubleheader at Plattsburg on Saturday, April 26. Further game schedules will be posted.

Water Polo Anyone?

Water polo at UVM? That could very well be the case next year, if the enthusiasm displayed by the combined forces of the men's and women's swim teams continue.

For the past few weeks the group has been gathering on Friday afternoons for a somewhat informal game of water polo. Even though these are all apparently good swimmers, it seems somewhat miraculous that both teams leave the water all in one piece. The game itself is played entirely in the deep water, so persons playing have to exhibit some amount of stamina, when it's usually required to tread water for lengthy periods of time. Combine that with the constant danger of being drowned by an opposing player or your own team member, for that matter, in the scramble to get the ball - you've got a tiring but exciting game.

There has been a marked improvement in the game plans since the first meeting. It's gone from everyone on their own, to an almost professional-looking game of team work.

This weekend will be the team's last chance at a game - so there should be a good turn-out and some good playing.

PFG - Schedule

Patrick-Forbush-Gutterson Recreation Schedule
Weekend of April 25, 26, and 27

FRIDAY, APRIL 25
GYM - Faculty-Staff none.
POOL - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m. (7-8 under 15 years)
TENNIS - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m.
TRACK - Faculty-Staff 7-10:30 p.m. (Track only)

SATURDAY, APRIL 26
GYM - Students none
POOL - Students none
TENNIS - Students 1-5 and 7-10 p.m.
TRACK - Students 7-10 p.m.

SUNDAY, APRIL 27
GYM - Students 1-5 p.m.
POOL - Students - 1-5 p.m.
TENNIS - Students 1-5 p.m.
TRACK - Students (If rain then Red Square will be held in Gutterson)

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069. All recreation may be superseded by varsity activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL - Students 8:30-10:30 p.m.
All other facilities - 7-8 p.m.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
8 CLUTCHES TO 5 FINEST IN VERMONT
BAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW 8 cotle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

Don't let the price of a college education stop you.

The price of a college education is skyrocketing. Fortunately the Air Force has done something to catch up with it. For the first time, the Air Force ROTC Scholarships include the 2-year program, for both men and women.

If you can qualify, the Air Force will pay for the remainder of your college education. Not only do AFROTC 2-year college scholarships cover full tuition, but reimbursement for textbooks, lab and incidental fees, as well as a tax-free monthly allowance of $100.

To cash in on all this just apply, qualify, and enroll in the Air Force ROTC at Depart of Aerospace Studies St. Michael's College. Telephone 655-2000 Ext. 251

It's a great way to finish your college education in the money, and build a future where the sky's no limit... as an officer in the Air Force.

MAKE THE MOST OF IT

The System.

CA-1000 PROFESSIONAL INTEGRATED AMPLIFIER

A master professional amplifier and control center for truthful, uncolored reproduction, with super-low distortion performance of less than 0.1% IM, 0.1% THD, with features found only on the most expensive preamps.

SPECIFICATION SUMMARY
Amplifier Section
Inter-modulation distortion (IM): Less than 0.1% Total harmonic distortion (THD): Less than 0.1% Min. RMS power: 70 watts per channel at 8 ohms (85 watts per channel at 4 ohms) at any frequency from 20 Hz — 20,000 Hz at less than 0.1% distortion.
Preamp Section
Hum & noise phono: better than 80 dB Hum & noise aux: better than 90 dB Phono overload capability: 310 mV (THD 0.1%)

FM SPECIFICATION SUMMARY
THD: 0.15% (mono) 0.3% (stereo) - IHF. Sensitivity: 1.7 uV(IHF, mono). Selectivity: 80 dB (IHF). IF Rejection: 100 dB. Quieting Slope: 55 dB at 5 uV, 60 dB at 10 uV. Stereo Separation: 45 dB (IHF). Capture Ratio: 1.0 dB. Signal to Noise Ratio: 75 dB (IHF, mono).

CT-800 AM/FM STEREO TUNER

The CT-800 is another state-of-the-art incredibly low distortion tuner from Yamaha, with an unprecedented 0.05% distortion (400 Hz, FM multiplex demodular distortion).

NS-690 DOME SPEAKER SYSTEM

The NS-690, at 60 watts input power capacity (RMS), and the NS 670, at 50 watts, reproduce full midrange and clean treble frequencies by means of unique soft dome speakers, ultra-low resistance crossover networks and dampened, solidly crafted speaker enclosures.
Lengthy studies of the acoustic environments of typical European and American homes were conducted by Yamaha engineers. Such factors as reverberation time, the sound absorbing properties of furnishings and the usual listening volumes were taken into careful consideration. The result is the NS-690/ 670, with special ability to deliver strong and clear midrange and treble tones under actual in-the-home conditions. Important in the design concept is the elimination of unpleasant peak phenomena in the frequency (Hz) of hard dome speakers and the reduction of distortion by controlling the low-distortion resonance frequency (fo). Dispersion of reproduced sound over a very broad area — instead of sharp, unidirectional limitations — results in accurate and natural tones. The Yamaha NS-690 and NS-670 from the people long associated with crafting fine musical instruments, Yamaha.

YP-701 STEREO TURNTABLE

The 701 offers professional level performance at a competitive price. Its ultra-smooth Belt Drive and Synchronous Motor provide exacting speed and low-distortion performance. A special auto-cut, auto-return feature arrests the sound signal until the stylus is in the groove to end the usual "thud" effect and automatically shuts off at the end of the record.
SPECIFICATION SUMMARY
Motor: Synchronous motor. Signal to Noise Ratio: 48dB. Wow and Flutter: less than 0.08%. Speeds: 33⅓ & 45 rpm.

FIVE YEAR BACKING

Naturally Yamaha's reputation for standing behind its products — earned in fields from keyboard music to motorcycles — applies to Yamaha components, too.
Yamaha products are backed better because they're made better. Under rigid quality-control standards at our own facilities. We make most of our own parts for stronger quality consistency and for optimum control over manufacture.
Read the following five year warranty.
Notice what's missing. There are no little stars that direct you to fine print at the bottom. No legal sounding double talk that takes Yamaha off the hook. Far from it. Would we put our phone number in the warranty and invite collect calls, if we didn't stand behind our products?
Yamaha's warranty is one of the strongest you'll find in the audio industry. It's the final (but not least important) statement we want to make about what we expect when you become a Yamaha component owner/listener.

YAMAHA WARRANTY
Audio Division Products
Yamaha warrants that all parts and components for receivers, amplifiers, tuners and speakers will be free from defects of materials and workmanship for five years from date of purchase.
Such defects will be repaired with no charge for labor for one year from date of purchase.
Yamaha warrants that all parts and components for tape recorders and turntables will be free from defects of materials and workmanship for two years from date of purchase.
Such defects will be repaired with no charge for labor for one year from date of purchase.
Any failures occurring as a result of defects in material or workmanship within the warranty period during normal use by the original purchaser will be repaired upon returning the product to the Yamaha Audio Dealer from whom the product was purchased, with proof of purchase.

YAMAHA
AUDIO DEN
100 DORSET STREET
SOUTH BURLINGTON
PHONE 863-4398

sports

Championships This Weekend

Racquetmen Crush New Hampshire, 9-0

The UVM tennis team crushed the University of New Hampshire squad, 9-0 in a match at the Gutterson Field House Courts last Friday. The racquetmen lost only one set throughout the whole day.

In the number one singles, captain Jay Moorehead quickly disposed of his opponent 6-1, 6-0. Kirk Dice, playing number two, followed Jay's winning ways, destroying his opponent 6-1, 6-1. Tom Lenci, in one of the closer matches of the day, had some trouble with his volleys, but managed to win 6-1, 7-6.

Kevin Delaney, playing at number four, regained his winning form and won 6-1, 6-3. John Koerner gave his home town fans something to cheer about with an easy victory, 6-3, 6-2. To round out the singles sweep, Scott Turban powered his way to a 6-2, 6-3 win.

Though the netmen had already clinched the victory with their fine singles performance, the doubles matches were needed to make the first clean sweep of the year.

Playing at number one doubles, Tom Lenci and Kirk Dice overpowered their opponents 7-6, 6-1. Because Dick Hilmer was sidelined with an injury and Kevin Delaney with strep throat, Coach Greig was forced to pair Jay Moorehead with Schott Turban at number two doubles. In the closest match of the day, the Vermont duo overcame their UNH opponents 6-4, 6-7, 6-4. To round out the sweep, the rapidly improving freshmen pair of Tim Beal and John Loerner vanquished the racquetmen's record to 3-0. With matches on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, it is conceivable that the teams could enter the Yankee Conference Championships, 5-0.

The championships will come to the Cross Court Tennis Center this weekend, April 26-27. Some of the finest tennis players in New England will participate. UVM won the conference championships last year, and hopes to repeat.

When asked of the team's chances this weekend, Coach Greig replied, "We should be the team to beat. On paper we look very strong. With Dick Hilmer returning to the lineup our number one doubles team of Moorhead and Hilmer is a tough team to beat. Lenci and Dice will also be strong at number two doubles. If our top six singles players play up to their potential, we have an excellent chance of repeating as Yankee Conference Champs."

The match this weekend will begin at 9 o'clock on Saturday and last throughout the day. The finals will be played on Sunday. The tennis team is hoping for a large turnout as it strives for a second straight Yankee Conference Championship. Come on down to Cross Courts and watch the best tennis to be seen in Burlington this year.

O'Connell Named Athlete Of The Year

Tim O'Connell has added one more honor to his list of awards and trophies, Vermont Athlete of the Year. The award was given at the 10th annual Vermont Sportswriters and Sportscasters' Association - Montpelier Elks Awards Program at the Elks Club in Montpelier Saturday night.

An All-American, All-New England, All-ECAC, Syracuse Invitational Tournament MVP, third highest scorer in the country, highest goal scorer in the country, All-Time scorer in UVM history and numerous other University marks are some of Tim's success stories.

O'Connell became the third University of Vermont hockey player to receive the award. Willie MacKinnon and Dave Reece have won in prior years.

Other winners have been Bob Mitchell, UVM football; John Bower, Middlebury; Marilyn and Barbara Ann Cochran of Richmond; Phil Pope, Middlebury football; and Billy Kidd who has won it twice.

Only a junior, O'Connell has an excellent chance of repeating next year. Next year's hockey captain scored 41 goals and 41 assists this past season leading the Catamounts to a third place finish in the ECAC Division I.

An economics major from Hingham, Massachusetts, the 5-11, 175 pound center now lives in Burlington with his lovely wife, Kathy.

Tim has been ECAC Rookie of the Year, and All-East last year as well as the other awards. He was drafted by the Buffalo Sabres after his frosh season.

Much of the same is expected from O'Connell next season as the Catamounts shoot for the ECAC crown.

Track Co-captains

Sprinter Jeff Berk (Easton, Conn.) and middle distance record holder, Peter Weith (Darien, Conn.) were elected co-captains of the 1975-76 University of Vermont indoor track team, it was announced by Denis Lambert, UVM's athletic director.

Berk, a junior, is a specialist in the 220 and 440 and also performs on the spring relay team. "Although he has been hampered by injuries most of the season, we expect big things from him next year," said Ed Kusiak, Vermont's track coach.

Weith, the current Vermont record holder in the 1,000 (2:14.3) and one mile run (4:14.9), has been "the most valuable runner all season" and is expected to be "one of the top middle distance runners in the Conference (Yankee) this spring," noted Kusiak.

Weith is a junior.

Baseball Team Wins Two

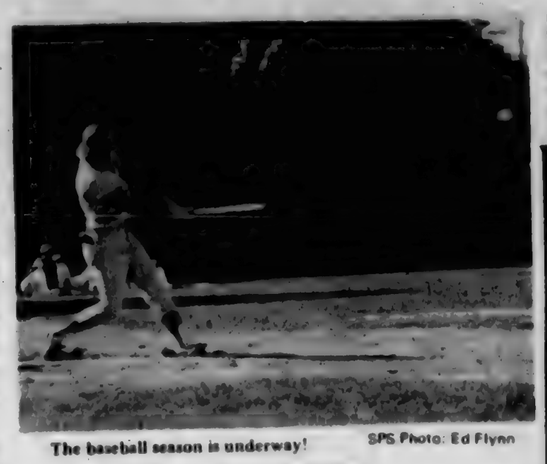
by Sherie Berkowitz

The UVM baseball team started out their season strong, travelling to Albany for a double-header and defeating Albany State in both games.

With the wind blowing at full force, the game started out slow for both teams with neither team getting a hit in the first two innings. At the bottom of the third inning, Fargione doubled for Albany. When Irace (A) singled and Nelson bunted to first, Albany had the advantage of bases loaded with no outs. That's when Tony Skorput of Vermont caught a fly to shortstop, Segali (Vermont's pitcher) struck out batter number five, and third baseman Jim Edgerton caught a line drive to end Albany's chance of scoring.

Edgerton started the fourth inning with a single for the first UVM hit of the game, but was tagged out on second on a double play also getting out Levine at first. Albany's shortstop then caught Jeff Skorput's fly ball which sent Vermont out to the field. The bottom of the fourth inning began as Albany's Gamage hit a beautiful shot out to centerfield but was caught on a well-judged play by UVM's Jeff Skorput. Due to an error, one of Albany's men got on first base. Another long drive, this time to left field, was caught by Carl Christensen for out number two, and Glenn Bolster caught Albany's third out of the inning.

Inning number five was the one that won it for Vermont. Vermont got off to a slow start with an out at first and a strike out for the first two batters. Christensen started it for Vermont when he walked to first and stole to second. Tony Skorput let fly a beautiful drive to the outfield, bringing home Christensen and landing himself a well-earned double. George Chicanis hit what looked like a possible home run but due to a heavy wind was caught out in left field by Albany's Gamage.



The baseball season is underway! SPS Photo: Ed Flynn

After Albany's first batter singled, Vermont's catcher Duke Snodgrass threw to get him out on an attempted steal to second. Van Dine, who came in as pitcher in the previous inning, threw some nice pitches to strike out the next batter, and a play from Bolster to Deschino sent Albany to the field once again.

The next two innings showed smart playing for both teams. Yet Albany couldn't play well enough to beat a strong UVM team. Thus the game ended in a victorious 1-0 win for Vermont. The winning pitcher was Skip Van Dine.

The second game began as soon as Albany's pitcher could warm up. The first inning showed no hitters for both teams, while Vermont's pitcher Phil Brannon, starting strong, struck out two Albany men. Albany's only score of both games came in the second inning, when Milaukis hit a double and was driven home on a single by Irace. A catch by Vermont's first baseman Breglio, a pitkoff, and a [illegible] put up to bat.

In the third inning, Vermont sent seven out of nine players up to bat. After two outs, A lbany's pitcher Okoniewski walked Gilligan who went on to steal second. He then walked UVM's players Edgerton and Levine. With bases loaded, Okoniewski walked the fourth man in a row, catcher Gary Orloff, to bring home Gilligan for a Vermont score.

In the fourth inning, after Kevin Wry (V) caught one at third base, some more strong pitches by Brannon struck out the next two batters.

A strong Vermont infield held Albany scoreless through the remainder of the game. At the end of the seventh inning with the score tied 1-1, Albany refused to play another inning forfeiting the rest of the game and rewarding Vermont with a 2-1 victory. Brannon was the winning pitcher striking out seven of Albany's players.

Vermont's record now stands at 2-0. With Centennial Field still wet and muddy home games have not been scheduled, but they will be in the very near future. The baseball team has good prospectives for a great season. So come out and support the team. Let's try for an undefeated season. Show that Vermont CAN be number ONE.

UVM Basketball's First 7-Footer?

The University of Vermont basketball program have landed one of their top prospects for the upcoming season. Head basketball coach Peter Salzberg announced that Mike Kern of Bradenton, Florida, has decided to attend UVM next fall.

Kern is the big man that Vermont has hunted for years. At 6-11, 205 pounds he could be the first seven footer in the history of the University. He played for Manatee High of Bradenton, the district champion after compiling a 21-6 record. Mike tallied 17.9 points a game and hauled down 16 rebounds per contest.

He has grown tremendously in the past year, putting on four inches and forty pounds in the past year alone.

He handles the ball well for a big man and can shoot as well, as his 24 straight free throws attest.

Kern expects to be an important cog in Vermont drive for the Yankee Conference championship this season. He is the first of several freshmen that are expected to announce their intentions of attending UVM.

Athletic Ticket Books

Plans have been completed for the sale and operation of the Athletic Ticket Books for the 1975-76 Season.

The books will cover all regular scheduled home hockey and basketball games. Applications for books will be sent out during the summer vacation period.

Be sure that the Registrar's office has your correct home address and that if you will not be there, arrangements are made for forwarding the application to you.

Keep In Touch This Summer
THE VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC

What happens to Burlington in the summer? Contrary to popular belief it is not used as a set by Hollywood producers to film a real live ghost town. Nor is it transformed into a tourist trap where vacationers walk in formation eating fresh vegetables and drinking maple syrup. In the summer the Burlington area becomes a paradise where the sun has been known to shine four days a week.

Yes, Burlington lives in the summer and this summer no matter where you are you will be able to read about it. For the first time in the history of journalism at U.V.M., we are happy to announce the publication of the Vermont Summer Cynic.

The Vermont Summer Cynic will differ from the Vermont Cynic in several important ways. It will be an exciting, readable, relevant newspaper geared to report not only the news that affects its readership, but all facets of life in Burlington. We will stress high quality not only in our stories, but also our photographs and layout to insure that the Summer Cynic will be intellectually rewarding as well as visually exciting.

Important decisions, festivals, new student experiences and events will face the UVM campus this summer. They will all be covered along with articles on historical sights on campus, On the Road correspondence, in-depth features and interviews, pictorials and poetry. Keep in touch this summer, read the Vermont Summer Cynic.

Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

SUBSCRIPTIONS: $1.50
STARTING TODAY AT
THE STUDENT INFORMATION DESK
BILLINGS CENTER

SUBSCRIPTION entitles you to six dynamite issues delivered, no matter where you are.

VERMONT CYNIC

The Principle Lies in Vermont

FOUNDED IN 1883

VOLUME XCIII NUMBER 15

MAY 1, 1975

Farewell To Andrews

by Margo Howland

[illegible] Maine [illegible]

[illegible] Bill Bigelow Student [illegible] with a gold V [illegible] Andrews asked Athletic Director Dave Lambert [illegible] Senate Chairman [illegible] presented an [illegible] entitled The Making Of A President Or The Continued Feeding Of Edward [illegible] Andrews Jr MD Roth said

He [illegible] from that [illegible] pledge up on the hill and it was obvious from the start that much time and effort would be required [illegible] this shape

The legislation said that [illegible] succeeded in [illegible] president for all seasons Ballard Kandalas He has been returning towards [illegible] from whence he came

We shall surely miss him Roth concluded

Andrews expressed his appreciation to the Faculty Senate adding They've kept me out of hot water on a number of occasion

Student Association President Peter MacAusland extended on behalf of the students our best wishes for continued success and presented Andrews with a pewter stein MacAusland who led student opposition to the UVM pedestrian tunnel which Andrews favored acknowledged In the past Dr Andrews and I have stood on different sides of the street in the future we can stand in the middle without holding up traffic

For a while there during the winter I though Peter was going to win said Andrews There was a strong legislative effort this year to reverse the decision to build the tunnel It failed

Athletic Director Lambert presented Andrews with a hockey puck It's the one that won the Providence game he said Mrs Andrews was presented with a hockey stick

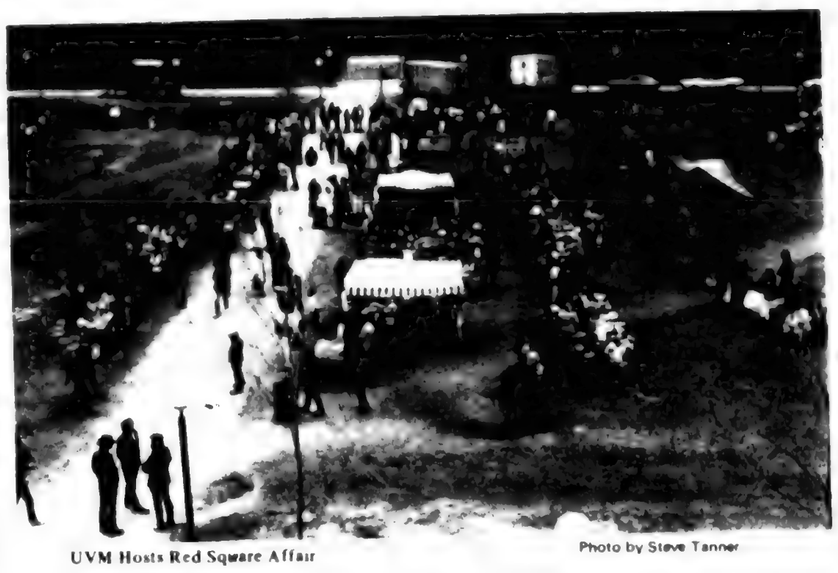
John Smith representing the Offices of Development and Public Relations, presented the couple with a scrapbook of photographs These are pictures of the way we saw him said Smith

Rollins presented a framed picture of the main campus and a green and gold blanket from just everybody Rollins noted a prominent University of Vermont alumnus and former trustee in the audience and asked the Most Rev Robert F Joyce, retired bishop of Burlington, to step forward

Bishop Joyce quoted the works of a popular song to indicate the warm feelings that would remain after Andrews had gone

I keep you on the rivers of my memory

Every smiling, ever gentle on my mind



UVM Hosts Red Square Affair

Photo by Steve Tanner

UHS Opens On Campus

by Stephen Tanner

Thursday of last week saw the Open House for the new home of the University Health Services (UHS) Formerly the Wasson Infirmary a resident of the Wheeler House at the corner of Prospect and Main Steets on the UVM campus UHS is now located on East Avenue

At an honorific luncheon in the new dining area members of the infirmary staff received house warming enthusiasm from President Andrews and other UVM notables

The doctors and all the staff are very pleased with the new facility said Dr Richard Amidon, Director of the University Health Services He reeled off a list of benefits the organization can now offer which include 18 beds for in patients, 10 examination treatment rooms, physical therapy and gynecology suites, X ray capability, minor surgery and increased space for UVM's Rescue Squad

We're very happy with the new set up said a UVM Rescue Squad member during the open house The new space allows us to improve our service by being faster The crew now has a portion of the first floor to itself which includes a new switchboard area in their day room, a separate bunk room, and most importantly a new heated garage for the ambulance adjoining their quarters.

The building which now houses the University Health Services was the Edith B Mildram-Nursing Home. Ms Mildram was for years in Burlington an overseer of the poor and needy In 1957, the Medical Center Hospital took charge of the building from the city and operated at extended care facility until UVM obtained it for the University Medical Services

Dr Amidon was asked about the new infirmary location as it affected student use because it is located at a greater distance from the main campus than was the Wasson Infirmary He cited the results found by the University of Rochester when their infirmary moved out of the main campus area Utilization at first dropped, but then went up 35 percent He said that utilization has remained the same since March 24 when the official move was made

A $10,000 donation by Lawrence H Marvin of Essex Jct provided all the furniture for the waiting room and upstairs living room Landscaping and the kitchen are all that remain to be finished before the new facility is complete and ready to better serve the UVM community

Photos on Page 10.

Fun At Red Square

by Stephen Tanner

This past Saturday UVM's Fourth Red Square Affair brightened the CBW Green with the colors and sounds of excited fair goers The wind rustled through the many booths and attractions presented at this year's fair and occasionally the sun peaked through the overcast to highlight the festivity

Artisans and craftsmen had set their booths in long rows across the green resembling a European bazaar Leatherworked belts and wristbands, vests and jackets were displayed Patch work p flows and hand tooled wooden boxes with crafted int asket weavers and sk candlemakers phot raphers, jewelers and guitar craftsmen all demonstrated their wares to the hundreds of community members that wandered through the maze of booths

Games of fortune lined the ters of booths at the fair A shooting gallery, teddy bear toss, and a dart balloons game were among the many to allure both the growing and grown

The car smashing booth featured an old and rusting Chevy which, at the players leisure could be destroyed with a sledge hammer for a small price of fair currency (tickets)

One player stepped onto the hood of the dying auto and tried dramatically to pound the steering wheel from its column After several mighty blows, the wheel still clung on leaving our player with sore shoulders and nothing to show for them.

The outstanding attraction of the afternoon was the pie throwing event, which saw Keith Miser, Dean of Students, bring in a bid of $3 and Bill Root a double bid of $5 from two bidders for two pies in the face which began some after the other The auctioneer beckoned higher bids on Fred Smith Director of SAGA Foods with Remember all of you are going to have to be eating at SAGA for the rest of the year Smith promptly got a whip cream pie in the face

Pie throwing techniques varied from the fast wind up and toss to the slow approach and full face mooshi method One thrower even went so far as to dab his fingers in the pie and paint it on his victims face until it looked as though he was ready for a shave Then the pie came slowly mooshed in his face and all over his head until it looked as though the victim had the head of a snow man

Following the pie throwing was the First Annual Folk and Blue Grass Festival Featured was Banjo Dan and the Mid Night Plowboys and U Utah Phillips The First Annual Folk and Bluegrass Festival was developed to show the SA Concert Bureau that a responsive audience exists at UVM and in Burlington to support alternatives to star oriented rock groups manufactured by record companies and AM and FM radio stations

Phillips entertained participants in the fair with ballads and stories reminiscent of his performance at the demonstration outside the President Ford dinner last November

An additional event at this years fair was the UVM Lacrosse Team's 19 1 victory over New Hampshire College The team's finesse easily overcame an uncoordinated effort by the NHC foes

Scott Skinner To Work For Nader

by Stephen Tanner

This week Scott Skinner for 3 years the Director of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group announced his resignation effective June 6 Skinner will continue to work in the New England area in the fields VPIRG worked in this year however his new position will involve a greater concentration of effort on the energy area Officially Skinner will be the New England Energy Organizer for Ralph Nader

The new position will [illegible] special [illegible] the energy area [illegible] a step start at this time [illegible] Skinner Last [illegible] that to keep VPIRG a strong organization that after 3 years it should [illegible] change

Skinner said he would have a successor by this summer VPIRG has already received applications for the post and many more are expected I'm certain a highly qualified person will be found this summer he stated Skinner

The announcement is being made now so that plenty of time remains for the selection to be made The summer is the best time for a new director to acquaint himself with the staff and the organization since it is the slower portion of VPIRG's year

The new position doesn't mean that Skinner will be disassociated with the VPIRG effort The fact that I will be based in Montpelier and working with a number of citizens action groups means that I will be right on top of VPIRG's work

Skinner was a graduate of Dartmouth College and subsequently attended Columbia Law School He served in the Peace Corps as an English teacher in Nepal For several years he was a lawyer and in environmental lobbyist for a citizen's action group in Connecticut before joining with VPIRG

The single most important thing that VPIRG has done is to show students how their work can be translated into effective and successful social action Skinner declared students efforts as a testimonial to hard work and constructive effort on the part of many, many students

The research done by students has been a great part of VPIRG's work and the staff has provided the continuity and expertise, Skinner said

Student initiatives for VPIRG in the areas of Hearing Aid Laws, Small Claims Courts Child Health Screening Nuclear Power, Energy conservation and Highway construction has led to legislative action

Skinner cited the Tooth Fairy Bill, Bottle Bill, and the nation's first Nuclear Power Control Law as examples of student initiatives resulting in law reform

Skinner believes VPIRG's future looks bright He listed top priorities for next year's action will be Child Health Screening Law, Stopping construction of Vermont's third interstate I 93 and passage of the Lobby Disclosure and Public Access to Documents Laws

Said Skinner VPIRG will continue to demonstrate its educational and social value with student playing the critical role in passage of important legislation

Scott Skinner SPS Photo Lew Comenetz

The Vermont Cynic Staff Hopes You Have A Happy Summer.

Aiken Enjoys UVM

by Margo Howland

When former U S Senator George D Aiken returned to Vermont after 34 years in Washington, he agreed to spend three days a week at the UVM Living/ Learning Center as a visiting lecturer. Aiken had a few initial reservations about coming to UVM, but the Governor, as he likes to be called, and his wife Lola promptly took the campus by storm

The Governor attends as many hockey and basketball games as he can possibly manage (his son in law was Jim Cross' coach at Boston University), insists on waiting in line at the dining halls for Saga meals, and has familiarized himself with every corner of the UVM campus

Aiken is happiest chatting informally with small groups of people During a typical interview, he may be talking to one person, being photographed by another, and being drawn by a third Though the prospect of meeting the distinguished Dean of the US Senate may be awe inspiring to many shyness and reserve quickly fall away in the face of the Governor's charm and friendliness

Appropriately, the University of Vermont Board of Trustees on April 5 unanimously adopted a resolution appointing George D Aiken a Professor on the faculty of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College The feeling of affection the University student population has for Aiken can be likened to that of a youngster's regard for a respected, much loved, wise old grandfather The feeling is mutual Professor Aiken is proud of his students

I'm certainly enjoying what time I can put in here, meeting with students and professors I don't worry so much about the future of the country after sizing up the students here

The students enjoy Aiken's stories and anecdotes They like a little corn thrown in My wife gets disgusted when I do that, but I always believe in a good corn crop! the Governor chuckled

One of the projects planned during the Aikens' stay at UVM involves a series of sessions with Charles Morrissey, the Editor of the Vermont Historical Society's publication Vermont History

I understand Charles Morrissey, down in Montpelier most of the time, wants to develop an oral history (I almost said 'moral history' but that's going too far) which would take weeks and weeks of talk to observe everything I've talked about for 30 40 years! Professor Aiken declared

I suppose they're going to ask me what do I think of the six or seven presidents I've known in my years in the Senate Well, every one of them has committed a sin or made a mistake, and every one of them has done some good

That's true of Congress, too Members of Congress pretty well represen the people that sent them there I just figured I represented what the people were thinking, Aiken mused

How did the Senior Senator from Vermont react to lobbyists? In typical Aiken fashion If I get 50 letters on an issue or people wanting me to vote a certain way, I remember the 467,917 people that haven't written I wonder what they think? I was rather thick skinned about lobby letters

Aiken commented on the qualities the University needs in the new President succeeding Dr Edward C Andrews Jr who resigned effective June 30, 1975 to head the Maine Medical Center

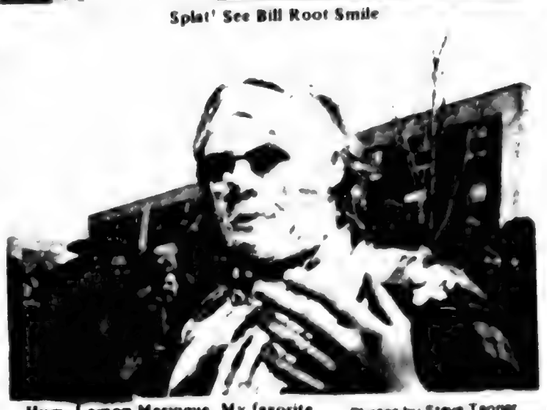
The new president of UVM, Professor Aiken said, should be knowledgeable in the field of education, should be a diplomat above all else, be a good public relations person He should know the ropes, he should know human nature

That's the last job I'd

(continued on page eight)

Who talked me into this?

Splat! See Bill Root Smile



Hum, Lemon Meringue My favorite Photos by Steve Tanner

Cynic Photo Winners pg. 12,13.

Horse Show Story pg. 10

Tennis Team Captures Title pg18

Cynic Literature Winners pg. 14,15.

VIPRG Releases Report On Nuclear Power

The VPIRG Inc today released a sixteen page report which contains a summary and analysis of over 90 Abnormal Occurrences that have taken place at Vermont Yankee over the past three years An Abnormal Occurrence is an abnormal event that must be reported to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC)

As far as we know this report is the first independent analysis of abnormal occurrences at a nuclear plant to be done outside the NRC said VPIRG Director Scott Skinner

According to Richard Groeschel, an engineer and one of the report's authors, the purpose of the report is to serve as a resource tool for public officials, the press, citizen groups, and the general public as they seek to evaluate the safety and reliability of nuclear power

It is interesting to note that over 70% of the Abnormal Occurrences involved either component breakdown or personnel error, said Groeschel This report only emphasizes the fact that nuclear plants are mechanical devices, subject to the mistakes and limitations of any machine Unlike other machines, however, the consequences of a nuclear accident could be catastrophic

The report lists in chronological order all of the Abnormal Occurrences since Vermont Yankee began operation It describes each event and its cause in easily understood terms and provides an assesment of the event's significance

Of the 93 events reported to the NRC Groeschel found 7 3% to be potentially significant, 3% to be of direct significance, and the remaining 24% of the events to be insignificant

The report also found that Vermont Yankee's most important safety system, the

(continued on page eight)

calendar annoucements

Bailey Publishes Summer Hours

BAILEY LIBRARY HOURS
SUMMER 1975

INTERSESSION	Sunday, May 11 – Sunday, June 15
Monday – Friday	8:00 a.m.	5:00 p.m.
Weekends		Closed
Exception	May 26 (Memorial Day)	Closed
SUMMER SESSION	Monday, June 16 – Friday, August 15
Monday – Thursday	8:00 a.m.	10:00 p.m.
Friday	8:00 a.m.	5 p.m.
Saturday	10:00 a.m.	5:00 p.m.
Sunday	6:00 p.m.	10:00 p.m.
Exception		July 4 CLOSED
INTERSESSION	Saturday, August 16 – Friday, August 29
Monday – Friday	8:00 a.m.	5 p.m.
Weekends		CLOSED

The Lion In Winter To Come In June

A production of Goldman's The Lion In Winter has been co-ordinated by the Alumni Association and several alumni in the greater Burlington area. Production dates are June 26 thru July 1.

Watch This Week for more information on auditions and ticket information, or call 656-2014.

An Inside Look At TM: A Wolf In Sheep's Clothing

Tonight, May 1 at 9:00 p.m. WRUV-FM will air a radio investigation into the inner workings of TM, transcendental meditation.

The program, entitled "An Inside Look at TM, a Wolf in Sheep's Clothing" is hosted by Brother Dale who will have Paul Froemming and Sue Breines as his guests.

Froemming was the former president of Creative Thinking Inc. a San Francisco TM Society and at the same time, was a television director at a San Francisco television station. Comparing his present lifestyle as a Christian with that of the past, Froemming says that he has experienced more peace, joy, and satisfaction in five minutes with Jesus Christ than in all the five years of meditation.

Brother Dale's other guest, Sue Breines, was an initiator, meditating 8-10 hours daily. She'll be sharing about her different experiences in TM, including the personal meeting with Maharishi. However, in the midst of her meditations, Breines developed an ulcer and started to see hypocricy and dishonesty in the TM movement. Both guests will be available to take live phone calls from the listening audience.

Brother Dale states that the reason for the radio special, "An Inside Look at TM: a Wolf in Sheep's Clothing" is to reveal TM as a religion headed in a definite direction and not the science that it claims to be.

Senior Week News

Keith Miser, Dean of Students, has announced a change in policy for seniors staying for Senior Week.

Previously, it was decided to group all the Seniors into one dorm. But, due to the number of Seniors deciding to stay at UVM during Senior Week, Miser announced that Seniors may stay in their own rooms and will not have to move during Senior Week.

L/L Yoga Program Offered

The Yoga Study Program in the Living/Learning Center next year still has some open spaces.

This program will study physiological and behavioral effects of yoga, by observing such areas as blood pressure, temperature, mood swings, personality, sleeping and study habits.

If you are interested, it's not too late! Contact Lauren Tofias – 4269, Craig Carlton – 4243 or Marshall Stone - 4243 as soon as possible.

Senior Week Entertainment Schedule

Seniors, as you know, the week for which we have long been waiting will soon be upon us. Yes, indeedy, that idealic week of R & R between the mental torture of exams and the hectic squeeze of commencement is right around the corner and it is not too soon for letting our thoughts wander to those lazy, hazy days of spring! Fortunately, measures have been taken to assure that these days do not become too lazy, hazy.

In order to begin the week with a blast, we suggest you attend the exclusive party at WDW lounge where you will be entertained by the lively sounds of our own WRUV as you rock the night away. The party begins at 9 on Saturday, May 10th. BYOB and friends.

In lieu of the traditional Sun-In, we propose the First Annual Kite Flying Konvention to begin at 1 p.m. on Sunday, May 11th. Since high winds are a prerequisite you can expect an atypical calm in the Queen City so bring your frisbees just in case.

Since many of you will have taken your T.V.'s home, we offer for your evening entertainment, a fine feature film Sleuth. Show time is 8 p.m. at your favorite theatre 235 Life Science. Admission is $1.00. Refreshments will not be provided so bring your own (Sunday, May 11th).

More afternoon activities have been planned for Monday! Seniors, their guests, and faculty members are urged to siesta on Centennial Field at high noon when Saga will serve you once more. Hamburgers, hot dogs, chops, salads, cookies and soda – we bet your mouths are watering already – can be yours for the low, low price of $2.50. Tickets can be purchased in advance from the bookstore or at the gate. You may also use meal coupons at the Waterman Coupon Bank, but you must hurry, coupons are invalid May 10. Eight coupons equals one ticket. A limited, quantity of beer will also be provided (you may want to bring your own supply). Activities to fill the rest of your afternoon will include vigorous volley ball, smashing softball, scintillating soccer, and just plain frisbee. In case of rain, picnic will be Thursday.

Here's your chance for your first or last all-nighter! We are sorry to report that the orgy fell through but to fill the gap we have planned an innocent overnight to begin at 11 p.m. in WDW lounge.

Besides entertainment of your own instigation we will be showing Bugs Bunny and Sylvester and Tweety cartoons, and the movie Berserk starring Joan Crawford. Free popcorn!

On Tuesday, May 13 the Patrick-Gutterson athletic complex will be open to all. We haven't planned anything special but you can! Anyone who is interested in setting up tournaments or games should contact Ken Currier at at 656-3828.

If you go to nothing else, you must attend the Senior Banquet and Dance at the Ramada Inn. This is the highlight of the week and we are expecting a really big turnout! You will be dancing and tapping to the super sounds of Downpour while feasting on a flavorful buffet.

Banquet will begin at 7:30 p.m. (Wednesday, May 14). Tickets are $6.00 per person and MUST be bought before the banquet. They are now on sale at the bookstore.

Swinging, single seniors are urged to attend! Bring your friends! Faculty members are also cordially invited to attend.

Our last scheduled escapade will be a bike ride to Sandbar State Park – if it's not flooded. Bring along a bag lunch. We will meet in front of WDW at 10 a.m.

P.S. If anyone is still around at the end there will be graduation ceremonies for anyone wishing and qualified to attend!

THURSDAY, MAY 1

4 to 7 p.m., "May Day" open house at the Pringle Herbarium. Staff will be on hand to give tours, answer your herby questions, and serve refreshments.

7:30 - 8:30 p.m., Third World Organization presents the last in its African dance workshops conducted by Manta Jones. Register by arriving at 7:15 p.m., Southwick Ballroom.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., "Do You Want to Stop Smoking Cigarettes?" If so, contact the Church Street Center – ext. 4221. That's the subject of a mini-course beginning May 1, and advance registration is appreciated.

7:30 p.m., English department hosts a poetry reading by James Hayford, Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

8:30 p.m., Introductory Lecture on Ananda Marga Meditation at the Unitarian Church. Free of charge. Another lecture on May 8th at same time. For more information, call 862-1802.

FRIDAY, MAY 2

2 p.m., Early Childhood and Human Development Program hosts Dr. Henry Biller, psychology department, who will speak on "The Father-Child Relationship." Memorial Lounge, Waterman Bldg. Open to all.

3 p.m., Psychology colloquium. Prof. Daniel O'Leary, SUNY at Stonybrook, "A Behavioral Consultation Program for Parents and Teachers of Children with Conduct Problems," Room 314, John Dewey Hall.

7 p.m., Film showings – projects from UVM film-making classes will be shown in Room 103, Rowell Bldg.

7:30 & 9:30 p.m., SA Films presents "Some Like It Hot" in 101 Votey. Admission is $1.

8 p.m., folk dancing at Southwick Ballroom, open to all.

8:15 p.m., concluding lecture in a series by distinguished philosophers, all of whom have examined the relevance of John Dewey's thought to work in contemporary philosophy. Concluding the series is Prof. James Rachels, University of Miami, who will address the relevance of Dewey to current work in the field of ethics, Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

SATURDAY, MAY 3

10 – 11:30 a.m., Church Street Center holds a discussion with Congressman James Jeffords, first in their series "Vermont Congressmen Address World Issues." Further information may be obtained by contacting the Center, 135 Church St., tel. 656-4221.

9 p.m., The UVM Gay Student Union presents a Spring Dance in Southwick Gymnasium on the Redstone Campus. Admission is one dollar, and refreshments will be served.

English Department Party

There will be a party for Majors, Faculty Members, and Graduate Students of the English Department on Friday, May 2, from 4 to 6 p.m. in Room 120, Living/Learning Center. Refreshments will be provided.

Saga Sez

As the semester comes to a close, the concern over how to not end up with void coupons grows. In this week's Cynic the dining facilities closedown times are included along with information on special facilities. As of May 11th all coupons are void, therefore Seniors wanting to use coupons for the senior picnic should buy them at the coupon bank for 8 coupons. Also if you plan to eat at Wright Dining Hall during Commencement weekend tickets may be bought with coupons or cash from Melanie Mertens, the secretary at Simpson Dining Hall.

A final note is a word of thanks to Sue Schirmer, R.A. at Willis, and her hard working troops for all the help at Red Square Affair last Saturday.

Vermont Natural Food And Farming Association

The Vermont Natural Food and Farming Association's annual spring meeting will be held on Saturday, May 3 at 9 a.m., at Mt. Abraham Union High School, Bristol, with the New Hampshire Natural Food Association as its guest to hear Clinton R. Miller of Washington, D.C., discuss the drive to force the flouridation of the nation's drinking water.

Mr. Miller is the Legislative Advocate of the National Health Foundation. He will speak at 10 a.m.

Robert Barlow, chairman of the Vergennes school system's Mathematics Department, formerly associated with the National Park Service experiments dehydrating foods at home for their preservation, will explain the technique involved.

Winston Way, agronomist of the Extension Service, University of Vermont, will speak on raising your own wheat and dry beans.

The public is invited. Registration - adults, $1.50; students, 50 cents.

Potluck luncheon will be served. Guests requested to bring their favorite luncheon dish to share.

Workshops will be held during the afternoon by the three speakers.

Attention Seniors

Remember Your VSAC Debts

Vermont Student Assistance Corporation would like to take this opportunity to congratulate you on your approaching graduation.

Although the coming weeks will probably be busy ones, we hope you will take the time to put your student financial aid house in order before you leave school. We recommend that you: 1) Check with the Financial Aid Office to be sure your records are complete and accurate. 2) Contact the banker who arranged your student loan(s) to discuss repayment. You will not have to begin repayment for several months, but, you will be able to make other plans with far greater certainty when you know how much you will have to set aside each month for payment on your student loan(s).

Meeting your student loan obligations in a business-like manner is one of the most important steps you can take toward establishing a good credit rating. In the future, you may find yourself in need of other types of loans for a car, a home, and personal reasons. It will be easier for you to obtain these services if you have a good record of repayment on your student loan(s). If you have any questions or concerns regarding your student loan obligations please feel free to contact us. We will be happy to assist you in any way we can.

Our address is: Vermont Student Assistance Corporation, 156 College Street, Burlington, Vermont 05401. In Burlington call 658-4530. Out of Burlington call 1-800-642-3177 toll free. Out-of-state call collect 1-802-658-4530.

Perishing Rifle Company Elects New Staff

Pershing Rifle Company L-12, the University of Vermont chapter of the National Society of Pershing Rifles, recently elected a new staff for the coming school year.

Alan Moloff, a junior ROTC cadet at UVM, majoring in Medical Technology, was elected as Commanding Officer of Company L-12. Cadet Moloff is Airborne qualified and will be attending the U.S. Army Ranger School this summer.

Two other juniors at UVM, James LeFebvre, a history major, and Theodore Landry, majoring in Animal Science, were elected as Executive Officer and Operations Officer.

These three officers, sworn in on April 16, 1975, were all awarded the Pershing Rifle Silver Achievement Medal.

For the first time in the history of Company L-12, a woman has been elected to the staff. Miriam McCarthy, a freshman, will be the head of Public Relations.

Another freshman, Robert Jones, will be in charge of the Company's Expansion Program. Sophomore Edwin Thornton will be the new Company Adjutant, while Charles McMaster will be the Finance and Supply Officer.

Once again, Company L-12 has been awarded the trophy for the most outstanding tactical company in the 12th Regiment. Company L-12 has been the recipient of this trophy for five of the past eight years. This Twelfth Regiment has been elected the best P/R Regiment in the nation for the 1974-75 school year.

Ultrasonic Contraception For Men

(Earth News) - A biologist at the University of Missouri Medical School claims to have discovered a new contraception device for men - using ultrasonic radiation.

Research associates James Harman says the device is safer than the IUD, the vasectomy or the pill, and it's completely painless and reversible. The device generates ultrasonic waves which create heat in the area to which it is applied. Scientists have long known that heat applied to the male genitals produces temporary sterility.

Harmon says he "envisions an appliance much like an electric toothbrush in every home." The man, he says, would simply "apply the prescribed amount of energy for the prescribed amount of time, and he would be sterile for X amount of days."

And, according to Moneysworth magazine, which reported on the device, ultrasonic radiation - unlike other kinds - does not produce cellular damage.

Project Elm Plans To Blow Away Elm Bark Beetle

The hand of Project Elm will strike a blow to the Elm Bark Beetle some night toward the end of April or start of May, when the winds are calm, says University of Vermont landscape manager Richard H. Streeter.

The advance warning is not for the beetles, but for people who may observe what goes on and be worried about it.

A 12 per cent solution of methoxyclor will be applied to the elms on the University green by mist blower at night when the winds are calm. The spraying is a continuation of Project Elm, aimed at preservation of the elms on the green. The spray, called a dormant spray, is used to combat the elm bark beetle which carries the Dutch Elm Disease fungus spores and transmits it between trees.

"Methoxyclor is a biodegradable chemical which has a useful life of five to seven days, depending on weather conditions," Streeter observes. "It is non-toxic to humans."

Application will be done by licensed pesticide applicators from Rutland Tree Service.

In early June, a six per cent application of the same spray will be applied to the campus elms, mainly for control of the Elm Leaf Beetle. A more exact date will be announced later.

Meanwhile, the Elm Bark Beetle had better hope for high winds.

$50.00 Reward

"Stolen" 10 speed. Paris Sport, Black 23". No front brakes. Tubular tires and pump. Toe clips. It is the only transportation I have. Call 656-2014 days. 864-6062 evenings. No questions asked. The person that ripped me off was seen by two friends from the Medical Center Hospital. Thank you.

John Dewey Lecture Series

The sixth lecture in the John Dewey Lecture Series will be presented by the Philosophy Department on Friday, May 2 at 8:15 p.m. in the John Dewey Memorial Lounge in the Old Mill Building. The speaker will be Professor James Rachels of the University of Miami. His topic will be "The Relevance of Dewey's Thought to Contemporary Work in Ethics." The lecture is free and all are welcome.

Vet Rep At UVM

The Veterans Administration is continuing its nationwide program of stationing counselors on college and university campuses. During academic year 1974-75 the Vet Rep assigned to UVM, Russel Kell, has assisted veteran-students with the filing of claims and the resolution of any problems or questions concerning VA benefits. If you want to meet with the Vet Rep he will be at the Admissions Building with hours from 8:00 – 12:00, 1:00 – 4:30 on Mondays and Tuesdays. Appointments are not needed and any benefit offered by the Veterans Administration can be discussed.

Jazz Concert To Be Held Sunday

A group of the finest jazz and jazz-rock musicians from Vermont, New Hampshire, and upper New York State will congregate on Sunday afternoon, May 4th, at 1:30 behind Patrick Gymnasium. In the event of cold weather or rain, the concert will be held in the Commons Room, 115 of the Living/Learning Center.

The concert will feature a group that performed last year at Living/Learning featuring Jerry Levine on guitar, Chuck Eller, keyboards, Greg Nolan, drums, and Andy Fee, bass. Along with these people will be a jam session with a number of excellent people from the Vermont and New Hampshire area.

The difference is striking

The Olympia S10 Portable Typewriter.

You'll love the look and touch of Olympia's handsome new S10 Portable Typewriter. It's perfect for home and school and features verticle half-spacing for typing math equations and chemical formulas, clear-view aligning scales, automatic ribbon reverse and a repeat space bar.

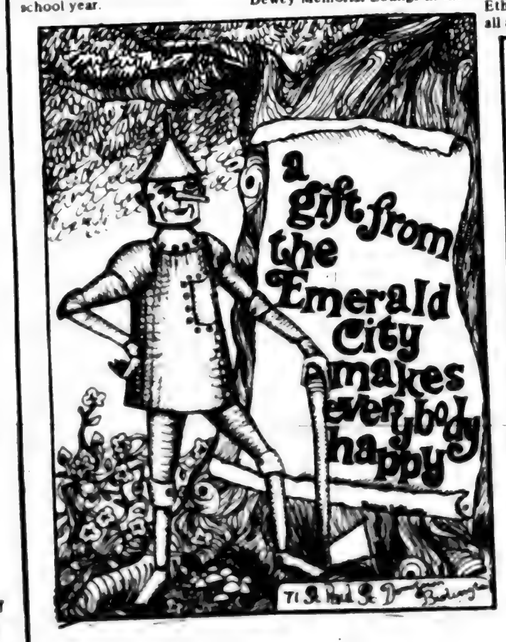
Stop in and compare the Olympia S10 to what you're used to. You'll find the difference is striking.

- also available as Olympia S12 with 12" carriage

Lenny's Office Machines Inc.

122 NO. WINOOSKI AVE. BURLINGTON, VERMONT — LARRY HATHAWAY

Free typing course with Purchase of Typewriter
Plus discount to Students, Faculty & Staff



Send the FTD Sweet Surprise this Mother's Day...

Usually available for less than $15.00*
*As an independent businessman, each FTD Member Florist sets his own prices.

...a little extra credit for being at the top of her class.

The Sweet Surprise,™ a bouquet of colorful flowers. Or Sweet Surprise II, green plants with floral accents. Each in an imported ceramic keepsake. Your FTD Florist will send almost anywhere, and most accept major credit cards. Order now.

© 1975 Florists' Transworld Delivery. "Call Your EXTRA TOUCH!™ Florist"

STUDENTS INTERESTED IN SERVING AS MEMBERS OF NEXT YEARS S.A. SPEAKERS BUREAU SHOULD CONTACT:
DICK CASSIDY- 3rd. BALCONY BILLINGS 656-2029

Five English Maj

At the Comprehensive Exam for English majors held April 19, 5 persons did so well that they will be listed in the Commencement Program as graduating "with Departmental Honors." This optional examination in English and American literature is given each spring for those seniors who enjoy the intellectual challenge of "putting it all together" and competing against a standard of accomplishment developed over the years among English majors. Professor Betty Bandel, soon to retire after 27 years in the English Department, has long advocated the comprehensive e... a means for e... kinds of deg... English Univers... "honors" deg... "pass" degree ... that if more de... offered compreh... distinction m... customary, w... implications for ... admission to gra...

Professor ... of the Depart... Committee, voi... in the knowled... half the Depa... majors indicate... the exam, thou... able to be pre...

Students Wanted Fo

Tell el Hesi. A mount of many surprises and historically important to scientific archaeology. It was here that ceramic dating, one of the most important tools of interpretation available to the archaeologist, was founded.

Among the more recent surprises was the discovery of a massive mud brick wall and tower in which pottery was sealed that indicates a late tenth or early ninth century B.C. date for its construction.

This site was host to an as yet unknown number of walled cities from early Bronze times until its final destruction late in the Hellenistic Era.

Applications from student volunteers are being accepted by the Joint Archaeological Expedition to Tell el-Hesi for its fourth summer "dig". The Expedition is under the direction of the American Schools of Oriental Research and is sponsored by a consortium of 24 institutions of higher le... Harvard Semi... Oberlin, Smith... Colleges in the...

Tell el-He... 37 acre site ... south and west ... the edge of th... The fortified ... northern quart... more or less co... 5000 B.C. to ... Twenty fo... occupatio... identified, one... protected by ... 57 feet thick.

The Hesi ... numbers 4... representin... American ... Anthro... paleo eth... architects ... photographer... work of the ... archaeologist...

The vo... consists of ... eighty studer...

The Importanc

by Linda Swardlick

People thinking that field trips went out with sixth grade and bag lunches are totally unaware of just how incredibly meaningful they can be. On Friday, March 14, Professor Fred Schmidt of the Sociology Department, three graduate students, and six undergraduates from his Community Organization and Development course went to the Miner Center in Chazy, N.Y., eleven miles out of Plattsburgh, N.Y. The Miner Foundation established by William H. Miner, a philanthropist, is made up of a Center and an Institute focusing on prevalent research concerning the environment. Located on 9,000 acres of land, it provides fantastic opportunity for extensive research and study. This year it is also the home base for the study of rural development headed by Pr... of Plattsburg... The fie... of thoug... seminar... discuss... presentation... actual re... provided al... The oppor... methods a... about in the... to "real ... Various tec... in class to ... projects we... by Profess... two Cornell ... when they ... methods ... project ... designe... developme... more "real" ... few hours ... the Comm... Center in C...

Results

During the past year Campus Crusade for Christ has been involved in taking the National Collegiate Religious Questionaire with the help of 636 UVM students. The questionaire was randomly given to undergraduate students, and is an indication of students' thinking on subjects such as God, religion, and the basic problems facing mankind.

Approximately 69% of those surveyed indicated that they are members of a specific religious group, while 25% said they used to be members and 5% said that they are not or have never been members. The remaining 1% were in the process of joining a religious group. 35% were Roman... Congregati... 10% Jewish... a member ... 18% bel... denominat... Sixty... surveyed ... vague phil... 3.0% ind... philosophy... they did ... one... How... according... Three per... most of ... the time... This... stated th... was the ... mankind... intolerant... of unde...

Cunningham Newma

Weekday Liturgy: Each day at 4:15 p.m.

Weekend Liturgy
Saturday: 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.
Sunday: 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Each Tuesday: 10 p.m. Liturgy followed by refreshments and informal socializing. Come and join us!

Faith Community: Young people who are of, or beyond the grad... who w... getting ... dialogue ... activities ... here at ... Wednesd...

LITTLE PRO... BOOK ...
Largest Paperback ...
Complete S...
Small presses & ...
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center
Essex Junction

DAY, MAY 1

...this open house at the Pringle ...be on hand to give tours, answer ...serve refreshments.

...ld Hunger Organization presents the ...workshops conducted by Monte ...at 7:30 p.m. Southwick Ballroom ...Do You Want to Stop Smoking ...the Church Street Center ... est ...a mini-course beginning May 1, and ...cepted.

...partment hosts a poetry reading by ...ange Old Mill.

...ecture: Lecture on Ananda Marga ...n Church Lecture in charge. Another ...ne time. For more information, call ...

DAY, MAY 2

...ildhood and Human Development ...Miller psychology department who ...Parent-Child Relationship" Memorial ...Open to ...colloquium by Daniel O'Leary, ...A Behavioral Consultation Program ...f Children with Conduct Problems." ...Hall.

...presents "Some UVM film making ...room 110 Kalkin Bldg.

...A Films presents "Some Like It Hot" ...at 8!

...at Southwick Ballroom open to all ...g lecture in a series by distinguished ...en have examined the relevance of ...work in contemporary philosophy. ...Prof. James Rachels, University of ...the relevance of Dewey to current ...Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

URDAY, MAY 3

...wick Street Center holds a discussion ...mes Jeffords, first in their series ...n Address World Issues." Further ...ined by contacting the Center, 145 ...

...ay Student Union presents a Spring ...nnasium on the Redstone Campus ...d refreshments will be served.

partment Party

...for May 2 from 4 to 6 p.m. in ...and Room 120, Living/Learning ...the Center. Refreshments will be ...day provided.

ts

...tain Our address is Vermont ...ve a Student Assistance ...t on Corporation, 156 College ...you Street, Burlington, Vermont ...erms 05401. In Burlington call ...loan 658-4550. Out of Burlington ...e to call 1-800-642-3177 toll ...ny to free. Out of state call collect ...can- 1-802-658-4550.

For Men

...nomic ...would simply "apply the ...in the prescribed amount of energy ...plied for the prescribed amount of ...known time and he would be sterile ...mair for X amount of days."

...rary And, according to Moneysworth magazine, which ...mmons reported on the device, ...ss an ultrasonic radiation - unlike ...every other kinds does not produce ...says. cellular damage.

way Elm Bark Beetle

...ect the by licensed pesticide ...lled a applicators from Rutland Tree ...ed to Service.

...beetle In early June, a six per ...h Elm cent application of the same ...s and spray will be applied to the ...campus elms mainly for ...control of the Elm Leaf Beetle. ...A more exact date will be ...announced later.

...which Meanwhile, the Elm Bark ...o seven Beetle had better hope for high ...weather winds. ...surveys ...mans ...dime

Rep At UVM

...a ...ntinuing ...gram of ...urs on ...ersity ...Academic ...et Rep ...ed Kell, ...Students ...ems and ...roblems

...or questions concerning VA benefits. If you want to meet with the Vet Rep he will be at the Admissions Building with hours from 8:00 - 12:00, 1:00 - 4:30 on Mondays and Tuesdays. Appointments are not needed and any benefit offered by the Veterans Administration can be discussed.

rt To Be Held Sunday

...est jazz ...ns from ...tire, and ...ste will ...unday ...at 1:30 ...ssum In ...rther or ...held in ...115 of ...ater

The concert will feature a group last performed last year at Living/Learning featuring Jerry Levine on guitar, Chuck Eller, keyboards, Greg Nolan, drums, and Andy Fee, bass. Along with these people will be a jam session with a number of excellent people from the Vermont and New Hampshire area.

...TS INTERESTED IN ...G AS MEMBERS OF ...EXT YEARS ...EAKERS BUREAU ...CONTACT: ...Y. ...NY BILLINGS 656-2029

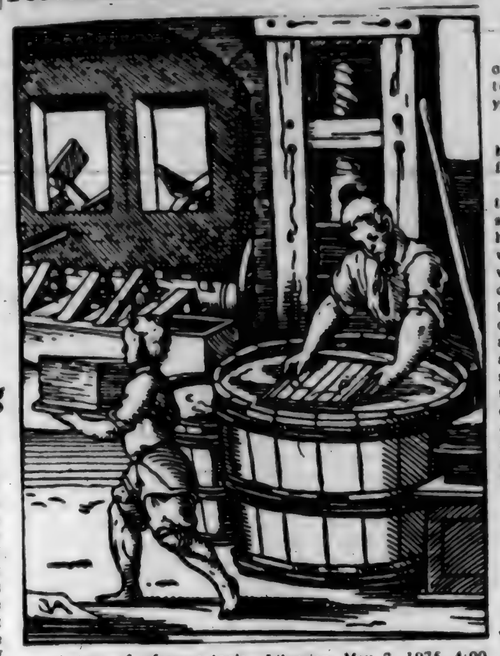
Five English Majors Win Honors

At the Comprehensive Exam for English majors held April 19, 5 persons did so well that they will be listed in the Commencement Program as graduating "with Departmental Honors." This optional examination in English and American literature is given each spring for those seniors who enjoy the intellectual challenge of "putting it all together", and competing against a standard of accomplishment developed over the years among English majors. Professor Betty Bandel, soon to retire after 27 years in the English Department, has long advocated the comprehensive examination as a means for establishing two kinds of degrees such as English Universities have, the "honors" degree and the "pass" degree. She pointed out that if more departments here offered comprehensives, such a distinction might become customary, with significant implications for those seeking admission to graduate study.

Professor Long, chairman of the Department's Honors Committee, voiced satisfaction in the knowledge that almost half the Department's senior majors indicated an interest in the exam, though not all were able to be present on the day the exam was given. Of thirteen students who finished the three-hour examination, the following received congratulatory letters this week announcing that they had won Departmental Honors: Jill Brabham, Sue Cathcart, John Pucci, Peter Rivenberg, and Paul Rivenberg.

Professor Long also wished to congratulate the others who took the exam, even though they didn't quite make an honors grade. "Their willingness to tackle such an exam," he said, "puts them among our most earnest and dedicated students. It is likely that they too will go far in their specialty."

Bailey Tour On Renaissance Book Making



A tour of reference tools and holdings on the art of printing and book making during the Renaissance in Europe by Penelope D. Pillsbury - Reference Librarian. May 2, 1975, 4:00 p.m. (refreshments) Please reserve your place in the group by calling 656-2020 ex 27/29, or sign the list at the reference desk.

Students Wanted For Archaeological Dig

Tell el-Hesi. A mount of many surprises and historically important to scientific archaeology. It was here that ceramic dating, one of the most important tools of interpretation available to the archaeologist, was founded.

Among the more recent surprises was the discovery of a massive mud-brick wall and tower in which pottery was sealed that indicates a late tenth or early ninth century B.C. date for its construction.

This site was host to an as yet unknown number of walled cities from early Bronze times until its final destruction late in the Hellenistic Era.

Applications from student volunteers are being accepted by the Joint Archaeological Expedition to Tell el-Hesi for its fourth summer "dig". The Expedition is under the direction of the American Schools of Oriental Research and is sponsored by a consortium of 24 institutions of higher learning including Harvard Semitic Museum, Oberlin, Smith and Holy Cross Colleges in the United States.

Tell el-Hesi in Israel, is a 37 acre site an hour's drive south and west of Jerusalem on the edge of the Negev Desert. The fortified acropolis on its northern quarter was occupied more or less continuously from 5000 B.C. to about 200 A.D. Twenty-four levels of occupation have been identified, one of which was protected by an Iron Age wall 57 feet thick.

The Hesi professional staff numbers 40 specialists representing many major American faculties. Anthropologists, paleo-ethno-botanists, architects, artists and photographers supplement the work of the 18 professional archaeologists.

The volunteer staff consists of approximately eighty students (graduate and undergraduate) and professionals. Volunteers are involved in all phases of the archaeological program and with the educational program of field excavation, lectures and seminars. The six-week program begins with a week of orientation at the major institutions of Jerusalem and then moves to a tent city in the desert. Weekend tours visit every major archaeological site in Israel. Academic credit of six hours is available through consortium schools on the graduate, undergraduate and graduate-professional level.

Expedition members will leave the United States on a charter flight to Tell Aviv in late June. Costs for room, board, tuition and weekend field trips are $600. Air fare is $620.

For further information and details write or call Professor Harry Thomas Frank, the Hesi Volunteer Program, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio 44070.

Room Choosing '75

by Cary Aiken

Friday, April 25 was on campus housing sign-up for the next school year. The sign-up was for those students now living on campus who want to live in a different dormitory next year. A few hearty room choosers arrived a full twenty-four hours in advance to start the line up. More students trickled in during the day and into Thursday night. Those in line were forced to camp out in the damp spring air. However, it did not take long before a party started which gave the otherwise dull procedure a festive spirit. In fact, some students claimed that they were there just to party. Things were quiet by two a.m. as people gradually drifted off to sleep. Sunrise found matresses, sleeping bags, empty beer cans, and about seventy-five UVM students strewn about the entrance to Patrick Gymnasium.

By eight a.m. there was a crowd of over three-hundred room hungry students. At that time the doors opened to rising seniors and they were allowed to take their pick of available rooms. They were followed in order by displaced students, two year students, rising juniors, and finally the rising sophomores. The process went on till five o'clock when the last rising sophomore signed his contract for next year. The housing office is not able to provide the figures on just how many people signed contracts at this time, but the figures will be available shortly. Most dorms still have single space openings in double rooms. The exceptions are Harris-Millis, Converse, Redstone Hall, Wilks and Davis. These dorms were very popular and were shortly filled to capacity. Freshmen will occupy the remaining places in the dormitories and also the places vacated by cancellations. Cancellations will be accepted without penalty until June 1 at the housing office located in the Mansfield House located on Pearl St.

The competition for rooms was especially keen this year due to the University's announcement that there is little doubt of a housing shortage next year. Within the catagories of preference the rooms were alloted on a first come, first serve basis and there were at least seventy-five eager beavers who were determined to make this system work for them.

The Exchange

by John O. Outwater
Mechanical Engineering

(This is the first of a series of guest writers that we hope to continue through next year.)

"Home is where I hang my hat." This is a quote, I think, from Will Rogers and it seems to be behind so many of the suggestions this week. UVM IS home for about 8,000 men and women and the administration works hard indeed to make it a comfortable and happy place to live, but it surely needs cooperation from both faculty and students. One man asks about the annoyance of smoking in public events: "I try to take advantage of the excellent public speakers who come to UVM, but it is very difficult when one is distracted by persons smoking three or four cigarettes in half an hour" - if it is illegal, the smoke should be put out when it is pointed out, if it is not illegal, then a request might be enough. If the smoker persists, then there is not much anyone can do. I remember asking a young woman if she put ski boots on the sofa at home as she was doing in the library. She replied that she did, so she was only using furniture as in her own home, but the point got across.

Parking should be open to students and faculty with a strict proviso that overnight parking will draw a heavy fine. Faculty are paid to be on hand to help students learn, and there really is no parking problem - only a problem to find parking within 100 feet of a classroom.

Accordingly, faculty could park on the streets and walk as student do, and, as they are expected to be earlier than students, then they would have no problem at all in the same way that the staff presently has no parking problems. This, however, is not something THE EXCHANGE can settle - it needs a group with more clout.

The Senate Student Affairs Committee spoke recently that they heard no problems from students, so felt there were no pressing problems. They are available and eager to help in any way they can - as are all connected with UVM, so keep the suggestions coming and also try the Senate!

--This is the last of the 1974-75 year, so all of us wish you a successful completion of your courses and a great summer!

Reputable Faculty To Teach At UVM Summer Session

Every summer session program in the country is partially judged by the quality and reputation of its visiting faculty. Each summer UVM invites a number of distinguished scholars to campus. Among some of the better known visiting faculty this year are: Kurt Adler (son of Alfred Adler), psychiatrist and Dean of the New York Alfred Adler Institute; Oscar Christensen, Professor of Counseling and Guidance nationally known lecturer and consultant to schools, social and governmental agencies throughout the United States and Canada; Amelia Fry, Director of Earl Warren Oral History Project at the University of California at Berkley; Herbert Hemphill, free lance lecturer, guest curator at Smithsonian Institute and New York State Historical Association, one of the founders of the Museum of American Folk Art in NYC, and author of The Twentieth Century American Folk Art and Artists; Charles Morrisey, Director of Vermont Historical Society, past President of Oral History Association; Fitz-George Peters, associate of William Glasser who has trained several thousand teachers and administrators throughout the US and Canada - in the ideas of Schools Without Failure and Reality Therapy; Robert Powers, former co-worker of Dr. Rudolph Dreikurs and President of the American Society of Adlerian Psychology; and J. Lloyd Trump, Director of Model Schools Project and Associate Secretary for Research and Development for the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

For more information call or stop by the Office of Continuing Education at Grasse Mount on the corner of Main and Summit streets. 656-2085.

L/L Center Sponsors Art Exhibit

G. B. Piranesi's (1720-1778) etching of the "Panthenon Exterior"

Living/Learning Center will sponsor an exhibit and sale of approximately 600 original prints from the famed Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection on Wednesday, May 7, 1975. The event will be held at Fireplace Lounge, Living/Learning Center. Along with prints by such masters as Picasso, Goya, Renoir and Hogarth, can be seen works by many of today's American artists, some famous and some not yet famous.

Students and area residents are invited to browse through this outstanding collection of original graphics.

A knowledgeable Roten representative will be on hand to answer questions about the prints and the artists and to discuss other prints not in this collection but which may be obtained from the gallery in Baltimore.

A world-respected authority on graphics of all types, Roten holds exhibitions and sales at major museums, colleges, art galleries and art centers throughout the United States and Canada.

The informal displaying of the collection allows visitors to examine at close range the various graphic techniques of different artists. The exhibit takes place from noon to 7 p.m.

The Importance Of Field Trips

by Linda Swardlick

People thinking that field trips went out with sixth grade and bag lunches are totally unaware of just how incredibly meaningful they can be. On Friday, March 14, Professor Fred Selnick of the Sociology Department, three graduate students, and six undergraduates from his Community Organization and Development course went to the Miner Center in Chazy, N.Y., eleven miles out of Plattsburgh, N.Y. The Miner Foundation established by William H. Miner, a philanthropist, is made up of a Center and an Institute focusing on prevalent research concerning the environment. Located on 9,000 acres of land, it provides fantastic opportunity for extensive research and study. This year it is also the home base for the study of rural development headed by Professor Peter Gore of Plattsburgh University.

The field trip, consisting of thought-provoking seminars, challenging discussions, a slide presentation, and a tour of the actual research projects, provided all the students with the opportunity of seeing methods and theories spoken about in the classroom applied to "real world" situations. Various techniques we studied in class to use for our term projects were brought to life by Professor Peter Gore and two Cornell graduate students when they shared with us the methods they used for the project they had already designed. Community development became even more "real" after we spent a few hours with the director of the Community Development Center in Champlain, the town next to Chazy. The director herself having been a college graduate with a major in sociology, emphasized the importance of going beyond academic theories to deal with the people so as to find out what they really need and want, not just what theory says they should have.

In conclusion, I would just like to emphasize how very important it is to reevaluate the common cynicism regarding field trips and realize they can be of utmost significance and successfully teach you that what you learn in the classroom can very definitely be used outside in the real world as well. Field trips should be encouraged and the opportunity to take them should be made available more often. They are definitely worthy of your support.

Results Of Campus Crusade For Christ Survey

During the past year Campus Crusade for Christ has been involved in taking the National Collegiate Religious Questionaire with the help of 636 UVM students. The questionaire was randomly given to undergraduate students, and is an indication of students' thinking on subjects such as God, religion, and the basic problems facing mankind.

Approximately 69% of those surveyed indicated that they are members of a specific religious group, while 25% said they used to be members and 5% said that they are not or have never been members. The remaining 1% were in the process of joining a religious group. 35% were Roman Catholic, 15% Congregational, 12% Episcopal, 10% Jewish, and 10% were not a member of any group, while 18% belonged to other denominations.

Sixty-six percent of those surveyed stated that they had a vague philosophy of life while 30% indicated a definite philosophy and 4% said that they did not have a specific one.

How much did they live according to their philosophy? Three percent all the time, 66% most of the time, 15% half of the time, and 15% seldom.

Thirty-three percent stated that self-centeredness was the basic problem of mankind, while 15% stated intolerance, and 15% said lack of understanding. Lack of communication and materialism each were indicated by 3.5%, while 25% cited other problems including war, economics, environment, lack of education, racism, religion, and poverty. Only two percent stated they felt that there were no problems.

Only 33% stated that their philosophy of life had a definite solution to the basic problem of mankind, while an overwhelming 67% indicated that their philosophy of life did not include a solution.

Seventy percent believed in a God who is both infinite and personal, 10% are unsure and 20% do not believe in God. Half have not seriously read the New Testament, 10% have read more than half, 20% less than half, and 20% indicated that they had read the entire New Testament.

Twenty-one percent believe Jesus Christ to be a teacher, 33% said Son of God or God-man. 5% said philosopher, 5% prophet, 3% philosophical ideal, 2% myth, 1% founder of a church, while 10% stated that they did not know who He was.

When asked how a person becomes a Christian 20% did not know, 20% said "understand and follow the teachings of Jesus," 8% said "be born one", 12% hold personal convictions, 15% "live a good life," 5% believe the Bible, 12% believe in Christ as personal savior.

Of those surveyed, 70% indicated that they would like to know God personally, 10% were unsure, 20% said "definitely not."

If you are interested in learning more about knowing God personally, call 985-3578 or 862-3253.

Cunningham Newman Center

Weekday Liturgy: Each day at 4:15 p.m.

Weekend Liturgy: Saturday; 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.. Sunday; 9:00 and 11:30 a.m. and 4:15 and 6:30 p.m.

Each Tuesday: 10 p.m. Liturgy followed by refreshments and informal socializing. Come and join us!

Faith Community: Young people who are of, or beyond the graduate school age and who would be interested in getting together for prayer, dialogue, social and apostolic activities, are invited to join us here at the Center every other Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Choir Practice: Each Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. in preparation for the 4:15 Liturgy Sunday afternoon.

Promise her anything but give her a sterling silver thimble from THE YARN BASKET

Many gift items for Mothers Day, graduation and your favorite bride & groom. Also a wide selection of tennis accessories, needlepoint, crewel and knitting yarns.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER

40 Church St. Burlington

Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction

Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont

Complete Study Notes

Small presses & some far-out reading

UNIVERSITY STORE

CASH

PAID FOR YOUR BOOKS AT THE bookstore

UNIVERSITY STORE

ON THE CAMPUS

If the book is being used in the Fall Semester and we have received a textbook requisition from the faculty we will pay you ½ of the new book price in CASH

OR

20% more in credit toward purchases at the UNIVERSITY STORE

(good at any time for any purchase)

If the book is NOT being used in the Fall Semester or we have NOT received a textbook requisition from the faculty A representative from the Nebraska Book Co. will be here Monday, May 5th to Monday, May 12th to make you an offer.

editorials and opinions

VERMONT CYNIC
Founded In 1883

Editor-in-Chief . . . . . Randy Jansen
Assistant Editor . . . . . Wyatt Kash
Managing Editor . . . . . Mark S. Valle
News Editor . . . . . Mark Sawyer
Feature Editor . . . . . Stephen W. Tanner
Arts Editor . . . . . Robert DeNike
Sports Editor . . . . . Norm Robinson
Copy Editor . . . . . Sari Bodi
Advertising Manager . . . . . Debbie Powell

letters to the editor

The End To The Vietnam Story

"This action closes a chapter in the American experience." Ford made this statement as the US Ambassador Graham Martin and the last Americans were being evacuated from South Vietnam. After 20 years of involvement in Indochina, the US was finally withdrawing from a war that was not theirs.

The Vietnam War polarized this country as no other issue has in America's history. Families, friends and communities were divided over the issue of whether the US had a right to be in Vietnam. Many young Americans fled overseas to avoid the draft, believing that the war was immoral and wrong. For those who went to Vietnam, 56,000 did not return, killed in an illegal war, which they did not support.

The US supported a dictatorial and corrupt regime, led by Thieu. While America was evacuating orphans, Thieu was searching for a way to get $70 million dollars worth of gold out of South Vietnam. Instead of aiding the South Vietnamese people, we helped South Vietnamese officials and the wealthy to gain power and money.

The Communists now control South Vietnam. Whether their government will be more beneficial to the Vietnamese people, only time can tell. But, now there is at least peace in Indochina, ending the senseless killing and fighting. The Vietnamese can settle down and start the reconstruction of their war-torn country.

The US should pledge humanitarian aid for the rebuilding of Vietnam. Instead of military equipment, let us send medicine, food and construction materials for the Vietnamese people.

Let us not forget that we cannot dictate our ideals or way of life to the world by force. Only by cooperation and negotiation should we influence the world. History is past us now. We should learn from our experience, and never make a mistake of intervention into internal affairs of another country again.

R.J.

Room For Rent

To the Editor

Imagine reading the following advertisement in the classified ads:

Room for Rent: Double occupancy. Room is 11 ft. X 15 ft. Bathroom within easy walking distance and shared by 30 companions. No kitchen facilities. Rent: $208.00 per month.

Do you laugh? Not if you live in a dorm. What are the reasons for the high cost, Mr. Miser? I invite you to make your budget, expenses and income public.

Lenny Weinstock
313 Buckham Hall

More On "Hickies"

To the Editor

Reaction to Larry Seiden's "All Things Considered" in your April 24 issue.

Dear Larry,

Some say hickies are great.
Others a product of fate.
A few find them appealing.
A prize worth revealing.
A few react with disgust.
"Such a gross act of lust"
Fewer accept them with pride,
And want two on each side.
I wish I had the balls.
When such tragedy calls.
To walk proud, face beaming.
My hicky just gleaming
But much to your dismay.
When our paths cross one day.
I'll be soaking in the sun.
With my turtleneck on.

Insincerely written,
D.C.

Thanks From The "Big D"

TO THE STUDENTS WHO EAT AT WATERMAN DINING HALL

Another school year is about to end and I wish to thank each and every one of you for making my job which I like very much -- so much more enjoyable, through your kind words -- patience -- and friendliness.

We will be open for breakfast in September and I hope to see many old faces and lots of new ones, as I serve up the pancakes and eggs.

Have a nice summer, and God willing I will see you in September for breakfast.

Doris "Big D"

Thank-you Dr. Willard

To the Editor:

As students in Dr. Willard's Chemistry 4 class, we would like to express our appreciation for the time, effort, and genuine interest he has devoted to our class. He has made a potentially difficult class most enjoyable and interesting for the majority of his students. We are taking time to write this letter simply because he has taken his valuable time to become personally involved with his students. We are sorry that the university is losing such a well-liked and sincere professor. We wish Dr. Willard good luck wherever he goes he deserves it!

Sincerely,
Cathy Waugh
Mary Ann Iliff
Susan Kleinman

Comment On Mahogany Rush Concert

To The Editor

I would like to comment on the review of Mahogany Rush in the April 24 Cynic a review I found rather idiosyncratic at best. The "monumental fame and fortune" of Frank Marino has somehow eluded me thus far, however I am not a native to this area. However I do feel I know a little about Hendrix. The review states that the Hendrix style is "lost and almost forgotten." Tosh! I hear pseudo-Hendrix licks all the time, from top forty soul songs to expert guitarists like Robin Trower. It is true that trios are a thing of the past, and considering that only rarely were even the trios of the past consistantly up to snuff this is a thing that is well and good with me. All of the information of guitars also interested me, especially the emphasis on the stratocaster and its accouterments. Mariono is pictured in the Cynic playing an SG Gibson with a Bigsby tremelo bar. Was this not taken in Burlington? Also the tremelo bar on a stratocaster is not a wah wah bar, which is non existant. The wah effect is created by a change in tone, and tremelo affects the pitch, though with the pre-amp in the pedal of the wah you also gain in distortion. The writer seemed confused about this device.

The last statement seemed naive. Why, if you like Hendrix and lament that he is forgotton, trash someone who is playing music in that style, except that it interferes with adolescent hero worship? If the innovations of Hendrix are to be perfected (for no truely original and major innovation in the arts is born perfect) then that music must have its perfecters.

Also, Hendrix's innovations are sometimes much in need of perfecting, especially as his live albums are full of inconsistancies. The freedom with which Hendrix played is only startling when one is unfamiliar with earlier innovators in free forms such as Coleman, Cherry, Coltrane, etc.

Yours,
Gary Owen

Where's The Doctor's Bag?

To the Editor:

It has come to my attention, that one of the past features of this paper has created, on many occasions, much joy and laughter. Ms. M. Kingsley, a fellow member of the "Vermont" community, has been waiting with eager eye to start her summer vacation, with one last reading of THE DOCTOR'S BAG.

I ask that you seriously consider including this feature in the paper more frequently give the readers what they want -- including a little healing.

Gerry Sylvester

Ice Cream Debate

To the Editor:

Addressed to Dr. Wayne Patterson, Acting Chairman, Dept. of Complaints

For two years I have felt the urge to convey to you my feelings about your ice-cream bar in the dairy building, but have managed to fight the urge until now, when finally compelled to do so. Having for the past two hours sustained acute hunger pangs, and marvelous fantasies about your incredible ice-cream, I bolted from my work and sought succor in the dairy bar. Imagine my dismay, when after waiting in line one half hour, only two, and I do mean two, customers had been processed.

It is of course conceivable that the help is undernourished, and must move slowly, but what grieves me deeply, is that the clientelle remains undernourished, especially me. I am further concerned as to the implications of forever assuaging my need for ice-cream through fantasy.

This past summer was especially maddening, when the cones were served primarily by an elaborately polite conversationalist, who did his post doctoral in the finer shades of passive aggression. How I longed to politely depose some of my [illegible] I continue to suppress (however tenuously) that urge and appeal to your department for relief.

Having known for some time that you have done advanced research in turtle behavior, is it possible that you have discovered the miracle of reincarnation? If so, please consider transferring some of the turtles from the ice cream bar. Perhaps they might have a calming effect upon trustees meetings, faculty meetings, etc. but in the tranquility of your ice cream bar, it is known that customers fall asleep before being served.

Hoping to hear from you sir, I remain

Your obedient servant
J. David Egner,
Vice President

Human Resource Services, Inc.

Religious Controversy

To the Editor:

I am writing to call your attention to the controversial organization mentioned in these excerpts from the Kansas State College daily newspaper which has become aware of and is publicizing this insidious organization which masquerades under many different names.

Many colleges are now becoming alarmed about this movement, posing as educational or religious, but in reality it is a con game which uses mind control techniques to enslave the student. Eventually he is absorbed into the parent organization and goes into the streets selling candy, flowers, peanuts, etc.

Recruitment for this organization is going on in colleges all over the country. Unsuspecting students are especially vulnerable to enticement during the stress of exams hence the urgency for students to be informed.

The recruits eventually renounce family and friends, as tools of Satan, especially if parents have investigated and, as a result, oppose the movement.

I know whereof I speak because I have a niece whose whereabouts is unknown and whose heartbroken parents are trying desperately to find her and free her. Through their efforts they have come in contact with dozens of families in the same sad situation.

Sincerely yours,
Marjorie B. Spalding
Guilford, Conn.

Ms. Spaulding refers to the Unification Church in her letter, see related article on page 5.

Reaction to Dean Folta

To the Editor:

We are a group of outraged students writing in reaction to Dean Folta's questionable handling of a CEEB Survey Test. On April 17, my sociology class was all but forced to take the test in place of watching a highly reputed film on racism in America. The film was cancelled altogether due to the fact that the instructor was at a conference in Washington. He was unable to reschedule it before the end of the year, being unaware and beyond control of the situation until he returned) I think it would be fair to say that we have the support of a majority of my 10:40 T-Th Soc. 10 class in this view.

When we entered the class we were "jokingly" informed by her that, no, she was not going to lecture on sociology, but that we were going to take a Survey Test instead. The test was to help aid in the placing of incoming students to sociology courses on a university level.

We were at no point in her presentation of the test, informed of our right as students (or simply as free citizens of the U.S.!) that we had a choice in taking it or not. And, when a number of students did try to exercise that right by attempting to leave the room, she verbally forced them back to their seats. (literally running out in the hall in an effort to "round up" those who had managed to escape that far!) What she triumphantly proceeded to tell us was that we could tell our friends that their names would be taken (we had to put our names on the test) and they would be contacted by the Dean's office. They would take the test Saturday!

And then, after all this run-around, she reluctantly informed us that if we absolutely, felt we couldn't put up with this test we could leave our name and only after discussing it with her.

The test, which was to take a full hour didn't actually get underway until only 30-40 minutes were left in the class. Between the lack of time and the incredibly hostile atmosphere which definitely pervaded the room, there was no way this test could be a fair representation of the ability of these students. I would strongly suggest the results of this Survey Test be declared invalid.

I should probably make it clear that it wasn't the testing itself which infuriated me as much as the totally authoritarian and pretty sneaky way it was pulled on us.

Throughout the hour, Dean Folta seemed to maintain total disrespect for us as mature and intelligent human beings. I really got the feeling I was right back in the junior high school gym when the last thing on anybody's mind was what the principal was trying to bellow out over the roar of rambunctious and rough kids. That was more the level of the situation from her end, I think.

Our rights as individuals and mature human beings were completely disregarded. We were not told in advance of the test. We weren't offered the alternative to leave. We were paying for that class period and were deprived of an excellent film and important part of the course.

At this point there's nothing we can do about the class hour and presentation we lost. I'm simply making this plea in the hope that the truth of this situation be known; that students, in the future think about and exercise their rights; and that Dean Folta and other administrative officials realize we, too, are mature free thinking individuals deserving of a little respect. Need we, students of this University actually appeal to faculty members for basic human courtesies due one individual from another?

Sincerely,
Tina Dunbar
Lisa Munker
Sara Clay

Zionists Respond

To the Editor:

In response to S. Moore and his letter of 4-24-75.

Many points brought in your letter interested me. However, I would first like to remark that you lack a basic understanding of the Zionist movement, its origins and philosophies. The Jew has constantly been ridiculed and scapegoated throughout history, looked upon as a foreigner in a strange land, simply because his fellow human beings have refused to accept his desire to live a life among his fellow Jews which did not conform with that of the majority surrounding him.

The Zionist movement gained popular support around the beginning of the century, when the masses of Jews in Russia, living under such wretched oppression and persecution as was only surpassed by Hilter's systematic murder, attempted to make their age-old dream of joining their brethren in Palestine a reality. The need for Jewish political sovereignty became blatant when Nazi racism told the Jew again that he was a foreigner, in spite of the fact that the German Jews had attempted to immerse themselves in German culture and had made great contributions in secular life. In the meantime, relations between the Jewish immigrants to Palestine and the Arabs living there had become irreconcilable, because of the Arabs' similar refusal to allow the Jews to live in their midst in peace. Hence, the 1948 partition of Palestine adopted by the UN, which provided for both a Jewish state and a Palestiman Arab state.

Your referral to an Israeli "love it or leave it" policy is remarkable. Arabs were not forced out of the Jewish state. They left only after fighting a war against the new state in which their objective was not to create a peaceful bi-national state, but rather to "push them into the sea," as P.L.O. leader Yassir Arafat now so eloquently suggests. The problem of the Palestiman refugees, the most horrible thing to come out of the Arab-Israeli conflict, resulted when the neighboring Arab states, who supplied and fought side-by-side with the Palestinian Arabs, would not take in their Moslem brothers after losing the war. Rather, they preferred to use them as political pawns and examples of Israeli "racism" and "oppression" to this day. Arabs have lived and continue to live in Israel, unharassed and represented in the Israeli parliament.

I feel compelled to comment on your references to the "third class citizenship" of Oriental Jews as an accusation of Jewish racism and ethnic division within Israel. We, as outsiders, have no right to interfere in Israel's internal problems, until we have accepted her existence as a sovereign state. (I mean this within reason; if people are starving and being shot in the streets, it is our duty as human beings to interfere.) This is not meant as a denial of prejudice among Jews; we, too, are human, imperfect creatures. However, Israel is quite capable of ironing out her own problems without the advice of S. Moore and other helpful voices. What would you think, Mr. Moore, if a foreigner called for the abolishment of the United States of America because we do not offer equal opportunities to all of our citizens? A rather extreme measure, you must admit.

Finally, I would like to say a word about our obligation as Americans to Israel. Firstly, the U.S. has remained committed to the survival of the Jewish state since its formation. Secondly, the danger of Russian imperialistic Communism cannot be denied; a decrease in American influence in the Middle East would mean the death of a Democratic state, however small, still a thorn in the side of totalitarianism, and the increase of Russian power in an economically and militarily strategic area. As Moshe Dayan reiterated, Israel only wants help in helping herself, not, I repeat, NOT American trooppower.

Sincerely,
Daniel Rothstein

The Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in -- we are downstairs at Billings Center -- or call 658-4911.

VERMONT CYNIC

NEWS: Margo Howland, John MacDonald, Peter Sherwin, Jerry Weil, Dave Ryan, Peter Duquette.
FEATURE: Paul Ajamian, Paul Cain, Carol Dufault, Mike Henry, Pam Hogarth, Andy Hunt, Sue Perkins.
ARTS: Dave Mandel, Larry Seiden, Mark Serainick, Jay Williams, Paul Prior COLUMNISTS: Peter Cobb, Elliot Freeman, Ken Markoditz, Sue Perkins, Stephen Rice, Larry Seiden, Scott Skinner, Peter Campbell.
PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Lily Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Cohen, John Lunde, Barb Tarshis
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Don Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Taves.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Grancey, Debbie Powell.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shenik.

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by the columnists do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the majority of the members of the CYNIC Editorial Board.

Published yearly during the college year by the students of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. Editorial and Business offices in the Billings Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone 658-4911. Deadline for notices is one week prior to date of publication.

Founded in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per year, single copy ten cents.

FRANKLY SPEAKING....by phil frank

All Things Considered:

It's Great To Be

by Larry Seiden

Sitting in a diner drinking one more cup promising myself that it will be the last, when who obviously knows the bottom of the cup way "Hey kid, why are you trying to be a man? You're hard, try to slow down and watch both ends befo the street. And please stop running around Remember it goes around twice in one day."

"War babies, lady, you know I had it right he ring yesterday but today none of them will fit. I been to the tip of a little hill and I was impre really enough to think about mountains. This t like my breaks are starting from the wrong directi I get tears so deep I think all my friends are sta like me. You got any silver bullets?"

She held my hand, putting enough care i believed it when she said, "It's all fun and g deposit, no return."

Everybody's high on consolation.

.....

Fun and games and that's why I've been writing CONSIDERED and I would like to thank all my really don't look like -me) for all their supp puzzled looks and hickeys. There is no need f identifiable phrases. So stay in the woodwork, I' Maybe we can slip away and find the roses we w

.....

Summertime's comin' and I hope daddy will giv My legs are not used to stretching out unless I So if you see a stranger who's not singing any give him a ride. Maybe he knows the way and it long way we have to go. But please go slow, much to lose now and it's easier to look up than

.....

Capture the moment because everything chan shit we see coming down as tymptome do difference because a flush beats a full house (I fast L). Politely, I'm still acting rashly but I and this is one end, another fork in the road and and the other is all mine. I'm hungry. Pickin' now with Joe Walsh, and that guitar player but I'm continuously making the same mistak never learn. Locked in the closet waiting for co is so much pain on those faces crawlin' through another paradise in the night. The angel says laundry dry to a bright white and Henry Aaro of your life. So here I am, grinning through daydream in eloquent profanity. The pump life's high times. Pretty people and foxy ladie ground. I'm living for your songs under the play the games so slow and easy. I figure it pleased you.

.....

It's too late to apologize for this production out smiling and laughing but this typewriter it binds my fingers, storms my lines and sees That's OK for now, cause I'm not making except to come back for the summer when and by then I'll find the cure. So drink on Welcome to the club. It is all fun and game peace.

VPIRG Capital W

VPIRG Staff

The 1975 Legislative session officially p.m. on April 17. This year's session was hi VPIRG Student activism at all six mer instrumental in passing a number of sig legislation

H. 127 Nuclear Power Control

Probably the most important bill passe H 127 which gives the Vermont Gener authority over whether or not to build power plants in the state

Lobbyist representing major electric u the state worked hard trying to persuade they are not competent to judge the merit Citizens throughout the state however Meeting Day votes, helped convince them ought to be a public issue. The bill passed Senate with a two thirds majority

H.93 Vermont's Bottle Law

Amendments to strengthen Ver legislation faced nearly as much big time the nuclear bill. Passage came only after members of the House refused to ad Assembly, until the Senate passed the bill present loopholes in Vermont's deposit l throw-away soda and beer bottles by Janua

S.133 Hearing Loss and Hearing Aids

An important consumer health care law this session, S.133 requires consums before buying a hearing aid since h

(continued on page eight)

ers to editor

On "Hickies"

And want two on each side
I wish I had the balls.
When such tragedy calls,
To walk proud, face beaming
My locks just gleaming
But much to your dismay,
When our paths cross one day
I'll be soaking in the sun,
With my turtleneck on
Insincerely written,
DC

ou Dr. Willard

n Dr lass we ress our r time,
terest he lass. He difficult ple and ority of taking simply en his valuable time to become personally involved with his students. We are sorry that the university is losing such a well-liked and sincere professor. We wish Dr Willard good luck wherever he goes he deserves it!

Sincerely,
Cathy Waugh
Mary Ann Iliff
Susan Kleinman

ram Debate

Wayne rtman ose felt you my cream ng but he urge Finally ving for strained
, and ll your bulted ought y bar n after hour, an two ncerned rovable nourishly but is that drains ally, the ll be to forever
d for ny ver was when ormarily"

By an elaborately polite conversationalist who did his post doctoral in the liner shades of passive aggression. How I longed to politely deposit a stone on his head but I continue to suppress (however tenuously) that urge and appeal to your department for relief.
Having known for some time that you have done advanced research in turtle behavior, is it possible that you have discovered the miracle of reincarnation? If so, please consider transferring some of the turtles from the ice cream bar. Perhaps they might have a calming effect upon trustees meetings, faculty meetings, etc. but in the tranquility of your ice cream bar, it is known that customers fall asleep before being served.
Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain
Your obedient servant
J. David Egner,
Vice President
Human Resource Services, Inc.

mes and encourages articles, columns, and ested students, faculty, and members of material must be submitted no later than e the Thursday of publication. Material es will be withheld upon request. If you ting or perhaps curious about how things we are downstairs at Billings Center – or

MONT CYNIC

nd, John Sherman, Peter Axelman, Mark Mihm, Andi; Larry Cook, Joy Cobb, Ken Perkins, Sedrin, Lampstell

PRODUCTION: Rick Barney, Lib Clay, Sarah Clay, Beth Conover, John Lindle, Barb Lindley.
SPORTS: Randy Briggs, Dan Rose, Richard Rottkov, Pat Tatro.
ADVERTISING: Katherine Bowers, Stephen Lee Brown, Sherry Granucci, Debbie Poole.
BUSINESS MANAGER: Nancy Shank.

expressed in editorials, cartoons, or the CYNIC do not necessarily reflect the the University administration, faculty, or State of Vermont. Opinions expressed by (do not necessarily) reflect the opinion majority of the members of the CYNIC board.
d yearly during the college year by the the University of Vermont and State College. Editorial and Business offices in Center, Burlington, Vermont. Telephone Deadline for notices is one week prior to Thursday.
d in 1883. Subscription rate $8.00 per cents ten cents.

All Things Considered:
It's Great To Be Alive!

by Larry Seiden

Sitting in a diner drinking one more cup of coffee, promising myself that it will be the last, when the waitress who obviously knows the bottom of the cup says like a star, "Hey kid, why are you trying to be a man? You're pushing too hard, try to slow down and watch both ends before you cross the street. And please stop running around the clock. Remember it goes around twice in one day."

"War babies, lady, you know I had it right here on my key ring yesterday but today none of them will fit. I feel like I've been to the tip of a little hill and I was impressed but not really enough to think about mountains. This time it seems like my breaks are starting from the wrong direction. Every trip I get tears so deep I think all my friends are starting to look like me. You got any silver bullets?"

She held my hand, putting enough care into it that I believed it when she said, "It's all fun and games kid. No deposit, no return."

Everybody's high on consolation.

••••••••••••••••••••

Fun and games and that's why I've been writing ALL THINGS CONSIDERED and I would like to thank all my friends (who really don't look like me) for all their support, concern, puzzled looks and hickees. There is no need for names and identifiable phrases. So stay in the woodwork, I'm coming too. Maybe we can slip away and find the roses we want to gather.

••••••••••••••••••••

Summertime's comin' and I hope daddy will give me the keys. My legs are not used to stretching out unless I'm horizontal. So if you see a stranger who's not singing any more sad songs, give him a ride. Maybe he knows the way and it is such a long, long way we have to go. But please go slow, we've got too much to lose now and it's easier to look up than go down.

••••••••••••••••••••

Capture the moment because everything changes and all the shit we see coming down as symptoms doesn't make a difference because a flush beats a full house (thanx kitty and fast f.). Politely, I'm still acting rashly but I feel surrounded and this is one end, another fork in the road and one road's me and the other is all mine. I'm hungry. Pickin' up my pieces now with Joe Walsh, and that guitar player surely can play, but I'm continuously making the same mistakes. I guess I'll never learn. Locked in the closet waiting for concern and there is so much pain on those faces crawlin' through, all looking for another paradise in the night. The angel says to me, let the laundry dry to a bright white and Henry Aaron will hit it out of your life. So here I am, grinning through another teenage daydream in eloquent profanity. The pump is rusted and it's life's high times. Pretty people and foxy ladies on my higher ground. I'm living for your songs under the streetlights. We play the games so slow and easy. I figure it's an honor if I pleased you.

••••••••••••••••••••

It's too late to apologize for this production. I wanted to go out smiling and laughing but this typewriter is dark blue and it binds my fingers, storms my lines and sees right through me. That's OK for now, cause I'm not making any commitments except to come back for the summer when things get brighter and by then I'll find the cure. So drink one to me. I'll buy. Welcome to the club. It is all fun and games, though play for peace.

Watch Those Invisible Salesmen!

by Margo Howland

(Author's note: It's that time of the year again. It's May, the end of the semester. Rip off the Seniors time. The time when all the college seniors discover that they have become very popular with magazine salesmen, credit-card companies, travel agencies, and jokers who try to sell them insurance over the phone. Somebody out there, somewhere, is making a mint selling the Senior class list. As a result, hundreds of unsuspecting seniors are being pestered and hounded by hard-sell tactics. I need mention no names. You Know Who You Are---and if perchance you recognize yourselves, I suggest you reevaluate your tactics.)

RIIIIINNNGGG!

"Hello?"

"Hi there, sweetie---is this Sally Coed?"

"Uh, yes. Who's this?"

"Wouldn't you like to know? Say, can we get together sometime?"

(Coldly) "I don't accept dates over the phone! Who IS this?"

"Now, now, let's not raise our temper! This is Charlie Quicksale from the Fly-By-Night Insurance Company. I'd like to interest you in our special program for college graduates. It's called Ditto Master!"

"But I'm not graduating this year, I graduate next fall."

"You're a senior, aren't you?"

"Yes..."

"That's what I thought. Now, as I was saying, I'd like to show you our super nifty keen-o life insurance policy, specially for seniors---"

"But I already have insurance."

"Life insurance?"

"Sure, I guess so. My parents got it."

"Yeah, well how much is it for?"

"None of your business!"

"Ahem! Listen, nobody says no to Charlie Quicksale! Just listen to these specials! Policy Q-40. We guarantee that your senior thesis will not be stolen. Policy W-72. Prevents unscrupulous individuals from doctoring your transcripts. Policy U-236. We will remove all unfavorable letters of recommendation from your files! And there's more!"

"How do you remove stuff from files? That's illegal!"

"We have trained mice that chew them up. Ever tried to take a mouse to court?"

"Listen, you're becoming very annoying---"

"Hey! All I want to do is tell you something about our insurance policies! That's all I'm trying to do, just to meet you and---"

(Male voice) "Stow it, Buster!"

"Who's this?"

"This is Joe College from the next floor. You just leave Sally Coed alone!"

"Why you whippersnapper! Lemme talk to my client!"

"Client my foot! If you call up again I'll sic Dean Miser and the Board of Trustees on you!"

"What do they know about insurance? Let me---"

"How would you like Hackett, Valine & MacDonald, Hickock & Boardman to run you out of town?"

"You're bluffing!"

"Listen Quicksale, you better leave while you've still got a chance. A falconer from the Medieval Renaissance Program just told me he is sending over all those pigeons that live under the eves in Waterman, and they're going to fly right over your office building! And they're going to come right in the windows, and do you know what your office is going to look like when they leave?"

"Gulp! S-Sorry to have bothered you."

(CLICK!)

Privacy Abuse Detected in Polygraph Testing

by Paul Ferie

(CPS)--A job-desperate graduate completes his application form, (he's more than qualified), is interviewed by the personnel manager (they grew up in the same state), and is confident he is about to be hired.

"One more thing."

"Yes?"

"We want you to take a polygraph test. It's voluntary of course, but if you refuse I'm afraid we can't hire you."

Should the applicant submit in order to be hired or should he refuse on the grounds that a "lie detector" test is degrading and dehumanizing, an abuse of his right to privacy?

This dilemma is faced daily by hundreds of potential employees and has become a growing concern to civil libertarians.

Currently there are only 13 states which have laws limiting or banning use of the polygraph for employment purposes. These are Alaska, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Washington. In all other states an applicant has no legal recourse if he is not hired because he refuses to submit to a polygraph test.

According to The Privacy Project, a newsletter published by the American Civil Liberties Union Foundation, there are serious functional and ethical problems with lie detector testing practice.

"The theory behind the polygraph test is that the act of lying causes psychological changes," said the Project. "However, the subject's physiological responses to the examiner's questions must be interpreted: it is the examiner's interpretation, not the machine, that determines whether a person 'passes' the polygraph test."

The importance of the tester has led 15 states to require licensing of polygraph examiners. But in the other states that allow polygraph testing, anyone who can afford the $2500 cost of a machine can go into business.

The Privacy Project estimates that 80% of the 1200-1300 US practitioners are incompetent.

The Project singled out four major areas where abuse of polygraph testing occurs:

1) Pre-employment polygraph screening intensifies existing forms of employment discrimination, particularly against those with an arrest record, even though they may not have been convicted.

2) Submission to a polygraph test is not voluntary, either in screening or later when an employee suspected of theft is fired for refusing to take a test. The conclusion that it is mandatory raises constitutional arguments involving violations of due process and the right of privacy.

3) The common practice of keeping a file of polygraph tests results invites the compilation of company black lists and the establishment of polygraph "banks".

4) The polygrapher hired by an employer has a strong incentive to be overly selective to insure that his client will be satisfied with the employee. Most employers rely totally upon the polygrapher's recommendation.

A 1974 Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights found that most polygraph licensing requirements were insufficient and generally criticised existing laws for evading the real issues.

The subcommittee concluded, "Expediency is not a valid reason for pitting individuals against a degrading machine and process that pries into their inner thoughts. Limits, beyond which invasions of privacy will not be tolerated, must be established."

VPIRG Capital Watch

by Peter Cobb
VPIRG Staff

The 1975 Legislative session officially closed at 11:45 p.m. on April 17. This year's session was highly successful for VPIRG. Student activism at all six member colleges was instrumental in passing a number of significant pieces of legislation.

H 127 Nuclear Power Control

Probably the most important bill passed this session was H 127 which gives the Vermont General Assembly final authority over whether or not to build any more nuclear power plants in the state.

Lobbyist representing major electric utility companies in the state worked hard trying to persuade the legislators that they are not competent to judge the merits of nuclear power. Citizens throughout the state however, in several Town Meeting Day votes, helped convince them that nuclear power ought to be a public issue. The bill passed both the House and Senate with a two thirds majority.

H 93 Vermont's Bottle Law

Amendments to strengthen Vermont's bottle ban legislation faced nearly as much big time lobby pressure as the nuclear bill. Passage came only after some determined members of the House refused to adjourn the General Assembly until the Senate passed the bill. H 93 plugs up the present loopholes in Vermont's deposit law by banning all throw-away soda and beer bottles by January 1977.

S.133 Hearing Loss and Hearing Aids

An important consumer, health care bill was signed into law this session. S.133 requires consumers to see a doctor before buying a hearing aid since hearing loss can be

(continued on page eight)

Beware of CARP

(Kansas State Collegian) - The recent alarm over the activity and purposes of the Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles (CARP) operating in Manhattan has made one thing clear: K-State students MUST be made totally aware of what CARP represents and what it has been doing.

No one may deny the members of this sect their right to believe as they wish or express those beliefs. What we may insist, however, is that these people and all their related organizations reveal themselves and their objectives in toto rather than operate under a deceptive facade. Note the following.

FACT: CARP is a student arm of an international sect headed by a Korean industrialist, Sun Myung Moong, who professes to be finishing the work of Jesus Christ. That work is said to be the breeding of "the ideal race."

CARP and the other "Unified" sects do not state this association (with Rev. Moon) in any of their promotional material, lectures or initial "discussion" sessions.

FACT: Local CARP leaders have two classes listed in the spring University for Man brochure. The classes are "Critique and Counter proposal to Communism" and "Spiritual Growth, Truth and Personal Development." The classes are taught by Steve Sell and Tim Boyd: Sell is regional CARP director here and Boyd is Manhattan CARP president - a fact which is not stated in the UFM brochure.

FACT: University officials have received a multitude of complaints that those students whom CARP absorbs completely disappear from their families. Those who have had some involvement or exposure to the sect have charged the group employs "brainwash" and "mind control" tactics on its members.

FACT: Local CARP members have denied that their group or one like it has been operating in Manhattan for the past several years.

But on April 29, 1974, members from two groups called Unified Thought and Committee for Responsible Dialogue submitted an application to University Activities Board seeking approval for a merging of the two groups as a campus organization. The new name was to be CARP- and the application stated: "They (Unified Thought and Committee for Responsible Dialogue) are associated with C.A.R.P. which can and will fulfill the needs and purposes of both prior organizations."

FACT: CARP members state, either directly or indirectly, that their sect is "Christian." But Rev. Moon was excommunicated by the Presbyterian Church in Korea in 1948. His church has been denounced by the National Council of Churches which stated unequivocally that Moon's Unification Church is not Christian.

THESE ARE the facts. Again, students must decide for themselves. Freedom of religious belief is essential.

But what is equally essential is that we are protected from elements which, by deception or false pretense, will alter or diminish one's ability to distinguish and choose between alternative responses and beliefs.

It is now vital that the K-State community be made thoroughly aware of what this sect represents. Students remaining here over spring break should be particularly aware and cautious.

For when that awareness and understanding is satisfactorily accomplished, the decision is then the individual's.

Cancer hasn't stopped 1,500,000 people from living.

They did it by not letting fear kill them. They did it by going to the doctor in time. They did it with the help of the effective methods of treatment today—surgery, radiation, chemotherapy. They did it because of the advances made through research. More than 1,500,000 Americans are living proof cancer can be cured. The American Cancer Society needs millions to save millions more. Please, give more today. We want to wipe out cancer in your lifetime.

American Cancer Society

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Blues Festival: A Seven-Hour Gig

Robert Jr. Lockwood (Guitarist at right) flanked by Mose Allison (piano), two of the blues artists which entertained UVM listeners until 2:15 a.m. last Saturday night.

Harry & Tonto: Two Dirty Old Men

by Jay Williams

With this review I would like to bid a fond farewell and a special thanks to my editor, Robert De Nike. Bob is the one leaving and he's a real trouper for having put up with me.

I feel guilty. I think I should have sipped on warm milk while watching Harry and Tonto. It's a nice film that brings out fond memories of my own grandfathers. But an all too common fact is evident in the film... we just don't care enough about the way of older generations, or we care too much. Yes, it's one of those message movies. As much as I should respect director/writer Paul Mazursky's brilliant talent, he does shift from scene to scene as if saying, "there! I've done this and this now I'm going to do..." He doesn't let you get involved. He is out to please himself.

Now Harry is a man to be reckoned with. He doesn't just say that an old man can have sex; he proves it! Harry can't leap tall buildings at a single bound, but he gets arrested for peeing on a sidewalk. Are you thinking Harry is a dirty old man? Forget it. A dirty old man is somebody we are taught to hate early in life. We love Art Carney. You'll love Harry and Tonto.

John George Brown: Our Finest Shoeshiners

Muscle Man by John George Brown, one of this American artist's varied and many creations currently on view through May 10 at the Fleming Museum. Philip Grime and Catherine Mazza, two graduate students in Museum studies, have assembled the collection.

Shampoo: Moments Of Hilarity

by Bill Bayreuther

I still haven't been able to figure out whether or not I really like this film. It has its moments of hilarity there's no disputing that, but I find it hard to be overly enthusiastic about it. Shampoo has little of the plot and Goldie Hawn's presence doesn't help much.

Warren Beatty stars as George Roundy, a Beverly Hills hairdresser. Despite numerous accusations tossed at him throughout the film, he's decidedly heterosexual. In fact, his personal services to the female clientele far exceed hairstyling. It almost seems as though he puts the make on every woman who enters the salon.

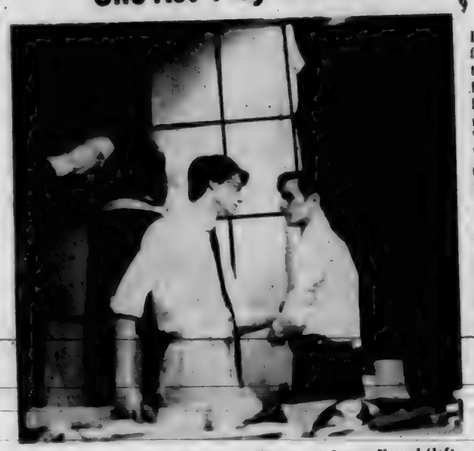
Julie Christie plays Jackie, the girlfriend of George's who is presently being kept by Jack Warden. (I remember Warden as excellent in the role of Lester Carr, a business executive who has tired of his wife. His spouse is played by Lee Grant, and it turns out that she's rather sick of him too. She happens to be carrying on with George.)

Goldie Hawn is her usual obnoxious self as Jill, a model who has her sights set on George, only to find out that he won't commit himself to one woman at a time. Somehow the thought of Goldie Hawn yelling "Grow up" at Warren Beatty doesn't ring true – it should certainly be the other way around.

A bit of historical perspective is incorporated into the film, as the action takes place on the three days centering on the '68 Presidential election. Richard Nixon is seen delivering his infamous "Bring us together" speech on television, at which time Lester Carr is heard to say that he hopes Nixon will be "better than that, goddamn Lyndon Johnson." Poor Lester, his wife's messing around behind his back, and in a few years the man he helped elect President will be doing the same thing.

Shampoo contains a wealth of fantastic "one-liners." These alone probably make the film worth seeing. As I stated earlier, I'm not overly enthusiastic about it, but I have finally decided that I like it.

Royall Tyler: One-Act Play Series



Michael Pawlick, Hamilton Gillett and James Kowal (left to right) in a scene from Arthur Miller's "A Memory of Two Mondays," one of the four free, one-act plays to be presented April 30, May 1, 3 and 4 at the Royall Tyler Theatre.

Take a break... for FREE! on April 30 and May 1 at 8:00 p.m. at the Royall Tyler Theatre, we will present Deathwatch by the French Existentialist J. P. Genet... and The Love of Don Perlimplin and Belisa in the Garden by the great Spanish playwright F.G. Lorca.

By May 3 and 4 you will undoubtedly be ready for another break. On those evenings, for FREE, at 8:00 p.m. at the Royall Tyler Theatre, we will present Riders to the Sea by J.M. Synge and A Memory of Two Mondays by Arthur Miller.

In our FREE One Act Play Festival we promise universal comfort in lives more miserable than your own. We offer reassurance, undying hope and ultimate purification. In a fleeting two hours of escape you will soar to the heights of ecstacy and plummit through the abyss of decayed dreams.

Come – live an eternity of life, laughter and tragedy in one magical evening of theatre...and transcend the absurdity of finals, separations, and suicides. April 30 and May 1, and May 3 and 4 – FREE.

Lane Board Revised

At a recent meeting of the Lane Working Committee, the following students were elected to voting positions: chairman, Lloyd Goodrow, '76; secretary, Lea Ann Harris, '76; house manager, Lenny Weinstock, '77; Treasurer, Heidi Racht, '78; publicity director, Catherine Outwater; '78; and Mona Trempe, '76, production manager.

Non-voting assistants include Jim Fisher, '77, and Tim Shea, '79, assistant treasurer; Karen Kwasha, '77, assistant house manager; Charles Thomas, '78, assistant publicity director; Steve Freeman, '78, assistant production manager and Sandy Koorigan, '77, assistant secretary.

Faculty and staff members who continue on the Lane Committee are Mr. Charles Wolf, comptroller; Dr. Frank Lidral, music department; Mr. Lawrence Van Benthuysen, director of public relations; Prof. Edward Feidner, department of communications and theatre; and Dr. Jack Trevithick, director of the Lane Series.

Lifetime passes for "outstanding service" were voted to Tom McCormick, '75, outgoing chairman; Judy Goldenberg, '75, outgoing production manager; Steve Davoust, '75, outgoing assistant treasurer; and Melinda Bliss, '75, outgoing assistant publicity director.

Switching To The Hard Stuff

(CPS) - Marijuana can now be bought legally in the state of Indiana - sort of.

The catch is that the marijuana leaves are encased in plastic and sold as jewelry.

The innovation is the brainchild of Breakthru, Inc., an Indianapolis firm selling "Pot Luck Jewelry." According to President Jim Wallace, the firm checked out the legality of selling plastic-encased marijuana leaves and found that the jewelry violates no laws because once in plastic the marijuana is legally "destroyed."

A drug enforcement officer, however, in a letter to Wallace, pointed out that "since the marijuana is not so 'destroyed' until it is encased, the person who possesses and/or grows (it) must be qualified to engage in such activity under state and federal requirements."

All About Earnest

by Chive Barnes

Well once again the theatrical event of the season has passed beneath the very nose of the UVM community without even a sneeze. No, I am not talking about the Knight of the Burning Pestle. I am talking about the second annual Bishop George Lounge series production of Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest at the Lounge Memorial Theater last Sunday evening.

The play, written by Oscar Wilde in 1895, is a delightful comedy which satirizes society in Victorian England at the turn of the century. It is a play about language more than anything else. Wilde combines his incomparable wit and madness into a dialogue which is uproariously funny and thoroughly entertaining. Unfortunately Mr. Wilde was not present at Sunday night's performance. Under the talented direction of Jonathan Smith, the play unfolded promptly at 7:30. Algernon, played by David Demers, was exquisite, mastering his lines and actions as if he was Wilde himself. Lane, the butler, played by David Rancour, acted out his part with such perfection I swore, much to the distaste of my escort, that he reminded me of Ted Cassidy of Addam's Family fame. Then of course there was the radiant Nadine Maleski, who portrayed the part of Lady Bracknell, the domineering aunt of Algernon, in which I would consider a command performance. Indeed, this fine actress will go far. Gwendolyn, played by Jorie Wackerman, was as right as a trivet as the daughter of Lady Bracknell but has room to develop in many directions. Last but not least, there is John Buck, who played the main character Earnest, or Jack, or whatever his name was, proving that he can act as well as he can sing. I am sure you all remember him from Fiddler on the Roof.

I have yet to see better lighting and scenery from an amateur troupe. Never before have I seen such careful blendings of colors and shadows. The props were exquisite. The effect was astounding. In fact, the audience rose to their feet and applauded the stage crew (who came out and took a modest bow) before the play even began. Such excitement can only come once in a man's life.

What else can I say. Words can't describe this performance adequately. Truly it will be many years before this university will have the opportunity of experiencing as fine a performance as did this critic.

Moodies Men Tour This Fall

(Earth News) - Moody Blues members Justin Hayward and John Lodge, are considering touring this fall as the Blue Jays. Blue Jays,, of course is the title of their recently released album on Threshold. Meanwhile, the next solo project to come from the Moody Blues' nucleus will be a solo album either from Ray Thomas or Graeme Edge. Both Thomas and Edge have completed albums, and Threshold will release the first of them in May.

Mayall Awarded Monstrous Harmonica

(Earth News) - M. Hohner Inc., one of the world's foremost harmonica manufacturers, has presented British blues star John Mayall with what they claimed was the largest harmonica in the world. The huge harmonica stands at least two and a half feet tall, and was presented in recognition of Mayall's contributions to mouth harp playing.

Beach Boys Tour This Summer

(Earth News) – The Beach Boys and Chicago and going ahead with their much-talked about joint Bicentennial tour this summer. The two super-groups have scheduled themselves into a dozen cities nationwide and expect to play to over three-quarters of a million fans. Reports are that the two groups will be playing at least a few tunes together.

Vermont Cynic
MOVIE GUIDE

Century I & II
DORSET STREET
I Earthquake
II Shampoo

MERRILL'S SHOWCASE I & II
SO. BURLINGTON
I The Prisoner of Second Avenue
II Scenes from a Marriage

STATE THEATRE
BANK STREET
The Great Waldo Pepper

FLYNN THEATRE
MAIN STREET
Marx Brothers Film Festival

ESSEX TWIN CINEMA
ESSEX JCT.
I Harry & Tonto
II White Lightening

CINEMA I & II
BURLINGTON PLAZA
SHELBURNE ROAD
I Godfather Part II
II Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore

call theatres for times
Not Good for bargain nights or special showings

SPAGHETTI HUT
30 North St., Burlington 863-9893
EVERY WEDNESDAY!
All You Can Eat! SPAGHETTI $2.65
All You Can Eat! PIZZA $1.85
EVERY THURSDAY!
W.I.N. NITE - 10% off ENTIRE MENU
(Beverages Excluded)
from 7:00 P.M. until Closing
HAPPY HOUR DAILY 5:00 'til 7:00 P.M.
OPEN TILL 4:00 A.M. on FRI. & SAT.
College Students Welcome!

THE SILVER KEG
YOUR ENTERTAINMENT DOLLAR BUYS MORE AT THE SILVER KEG!
★★ OUR SPECIALS ★★
(TEN) 10 CENT NITE EVERY WEDNESDAY
★FEATURING★
April 28 - May 4 WIDE OPEN
MAY 5-11 TRIAD

SA FILMS PRESENTS
FRIDAY, MAY 2
SOME LIKE IT HOT (1958) – Marilyn Monroe, Jack Lemmon, Tony Curtis, Directed by Billy Wilder
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – $1
SUNDAY, MAY 4
LIMELIGHT – Charlie Chaplin
101 Votey – 7:30 & 9:30 – $1

TONIGHT
TRY
"THE BOOT STAP"
(To pull yourself up with) Carburs
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
Celebrate the end of the semester at Carburs
119 St. Paul Street 862-4106

Aloha, Bobby & Ro

Paul Le Mat (from American Graffiti) and Di... the young Hollywood couple who become star... in Aloha, Bobby and Rose, a recent Columbia ... for it soon in the theatre of your choice.

Radioactive Laxity In Iow...

Iowa City, Iowa — (EARTH NEWS) — Flagrant violations of security provisions for storage and transport of radioactive materials at the University of Iowa have been uncovered by the student newspaper.

Prompted by charges in the Daily Iowan, federal officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) conducted a two day investigation which substantiated at least seven violations identified by the paper. Those included a broken window pane in the University's Radiation Protection Office which allowed easy access to radioactive materials, as well as a basement window which had been left unlocked and ajar. The van used for transporting radioactive materials was found to have been left unattended and unlocked for long periods while containing radioactive substances. The van also had a broken door lock.

Other violations uncovered by the paper and substantiated by the NRC investigation included improper labeling of containers for... substances a... ventilation in res... areas.

The NRC ordered the Univ... whatever correc... were necessary ... compliance ... requirements.

In a letter d... the University ... the NRC deman... that all correcti... been taken. Bu... letter by the N... Operations Offi... requested furth... compliance ... University pro... forthcoming.

The ... commission ... reviews of all ... radiation-u... periodically, ... year and a ha... The commis... University of I... be checked ... year.

(The D... investigation w... staff writers ... Joan Titone ... Fleming.)

Blackmore May Split From ...

(EARTH NEWS) — Ritchie Blackmore, the leader of Deep Purple, has become involved in at least one new musical project, creating speculation that the break-up of the long-lasting Deep Purple band may not be far behind.

A usually reliable source tells EARTH NEWS that Blackmore is in the process of forming a new group in London called Ritchie Blackmore's Rainbow. The group reportedly also features Hugh McDowell, cellist for the Electric Light Orchestra.

But, Garry George, press representative for Deep Purp... Brothers, says ... story different ... that Blackm... working on ... outside of D... that it is with... rising Brit... Interestingly, ... Electric Light ... the U.S. with... fall.

George ... Blackmore fe... involved with ... also has said ... intention ... successful De...

Elton John Expands B...

(EARTH NEWS) — With the departure of drummer Nigel Olsson and bassist Dee Murray, Elton John is considering expanding his band to eight or nine pieces. According to Elton's management firm, John Reid Enterprises, Nigel and Dee definitely have left the Elton John Band, and Elton is already lining up new personnel, to be announced soon.

Guitarist Davey Johnstone and percussionist Ray Cooper will continue to work with Elton, but as many as seven additional players may be added to the group, reports Connie Pappas of the Reid organization.

The ne... expected to... time for a ... which Elton ... London's ... June 21. Tha... has been firm... feature an... including St... Eagles, Joe ...

durham
Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS
MAZ...
134 North St.

t Shoeshiners

George Brown, one of this American reations currently on view through luseum Philip Grime and Catherine tudents in Museum studies, have

out Earnest

...he of course there was the radiant ...Nadine Malesky who portrayed ...the part of Lady Bracknell the ...domineering aunt of Algernon ...in which I would consider a ...well-rounded performance. ...Indeed this fine actress will go ...down as Gwendolyn played by ...Joan Wackerman was as right ...as a lover as the daughter of ...Lady Bracknell But has room ...to develop in many directions. ...Last but not least there is ...John Buck who played the ...main character Earnest or ...Jack or whatever his name ...was proving that he can act as ...well as he can sing I am sure ...you all remember him from ...Ladies on the Road.

I have yet to see better lighting and scenery from an amateur troupe. Never before have I seen such careful blendings of colors and shadows. The props were exquisite. The effect was astounding. In fact the audience rose to their feet and applauded the stage crew who came out and took a modest bow before the play even began. Such excitement can only come once in a man's life.

What else can I say. Words cannot describe this performance adequately. Truly it will be many years before this community will have the opportunity of experiencing as fine a performance as did this ...ence.

Mayall Awarded Monstrous Harmonica

(Earth News) M. Hohner Inc., one of the world's foremost harmonica manufacturers has presented British blues star John Mayall with what they claimed was the largest harmonica in the world. The huge harmonica stands at least two and a half feet tall and was presented in recognition of Mayall's contributions to mouth harp playing.

ONIGHT
TRY BOOT STAP" yourself up with)

S SINCE 1874

te the end of
ster at Carburs

8624106

Aloha, Bobby & Rose

Paul Le Mat (from American Graffiti) and Dianne Hull are the young Hollywood couple who become star-crossed lovers in Aloha, Bobby and Rose, a recent Columbia release. Look for it soon in the theatre of your choice.

Radioactive Laxity In Iowa

Iowa City, Iowa -- (EARTH NEWS) -- Flagrant violations of security provisions for storage and transport of radioactive materials at the University of Iowa have been uncovered by the student newspaper.

Prompted by charges in the Daily Iowan, federal officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) conducted a two-day investigation, which substantiated at least seven violations identified by the paper. Those included a broken window pane in the University's Radiation Protection Office which allowed easy access to radioactive materials, as well as a basement window which had been left unlocked and ajar. The van used for transporting radioactive materials also was found to have been left unattended and unlocked for long periods while containing radioactive substances. The van also had a broken door lock.

Other violations uncovered by the paper and substantiated by the NRC investigation included improper labeling of containers for radioactive substances and lack of ventilation in restricted storage areas.

The NRC last month ordered the University to take whatever corrective measures were necessary to reach full compliance with federal requirements.

In a letter dated April 11, the University responded to the NRC demands and claimed that all corrective actions had been taken. But a follow-up letter by the NRC Regulations Operations Office in Chicago requested further evidence of compliance, which the University promised would be forthcoming.

The regulatory commission conducts safety reviews of all federally-licensed radiation-using facilities periodically, roughly every year and a half to two years. The commission said the University of Iowa facility will be checked again later this year.

(The Daily Iowan's investigation was conducted by staff writers Mark Pesses and Joan Titone and editor Jim Fleming.)

Blackmore May Split From Purple

(EARTH NEWS) -- Ritchie Blackmore, the leader of Deep Purple, has become involved in at least one new musical project, creating speculation that the break-up of the long-fasting Deep Purple band may not be far behind.

A usually reliable source tells EARTH NEWS that Blackmore is in the process of forming a new group in London called Ritchie Blackmore's Rainbow. The group reportedly also features Hugh McDowell, cellist for the Electric Light Orchestra.

But, Garry George, press representative in Los Angeles for Deep Purple's label, Warner Brothers, says he has heard the story differently. He confirms that Blackmore has been working on a studio project outside of Deep Purple, but that it is with members of the rising British group Elf. Interestingly, both Elf and the Electric Light Orchestra toured the U.S. with Deep Purple last fall.

George adds that, while Blackmore is becoming more involved with side projects, he also has said that he has no intention of leaving the successful Deep Purple troupe.

Elton John Expands Band With New Personnel

(EARTH NEWS) — With the departure of drummer Nigel Olsson and bassist Dee Murray, Elton John is considering expanding his band to eight or nine pieces. According to Elton's management firm, John Reid Enterprises, Nigel and Dee definitely have left the Elton John Band, and Elton is already lining up new personnel, to be announced soon.

Guitarist Davey Johnstone and percussionist Ray Cooper will continue to work with Elton, but as many as seven additional players may be added to the group, reports Connie Pappas of the Reid organization.

The new line-up is expected to be complete in time for a big "supershow" which Elton will headline at London's Wembley Stadium June 21. That one-day festival has been firmed up, and it will feature an all-star line-up including Stevie Wonder, The Eagles, Joe Walsh, and the Kiki Dee band.

Elton will be playing material from his new album, Captain Fantastic and the Brown Dirty Cowboys which will be released worldwide by MCA Records May 23. There are no plans for Elton to appear in the U.S. until at least this fall.

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE

EXTENSIVE SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES AT GREAT SAVINGS

dunkin'

Headquarters for CONTINENTAL TYROLEANS

Tales From The Ozone
Feats Alive And Kickin' Tennesee Rats

by Paul Prior

The Beacon Theatre marquis towers above us, much like some light-house beam, in large letters LITTLE FEAT & ALLEN TOUSSAINT...I have not been as psyched for a concert in quite some time. I walk in accompanied by the original Zoo Crew, and we somehow found our way down to the third row where our seats are awaiting. The lights dim, but hundreds of lit matches and joys shortly illuminate the newly refurbished hall interior. Mr. Toussaint strides onstage, as well as his enormous back-up group: two backing female vocalists and two male, a four piece horn section, as well as a lead sax player, plus two guitarists, a percussionist, a drummer. Toussaint on keyboards, and a conductor for the horns and back-up vocalists.

Toussaint was excellent indeed--he featured material primarily from his new release entitled Southern Nights. He also played a number of his own songs made famous by other performers--"Brickyard Blues," "Freedom For the Stallion," and several other "bullets." Definitely a high energy set, and Toussaint is really maturing as a performer. A man to watch and listen to. But now to the meat (or perhaps feat) of the matter.

Little Feat appear in only minutes, and start out with a slow number from their batch of new material. Then, they launch into an Allen Toussaint song entitled "On Your Way Down." I was immediately impressed by the clearness of the sound--every instrument mixed just to the right degree, with the bass and drums pulsating right through you.

With little or no between-number-chatter, the band kicks into "Spanish Moon" from their latest and greatest release, Feats Don't Fail Me Now. This number melted into the title track just mentioned, and guitarists Lowell George and Paul Barrere were setting down some smokin' riffs. Things picked up even more when the searing and soaring "Two Trains" was played, the "Skin It Back". They drew mostly from their last two albums, and usually rearranged some part of the song in the performance of it. "Rock and Roll Doctor" ended with lead guitarist George jamming on cowbell with percussionist Sam Clayton and Drummer Ritchie Harward. Harward is one of the funkiest drummers around, and some of the patterns he wove with bassist Ken Gradney were brilliant. This percussion jam turned into "Fat Man In The Bathtub", then the group stopped momentarily to tune and change guitars. "Oh Atlanta" clearly was a crowd favorite, as was keyboard player Bill Payne, who made several asides to the first few rows. A new number followed and it ought to become quite a hit, considering it was about twice as fast as "Atlanta" which is quite a rocker. Other songs included along the way were "Willin" and "Walkin' All Night" from earlier albums. Drummer Harward thunked out the beginning beats to "Cold Cold Cold" and at that point the band was absolute greased lightening. The middle of "Cold" was blended into "Dixie Chicken", then cooked right into "Tripe Face Boogie". They encored with another all-out rocker, and encored again with "Sailin' Shoes" and "Wait Til The Shit Hits The Fan". And that was the extent of Little Feat's stay in New York, at least concert-wise.

They performed everything a die-hard fan could desire to hear. The production in terms of sound and lighting was excellent, so what more could a person ask for? Most people have been to at least one concert that was so overwhelming that they never want it to end. When someone yelled "play all night!" on the Brothers Live At Fillmore East L.P., it was merited. This was one such concert and I feel lucky to have been part of it. Perhaps Burlington might even see such a concert in the next decade or so. DEPARTING WORDS DEPT. This is the last issue of the Cynic this year, and the last Ozone Column to grace these hallowed pages. I'll be here next semester, but can't say for sure if Ozone will be back--all reports indicate that the Ozone layer is deteriorating rapidly and this could have severe implications. I'd like to thank anybody who gave me feedback on the column, it is nice to know someone other than the typist reads it. Also instrumental in the making of this column this year (in no particular order): The Starksboro Area Mob, Staige Davis, Bob DeNike, Ludwig Drums Inc., and for much-needed encouragement, The Original Zoo Crew, Starship Tep, and the Wild Women of Winooski--they know who they are. Also the College Street Geek and his partner must be mentioned for the use of their tunes and contributions to the Ozone. If I missed anyone, send all complaints to the Ozone H.Q.--Keep Flying.

Philosophers Seek Jobs

NEW YORK - (EARTH NEWS) - The American Philosophical Association has undertaken a very un-philosophical public relations campaign to sell American business on the idea that philosophers make good businessmen.

The philosophy profession has been particularly hard hit by the recession. About 500 professional philosophers have lost their teaching jobs in the past year, and another 2,000 recent doctoral graduates in philosophy are unable to locate jobs.

As a result, the Association is now setting up conferences for businessmen and government officials to convince them that philosophers can do things other than philosophize. Association Executive Secretary Norman Bowie of Hamilton College here says that philosophers are "naturals" for such jobs as computer programmers, urban developers, or businessmen. He also noted that many have taken jobs as cab drivers.

Dead's Hunter Solos

(Earth News) - Grateful Dead lyricist Robert Hunter has recorded a limited edition of his own "Ballad of Joanne Little." Hunter says he was moved to write and record the song after receiving a letter from Georgia legislator Julin Bond explaining the Joanne Little case.

The 20-year old Ms. Little is a black woman charged with murdering a male jailer in Beaufort County, South Carolina. The jailer was discovered in Ms. Little's cell, naked from the waist down. Medical evidence indicated that he raped Ms. Little.

Edsel Peacock Rocks Out

by larry selden

This was a surprising week for unknown quantities, especially the commercial ideas, that we of progressive stature try to ignore well because we are snobs, pure and simple. If it's on AM radio it's got the tart smell of greenbacks stapled to its' cover. I'm not accusing anyone of payola, just selling out the artistic soul for a limousine ride to the concert.

I found the devil this week and he was playing rhythm guitar in a small bar on a Winooski side street. He said "Don't let it get you down. We all have our price, it's just a matter of declaring it on your taxes."

STAND BACK/april wine Singles city. Lots of punch, a stunning second effort, a collection of rockers and poppers. Delicate vocals in contrast to the crushing bass pumps, shiny metal guitars, Keith Moon lunatic drumming plus some distinctive songwriting all adds up to an excellent stylized unit. These Canadians with heavy innuendoes in Texas blooze and some soulfull strutting, have it in double cliches. But it works. The strength of the band is its ability to understand itself and the many directions they're moving out in. My slight complaint is the album's diversity lacks any tangible cohension. (A-, really wouldn't want it any other way colors)

DON'T CALL US WE'LL CALL YOU/sugarloaf-jerry corbetta - Commercial by any standards. Don't Call Us is a very strong AM rocker. It gets the sneakers moving and then surprise, the rest of the album moves, country slides and lays down some serious stretchin' out. I wish for the days when the transister radio was glued to the ear. Since there has been nothing new outside of Springsteen, a tasty stylized record like his goes up a notch for common roots. Jerry Corbetta, the numero uno in this group, is one of the funkiest white keyboard player to come along since Felix Calveliere of the Rascals. (B, I'm getting an AM jones colors)

STRAIGHT SHOOTER/bad company - This proves the first album was no fluke. This English macho band sticks to the same commercial formula as the first album (8 cuts, all winners). Bad Co. understands the fundamentals of rock n' roll. They know the dollar ticks around a rock steady beat, well timed stops, punctual chord changes and Paul Rodger's born-to-rock voice. Mick Ralphs traded his economy model guitar from the last album in for the wide open spaces of running heat flashes. Cruisin' licks galore. (B+, more than shooting star colors)

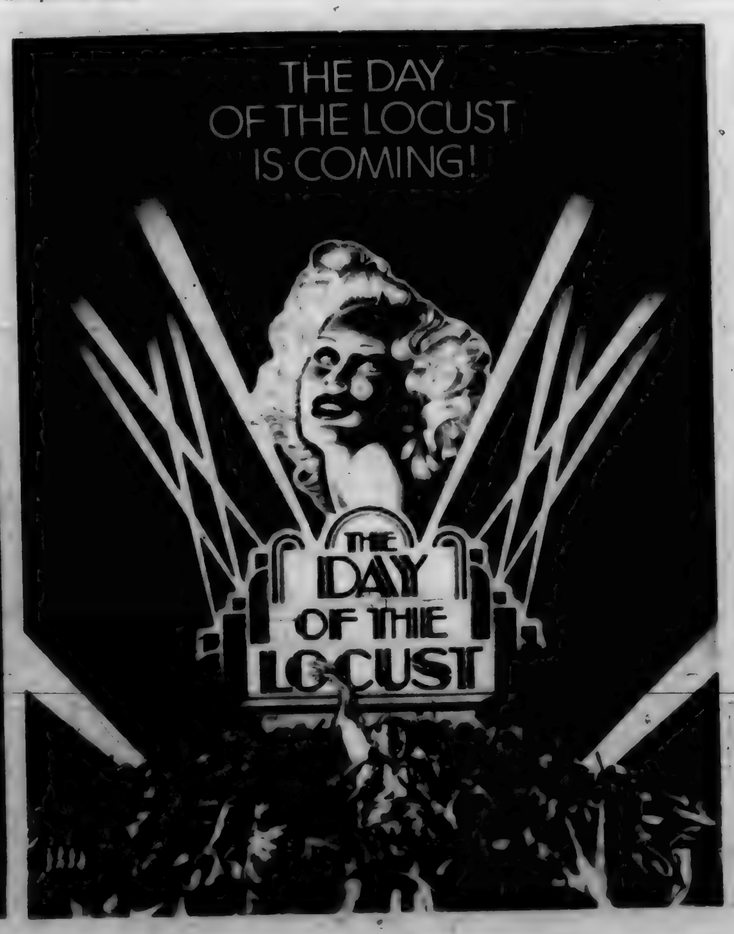
SPRING FEVER/rick derringer - Some are going to say it is too cluttered, too much sound to the point of losing the musical prodigal son image of the first album, All American Boy. It does contain the kickingest version of "Still Alive and Well" to date and a reggae version of "Hang on Sloppy" and a very soulful blue-eyed version of Rufus Thomas' "Walkin' the Dog." But on the whole the whirring guitars and whiny synthsizers and moogs grow thin on frequent hearings. The all star cast of Edgar Winter, Johnny Winter, Chick Corea and David JoHanson (a loveable NY Doll) try but the stars fall in the end to overproduction. (B-, great expectations gone down colors)

COMMON SENSE/john prine - We sat having coffee in the truckstop in Parallel, Indiana. "You know," he said. "I never thought after leaving Stanford, I'd be a trucker. This prince, John Prine, makes it all worthwhile. The cat crystallizes it in simple words and spare phrases. He knows the changes in the weather, all the motels in Shreveport and I'm sure he met Ziggy Stardust in person. You know, he said, "If heartaches were commercials, we'd all be on TV." Doesn't that hit it on the head. A real white line fella." (A, it could be that close to it colors)

Co-eds Caught By Spring Fever

Enjoying The Sun...

Cursing The Boys



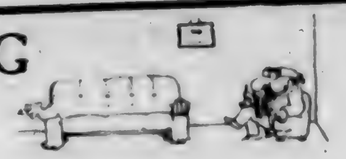
LUMS

OUR BURGERS DON'T COME IN SIZES... THEY COME WITH PERSONALITIES

Our 6 kinds of burgers are all one size—bigger than any Quarter Pounder in town. Why? What's even nifter is our variety show of tastes. Like our Gourmet Burger (smothered with mushrooms!). Or our Bacon Burger, featuring crisp bacon and melted, mouth-watering genuine Cheddar. Or, have our famous Cheeseburger, with your choice of Cheddar, American, or Mozzarella. Lots more, and they're all Star Performers.

LUMS Beer also will give you more, more, more.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG



by Arnold Werner M. D.

Address letters to Dr. Arnold Werner, Box 974, East Lansing, MI 48823

QUESTION: This is a question which as a man you might not be able to answer, although perhaps you can as a doctor.

I stopped having sex with my boyfriend a few months ago because at the end of intercourse I would suddenly burst into uncontrollable weeping. No matter what my conscious, rational thought processes were, I would begin to cry and not from happiness. I found this frightening, particularly because I couldn't pin down why I was crying.

After several months of going without sex I tried once more. But, the same thing happened despite the fact I felt sufficiently aroused before we started. I don't see how it could have been a disappointment because nothing bad has happened. I didn't expect an orgasm, because I never had one during intercourse anyway. Is there some psychological or physiological reaction I don't know of that is causing this?

ANSWER: You are right. As a man I was unable to answer your question. But I was also unable to answer it as a doctor. So I began to check with a number of women to hear their reaction to the question. Alas, they couldn't explain it either.

Occasionally, women will cry during or following intercourse if the experience is a highly loaded one emotionally. Even this is not especially common.

Your description of being sexually aroused but not experiencing an orgasm and not expecting to experience one, leads me to think that there could be a lot of feeling tied with the experience that you might not be aware of. Perhaps a discussion of the situation with a knowledgeable, sympathetic professional person might get at some feeling you are having about intercourse and might explain your reaction.

I welcome any suggestions on this question and would be happy to hear from other women who have had similar experiences.

QUESTION: I am very fond of plants. Lately, I have developed a compulsive craving for clay, eating bits of dirt every time I water my plants. Now I do it daily. I remember that I did it between ages 9 and 11 but since then I haven't. Could I lack some vitamins? I'm apprehensive about getting some germs or parasites along with my clay since it may come from organic gardens; still, I feel I cannot help it. I only take two or three bits a day. (This question came from a woman.)

ANSWER: Recalling that unusual cravings are usually associated with nutritional deficiencies, your question produced a different type of craving in me and set me loose on a number of my colleagues and friends seeking an answer. A geographer friend, who has always amazed me with the scope of his studies, more than satisfied my appetite.

Geophagia, or earth eating, is a common practice in many African countries where women who are pregnant or breast feeding consume certain types of clays. The practice is so widespread that the clays are even packaged and sold as pharmaceuticals. He studied the nutritional implications of the practice as well as various geographic aspects. There is enough iron, copper, zinc and calcium, among other things, in the clays to provide a significant supplement to daily intake. These clays contain amounts that are comparable to the amount of minerals given to pregnant women. The practice is a very old one and was carried to the Americas as well. But here, an interesting development occurred. Clay eating fell off, but the eating of cornstarch took its place. The explanation of cornstarch eating is harder to come by since cornstarch does not have any of the nutritional benefits of the clay; it just seems that ingesting powdery stuff became a significant habit.

The obviously interesting question is whether or not you are suffering from anemia or a mineral deficiency. If you are, perhaps your phylogenetic unconscious has been stimulated to seek a home remedy for the problem. The most likely deficiency would be iron deficiency. People who are iron deficient also engage in ice eating (pagophagia). A visit to your doctor would answer the question of possible anemia.

While the likelihood of getting an illness from eating soil from your plants is not very high, there still may be a variety of unknown contaminants and even a remote chance of parasites. If you really can't resist the urge, why don't you try the non-nutritious, but cleaner, cornstarch.

What's Happened Since March 16?

by David Lott
Greek Coordinating Council

In the last 4 months there have been 3 fraternity fires at UVM. Sigma Phi Epsilon and ATO burned on December 24, and Kappa Sigma on March 16. Both ATO's and Kappa Sig's houses were destroyed. Sig Ep's fire was contained in the kitchen and has been definitely determined as the work of arsons. Kappa Sig's fire was caused by a faulty electrical box, which resulted in the death of Andrew Towle. ATO's fire is classified by the Burlington Fire Dept., as of suspicious origin.

Two houses destroyed, one damaged and 18 remaining. What are the Greek houses doing? What are the facts, and how will we deal with our problems?

First of all, both ATO and Kappa Sig have been provided with UVM housing out at Fort Ethan Allen. They are functioning as houses, as fraternities, and have no intentions of folding. ATO is definitely planning to rebuild and hopes to be able to move in the fall of '76. Kappa Sig is reviewing various alternatives and will replace its house as soon as possible. Sig Ep's damage has been repaired and they continue to live on Main St.

Following the Kappa Sig fire, all fraternities and sororities made appointments to be inspected as the city requested. Each house was inspected by the Burlington Fire Dept. Wiring Inspector, and Health Inspector; the last house was inspected April 15. All houses were inspected under National codes as interpreted by the city regulating the design of hotels. Because of this interpretation, all houses have to meet higher standards than the already high dormitory code which we really should be under. There are no houses at UVM which presently meet this code entirely. Some problems found are unique to a particular house, but on the whole all houses have variations of the same problems. Some common problems are:

A. Extension cords (what dorm room doesn't have at least one?)
B. Need fire doors on all entrances leading to a hall.
C. Furnace rooms enclosed with fire retardant material.
D. Hoods over stoves with automatic extinguishing systems.
E. Smoke and heat alarm systems.
F. All wiring of Fail Safe Ground variety.
G. Fix fire escapes.
H. Barn Board and burlap to be removed or fire proofed.
I. More exits from floors to ground
J. Enclose stair wells.

An allowance of 60 days following the inspection was given by the fire department to plan and execute all modifications which they reported. That means to the middle of June. The wiring inspector has given all houses to September 1 to comply with all regulations.

Some reflections on past inspections may be helpful at this point. Inspection is not a common occurrence, one or two houses done yearly, the other houses wait until required. With any inspection a long list of violations is returned and the houses are expected to comply. Almost always the house is improved in some way; new wiring, fire alarms, fire doors, etc. It does what it can to improve the physical plant, and then waits for the next inspection. What holds any fraternity or sorority back from complete adoption of the codes is money. If inspections had been done more frequently in the past, and safety given the attention it deserves we could have avoided the tragedy of March 16.

Many changes have already occurred in each house. Every house has a fire inspector of its own; a person whose job it is to find potential hazards and get them fixed. — things like storing flammables in metal cabinets, removing extension cords, checking fire extinguishers, general safety. These people coordinate their jobs with Frank Gibrey who is the fire marshall of the Greek Coordinating Council and student member of the UVM safety governing committee.

The houses themselves are generally neater and do not have 20 years of accumulated newspapers under stair wells or many other obvious hazards.

Fire plans have been worked out, where everyone will meet in a parking lot or across the street. Hopefully next semester a list of all members living in a house will be given to a neighbor or another fraternity, so a head count can be taken to be sure everyone is out.

Most important of all, everyone is much more conscious of fires, potential hazards, and in general concerned for the welfare of the house and its members.

These are the simple things, improvements done with very little expense but reduce the possibilities of a fire. The expensive part is putting in fire alarms, fire escapes, new wiring. This is where the house corporation comes in.

A house corporation is made up of alumni and that corporation owns the physical plant. They are responsible for making any necessary changes needed to keep the house operating. They are going to have to provide the money and the "where with all" necessary to put in the wiring, fire alarms, fire doors, etc. The important thing to remember is that the current members of any chapter cannot pay for the changes. It is the corporation's responsibility to finance and execute as many of these changes as possible. Current chapter members will probably see an increase of room and board accounts but that is it. Many houses will still be cheaper than University housing, and in some cases, safer.

Because many problems are common to all houses there were corporation meetings of all houses April 14 and 21 to get all houses working together. A lawyer has been engaged to represent the Greek System and will work with the city to see just what changes must be done. By uniting the efforts of all houses, the whole system will benefit both legally and financially. With the cooperation and organization of our corporations, the Greek houses at UVM will do everything possible to meet the requirements for the next semester.

This article was written with the purpose of explaining the situation the way it really is. We, the Greeks living in these houses, want our safety in mind but not to the extent that it will place impossible limitations on us. We submit that there is other UVM housing which is in exactly the same condition as our existing fraternities and sororities. Please do not use us as an example and hope the problem goes away. But, continue inspecting so that other people will enjoy the safety we will soon have.

...Capital Watch

(continued from page five)

symptomatic of diabetes, syphilis, tumors, and other serious affections. Many people have been sold extravagently expensive and unnecessary hearing aids, and this bill should help end this practice.

S.120 Newborn Insurance

The General Assembly also passed an important law that requires that all insurance companies doing business in Vermont cover newborn children. Presently many companies do not begin coverage until the child is two or three weeks old. Most of the more serious problems associated with birth occur within the first few days. S.120 provides protection for young families planning a family.

Good Government in Limbo

Three open government bills supported by VPIRG received House approval, but were stalled in Senate Committees. H. 276 guarantees public access to governmental documents and will remain over the summer in the General and Military Committee. A bill requiring lobbyist disclosure of expenditures and receipts bogged down when the Senate Judiciary Committee refused to bring the bill to a vote. Another bill (H. 144) which tightens up Vermont's leaky campaign financing laws, arrived late in the session and was not considered by the Government Operation Committee.

Aiken Enjoys UVM

(continued from page one)

want in the world, to be an University president. He has everyone to contend with students, parents, people that apply and get turned down, the legislature, the Federal Government. Lord help him!"

"He's survived that long, he's had some stamina," Aiken said of Dr. Andrews. He compared Andrews' offer from Maine to that of a man in a union plant — "You get good and they transfer you 2000 miles away!"

Governor Thomas Salmon has suggested that the new president of UVM should focus his attention not only on UVM but also on the future of higher education in the state. According to Salmon, the president should work towards greater integration with the Vermont State Colleges, and should be "highly visible" in Montpelier and around the state. Aiken disagreed.

"He doesn't have time to do everything! You notice how many people criticize the President of the United States for going out and talking to the people. Well, if he stayed home they'd say "why doesn't he get out and talk to his constituents?"

"I think the president of the University does as much as he can. His job is here, and at the same time he has to be a public relations man, an educator, an administrator, and all the other things expected of him," Aiken stated.

"Education gets you to where you want to learn," Aiken offered. "I was chairman of the Subcommittee on Education for two years. They found out I was the only one there that never went to school, so they made me chairman!"

Senator Henry "Scoop" Jackson has suggested that any negotiations for the turning over of power in the Lon Nol, government in Cambodia should be conducted by Senator Mike Mansfield "because he is so well respected." Aiken and Mansfield, the Democratic Senator from Montana, had breakfast together every morning during the Washington years. What was Aiken's reaction to that suggestion?

"Well, I would leave it with Mike rather than Scoop, that's for sure. Scoop has things on his mind, like he wants to be President. He raised $1 million before he came under the jurisdiction of a law he voted for," Aiken began.

"Mike and I had a good visit with Prince Sianook over in Phenom Penh. He (Sianook) was going to be in mortal danger there; there was no American Embassy — so we went over. He gave us a good strong anti- Communist talk. He made a mistake — he was spending all his time out around the country and didn't see what was going on at home..."

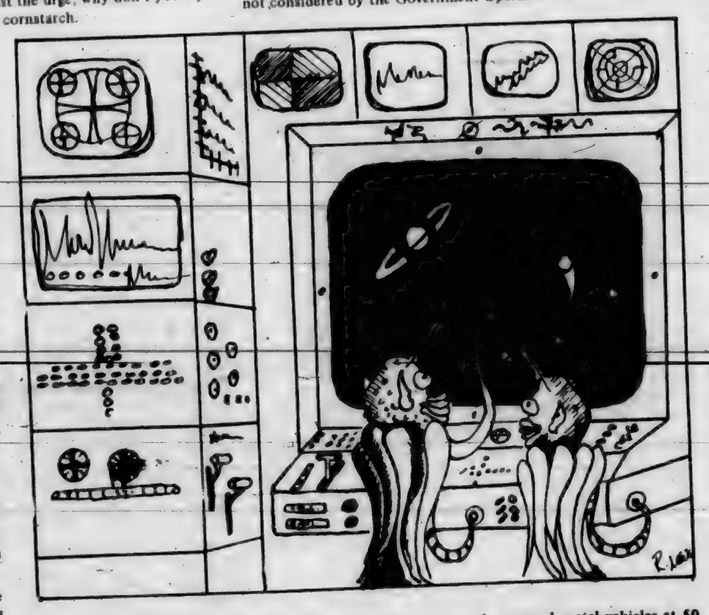
"He's not the only one that's made that mistake," Aiken warned. How does Aiken view the future of Vermont?

"We're making more butter in the State of Vermont than ever before. We have a pretty good balance in the state between industry, recreation and agriculture.

"Vermont is the leading Guinea Pig for the nation: we had the first headstart program; we had the first food stamps over in Barre; we have been the Guinea Pig so often I can't even count the times."

"When revenue sharing came in they said it would reduce local taxes. It didn't work out that way," Aiken recalled.

Aiken had praise for the "younger generation" he has met at UVM. "Sometimes the younger generation look older than the previous one. I've been very happy with the caliber of the boys and girls that come here."



"Imagine a planet where the inhabitants drive combustioned powered metal vehicles at 50 m.p.h. straight at one another, on a strip of asphalt just wide enough for three of them. And the only thing separating the vehicles is a painted line in the center of the strip!"

...VIPRG

(continued from page one)

System (ECCS) was the system involved in the largest number of Abnormal Occurrences, accounting for almost one third of the events.

Co-authors of the report Emergency Core Cooling Dorsett of Windham College. Copies of the report may be obtained for $1.00 from VPIRG, 26 State Street, Montpelier, Vermont, 05602.

Did Oswald Kill JFK

by Randy Jansen

Was it Lee Harvey Oswald or was it a conspiracy to assassinate John F. Kennedy? This question was asked by Lee Harvey's former lawyer, Mark Lane in a speech at the Patrick Gym last night.

In a large turnout, Lane charged that significant evidence which would reveal a conspiracy, behind the Kennedy assaination was suppressed by the authorities. He mentioned the FBI and the CIA and the Dallas police Department as the people responsible for suppressing the evidence.

Lane remarked that after Watergate, it should be obvious to the American people, that their government can easily deceive them. The witholding of evidence and lies to Americans, is common and was prevalent throughout the Kennedy investigation.

Mark Lane severely criticized the Warren Commission for its inept handling of the evidence. He felt that they analyzed the material presented to them incorrectly. He noted that President Ford, then a Congressman on the Warren Commission, has a stake in not reopening the investigation into JFK's death, because of poor handling by the Warren Commission. Lane presented the Bruener film which depicts the actual investigation. This and other pertinent evidence, he claims, clearly shows that more than one person fired the shots that killed Kennedy.

Lane urged to all that were present, to unite Congressmen, urging them to reopen the case of JFK's assassination. He felt it was the right of Americans to learn the truth about Kennedy's death, and that all the facts are revealed.

GET READY FOR SPRING
HAVE YOUR BIKE TUNED FOR SPRING AT VALUGA SPORTS
Special Spring Rates: $6.95
Tune-up Includes: Derraileurs adjusted & lubricated. Brakes adjusted & lubricated, Hubs & Headset adjusted, Wheels Tuned, and all nuts & bolts checked & tightened.
ALSO- New shipment of Paris Sports just arrived. All sizes & colors Available.
Valuga Sports
OPEN 9-6 M-F SAT 9-5
MASTER CHARGE

Appalachian
THE GAP
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbers

WHEN YOU THINK OF SPRING;
THINK OF MILLS AND GREER FOR
THE BEST IN SPORTING GOODS:
Tennis Rackets BY- DUNLOP, DAVIS, BANCROFT, WILSON, MACGREGOR, SPAULDING & SEAMLESS
Balls By DUNLOP, TRETORN, WILSON
TRETORN TENNIS SHOES TENNIS HATS AND VISORS
TIGER & ADIDAS RUNNING SHOES
Casual Shirts By- IANTZEN, MUNSINGWEAR, ADIDAS
BASEBALL CAPS-SOFTBALLS- BATS & BALLS-GLOVES

CLASSIFIED

Large apartment for summer sublet at 231 South Prospect. Ideal location, one minute walk to UVM. Rent cheap and negotiable. Available June 1 — Sept. 1. Call 656-4393 or 862-6845 & ask for Missy or Becky.

Apt to sublet & very good possibility to rent '75-'76 year. 3 bedroom, new appliances, wall to wall carpet. $200 per month during summer. Call 864-7788.

Summer sublet — 4 bedrooms large kitchen, large livingroom, located between campus and town. Call 862-7855.

Apartment to Rent not sublet! 3 bedroom, new apartment. Large kitchen & living room, will rent furnished over summer for $200/mo. Then it's available for the next school year. Call nights 864-7788. This place could be yours for all of next year.

Apartment to sublet (only 30 seconds from Billings) — 4 bedroom apt. on the corner of Colchester and Mansfield Aves. (opposite housing office). Only $260/month. Parking available (private driveway). Contact Chip, Ed, or Souf, E-150 L/L, ext. 4394.

Wanted: House or apt. to rent from Sept. 1 — June 1 within walking distance to campus. For 5 UVM women. Call 656-3898.

$50.00 Reward Offered — Bike enthusiasts — Beware of a teen-aged youth trying to dispose of an expensive bike for cheap. My black 23" 10 speed Paris Sport was stolen Friday, April 25 from the Mary Fletcher Hospital. The thief was seen by two witnesses. The bicycle had tubular tires and pump, and toe clips. It had no front brakes at the time. This bike is the only transportation I have (had) and I want it back with no questions asked. (Call 656-2014 days, and 864-6062 evenings) $50.00 reward offered for information leading to the safe return of this bike.

1969 Dodge Van, excellent to convert to travel camper. Call Mr. Agens 863-4533.

For Sale: A pair of green vinal wing chairs, caned metal lounge chair, tan vinal lounge chair, and lamps. Call 864-7786.

'69 Mustang for sale: Needs body work. Call Larry at 863-3570. Best offer.

Stereo Console for sale: AM/FM stereo with turntable. Originally $400. Now $120. Needs some repairs. Ask for Steve, ph. 863-3945.

Great Apartment for rent — 2-3 bedroom, full-size kitchen, completely furnished. On corner of Spruce St. and So. Winooski. June through August. $150 per month. Call 864-9529, ask for Peter Welch or Peter Morin or Chris Hurley.

Wanted: Sept. '75 to May '76, House or apt to rent suitable for five UVM women. Within walking distance of campus. Please call 656-3898.

Lost — 1 ... Somewhere betw... gym and Davis H... information call ... 2516, room 318.

Summer Job ... Just printed. 10... entries. A must fo... searchers who are ... about finding ... employment. Mail ... American Resear... 499 Hamilton Av... Alto, Calif. 94304.

Free: a young ... tiger cat, all shots ... Very affectiona... trained. Call 864-5...

For sale: '67 ... Firebird convertib... make me an offer ... refuse! Must sell bef... 17 — So act no... 863-6277 anytime.

Wanted Eff... apartment to rent ... — June 15, '75-'7... medical student ... interested in sh... apartment. Call afte... Millie, 864-9589. ... within 5 miles ... campus.

House & ho... wanted. We are ... interested in s... joining a long t... situation. Prefe... setting within 20... Burlington. If ... interested or ... suggestions, pl... Phelps or K... 985-8575 or Phe... 864-7244 (days).

Apartment to ... nice 6 rooms — ... 2 or 3 girls. ... August 15. Rent ... Call Kim & ... (656-3445) o... (656-3857).

Why live ... apartment this ... when you can ... HOUSE. Th... 5-bedroom hou... miles from campu... neighborhoo... Burlington. Nice ... messin' arou... modern kitch... living room with ... fireplace. It's fur... Downstair lou... room with b... $325 per ... negotiable.

Call 656-3845 ...

Beautiful ... sublet. 3 be... bathrooms, ... and living ro... machine, garb... storage room... close to camp... $55 per perso... If interested, ... Ask for Kate.

Lank, lith... male seeks c... of mate w... attributes. ... pretty and ... intelligible. "... if this doesn't ... Elliot at 864-... it's too late.

Raft R... More than 1... from. Come ... your friends ... captured. C... Williams Sc... them. Art A... Contact Steve ...

Needed ... person to f... comfortable, ... in North ... Completely ... washer-d... backys... $68 75/m... 658-3804.

Wanted: ... share my apa... summer ... furnished r... month. Ca... 656-2922, af...

Lost: 1 ... taken from ... April 19, ... Race, by ... return to 2... Burlington or ... No Questions ...

rch 16?

and Kappa Sig have been provided at Fort Ethan Allen. They are aternities, and have no intentions of planning to rebuild and hopes to be '76. Kappa Sig is reviewing various ns to house as soon as possible. Sig aired and they continue to live on

Sig fire, all fraternities and sororities inspected in the city requested. Each the Burlington Fire Dept. Wiring pector, the last house was inspected inspected under National codes as olating the design of hotels. Because houses have to meet higher standards nitory code which we really should ouse at UVM which presently meet problems found are unique to a whole all houses have variations of ommon problems are hat dorm room doesn't have at least ll entrances leading to a hall.

med with fire retardant material.
ves with automatic extinguishing

m systems
le Ground variety

rlap to be removed or fire proofed es to ground

days following the inspection was partment to plan and execute all reported. That means to the middle inspector has given all houses to h all regulations.
past inspections may be helpful at t a common occurrence, one or two other houses wait until required. With ist of violations is returned and the comply. Almost always the house is new wiring, fire alarms, fire doors, etc.

improve the physical plant, and then ection. What holds any fraternity or plete adoption of the codes is money done more frequently in the past, and n it deserves we could have avoided the already occurred in each house. Every or of its own, a person whose job it is ds and get them fixed — things like metal cabinets, removing extension inguishers, general safety. These people with Frank Gibney who is the fire k Coordinating Council and student fety governing committee.

elves are generally neater, and do not gulated newspapers under stair wells or ards.
been worked out, where everyone will or across the street. Hopefully next mbers living in a house will be given to fraternity, so a head count can be taken ut.
all, everyone is much more conscious ds, and in general concerned for the d its members.
le things, improvements done with very duce the possibilities of a fire. The ting in fire alarms, fire escapes, new e house corporation comes in.
tion is made up of alumni and that physical plant. They are responsible for changes needed to keep the house ung to have to provide the money and necessary to put in the wiring, fire
. The important thing to remember is bers of any chapter cannot pay for the poration's responsibility to finance and ew changes as possible. Current chapter ly see an increase of room and board
. Many houses will still be cheaper than d in some cases, safer.
oblems are common to all houses there tings of all houses April 14 and 21 to get gether. A lawyer has been engaged to system and will work with the city to see et be done. By uniting the efforts of all system will benefit both legally and cooperation and organization of our ek houses at UVM will do everything quirements for the next semester.
written with the purpose of explaining the really is. We, the Greeks living in these ty in mind but not to the extent that it limitations on us. We submit that there is which is in exactly the same condition as es and sororities. Please do not use us as e the problem goes away. But, continue her people will enjoy the safety we will

F SPRING;
REER FOR GOODS:
ROFT,
SEAMLESS
SORS
AS LLS-GLOVES

CLASSIFIED

Large apartment for summer sublet at 231 South Prospect. Ideal location, one minute walk to UVM. Rent cheap and negotiable. Available June 1 – Sept. 1. Call 656-4393 or 862-6848. Ask for Missy or Becky.

Apt to sublet & very good possibility to rent '75-'76 year. 3 bedroom, new appliances, wall to wall carpet. $200 per month during summer. Call 864-7788.

Summer sublet – 4 bedrooms large kitchen, large livingroom, located between campus and town. Call 862-7855.

Apartment to Rent not sublet! 3 bedroom, new apartment. Large kitchen & living room, will rent furnished over summer for $200/mo. Then it's available for the next school year. Call nights 864-7788. This place could be yours for all of next year.

Apartment to sublet (only 30 seconds from Billings) – 4 bedroom apt. on the corner of Colchester and Mansfield Aves. (opposite housing office) Only $260/month. Parking available (private driveway). Contact Chip, Ed, or Souf, E-150 L/L, ext. 4394.

Wanted: House or apt. to rent from Sept. 1 – June 1 within walking distance to campus. For 5 UVM women. Call 656-3898.

$50.00 Reward Offered – Bike enthusiasts – Beware of a teen-aged youth trying to dispose of an expensive bike for cheap. My black 23" 10 speed Paris Sport was stolen Friday, April 25 from the Mary Fletcher Hospital. The thief was seen by two witnesses. The bicycle had tubular tires and pump, and toe clips. It had no front brakes at the time. This bike is the only transportation I have (had) and I want it back with no questions asked. (Call 656-2014 days, and 864-8062 evenings) $50.00 reward offered for information leading to the safe return of this bike.

1969 Dodge Van, excellent to convert to travel camper. Call Mr. Agens 863-4533.

For Sale: A pair of green vinal wing chairs, caned metal lounge chair, tan vinal lounge chair, and lamps. Call 864-7786.

'69 Mustang for sale: Needs body work. Call Larry at 863-3570. Best offer.

Stereo Console for sale: AM/FM stereo with turntable. Originally $400. Now $120. Needs some repairs. Ask for Steve, ph. 863-3945.

Great Apartment for rent – 2-3 bedroom, full-size kitchen, completely furnished. On corner of Spruce St. and So. Winooski. June through August. $150 per month. Call 864-9529, ask for Peter Welch or Peter Morin or Chris Hurley.

Wanted: Sept. '75 to May '76. House or apt to rent suitable for five UVM women. Within walking distance of campus. Please call 656-3898.

Lost – 1 wallet. Somewhere between the gym and Davis Hall. Any information call Sam ext. 2516, room 313.

Summer Job – 1975. Just printed: 1000's of entries. A must for all job searchers who are serious about finding summer employment. Mail $5.95 to American Research Ltd. 499 Hamilton Ave., Palo Alto, Calif. 94304.

Free: a young female tiger cat, all shots included. Very affectionate. Box trained. Call 864-5912.

For sale: '67 Pontiac Firebird convertible. Just make me an offer I can't refuse! Must sell before May 17 – So act now! Call 863-6277 anytime. (Mitch)

Wanted Efficiency apartment to rent: Sept. 1 – June 15, '75–'76. I am a medical student and am not interested in sharing the apartment. Call after 6 p.m., Millie, 864-9589. Location within 5 miles of the campus.

House & housemate wanted: We are a couple interested in starting or joining a long term living situation. Prefer a rural setting within 20 miles of Burlington. If you are interested or have any suggestions, please call Phelps or Kacey at 985-8575 or Phelps work, 864-7244 (days).

Apartment to sublet – nice 6 rooms – Loomis St. 2 or 3 girls, June 1 – August 15. Rent negotiable. Call Kim & Jackie (656-3445) or Marcia (656-3857).

Why live in an apartment this summer when you can live in a HOUSE. This large 5-bedroom house is 1½ miles from campus in a nice neighborhood in S. Burlington. Nice lawn for messin' around. Large modern kitchen. Large living room with functional fireplace. It's furnished too! Downstair lounge – TV room with built-in bar. $325 per month... negotiable.

Call 656-3845 or 864-7788

Beautiful apartment to sublet. 3 bedrooms, two bathrooms, large kitchen and living room, washing machine, garbage disposal, storage room, tons of light, close to campus. Rent only $55 per person per month. If interested, call 864-5424. Ask for Kate.

Lank, lithe and lonely male seeks companionship of mate with similar attributes. Must also be pretty and partially intelligible. "I'll kill myself if this doesn't work." Call Elliot at 864-9224 before it's too late.

Raft Race Photos: More than 125 to choose from. Come see if you or your friends are among the captured. Come to 211 Williams Science & view them. Art Admin. Office. Contact Steve Lemeski.

Needed: one more person to fulfill lease on comfortable, roomy house in North Burlington. Completely furnished, washer-dryer, large backyard. Only $68.75/month. Call 658-3804.

Wanted: one person to share my apartment for the summer. Your own furnished room, $70 a month. Call Dan, days 656-2922, after 5 862-0316.

Lost: 1 tube type raft taken from launching site April 19, Winooski Raft Race, by mistake. Please return to 27 Clover Lane, Burlington or call 656-3196. No Questions Asked.

Wilderness Workshop In Adirondacks

You can learn "about" wilderness literature in a classroom. You can read wilderness literature in a city apartment. But you can't "live" wilderness literature until you experience the wilderness.

This is the rationale behind the unique coeducational Wilderness Workshop offered in the Adirondacks of New York and the Rockies of Colorado by State University College at Potsdam each summer.

Dr. Jonathan Fairbanks of the Potsdam college's English department has successfully combined his professional expertise as a teacher of literature and as a hiker, climber and former Outward Bound instructor to direct this increasingly popular course.

This course attracts students of all ages (would you believe 18 to 40-plus?) from all over the U.S., representing every type of college, University and profession.

What holds appeal for those who have participated is the fact that "it's real," or, as several have said, "It's what education should be."

This summer the Rocky Mountain field period will be held June5-15. There will be three Adirondack sections: July 15-25; August 1-10; and August 15-25.

Prior to the field period participants spend three weeks doing reading on their own.

The reading list for the Rockies group includes a selection of American Western literature; while the Adirondack groups focus on more general wilderness literature and books pertaining to the Adirondack wilderness, specifically.

In the field period the participants have opportunity to discover their own relationship to the wilderness and to determine if the literature they have read is consistent with their own perceptions of the wilderness.

In the field they gain experience in rock climbing, hiking, campcraft, general mountaineering, survival, wilderness orientation, river fording, and the extremely significant aspects of group interdependence and self-reliance.

"I went into the woods to discover the wilderness," one participant wrote. "But found something even more relevant - myself."

A college freshman reflected about her experience: "In our daily lives it's very easy to abandon a task because it's too difficult, the day is too hot, or you're too tired. In the woods there was no choice. There was no possible way to give up and say, 'I can't' ...I was forced to call upon hitherto unknown resources."

She summed up her reactions by saying, "Jon Fairbanks may continue to justify his Workshop as a literature class, but it should be known that the ramifications are more far reaching than a greater understanding of Jack London or Ernest Hemingway. An understanding and appreciation of yourself develops in the woods."

A professor, reacting to this participant's expressed feelings, commented:

"Confidence, self-knowledge and self-respect are at the heart of education. It's a shame we have to get distracted and so often make the means the ends. Wilderness Workshop seems to cut through all the distractions and, in spite of London and Hemingway and academic credit, do a lot of educating in a little time. I envy you."

State University College at Potsdam's Wilderness Workshop may be taken for undergraduate, graduate or no credit.

Additional information may be obtained by writing to Dr. Jonathan Fairbanks, State University College, Potsdam, N.Y. 13676.

A Case For The Relevancy Of Jesus Christ

Part II

by Bill St Amour

Two issues ago, I made some comments on the nature of Christianity. I mentioned the fact that students have three objections for Christianity. 1. That there are no such things as absolutes, "truth" is relative, 2. That Christianity is not historically reliable and 3. it is irrelevant and out of step with the present age. I presented what I considered to be ample evidence to make the first two objections untenable and not plausible. The third point I would like to expand in this issue. One last point concerning the first two objections. There is so much evidence to show that Jesus is God, the second person of the Trinity, that I find it easier to believe in Him, than not to. Christianity is a rational faith and not a blind leap out into the darkness.

Arnold Toynbee, one of the most renown historians of our time, once said that most people don't reject Christianity, but rather a crude caricature of it. Many people think that if they believe in God and try to be as good as they can, than they can go to heaven when they die because God will see that their good deeds outweigh the bad. But, St. Paul writes that "all men fall short of the glory of God" and that "all of our righteousness is like so many rags in God's eyes." In other words, we aren't "good enough" to work our way into heaven. St Paul also mentions that if Salvation comes by the law, then Christ died in vain. Many people believe that one must "give up" something in order to be saved, yet the Bible says that salvation is a free gift from God, through Jesus Christ who died to pay the penalty of sin on our behalf. Many people think that any way is good enough to get them into the eternal Kingdom of God, yet Jesus said "I am the way, the truth and the life; no one comes to the father except through me." Why? Because only He has paid the penalty for us since He alone is qualified to pay the penalty for us. Since we've offended God, we must make it up to Him on His terms, and that means through Jesus.

Many people think of God as some unreasonable person who is trying to make us miserable in this life. Yet Jesus said "for God so loved the World, that He sent his only begotten son, that whoever believes in Him, should not perish, but have eternal life." St. Paul writes "but God demonstrates (or proves) His love towards us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Now, all of us have sinned. Sin is very serious, so serious that Christ had to die for us to satisfy God's justice and to also prove He loves us and is not willing for any of us to be eternally separated from Him. All that God asks us to do is to 1. Tell Him that we admit we've sinned against Him, and 2. that we forsake our old ways of rebelling against Him and 3. to admit that we need His son, Jesus, to save us, 4 to invite Jesus into our lives, to forgive us, and to make us the kind of person He wants us to be. Jesus said "Behold, I stand knocking at the door (of our lives) and knock, if anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come into Him, and have fellowship with him."

That is the invitation and the promise, but it is conditional: we must invite Him in on our own free will, no one else can make that decision for you. If you don't accept Him then you'll be missing out on the best that life has to offer – eternal life with God. Remember, if there was any other way for God to let us into heaven other than accepting Christ, then I'm sure He would have done it. I'm sure that Jesus didn't enjoy the pain He suffered on your behalf, yet did so out of His great love for you, to serve you. If you have any questions concerning Jesus Christ please feel free to call 985-3578 (Jay Moreland) or 862-3253.

Women's Honor Society Election Results

by Mary Ellen Fennessy
1975 President of Mortar Board

The 1975 Abraya Chapter of Mortar Board is proud to announce the election of next year's members. Mortar Board is a national collegiate senior women's honor society founded in 1915 at the University of Chicago.

Currently there are approximately 170 chapters across the country at numerous universities and colleges. UVM's chapter was founded in 1924 and this year the largest group in the University's history was initiated on Sunday April 27 in John Dewey Lounge, Old Mill.

Election to Mortar Board is based on the ideals upon which the society was founded: Scholarship, Leadership, and Service. This years members:

Mary Ellen Fennessy (president), Roxanne Isbey (vice-president), Susan Hovanasian (treasurer) Janet Roche (Historian, Secretary), Barbara Dunham (End of the year Chairperson) Lynn Murdoch and Patty O'Brien decided to perform a service to Mortar Board itself and the women of UVM. Mortar Board is the sole remaining honor society at the University which does not elect members on scholastic achievement alone. Its underclass and male counterparts; Boulder, Staff and Sandal, Key and Serpent, Sophomore aides and Gold Key are now either defunct or inactive. For this reason the 1975 chose to turn all their attentions and efforts to the election process. We strove to reach as many faculty, student organizations and leaders, resident hall staff and student body as possible to solicit their help in nominating eligible junior women. The response was excellent compared to previous years and we wish to extend our sincere thanks to all those who responded. It greatly aided our attempt to prevent Mortar Board from being a self propagating organization. After spending many long evenings reviewing the nominees' recommendations and activity sheets we were pleased to elect the following 27 junior women. All are very concerned, intelligent and active women:

Gail Meehan (President), Danelle Travers (Vice-President), Jackie Baldwin (Treasurer), Janet MacKenzie (Historian) Susan Eilert (End of the Year Chairperson), Jo Schneiderman, Chris Upham, Anne Marsucco, Laurie Demong, Holly Ladd, Heather Munrom Julie De Larichelliere, Mary Dumas, Ruth Feldman, Sharon Frink, Donna Tesi, Jill Flanagan, Linda Willis, Cathy Chamberlin, Jo Anne Page, Susan Fonfaine, Karen Kessaris, Deborah Hoffman, Cynthia Sweetland, Robin Tepper, Diane Toran, Nancy Bolin.

The 1976 Chapter has great potential. During the two orientation meetings ideas and desires were being shared for activities for next year. They are planning to meet before leaving campus this semester to set wheels in motion for a project to be held early in September. The 1975 members congratulate them and wish them success in all their endeavors.

We would also like to extend our thanks and appreciation to our marvelous and loyal faculty advisor, Dr Littleton Long, professor in the English department and also Maggie Rosa our alumni advisor.

SA Film Survey Results

The SA Film survey sheets are all in and are presently being tabulated. It was very interesting to see some of the choices made. And many helpful suggestions were made. Also there were many complementary comments made, which made the people running SA Films very happy.

A quick rundown of the most often chosen series show them to be: Dustin Hoffman (237), Focus on Women (194), Great Theater Productions (162), Hollywood Sirens (126), Italian Films (106), Mystery and Detective Stories (104), British Films (97) and Betty Davis (91). SA Films does not guarantee that each of these will get its own series, because it is necessary to balance the series AND stay within the budget. But rest assured your suggestions are being greatly weighed in the final decisions to be made, and every effort will be made to honor as many of your suggestions as possible.

Another conclusion that has been drawn from the survey is that Votey is a very unpopular place to show films. This hall has been used in the past because it has a good sound system, as opposed to Life Science which has a very poor sound system, and it is very readily available, with no conflicts as have occurred with Life Science and Cook. But due to the overwhelming opposition to Votey, some definite steps are in the works to move the series, possibly to Cook.

In the meantime there are two more chances to see films. On Friday night there will be a showing of Some Like It Hot with Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon. This is a 1959 film directed by Billy Wilder and presenting a frantic romp of babies, booze and jazz set in Chicago and Miami Beach in 1929. The sophisticated Wilder humor has been combined with his addiction to outlandish slapstick in this story of two Chicago musicians, Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon, on the lam, and how they got mixed up with an all-girl band and its ukulele-playing vocalist, Marilyn Monroe. The film will be shown in 101 Votey on Friday night at 7:30 and 9:30 with the usual admission price of $1.

And on Sunday night, for all those who are around and want a study break, there will be a special showing of the Charlie Chaplin film Limelight. This is a typical Chaplin comedy and is not to be missed if you like Chaplin. This film will also be shown in 101 Votey at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. and admission is $1.

DIG DIXIE AT
THE STING
THE LEGENDARY JACK MAHEU
and THE SALT LAKE CITY SIX ALL THIS WEEK AT
THE STING
LAST TIME IN THE AREA !!
MAY 4-7 JOINT STOCK CO.
ROCK&ROLL

VALUABLE COUPON
SPECIAL TO STUDENTS
AND FACULTY MEMBERS
(prescriptions excluded)
10% DISCOUNT
ON YOUR PURCHASES AT CAMPUS PHARMACY
ACROSS FROM
The Medical Center

ROOM TO MOVE ENTERPRISES
TO THE BOSTON AREA
WE'LL MOVE YOUR BAGGAGE HOME AT THE LOWEST RATES WITH A SPECIAL FOR BIKES DORM TO DOOR SERVICE
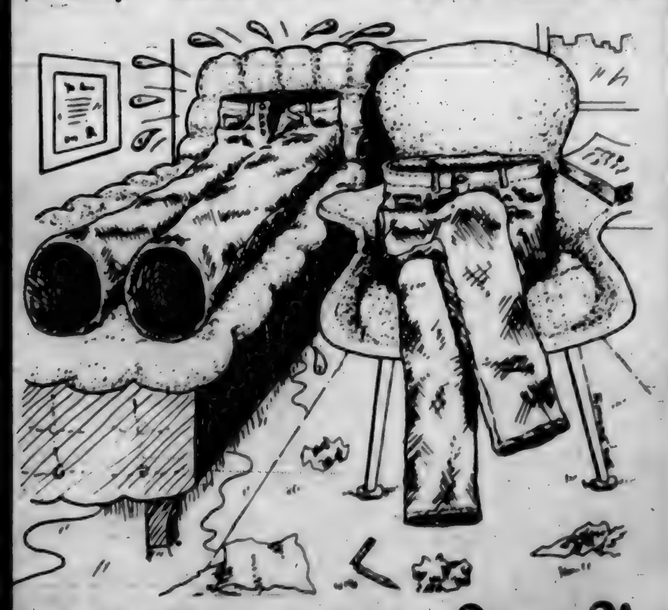
CALL: STEVE 862-8080 AFTER 11 P.M.

Levi's
The Classic: Shrink To Fit
Levi's® Blue Jeans



Guaranteed to shrink, wrinkle & fade. Rugged XX blue denim with the famous LEVI'S® fit. To be sure—look for the famous tab on the back pocket ... only on authentic LEVI'S® jeans. The jeans that won the West.
$11.25
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
10% off with UVM ID.

FEATURE

UVM Horse Show A Galloping Success

by Stephen Tanner

Shreds of cornstalk stubble flapped silently in the chill wind as horses hoofs drummed the soil of the field where the UVM Horse Club held its second Annual Spring Schooling Show Sunday.

The field was dappled with nearly 25 English dressed horsewomen who entered along with only 2 men. Most of the participants rode throughbred horses with black braided manes. Dark riding jackets, jodphers, white shirts and black caps eminated the immediate impression of traditional formality which was soon broken by the enthusiasm and casual rapport between all entrants.

The turnout this year was smaller than it had been the previous year. Last year's show sported about 50 entries. Another show being held simutaneously by local 4-H groups was responsible for the reduced contestant list.

The show was sponsored by the UVM House Club, an organization of 30 students interested in horsemanship, 16 of whom are stabling their horses at the UVM barn on Spear Street. The club is open to all interested students and frequently shows films, teaches clinics, and enjoys field trips for horse-related activities.

This year the Club's Show offered fifteen classes ranging from Fitting and Showmanship, in which the horse is judged on neatness and presence in the ring, to Open Equitation Over Fences, in which the rider is judged on her handling of her horse as it bounds over a course of jumps.

A new class was added to the traditional program this year: Dressage. The Dressage lasses are those which test the orse and its rider's ability to erform certain commands at points along the perifery of the riding ring. Circle, canter, trot, and reverse rein are among the different commands fulfilled by the contestants at each testing station.

The final, and most exciting event of the day was the Open Jumping Event in which the fences' height begins at 3 feet 3 inches.

Entrants and their proud steeds glided gracefully over the high jumps demonstrating the true working beauty of a performing horse.

The complete roster of winners can be obtained from the Horse Club. Outstanding rides throughout the classes were: in Novice classes, Melinda Cohen, Bonnie Van Slybe, and Kathy Willard. In Open and Senior Classes: Debbie Powell, Mary Beth Shea, and Gina Trono.

...a note

Riders are reminded that stalls will be opening next year for boarding horses. The Horse Club welcomes any interested horseman.

Karen Shiffer jumps Ramtec SPS Photos by Steve Tanner

Jan Apt concentrates on an Equitation Class

Debbie Powell jumps for a ribbon on "Balancin' "

Sue Rau lands softly onTimbers

UVM's Second Annual Horse Show

Debbie Powell takes a First

University Health Service- New Building

UVM Rescue and the ambulance have new quarters

Infirmary Staff demonstrate a little checking up in one of the new examination rooms. SPS Photos by Steve Tanner

VPIRG Examines Bike Locks

Bicycling is on the rise. Unfortunately so is bike stealing. According to the Burlington Police Department nearly 300 bicycles were stolen last year in the Burlington area. Bike riders need security.

This booklet has been prepared to help the average bicyclist sift through the incredible number of locks, chains and cables to purchase the best lock and chain for the money.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR

There are a number of important things that make one lock superior to another. Obviously price is an important factor. Prices for bike lock systems in Burlington range from $1.75 to over $20.00. Although in many cases the greater the price, the more security, one need not spend more than $10 to provide adequate safety.

SURFACE HARDNESS:

Most chains are surface-hardened (case hardened) in order to increase their resistance to cutting. Surface hardened chains are much tougher to cut through.

Surface hardening is a technique which is done by exposing the hot metal to high-carbon atmosphere. The carbon penetrates the metal to a certain depth, making the metal harder.

CASE DEPTH:

Case Depth is the measure of the thickness of the layer of carburized metal at the surface of the chain. The greater the thickness, the greater the resistance to cutting. Some packages list the depth on the cover.

PULL STRENGTH:

Do not be fooled by a pull strength of 5,000 lbs. Pull strength means very little. Only a moron would try and pull a chain apart. Most thieves come prepared with wire cutters.

KEY LOCKS VS. COMBINATION LOCKS:

Combination locks eliminate the bother of lost keys and are recommended for those people who have a tendency to lose things. Key locks, however, usually are more secure for the money and are recommended for people who do not mind carrying a key.

Generally, the bigger the lock, the more security. To play it safe one should get a lock with a hardened shackle.

CHAINS VS. CABLES:

Although cables are usually stronger than chains, most cables can be severed strand by strand while the link of the chain must be cut all at once. Also the plastic covering on some cables makes cutting easier by preventing the wire strands from separating apart.

If one decides to buy a cable, check to see how easily the points of the wire cutter or the teeth of a saw can be placed on a single strand. If the strands are easily accessible the bike is not secure.

CONCLUSION

The major consideration when buying a security device for a bicycle is the degree of security desired. Cables are light, compact, and convenient, but provide little security, while most chains tend to be heavy and cumbersome. Generally chains are better than cables, key locks are stronger than combination locks, and surface hardened chains are the best.

Some Comparisons:

	length	weight	cutting force*
CHAINS
Master 1516	3	.5	10/lb
Master 94	6	4.5	230
American	4	3.0	243
President 66	4	1.1	140
CABLES
Master 48m	4	.7	23
President 66	6	.5	25

*the average young person can exert a force of 35/lb on the handles of a bolt cutter.

Burlington Locks Store	* No. locks	Ave. Price
Earls Schwinn	9	7.98
Western Auto	7	4.69
Ski Rack	3	3.78
Pago Cycle	4	7.20
Valuga Cycle	8	9.32
Hillsons Home Center	4	3.10'

VPIRG best buy

Schwinn cable and lock/6 ft. $7.98
Master 1565, curling cable/6 ft. $7.85
Kurley Kable/6 ft. $4.95
Master 1568, combination padlock, case hardened, $10.30
Master 1574, steel hardened chain/6 ft., combination padlock, $10.00
Master 1573, case hardened/4 ft. combination padlock $4.97

*No. locks indicates the number available at the time of the VPIRG survey.
The average price includes a Master 594 which costs $20.00. The average price not including this lock is $7.54.

The Village Cobbler
80 PEARL STREET
ESSEX JUNCTION
879-7202
9:30 - 6 daily
Wednesday 'til 9
"Your family Shoe Store"
FEATURING
hottest item on college campus
The Original COPENHAGEN CLOG
COLORS
Daffodil Yellow
Kelly Green
Camel
Blue
Made in Denmark
of the Finest Quality Leather and Wood
Ladies Sizes 5-10

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS
MONDAY-THURSDAY 9 a.m. - 7 p.m.
FRIDAY 9 a.m. - 5:30 p.m.
SATURDAY 9 a.m. - 1 p.m.
The Brad Shop
hair has no sex
152 Church St.
862-4045
You take care of the inside of your head...
We'll take care of the outside

STUDENT SUMMER STORAGE
★ Bikes, trunks, boxes, furniture, etc.
★ Pickuo & delivery service
★ 24 hr. Answering service
★ For more information call 864-0779
ABLE CARPET
★ 418 Pine Street ★
864-0779

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686
FOREIGN CAR SPECIALIST
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
VW BUG BRAKE JOB $49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust Complete $29.95
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

AT

by Norm Robinson and Steve Br

The Vermont Cynic went out to Champl... part piece of employment of UVM Lacro... Casagrande. We hence proceeded to go to ... rooms where our hour and a half discussion... purpose was two-fold: to help the UVM co... more aware of lacrosse and become acq... personality behind the rise of the UVM la... following comprises a portion of that discu... least, it was both insightful and enjoyable for CYNIC: Could you give us some of your ba... you get into Lacrosse?

BRUCE: We lived in Long Island, which ... pockets for Lacrosse. When I started basic... pocketed a two areas, Long Island and Ba... spread to all over the country. When I went ... started Lacrosse as a sophomore and I went ... primarily to play lacrosse, because they ... program and I played four years at Cortland ... from Cortland.

CYNIC: How did you come to UVM?

BRUCE: After graduation, I was doing s... Cortland and got a teaching job on Long I... down there a friend of Bob Ordino, who ... coach last year, spoke to me and told me B... that they were looking for a Lacrosse coa... really liked the area and UVM, and decide... come up and coach Lacrosse.

CYNIC: How old are you?

BRUCE: 25

CYNIC: What do you think the future ... BRUCE: The prospects are all there. ... use is important because as you know ... until late. The size of the school is a b... factor of the school is there; lotta kids ... because of skiing or whatever. That's a b... a lot of kids who play lacrosse who w... think the potential is there and it woul... up here.

CYNIC: How do you compare the ... potential quality, as compared with ... schools up here?

BRUCE: In comparision to other ... happened yesterday speaks for ... Plymouth State 9-8). Playing only the ... and beating Plymouth State, who've ... powers for a number of years – they've ... 10 in New England, right there is a sta... grow and we have the right ingredie... power in Lacrosse, not just a little one.

CYNIC: Do you find it's difficult to ... sport.

BRUCE: We didn't have any proble... only won one game last year. So ... schedule us. They had no gripes abo... we were a club team, it might be a ... now after speaking to the Plymout... after the game, it will be the last tim... team. And he was serious.

He sees us having a tough prob... varsity teams and he's got a point. T... in his right mind that's going to wan... and lose to a club team. It's just not g...

CYNIC: Will the Lacrosse team even...

BRUCE: To play any kind of a sched... play as a club team. The people ... coming up here, the coordination ... facilities... the University doesn't su... They are going to want to get towels ... ends with it. It's just not good ... schools.

CYNIC: What is the procedure to go ...

BRUCE: It's kind of a sticky situatio... from the administration that's got ... know it's a matter of economics, an... then we can file for varsity status.

Second Annual Horse Show

Debbie Powell takes a first

Locks

are better locks, and surface hardened locks are mbination chains are the best.

ptions

length	weight	cutting force*
3	5	10/lb
6	4 5	230
4	4 0	243
4	1 1	140
4	7	23
6	5	25

young person can exert a force of handles of a bolt cutter

locks

	No. locks	Ave Price
	6	7.98
	7	4.69
	3	3.78
	4	7.20
	8	9.32
me Center	4	3.10

d lock 6 ft $7.98
ling cable 6 ft $7.85
$4.95
nbination padlock
$10.30
el hardened chain 6
padlock $10.00
e hardened 4 ft
adlock $4.97

ates the number available at the time of the rice includes a Master 594 which costs $20.00.

e not including this lock is $7.54

DAVE'S
TOMOTIVE
2, WILLISTON
6
N CAR SPECIALIST
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SUPERFIT RADIAL TIRES
BRAKE JOB
$49.95
VW Beetle Exhaust
Complete
$29.95
TE VW
ONIC FUEL
ON DIAGNOSTIC

ATalk With Lacrosse Coach Bruce Casagrande

by Norm Robinson and Steve Brown

The Vermont Cynic went out to Champlain Motor Lodge, past place of employment of UVM Lacrosse coach Bruce Casagrande. We hence proceeded to go to one of the lodges rooms where our hour and a half discussion took place. Our purpose was two-fold: to help the UVM community become more aware of lacrosse and become acquainted with the personality behind the rise of the UVM lacrosse team. The following comprises a portion of that discussion. To say the least, it was both insightful and enjoyable for us.

CYNIC: Could you give us some of your background, how'd you get into Lacrosse?

BRUCE: We lived in Long Island, which is one of the big pockets for Lacrosse. When I started basically lacrosse was pocketed a two areas, Long Island and Baltimore. Now it's spread to all over the country. When I went to high school I started Lacrosse as a sophomore and I went to Cortland State primarily to play lacrosse, because they have an excellent program and I played four years at Cortland, graduated in '73 from Cortland.

CYNIC: How did you come to UVM?

BRUCE: After graduation, I was doing some grad work at Cortland and got a teaching job on Long Island. When I was down there a friend of Bob Ordino, who was the Lacrosse coach last year, spoke to me and told me Bob was leaving and that they were looking for a Lacrosse coach. I came up and really liked the area and UVM, and decided that I'd like to come up and coach Lacrosse.

CYNIC: How old are you?

BRUCE: 25.

CYNIC: What do you think the future of Lacrosse is at UVM?

BRUCE: The prospects are all there. The facility for indoor use is important because as you know we can't get outdoors until late. The size of the school is a big factor. The drawing factor of the school is there; lotts kids want to come to UVM because of skiing or whatever. That's a big thing. And there are a lot of kids who play lacrosse who want to come to UVM; I think the potential is there and it would be a really big sport up here.

CYNIC: How do you compare the quality up here, or potential quality, as compared with Long Island? Or other schools up here?

BRUCE: In comparision to other schools up here, what happened yesterday speaks for itself. (UVM defeated Plymouth State 9-8). Playing only the second year of club ball and beating Plymouth State, who've been Colonial Division powers for a number of years – they've been ranked in the top 10 in New England, right there is a starting point for us. It can grow and we have the right ingredients to become a major power in Lacrosse, not just a little one, a major power.

CYNIC: Do you find it's difficult to schedule games as a club sport.

BRUCE: We didn't have any problems this year because we only won one game last year. So people were looking to schedule us. They had no gripes about scheduling us because we were a club team, it might be a good win for them, but now after speaking to the Plymouth State coach yesterday after the game, it will be the last time we play them as a club team. And he was serious.

He sees us having a tough problem scheduling any good varsity teams and he's got a point. There's not a varsity coach in his right mind that's going to want to come up to Vermont and lose to a club team. It's just not good for your program.

CYNIC: Will the Lacrosse team eventually have to go varsity?

BRUCE: To play any kind of a schedule, it's just impossible to play as a club team. The people won't play it. Just them coming up here, the coordination of getting locker room facilities... the University doesn't supply that for club sports. They are going to want to get towels and all the little odds and ends with it. It's just not good communication between schools.

CYNIC: What is the procedure to go from club to varsity?

BRUCE: It's kind of a sticky situation, in that it's got to come from the administration that's got to process it through. I know it's a matter of economics, and when the money is there then we can file for varsity status.

CYNIC: What are the prospects of going varsity? They are having budget problems now at the University, as you know.

BRUCE: I think it's a question of backing by the students and also the success of our program is going to have a lot to do with it, if we win quite a few games it will be a factor in our favor. The Athletic department has been very co-operative with us and for us – they'd like to see us go varsity. Like you say, it's a question of economics. Who can say what the economics will bring.

We are in the process of working on that end of it ourselves. We are trying to raise money to go varsity ourselves. I believe it's primarily an economic factor.

CYNIC: How have you gone about raising money?

BRUCE: The selling of bumper stickers has primarily been to carry us from year to year. Last year we had a raffle which raised some money for us. This year we used bumper stickers, next year we'll probably use a little fund-raising thing, but that's just to supplement our budget that we get from S.A. Long range we have to look in another direction because we can't count on S.A. and we don't want to use Student funds year after year. We want to go varsity and we can't count on the administration so we'd have to do something else.

We'd like to set up a trust fund and get some donations or contributions from alumni and set up this trust fund and use the interest off the principle to operate from year to year. In that direction, the administration might go along if they see we can raise the money in a long-range plan.

CYNIC: You don't get any financial help?

BRUCE: We get money from S.A., and we raise money on our own, but I'm not talking about the financial end of it, just scheduling the facilities and getting locker rooms, team visiting rooms, and all this kind of thing.

We're in kind of a limbo situation right now where nobody wants us. The Athletic department, through no fault of theirs, they've got their own problems and they've been very cooperative with us. And we'd like to show our appreciation for that, it's just that we're in limbo where they don't want to take care of us, yet we've got to get the facilities and get the things that we need to make things run.

That's just someplace where club sports in general can possibly get some more help.

CYNIC: Do you have to be a money-making operation before they accept you?

BRUCE: I don't think so. I don't think there are many teams at the University that are money-makers.

CYNIC: If you've become such a good team play-wise, it's going to become hard to schedule games as a club sport. If you don't get recognition as a varsity sport, does that eventually spell the demise of Lacrosse?

BRUCE: I would say as a major figure in the lacrosse world, definitely. There's no place for you to go. If you're looking to become a major power, you can only stay club for so many years, then you've got to go varsity. It's going to be very tough for us; now that we have beaten a couple of really good teams, people really aren't going to want to schedule us. You can't really expand yourself unless you play the better teams.

CYNIC: You talk about being a power, how is Lacrosse set up?

BRUCE: In New England, there are two major divisions right now, the Colonial Division and the New England Division. And then there are also a lot of other independants. Next year it's going to be changed into three divisions, the Colonial and two other divisions. One would be the major independants such as Brown, Dartmouth, Harvard, U. Mass., all the top schools. Then some of the smaller schools such as Middlebury, Williams.

CYNIC: If UVM was to go varsity, which would we be in?

BRUCE: I would imagine that we would be in the smaller New England Division, similar to hockey where there is Division I and Division II. We would be in the smaller Division until we proved that we were a little more powerful. I think by the size of the school and stuff that we would eventually go in with the major independants.

I don't think many people realize what the difference between varsity and club is. There are a couple of different things primarily that help you as a varsity. One is scheduling referees. That's one thing we don't have from the New England Official Association. We don't have a guarantee of officials for every game.

The other thing is, we are not officially printed in the USILA guide, the U.S. Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association guide. You might not think this is much, but a lot of high school kids look in that guide to see which teams do this, which teams do that, plus we're not eligible for any playoffs, honors, All-American honors or anything like that until we become recognized by schools as a varsity team. This makes a big difference for a lot of kids that want to play major Lacrosse.

CYNIC: How many schools that you play are varsity?

BRUCE: St. Mike's is the only club that we play. All the others are varsity.

CYNIC: So then, you can compete with these varsity programs?

BRUCE: Oh yeah, this year we haven't had too much of a problem. They all scheduled us without too much of a problem. We've proved that we can play with the varsity sports, skillwise, and do well. It's just a question of how long will they play us. It's a problem; it's not going to be like football because we don't operate on that kind of a budget. The initial outlay is expensive, but we've got past that point.

CYNIC: When did the team as a club sport begin?

BRUCE: The team began last year; we were granted money by S.A. and the club elected a president and an executive committee and those people worked extremely hard to get this thing off the ground, and also Bob Ordino, who was the chaplin, who coached the team last year. They were the ones to really get things going. They got the scheduling going, the equipment, raised the money. I would say that was the crucial year, last year. This year things have come right along. People are starting to realize we do have a good team.

CYNIC: Would you like to tell us a little about this year's program in terms of practices and the like?

BRUCE: We started practicing the last week in January. We've been in the field house for January, February and March three nights a week 9:30–11 two nights and 11–12 on the other and Sundays from 3:30–5 p.m. That was all we could get in the field house and it was not conducive to creating a good attitude on the team, but the fellas were great, they banded together and did put in the time, crazy hours and all. That's what we did right up until we got outside. We had two scrimmages in the field house, even though it is a little small. Then we went to Long Island for the spring break and had two scrimmages down there and two games. When we came back we thought we could go outside, but because of the snow, we had to go back indoors. Then we opened our regular season against Harvard B team and Brandeis in Boston. We split up for two games down there.

CYNIC: That's when the team really began to gel, isn't it?

BRUCE: We went to Boston and split up into two teams. We really didn't have enough depth for either game, but the playe.s got a lot of work. After those games we regrouped and the next day we went out and beat Mass. Lacrosse Club 15–4. Then we really started to get things rolling. Then we went to Middlebury and beat their B team 14–7, lost a tough game to St. Lawrence. We out-played them and out-shot them, but had a hell of a time getting it by their goalie. This fall we'll be playing an intercollegiate schedule of possibly three, maybe four games. We'll be going two or three nights a week outdoors in the fall and then have a Saturday game. And during the winter we'll have box Lacrosse, hopefully this can be incorporated into the intramural program. Then right into spring time so Lacrosse will be going year 'round next year.

CYNIC: How many kids came out this year for the team?

BRUCE: We started off with 60 kids or so and we've been working with about 30 to 39 kids the past two weeks.

CYNIC: How experienced are the players on this year's team?

BRUCE: Surprisingly, they've played quite a bit. I didn't think there would be a lot of fellas that had much experience. Figuring that it was a club team, I didn't figure that there would be many. But quite a few kids have four years of high school ball. Kids that were All-New England selections.

CYNIC: Most of these are out-of-staters, I presume?

BRUCE: Yeah, there aren't any schools in Vermont that play Lacrosse at the present time. This summer we'll be running a Lacrosse recreation program for the kids in the community... to hopefully get them into the high schools. The club will be donating all of their equipment and sticks so they can run this thing.

I think it's more feasible; you look in the paper this week and how many high school baseball games were canceled? It's a lot more feasible spring sport up here because of the weather conditions.

CYNIC: You play in any weather?

BRUCE: Yes, we'll play in any weather. As a matter of fact at Cortland one time, we played in a game where it was forty degrees and sunny in the first half; it was 25 and we had eight inches of snow by the end of the second half. We almost finished the game, but we had almost eight inches, it was just incredible.

CYNIC: What age is a good age to start a kid in Lacrosse?

BRUCE: Well, you ask somebody from Long Island and they'll tell you three years old. In Canada they have regular pee-wee leagues at four years old. That's something that would be nice, but if you start a kid off in junior high, it's a good time to have a kid out there.

CYNIC: The team is very young now, isn't it?

BRUCE: Extremely. Half of the starting unit are freshmen, and quite a few sophomores. We've only got one senior on the team this year, so will only lose one person this year. Our goalie is a sophomore, another that's a freshman. The year after we'll lose maybe five or six. So the next couple of years look good.

CYNIC: I understand you've been burning a little midnight oil yourself, maybe you could explain your trips to Montreal every day of the week during the beginning of the season...?

BRUCE: I was playing professional Box Lacrosse up there. They drafted me to play up there and it was a tight situation because I had to drive up there every day during the day and drive back for practices down here at night. Then I had to leave to go up there for 4 or 5 days for their formalized training camp.

It came down to the question of going up there and playing or staying here coaching UVM Lacrosse. I feel the potential here at UVM is unique to the entire country – it's an amazing situation – I felt that I'd like to stay around here and see this thing grow.

CYNIC: So at this point you plan to stay with UVM Lacrosse?

BRUCE: Right.

CYNIC: Do you think the really big thing is to get someone to see the game once? That's what happened to me – I saw yesterday's game and now really want to see another.

BRUCE: Not too many people up here are familiar with Lacrosse, but very few people know that it is America's oldest sport, it was created by the Indians. Not too many people know that it is Canada's national sport, not hockey, but Box Lacrosse is Canada's national sport. The speed and excitement of the game leads people to be hooked on it after once or twice. Now with the absence of football up here, a contact sport like Lacrosse could be big...

CYNIC: A lot of people don't think it is a contact sport, but it really is –

BRUCE: You know it – wide open field hitting. Lacrosse is all full speed moving and dodging and a lot of hitting. It is billed as the fastest game on two feet.

CYNIC: What has kept the program going?

BRUCE: Without a doubt, it would be the kids themselves. You look at all the problems we've had to go thru. As a club team, there are many schools that feel, "they're only a club, we don't have to worry about them." For instance, we went to Middlebury to have a game. Day before the game they tell us we can't play it as a game, we don't have the money to get the referees and it turns out to be a scrimmage. Would they do that with any varsity sport? I doubt it. Since we're a club, it happens to us.

CYNIC: Did you beat Middlebury?

BRUCE: Yeah, we beat Middlebury 14-7. The score was closer than the game actually was. We played the second team the whole game.

The kids can see what's going on. To pull through all of this, through the nighttime and Sunday practices and all the other problems, is a sign of a team that has something unique about it. These kids are just incredible. They really love the game. It's just not the challenge of the game, but the whole season. Raising the money, driving in our own cars to places. We had to scrounge up the money for our meals. These kids pay for a lot of the stuff out of their own pockets.

CYNIC: Are your assistants paid?

BRUCE: We have an assistant from Burlington High School, Brian Burns. And he has been a big help to me, to come out every day and he's not paid. We just don't have the money. I'd like to see a few years from now that we'd get an alumni game going... There's a lot of possibilities for Lacrosse here. It will be even better for us next year because we get out later. This year we had to cancel three games because of snow. But next year Spring vacation isn't until April 5-12. School doesn't get out until May 12th or 13th.

Right now, the mainstay of our schedule is 14 games inside three weeks, which is kind of ridiculous, but it's the only way we can do it.

CYNIC: Who have been the key factors in Lacrosse?

BRUCE: I should mention that the people on the executive committee, Ken Bartlett, who is the president, those people have put so much time in getting this off the ground. Meetings before and after practice, an hour and a half to get things straightened out. Without them I would have been sunk.

CYNIC: How has fan support been?

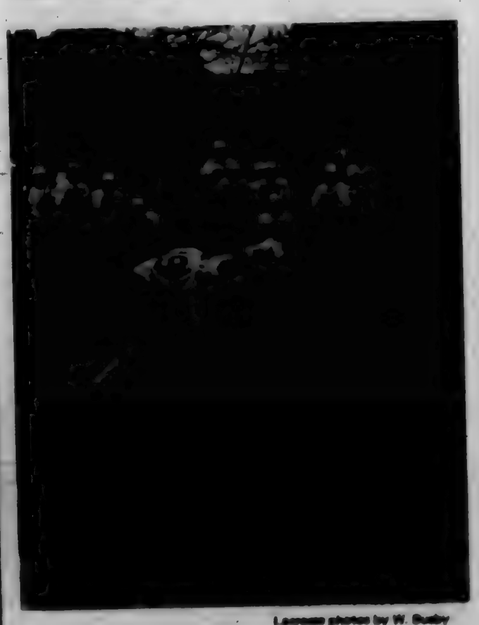
BRUCE: When you're winning people are going to come out. That's just a fact. I think as more people start to realize what lacrosse is all about they'll come out and watch us. We've got an avid bunch of supporters already.

CYNIC: Who came up with the clever line, "It takes a big stick to play UVM Lacrosse?"

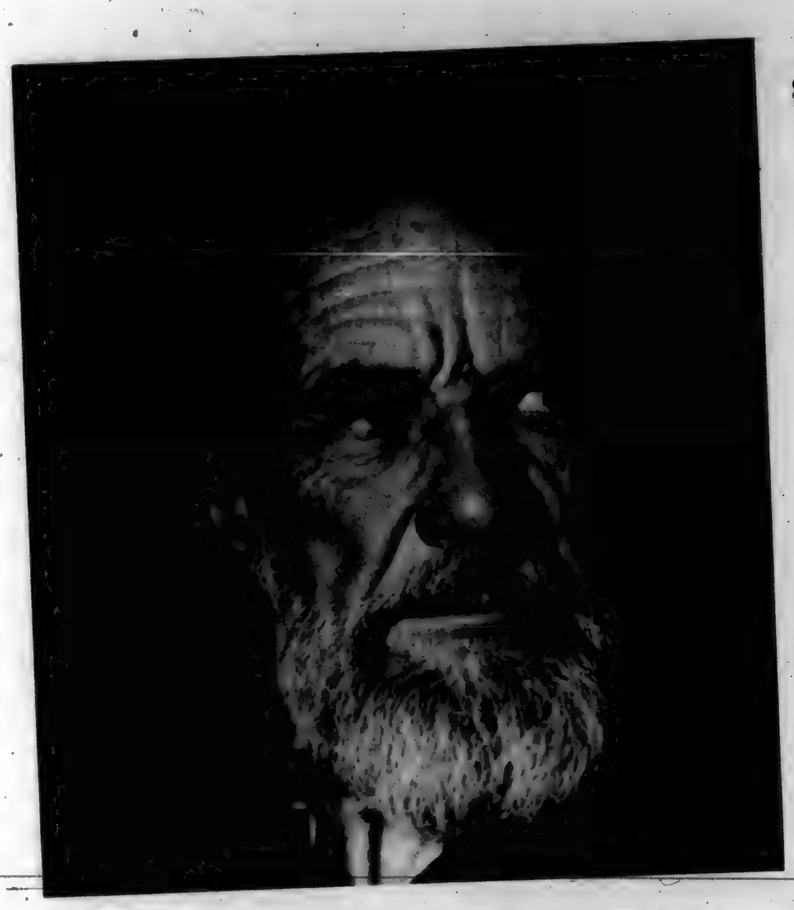
BRUCE: Actually it was Keith Miser.

We had a meeting, trying to decide on a slogan for the bumper stickers., and he came up with that saying.

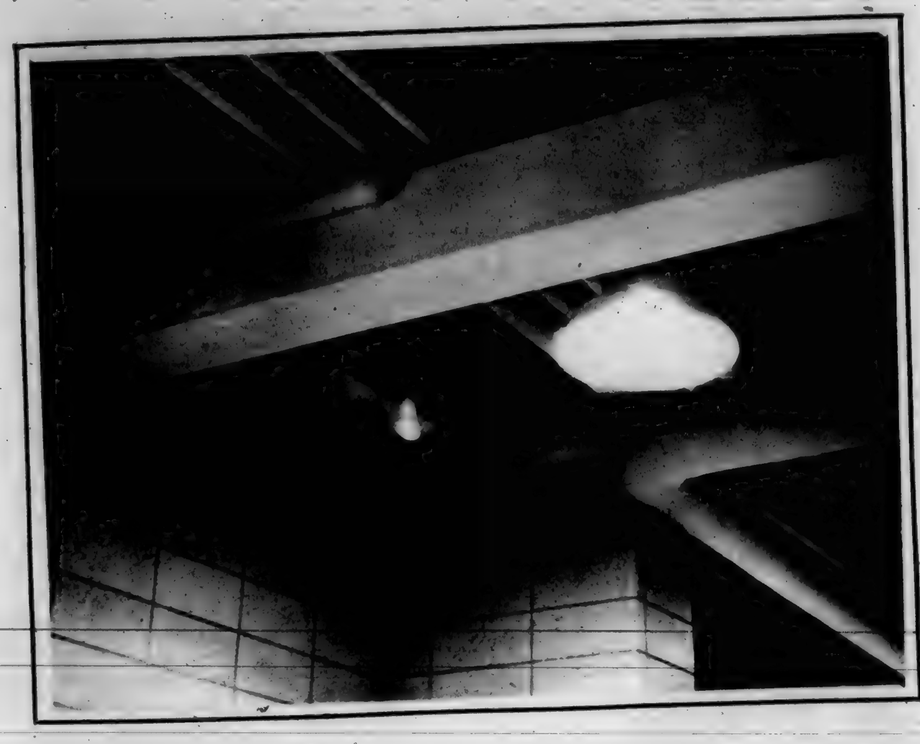
Unfortunately there are no more home games for this lacrosse club but with hope your future support could help bring about the reality of a lacrosse dynasty at UVM. It would be a sad state of affairs if the University of Vermont inter-collegiate sport died here because it was too good. Becoming a varsity sport is the only answer – you can make it happen! Thank you Bruce.



Lacrosse photos by W. Busby



Stephen Lesneski
"Faces"
First Place



Sally Becker
"Other"
First Place

Wizzy Hathon
"Landscapes"
First Place

Rich
"Lan
Fir

Contest Jud

Wynn Gold	S
Dan Higgins	A
Art Huse	L
Dick Lew	S

MAY 1, 1975

Photography Contest Winners

Rich Rollins
"Landscapes"
First Place

Gloria Malkin
"Faces"
Honorable Mention

Sally Becker
"Other"
First Place

Robert Gilbert
"Faces"
Honorable Mention

Contest Judges

Wynn Goin	SPS
Dan Higgins	Art Dept.
Art Huse	Living Learning Photo Dept.
Dick Lew	SPS

The Way To The River

First Place Short Story

by Susan Cathcart

The sign at O'Reilly's says they stop serving at two, but at three the jukebox still blares. George T. doesn't listen as he stares into a small glass of warm gin diluted by melted ice cubes. Ben flops chairs upside-down on the tables and mops around him until Sally hustles up and coaxes George outside.

Three men and a girl are leaning on a dented green Chevie in the parking lot. The girl's knee is scabbed like a little kid and her shift is ripped. George rests his folded arms on the open car door and jokes awhile with the retired cop and others. They pass around a bottle. Sally pushes around a pile of loose black stones with the edge of her sandal. Her toes get dirty. The rest take off in the roaring Chevie and George rumbles along the cracked cement sidewalk, led by Sally.

Sally's apartment is two blocks away and up three flights of broken wooden steps. The overhead lightbulb is out and she trips over a heap of albums before a table lamp flicks on. In the yellow light dishes are stacked by the sink. George flops down on the rumpled daybed and seems to sleep. Sally takes a bag of potato chips out of the cabinet and leans her hip on the sink, munching a handful and watching George.

Finally she says, "Yuh probably better go home, George." And then louder, "Yuh better go home."

George lifts his head, leans on his elbows and looks up at her, his eyes foggy. George has a home. A pink and white trailer down by the river on the outskirts of town. And a wife, Marcia. And a daughter, Donna. A daughter who sits in the mud by the river all day and chortles and grunts and never answers to her name, even though she's almost twelve now. He doesn't go home much.

"Your pickup's out front, George."

He sits up sloppily, reaches in his pocket and finds the keys, then stretches out his arm and lets them fall through his fingers onto an end table littered with butts and ashes from an overflowing ashtray.

"This place is a mess," he replys. George is angry with Sally for interrupting a daydream, for asking him to leave it for what he knows awaits at home.

"If you don't like it, leave. You always do."

So that was it again. George thinks of the order of Sally's daylight hours in the front office – even-edged piles of clean white paper, perfectly spaced rows of small black letters, matters placed alphabetically in files. He follows her home in search of this simplicity but now that's vanishing, too.

Sally leaves the sink counter and, smiling slightly as she tosses her long hair behind her shoulders, crosses the room to George. She curls up beside him on the daybed, pressing her bare tanned legs against his and circling his neck with her arms.

"Why don't you just stay?"

Marcia was like this once, too. Then the girl came and the day he struck Marcia across the face and she crumpled to the floor and pressed her face against the green vinyl hassock, crying so hysterically George left. He wants very much to stay forever, but a picture of the girl comes – running and stumbling in the mud by the river, dropping her fistful of stones. He shakes his head slightly to make it go away.

"We'll see."

Later George stumbles over the records, opens the door and starts off down the stairs. Sally comes over and closes the door.

"Bye, George."

George maneuvers the truck along the narrow street with close-built houses for several blocks, squeezing through the alley formed by parked cars, then makes the turn on to a major road. He passes the rows of stores, their wares are shadows in the dim light behind the lettered front windows, and then a huge low plant sprawling behind miles of anchor fencing. He drives over the bridge and turns on to a narrow, winding road where his own home lies nestled between the smaller and dirtier factories.

The pickup rumbles over dirt and rocks in the yard and halts beside the trailer. George fools with the keys for awhile at the door and inside finds Marcia asleep on a lawn chair in front of the portable T.V. She awakens and stands up quickly, the robe hanging loosely from her neck, her short hair disheveled.

"So you came home. What time is it? I suppose you've spent..." she goes to reach for his pocket, but George knocks her hand away and pulls some bills from his pocket and slams them down on the kitchenette counter that separates them.

"So you are drunk."

Marcia glares at the money, then snatches it to her and shuffles off in her large fluffy slippers to the bedroom area at the other end of the trailer where she stashes it in the top drawer of a small metal cabinet.

By the time George has switched off the buzzing T.V. she's back by the counter putting away a box of cereal.

Slamming the cabinet door shut she begins again to inform George that it's his fault she's stuck here all day, stuck with a child she can't take anywhere. It's his fault Donna's the way she is, his fault because of the drinking and the women...George fools with the antenna on the T.V., pretending to ignore her. She is interrupted by a scream.

In her bunk in the corner at the far end of the trailer, Donna is having another dream.

The same dream. She is alone in some dark tunnel in the ground, like the girl in the fairy tale who was captured by a mole. The walls of this narrow passage are moist, here and there the water trickles freely, and Donna is becoming chilled and hungry. She wanders endlessly, groping along the muddy walls that guide her through the dark, but can not find even a distant ray of daylight. Shrill screams and the sound of breaking glass and furniture crashing against the walls echo around her and she cries and cries but no one comes to guide her. Now she becomes afraid too and screams, but can not make herself heard above this noise that fills the tunnel. Donna screams to wake herself up.

George runs to his daughter. He switches on a light by the bunk and pulls open the curtain, but she is still screaming and stiff, even in the light. He wants to take her in his arms, hold her and quiet her, but she is too old for that maybe...his arms drop to his side and Marcia pushes him away. George retreats to the kitchenette, opens the cabinet and pours a shot of whiskey while Marcia tends the child. He doesn't get reprimanded because as soon as Donna quiets down, Marcia goes to bed.

Donna awakes at six Saturday morning. This isn't usual. She doesn't stir from her bunk, however, because that means a smacking noise to her face and something she doesn't know is called pain. Instead she pulls up her curtain and watches the muddy river roll over rocks, branches and discarded car parts for almost three hours. After this time her mother comes and pulls her from her bunk. Marcia dresses her and leads her to a chair at the table where she sets a bowl of cereal. Donna eats. When she has finished Marcia sends her out to play.

Outside this is one of the different days. The air is quieter than usual, the shrieks do not issue from the huge reddish-brown blocks towering on either side of Donna's home. Black smoke does not form patterns above them, the patterns in the wind that Donna would lie and watch for hours on other days. So Donna heads right for the river. The late-summer earth is hard beneath her bare feet until she reaches the muddy bank. Here she sits in ankle-deep mud, splashing her hands in the water and watching the yellow ribbons of foam roll by. They collect behind the little dam of branches and cardboard panels formed by a fender discarded years ago. Donna watches as the foam piles up and Lizzie begins to emerge.

She comes as Donna first saw her, laughing, hair glowing blonde in the sunlight like a halo in the angel book. Lizzie steps lightly from the foam onto the slippery bank and takes Donna's outstretched hand.

"Hello," says Donna, "How are you today?"

"Just fine, thank you. And you? Did you have a good sleep?"

"Oh yes," replies Donna, she has forgotten the dream.

"My brother, the prince, gave me these gems for you."

Donna takes the pile of stones into her hand. "Oh, please thank him for me," she says as she touches each one, then holds it up to see it sparkle in the sun.

"Come, we must water the garden," Lizzie is filling her watering can from the river, Donna picks up hers and does the same. The ripples feel cool on her hand and she leaves it submerged longer than necessary, letting her fingers drift in the current. The sun is very hot.

She follows Lizzie into the woods. The two girls walk hand in hand on the deep needles in the shade of the tall pines whose lowest branches are so far above them they remind Donna of the great cathedral ceilings in picture books. They chat about the prince, his horses and the new white roses in the garden until they come upon the haunted cottage. Here they stop and, hiding behind thick hedges, watch the old women emerge from the darkness of the open door and empty nameless ingredients into her caldron, breathless with the fear this witch might see them.

When she is gone they continue along the pine needle path, the patches of sunlight falling more often through the trees now to dance on the dark forest floor, until they come to the clearing. Here the garden begins, patches of tall bright flowers amid swirls of low pastel beds, all bordered by the purest of white rosebushes.

The girls first pick tall multi-colored zinnias and then, holding these full bouquets in one arm, begin to water the plants. Donna is leaning over to sprinkle a circle of daffodils when a rough hand grabs her arm.

"Don't you hear me calling you for lunch? I should let you stay out here and starve!" Marcia drags her back to the trailer and gives her a sandwich to eat on the steps. "Don't you dare come inside, you're covered with mud." The peanut butter feels dry in her mouth and Donna wishes she had a glass of cold milk.

When her lunch is finished, Donna rejoins Lizzie in the garden where they continue watering the colorful swirls of flowers. Reaching the end of the garden, they come upon the sunlight pasture where the golden horses roam. Putting down their watering cans, they take up the charmed lassos which allow them to make these wild horses their own.

Sensing the girls' approach, the grazing horses lift their heads and then turn and lope down the pasture. Lizzie and Donna take chase and soon overtake the slower fat mares, but Donna is enjoying the running far too much to stop here, and besides she has already decided that this is the day she'll catch the stallion. Running strongly, she comes alongside the huge Palomino. He is breathing hard and his neck is arched, the muscles straining. Donna throws the rope into the air and it miraculously falls right over his head, drooping softly upon the flowing white mane. The horse's gait slows from a gallop to a frisky walk. Still prancing, he turns to face Donna and she grabs a handful of mane and vaults onto the horse's broad back. Lizzie comes up to her on a small, swift mare and the two race on down the pasture, the wild horses still somewhat defiant but moving gracefully beneath the charmed halters.

At the end of the pasture is a low stone wall, beyond that the road to the enchanted village. The girls have never dared leave the pasture before but today they decide to jump the wall and follow the road as far as it may go.

With a tap of her heels Donna sends the Palomino at the stone wall, it seems to rise higher as the horse leaves the ground. His reaching neck glows against the tangled white mane before her and she throws her arms around it as they once again touch ground. Regaining her balance, Donna looks back to see Lizzie follow then urges her horse to canter on in the soft, dry dust alongside the hot blacktop.

The girls follow the winding dirt road through thick woods and past splendid castles surrounded by large opaque jewels, airy black lace patterns floating in the clouds above them. The horses move at a slow trot now until the girls hear a rustling sound in a small pile of leaves and halt them. Donna lifts the bird from among the dead leaves and holds it fluttering against her breast. She brings it to Lizzie who looks closely and says, "It's only a baby. We should make a nest for it, by the river maybe, and then bring it food every day."

She reaches for the bird and holds it while Donna mounts her horse then gives it back to her. The stallion seems to know of the fragile cargo and crosses the meadow slowly, with carefully placed steps, to the luscious banks of the river while Donna holds the bird in gently cupped hands.

By the river the girls build a nest of twigs. They line it with moss and pink flower petals and set it beneath the lowest branches of a thick, sheltering bush, the young bird snuggled safe inside.

Returning to the road, Donna turns her horse toward the magical town, hoping to find milk and eggs there. The girls walk their horses slowly now down the center of the road, enjoying the coolness dusk brings. There is a screeching sound and Donna is struck by cold metal.

Hours later a motorist finds Donna wandering alone in the dark. He takes the frightened girl to the police, who call her home.

Second Place Poem

My Dolls

by Susan Johanknecht

you wait in plastic bags
at the back of closets, posed the way I left you.

Thumbalina
a baby
soft-stuffed body
with plastic arms and legs,
I fed you bottles
but you never wet.
I stained the cloth beneath your dress with perfume and with powder
to hide your absent odor.

Penny Brite
I was embarassed for you, awkward, not jointed
you only sat
with spread-eagle legs
and wore your clothes self-consciously.

Troll pointed ears, a bellybutton and paw-like feet
perhaps you were an animal
a creature,
who didn't have to be compared with other dolls.
I made you clothes,
plastic bag raincoats
and a wedding gown
from my mother's lace underpants.
but your hair was thin
so I cut it off
and that made you a boy.

Chatty Cathy
you still talk when I return home and pull the pink ring you say, "change my dress"
"let's play house"
in a deepening voice that echoes through a coned speaker built in your chest.

Barbie
I cut your eyelashes
because they were black, undid your ponytail
to find you bald,
stuck pearl-tipped pins
into your ears
and hated
your eternal tip-toed feet.
at twelve I removed your head trading it for a friend's discarded stylish one.
I ran my fingers over your woman-body, imagining a princess, a gypsy who always let men abuse her.

Tuttie
I wanted you my mother said I was too old but I wanted you so perfect, with long blond hair and bendable legs
I never let anyone touch you.
then your legs stopped bending wires broken, worn out by themselves and I stood you by the piano while I practiced crying at your imperfection,
you were my last doll.

The winners of the Vermont Cynic Writing Contest are as follows:

POETRY
1. Ben Birnbaum, "Daughters"
2. Susan Johanknecht, "My Dolls"
3. Peter Delorenzo, "For Thomas, My Brother"

SHORT STORY
1. Susan Cathcart, "The Way to the River"
2. Ben Birnbaum, "The Poachers"
3. NO AWARD

ESSAY
In this category, the judges felt that none of the submissions were acceptable.

The judges were Kenneth S. Rothwell, Mary Jane Dickerson, and T. Alan Broughton.

T

by Ben Birnbaum

The ancient, roofless jeep, Yehudah solemn Jonathan sitting high on the top of an American enjoying a cruise around the sight in the streets of Eilat. Yehudah Jonathan talked to himself. Are you blind, you see that bus? Didn't you see that lady trying to kill Old Man Klein?

Yehudah and Jonathan were the only in Eilat, but they were not rich. The quay bought starfish and shells. The Cooperative paid the Tel Aviv price for but Eilat is a small city; if not for the Yehudah and Jonathan, who was crazy,

Yehudah didn't trust the jeep. He would obey him only if he caught her off belonged to the French Army. Yehudah purple mountains of Jordan and suddenly right and the jeep dived down a steep, dirt to a halt at the back of a hotel kitchen.
the hood and put his face in the exhaust drooled. The cook came to the door and "Beautiful day," Yehudah said to the seat, Fishybrain," he said to Jonathan.

In buckets, under the back seat, were rare, delicious and contraband under the the Bay of Eilat.

The cook came down the stairs and drew back a gill and sniffed.

"Fifteen minutes ago," Yehudah jumping like a seminary student in a whore

The cook made a face. "Two pounds."

"Two? Look at the flesh on it. Your fat. Nothing less than ten."

"Ten? Don't be stupid on such a mention my children with your mouth offer."

"Close it up, Fishybrain. We'll go over at the Queen of Sheba Hotel. From a make a hundred pound dish. He's queer artist. It's like you always say, Fishybrain a chef's a chef."

Jonathan asked the cook for a
"Maybe four pounds," the cook said
"Six and I'll throw in a conch shell for
"Why should my wife want your half."

"You offer me a measly four and a size? It's a baby Leviathan. You know me the minute he saw it? He said: Get telephone; we've found the Leviathan. I'll it isn't five kilo it's yours for free. If it's seven."

"A minute ago you said six."

"A minute ago I wasn't talking scale."

"Never mind your scale. I know your offer."

"Five it is. Fishybrain, carry the fish.
Be careful you don't drop her; we don't Say Cooky; you hear the one about telephone at the ministry and he hears Arab accent..."

"I heard it. There's your money."

Jonathan came out of the kitchen his back.

"What you got there?" the cook asked

"He's got nothing," Yehudah said.

The cook went up the stairs and Jonathan's back. Jonathan kept turning.

"You look like such a fool," Yehudah
The cook went inside. Jonathan
Yehudah struck the potato out of his hand

"Don't steal," he said, adding, a shalt not" He drove the jeep up to the looked left at the sparkling desert and

Twice a month on alternate Tuesdays stopped Yehudah's jeep, looked under out a citation for ten pounds.

"Do you think I want them?" Yehudah
"the little bastards get stuck in the net;
do give them a funeral and say kaddish
"Don't shout," the game warden me Fishybrain; where else can a man pounds a month?"

Yehudah and Jonathan worked payed the net out from one corner brought the boat about so that the the sea and came back to the other Yehudah dropped anchor. He and Jonathan that drew the lower edge of the net pulled those ropes up and the net
Yehudah leaned over and watched the "Sixty or seventy;" he said.
Fishybrain?"

Jonathan laughed because some jumping out through the netting.

"Pull it in, Fishybrain." They brought the net up from the sea.

It came up, streaming, shining the fish smacked their bellies together beat the hull like bullets, that stung

Yehudah shut his eyes. Sea water his mouth. The rope trembled in happy. He screamed at Jonathan.

Jonathan, knowing he would not of the fish, screamed back.

Together they raised the net secured the ropes and let the net alongside, while a poor catch jumped a ghost.

Mostly their catches were good a hundred-fifty kilo without using needed to use the winch; none of Sometimes a fish jumped from Jonathan found it he threw it into it he stepped on its head and dropped Jonathan loved fish. Sometimes piloting the boat and Jonathan would so that when the fish jumped straight would be left behind.

Sometimes, while the net was would jump into it. He packed out nose. Good morning mister fish.

The fish opened and shut its mouth
After a while, Yehudah would out of the net.

Smiling, Jonathan pretended
"Shark," Yehudah yelled.
Jonathan scrambled up over trembling. Yehudah laughed.

ory

...onna eats. When she has finished Marcia sends

...is one of the different days. The air is quieter
...e shrieks do not issue from the huge
...stocks towering on either side of Donna's
...ake does not form patterns above them, the
...and that Donna would lie and watch for hours
So Donna heads right for the river. The
...th is hard beneath her bare feet until she
...dy bank. Here she sits in ankle-deep mud,
...ends in the water and watching the yellow
...roll by. They collect behind the little dam of
...rdboard panels formed by a fender discarded
...e watches as the foam piles up and Lizzie

...n Donna first saw her, laughing, hair glowing
...nlight like a halo in the angel book. Lizzie
...m the foam onto the slippery bank and takes
...ched hand
...a Donna. "How are you today?"
...thank you. And you? Did you have a good

...rpties Donna, she has forgotten the dream.
...r, the prince, gave me these gems for you."
...n the pile of stones into her hand. "Oh, please
...me," she says as she touches each one, then
...e it sparkle in the sun.
...must water the garden." Lizzie is filling her
...am the river. Donna picks up hers and does the ...les feel cool on her hand and she leaves it
...ger than necessary, letting her fingers drift in
...e sun is very hot

...s Lizzie into the woods. The two girls walk
...n the deep needles in the shade of the tall pines
...branches are so far above them they remind
...great cathedral ceilings in picture books. They ...prince, his horses and the new white roses in
...ll they come upon the haunted cottage. Here
...hiding behind thick hedges, watch the old
...from the darkness of the open door and empty
...dents into her caldron, breathless with the fear
...t see them.

...is gone they continue along the pine needle
...dles of sunlight falling more often through the ...nce on the dark forest floor, until they come to
...Here the garden begins, patches of tall bright
...swirls of low pastel beds, all bordered by the ...rosebushes.

...first pick tall multi-colored zinnias and then,
...full bouquets in one arm, begin to water the
...is leaning over to sprinkle a circle of daffodils
...hand grabs her arm.
...ou hear me calling you for lunch? I should let
...here and starve!" Marcia drags her back to the
...her a sandwich to eat on the steps. "Don't
...e inside, you're covered with mud." The peanut
...y in her mouth and Donna wishes she had a glass

...r lunch is finished, Donna rejoins Lizzie in the
...they continue watering the colorful swirls of
...ning the end of the garden, they come upon the ...re where the golden horses roam. Putting down
...g cans, they take up the charmed lassos which
...make these wild horses their own.

...the girls' approach, the grazing horses lift their ...en turn and lope down the pasture. Lizzie and
...chase and soon overtake the slower fat mares, but
...oying the running far too much to stop here, and
...as already decided that this is the day she'll catch
...Running strongly, she comes alongside the huge
...e is breathing hard and his neck is arched, the
...ning. Donna throws the rope into the air and it ...falls right over his head, drooping softly upon the ...e mane. The horse's gait slows from a gallop to a ...Still prancing, he turns to face Donna and she
...dful of mane and vaults onto the horse's broad
...comes up to her on a small, swift mare and the
...down the pasture, the wild horses still somewhat
...moving gracefully beneath the charmed halters.

...end of the pasture is a low stone wall, beyond that
...the enchanted village. The girls have never dared
...asture before but today they decide to jump the
...llow the road as far as it may go.

...tap of her heels Donna sends the Palomino at the
...it seems to rise higher as the horse leaves the
...reaching neck glows against the tangled white
...her and she throws her arms around it as they ...touch ground. Regaining her balance, Donna looks
...Lizzie follow then urges her horse to canter on in
...dust alongside the hot blacktop.

...irls follow the winding dirt road through thick
...past splendid castles surrounded by large opaque
...black lace patterns floating in the clouds above
...horses move at a slow trot now until the girls hear a
...und in a small pile of leaves and halt them. Donna
...bird from among the dead leaves and holds it
...gainst her breast. She brings it to Lizzie who looks ...says, "It's only a baby. We should make a nest for
...ver maybe, and then bring it food every day."
...aches for the bird and holds it while Donna mounts
...then gives it back to her. The stallion seems to know
...gale cargo and crosses the meadow slowly, with
...laced steps, to the luscious banks of the river while
...ds the bird in gently cupped hands.
...river the girls build a nest of twigs. They line it
...and pink flower petals and set it beneath the lowest
...of a thick, sheltering bush, the young bird snuggled

...ning to the road, Donna turns her horse toward the
...wn, hoping to find milk and eggs there. The girls
...horses slowly now down the center of the road,
...the coolness dusk brings. There is a screeching sound
...is struck by cold metal.
...later a motorist finds Donna wandering alone in the
...takes the frightened girl to the police, who call her

The Poachers

Second Place Short Story

by Ben Birnbaum

The ancient, roofless jeep, Yehudah at the wheel and solemn Jonathan sitting high on the top of the back seat like an American enjoying a cruise around the bay, was a familiar sight in the streets of Eilat. Yehudah drove like a fool. Jonathan talked to himself. Are you blind, Yehudah? Didn't you see that bus? Didn't you see that lady tourist. Were you trying to kill Old Man Klein?

Yehudah and Jonathan were the only licensed fishermen in Eilat, but they were not rich. The souvenir shops on the quay bought starfish and shells. The Inland Fisherman's Cooperative paid the Tel Aviv price for certain salt water fish, but Eilat is a small city; if not for the black market business, Yehudah and Jonathan, who was crazy, would have been poor.

Yehudah didn't trust the jeep. He knew her well. She would obey him only if he caught her off guard. She had once belonged to the French Army. Yehudah looked up at the purple mountains of Jordan and suddenly twisted the wheel right and the jeep dived down a steep, dirt driveway and came to a halt at the back of a hotel kitchen. Jonathan got up on the hood and put his face in the exhaust from the kitchen and drooled. The cook came to the door and squinted.

"Beautiful day," Yehudah said to the cook. "Lift up the seat, Fishybrain," he said to Jonathan.

In buckets, under the back seat, were the fish - all of them rare, delicious and contraband under the conservation laws of the Bay of Eilat.

The cook came down the stairs and squeezed a fish. He drew back a gill and sniffed.

"Fifteen minutes ago," Yehudah said, "that one was jumping like a seminary student in a whorehouse."

The cook made a face. "Two pounds."

"Two? Look at the flesh on it. Your children should be so fat. Nothing less than ten."

"Ten? Don't be stupid on such a hot day, and don't mention my children with your mouth. Three is my final offer."

"Close it up, Fishybrain. We'll go see the Swedish faggot over at the Queen of Sheba Hotel. From a ten pound fish, he'll make a hundred pound dish. He's queer of course, but he's an artist. It's like you always say, Fishybrain: a cook's a cook and a chef's a chef."

Jonathan asked the cook for a fried potato.

"Maybe four pounds," the cook said to Yehudah.

"Six and I'll throw in a conch shell for your wife."

"Why should my wife want your conch shells? Four and a half."

"You offer me a measly four and a half for a fish this size? It's a baby Leviathan. You know what Fishybrain said to me the minute he saw it? He said: Get the Messiah on the telephone; we've found the Leviathan. I'll take out the scale. If it isn't five kilo it's yours for free. If it's over five you give me seven."

"A minute ago you said six."

"A minute ago I wasn't talking about pulling out the scale."

"Never mind your scale. I know your scale. Five is my last offer."

"Five it is. Fishybrain, carry the fish in for the gentleman. Be careful you don't drop her; we don't want no earthquakes. Say Cooky; you hear the one about Dayan lifts up the telephone at the ministry and he hears an operator with an Arab accent..."

"I heard it. Here's your money."

Jonathan came out of the kitchen door, one hand behind his back.

"What you got there?" the cook asked.

"He's got nothing," Yehudah said.

The cook went up the stairs and tried to look behind Jonathan's back. Jonathan kept turning.

"You look like such a fool," Yehudah said to the cook. The cook went inside. Jonathan came down the stairs. Yehudah struck the potato out of his hand.

"Don't steal," he said, adding, a moment later; "Thou shalt not" He drove the jeep up to the top of the driveway, looked left at the sparkling desert and turned right.

Twice a month on alternate Tuesdays, the game warden stopped Yehudah's jeep, looked under the back seat and wrote out a citation for ten pounds.

"Do you think I want them?" Yehuda said to the warden, "the little bastards get stuck in the net; what am I supposed to do give them a funeral and say kaddish for eleven months?"

"Don't shout," the game warden said to Jonathan: "Tell me, Fishybrain; where else can a man rent a bay for twenty pounds a month?"

Yehudah and Jonathan worked together. While Jonathan payed the net out from one corner of the stern, Yehudah brought the boat about so that the net made a semicircle in the sea and came back to the other corner of the stern. Yehudah dropped anchor. He and Jonathan pulled the ropes that drew the lower edge of the net under the fish. They pulled those ropes up and the net closed around the catch. Yehudah leaned over and watched the fish jump.

"Sixty or seventy," he said. "What do you think, Fishybrain?"

Jonathan laughed because some of the little fish were jumping out through the netting.

"Pull it in, Fishybrain." They leaned on the ropes and brought the net up from the sea.

It came up, streaming, shining like a bag of treasure, and the fish smacked their bellies together and sent up a spray that beat the hull like bullets, that stung and blinded.

Yehudah shut his eyes. Sea water ran from his nose into his mouth. The rope trembled in his hands. He was very happy. He screamed at Jonathan.

Jonathan, knowing he would not be heard over the noise of the fish, screamed back.

Together they raised the net almost to the gunwale. They secured the ropes and let the net hang. A good catch lay right alongside, while a poor catch jumped and bumped the hull like a ghost.

Mostly their catches were good. Together they could raise a hundred-fifty kilo without using the winch. They seldom needed to use the winch, none of their nets were very big.

Sometimes a fish jumped from the net onto the deck. If Jonathan found it he threw it into the sea. If Yehudah found it he stepped on its head and dropped it back into the net. Jonathan loved fish. Sometimes Yehudah would be busy piloting the boat and Jonathan would open the top of the net so that when the fish jumped straight and silver in the air they would be left behind.

Sometimes, while the net was still in the water, Jonathan would jump into it. He picked out a fish and held it to his nose. Good morning mister fish.

The fish opened and shut its mouth.

After a while, Yehudah would tell Jonathan to get the hell out of the net.

Smiling, Jonathan pretended not to hear.

"Shark," Yehudah yelled.

Jonathan scrambled up over the side. He stood there trembling. Yehudah laughed.

You shouldn't make a joke like that, Yehudah. That joke wasn't funny.

Sometimes, Jonathan would reach into the net and pick out fish and kiss them on the cheek and throw them away. Yehudah might catch him at it, but Johnathan was fast and ran around and around the deck until Yehudah got tired out.

Once, in fact, Jonathan let a whole catch loose because there were some Blue Weepers in the net and they had been crying. But that time Jonathan stood there waiting to be punished and when Yehudah reached the dock and turned around and saw the net spread out on the water like a towel the tide had pulled off a beach, he beat Jonathan good.

Yehudah hated handling dead fish. For the black market, fish went live from the net into a bucket, for the The Inland Fisherman's Cooperative, the fish had to be dead and weighed and counted and laid out in boxes, one row with fins up and leaning to the right, one row with bellies up and leaning to the left. The stiff fins and tails drew blood. Dead fish slipped out of Yehudah's hands and fell and cut his legs and feet. Afterwards he sat below deck, soaking his hands and feet in buckets of brine.

"With dead fish you have to be very careful," he told Jonathan, "though not with live fish. You can slash your throat with a live fish and it'll close clean, but with dead fish the smallest scratch can put poison in your blood."

Jonathan never cut himself on the fish.

Sometimes, between the layers of fish, Yehudah hid crabs, hoping they would pinch the fingers of the clerks who unpacked boxes at The Inland Fishermen's Cooperative Market.

One Spring, some of the beatniks who lived on the beach bought a net. At night they went out beyond the city limits and worked the shallows in the dark, sorting the fish by the feel of them, keeping only the biggest. At dawn they buried the net in the sand.

During the early morning they went from hotel to hotel carrying the fish in newspaper. They sold cheap. The cooks were delighted. Before noon, the beatniks had sold their whole catch. They went to Onan's cafe to drink.

Yehudah sold no fish that afternoon. At the Queen of Sheba the Swedish faggot came out, pulled the bucket from the jeep, set it on the ground and kicked it. The fish went skittering along the sand.

"It's a boycott," Yehudah told Jonathan "and the only way to fight a boycott is with a strike."

Yehudah and Jonathan took three days off. Yehudah tried to teach Jonathan how to play poker. On the morning of the fourth day, Yehudah gave Jonathan back his clothes and the two of them went out and ran the net twice and threw all the small stuff back into the bay. They ate lunch, took a nap and then loaded the jeep.

Yehudah drove to the back door of a restaurant that specialized in sea food. He sounded the horn. "Take the seat off, Fishybrain." They waited five minutes. Jonathan fanned the flies off the faces of the fish.

"Sleeping," Yehudah said. He drove the jeep to another restaurant, but there too they were ignored. At the following hotel, the cook sent a busboy out to tell them that the parking lot was out front.

Yehudah drove to the Queen of Sheba Hotel. Yehudah walked into the kitchen.

"Nothing today," the Swede said.

Yehudah swallowed a strawberry. "How long," he said, "do you think it's going to take before the American cocksuckers get fed up with chicken chicken chicken?"

The Swede shrugged. Yehudah made him nervous. Yehudah walked around the kitchen. He ate what came into his hand. Finally he went back to the strawberries. He had eaten strawberries only three or four times in his life.

"Not bad," he said of those he found in the plastic bag in the kitchen of the Queen of Sheba. He ate all that were in the bag. The Swede ignored him. On the way out, Yehudah opened the refrigerator to look for more strawberries. He thought he would bring some to Jonathan. He saw the fish.

"Very nice specimens," he said, "you went all the way to Tel Aviv to get them?"

"Please to leave," the Swede said, "you money all the time you bastard."

Yehudah dropped the fish into a five gallon can of floor wax.

He drove to the police station. "There's poachers out there," he said. "I pay my fines. I pay my taxes. I need a couple of good men."

"We don't rent out our men. What's your information?"

"I don't sell my information so cheap as to get nothing for it."

"What do you want?"

"Revenge."

"Revenge is God's business." The cop on duty that day was Lapidus, who had once gone to see Buber when Buber was alive and in Jerusalem.

"Lapidus," Yehudah said, "I don't want to talk philosophy with you. All I want is a couple of men. Why do you have to be such a show-off?"

"OK," said Lapidus, blushing.

Yehudah and Jonathan lived on the boat. It was old but it was a good one. It had no name. It used to have the same name as the woman who had been Yehudah's wife, but she had run off with a Mormon elder who was eighteen years old.

When the policemen go to the boat that night they found Yehudah and Jonathan playing checkers. Yehudah moved the pieces for both. "It's about time," Yehudah said without looking up from the board. He jumped a triple jump. "Ayyy, look what you've done to me, Fishybrain--you've torn my offense to bits." Yehudah was drunk.

They all went up on deck. Yehudah tripped on some rope. The policemen smiled in the darkness. "Maybe we should get the police launch," one of them said. Yehudah went for him and fell into the bay. He was feeling better when Jonathan pulled him out.

Yehudah knew where the poachers would be. He turned off his engine and let the tide carry him toward the shore. When they were only a few hundred feet away from the poachers, Yehudah started up the engine and drove the boat right at them. The beatniks screamed for mercy. Yehudah passed back and forth over their net while the police tried to calm him by threatening him with arrest.

They pulled the poachers on board. "Beatniks," Yehudah said, "just like I thought." He went to the cabin to steer and drink. The policemen came in to get out of the wind. Jonathan went below to sleep. The beatniks threw all of Yehudah's nets overboard.

The next morning they had to fish with an old cotton net with wooden floats. Half the catch had to be set free before they were able to raise the net from the water.

That afternoon, Yehudah took more revenge. He refused to bargain.

"I want fifteen pounds for this one," he said, "I'll see the fish trot before I take a penny less." He was not joking.

Some would not buy. Wait until tomorrow, Yehudah thought. He considered all the days that would come. The future was shining like the eye of a fish.

The sun was still high when Yehudah and Jonathan went out to look for the nets. Four of them they found afloat. The fifth was caught on a ledge of coral thirty feet below the surface.

Yehudah and Jonathan took turns diving. After half-an-hour they almost had it free but then the tide shifted and pushed the net back into the coral. They began again. Sand rose from the floor of the bay and blocked their vision.

They climbed back into the boat and rested. "It's just like you always say," Yehudah told Jonathan, "Enough is too much. Yehudah handed him the knife. "Here, Fishybrain; cut it loose."

Watch me, Yehudah, Jonathan said. He climbed up on the gunwale and dived. Yehudah, exhausted, lay on his back, applauding.

A few minutes later, Yehudah stood up and looked over the side. The net lay in the shadow of the boat. Yehudah turned the boat. The net was surrounded by a cloud of sand.

Yehudah dived and dived. His feet tangled in the net and his skin tore on the coral. He came up and it was night. A moonbeam touched the waves and the boat. Beautiful, he thought. He didn't often notice the moon.

Before midnight, the police launch arrived. The beam on their searchlight cut right through the silt. They saw Jonathan in the net. Lapidaus, who was piloting the launch, began to recite psalms.

Afterwards, Yehudah went away to fish. He was down the gulf as far as Ein Sham. They saw his boat in many places.

He came back one night. No one saw him come in except for that bitter insomniac, Old Man Klein, and he just sat there on his bench, silent as the moon and watched Yehudah dump jeepload after jeepload of fish on the plaza in front of The Inland Fisherman's Cooperative.

It took the clerks three days to sort it out. The police blustered and threatened to arrest the senior class of the high school. No one knew the truth, except for Old Man Klein, silent as the moon.

Daughters

First Place Poem

by Ben Birnbaum

I

It's time, the fathers told me,
Time that you had a daughter
Of your own.

In the playground by the frozen lake
Where I practiced see-saw with a dog
Who thought I was his mother,
I found my daughter.
She was a swan.
I am a crow.

The dog howled,
Outraged by winds that ran up and down,
Not crosswise, and slipped in between
The hind legs of a carnivore.
He ran.
He didn't care to be launched
Into a seamless sky.
He likes to put his nose in cracks.
So do I.
I don't care to fly.
The sort of crow I am
Calls the sun 'Dad',
But from a distance.

I see no point in hovering.
I'd rather sit and have that girl of mine
Push me out for a little flight.
I lean forward, towards the sky,
But fall back, dragging my heels,
Raising hills,
Bringing up worms.
She stands there, her eyes closed.

Eyes, hair, nose, mouth, buttocks-
I counted them all
Quickly before the henhouse mamas
Had a chance to raise their heads
And call me black bastard
With one thing on his mind.
No breasts yet. When they come
I'll count them too;
It's a father's duty
To make sure
A daughter is complete.
But I know when to let go.
When she climbs the ladder
I won't follow and hold her
And bear her down;

What would the cluckling mamas
Say if fat me got caught between
And all the eggs piled up behind
And came rolling down only after I'd grown pure enough
From fasting to pass?
Who knows how long that would take?
Better that I wait here below,
Howling greetings like some crow-
Wiseass, glutton, prince, hoarder-
Come to watch a swan go down to water.

Suddenly you raised your skirt.
I saw your knee,
Skinned entirely,
I stood there, my
Vision wound thin as
One human hair.

II

There are always fathers around,
Hatted like movie detectives,
Polite while smoking filterless cigarettes
Or drinking from a paper bag.
It's cold down there.
Once, one wore electric socks.
Stepped in a puddle (it was Spring)
And went up like a gull goes down.
I stood there, concentrating on pink blossoms.
I felt so guilty. Sometimes,
One steps forward to say to her-
I told you so-though not in words.
Words are too fast
For penguins
Walking circles in the snow.
If I had a fish I would toss it out
Like a thrush will toss a song
Out of his hidden place in the tree.

Icicle fathers by playground borders-
Skinned beneath your clothes and Crows beneath your skin-
Break your long watch,
Rise, black and booming.
Hold us, I and my friends
Your keen white daughters,
In your all-hallowing crow's eye.

Third Place Poem

For Thomas, My Brother

by Peter Charles Delorenzo

That mind I so admired
Came limping back from the Arizona desert.
They had packed you off, shook your hand,
And whether it was the dry, red sun
Or the communal whisperings
That gnawed and fed on your thoughts you can not say—
But when I saw you
Trembling through cigarette after cigarette, Stood behind you and heard the fragments
spit out of twisting lips,
Gripped your hand and felt the blood brawl
in your wrist,
Caught the flitting eyes with my own and what held,
the brief second of dark glinting,
I was frightened with the knowing
That the hell you were living I had yet to see.
What radical vision had unplugged the stops,
Sent you floating in your senses without focus?
Until every footstep, door slam, word, laughter, shouting
Screamed and echoed through the caverned skull;
I wanted to speak the magic words
tear out the devils
But I could hear my words bouncing off the back walls of your mind.
So I stared at the fish tank instead While another kept assuring the eyes not quite yours
"You're at home, now, you're at home."

Vermont Wins Yankee Conference Tennis Championships!

Dick Hilmer (above) and Kirk Dice (right).

Both won their matches during the Yankee Conference Championships.

For story see page 18.

Exam And Commencement Meal Hours

FACILITIES OPEN

	BREAKFAST	LUNCH	DINNER
FRIDAY, MAY 2
Wright	7:00–8:45	11:30–1:30	5:00–6:30
L/L	7:15–9:00	11:30–1:00	5:00–6:30
Waterman		10:50–12:30
H/M		11:00–12:30	4:30–6:00
Den	7:30 a.m. – 8:00 p.m.
Marsh Store	2:00 – 7:00
Simpson Store	2:00 – 6:30
Walters	12:30 p.m. – 10:00 p.m.
SATURDAY, MAY 3
Wright	8:00–8:30	11:00–12:30	5:00–6:30
Marsh		11:00–12:30	5:00–6:30
L/L	8:00–9:00	10:30–12:30	5:00–6:30
Redstone Station	5:30 – 7:00 p.m.
Marsh Store	2:00 – 7:00 p.m.
Simpson Store	Closed
Walters	12:30 p.m. – 10:00 p.m.
SUNDAY, MAY 4
Simpson	8:00–8:30	11:00–12:30	4:30–6:30
L/L	8:00–9:00	11:00–12:30	5:00–6:30
H/M		11:30–1:00
Waterman			5:00–5:45
Den	4:00 p.m. – 8:00 p.m.
Simpson Store	11:00 – 6:30 p.m.
Wright Snackbar	5:00 – 10:30 p.m.
Walters	12:30 – 10:00 p.m.

MONDAY, MAY 5 thru THURSDAY, MAY 8

Wright	7:00–8:45	11:30–1:30	5:00–6:30
L/L	7:15–9:00	11:30–1:00	5:00–7:00
H/M	7:00–8:30	11:00–12:30	4:30–6:00
Waterman		10:50–12:30	4:30–5:45
Den	7:30 a.m. – 9:30 p.m.
Walters	12:30 – 10:00 p.m.
Simpson Store	2:00 – 6:30 p.m.
Wright Snackbar	7:30 – 10:30 p.m. (Wed. is last Day)

FRIDAY, MAY 9
Wright	7:00–8:45	11:30–1:30	5:00–6:30
L/L	7:15–9:00	11:00–12:30	5:00–7:00
Waterman		10:50–12:30
Den	7:30 – 2:00
Simpson Store	2:00 – 6:30
SATURDAY, MAY 10
Wright	7:00–8:00	11:30–12:30	5:30–6:00
L/L	7:00–8:00	12:00–1:00	5:00–5:30
Simpson Store	2:00 – 6:00 p.m.

SUNDAY, MAY 11

L/L (Brunch Only) 11:30 – 12:30

Coupons are not valid after this meal

MONDAY, MAY 12 thru THURSDAY, MAY 15

All Regular Dining Halls Closed

Given Cafeteria 7:30–10:30; 11:15–1:00 (Cash Only)

Faculty Dining Room 8:30 – 3:30 (Cash Only)

FRIDAY, MAY 16

Given Cafeteria 7:30–10:30; 11:15–1:00 (Cash Only)

Faculty Dining Room 8:30–3:30 (Cash Only)

Wright – Dinner Only 5:00–6:00 (Cash or pre-paid special meal ticket) $2.75

Seniors can arrange to pre-pay for Commencement meal tickets prior to May 10th at Simpson Dining Hall

SATURDAY, MAY 17
Wright	7:30–8:30 $1.75	12:00–1:00 $2.25	5:00–6:00 $2.75
SUNDAY, MAY 18
Wright	8:00–9:00

There Were No Winners, But At Least Some Finished

Due to the cancellation of the raft race, it would be unfair to announce any winners since everyone didn't get a try at the river. But due to too many phone calls, I have listed below the times that were taken. Unfortunately not all the rafts clearly displayed their number so even if you finished your raft may not be listed. I did not separate the rafts in their separate class but the leaders in each class at the time of the cancellation were as follows:

MALE – William Forrester – Tau Epsilon Phi :41

MIXED – Jerome Smith – Last Chance :47

FEMALE – Melanie Maiola – Alpha Chi Omega :49

The times, raft numbers, and names of all the raft entrants

RAFT NUMBER – NAME – TIME TO GET DOWN THE WINOOSKI

20 – William Forrester – :41
13 – Jerome Smith – :47
55 – Melanie Maiola – :49
70 – Howard Atherton – :51
14 – Jay Riedinger – :51
3 – David Ainsworth – :55
9 – Craig Buscemi – :55
1 – Daniel Tomasetti – :57
53 – William Bartlett – 1:01
16 – Dan Nietupski – 1:01
60 – Gerard Good – 1:02
48 – Raymond Rossi – 1:03
38 – Stan Smith – 1:03
76 – G. Dana Baron – 1:05
68 – James McGinnis – 1:05
52 – Michael Rosenthal – 1:05
15 – Paul Cramer – 1:06
43 – Roy Hatch – 1:06
39 – Robert Murray – 1:06
29 – David Marchi – 1:07
34 – William Boll – 1:10
10 – Flash Gordan – 1:10
42 – Alan Conrad – 1:11
28 – Duane Weber – 1:12
95 – Dr. Michael Sinclair – 1:13
2 – Tony Blake – 1:16
8 – Alan Farwell – 1:16
32 – David Shiveley – 1:16
21 – Scott Kieper – 1:17
99 – Nelson Shepard – 1:17
57 – Paul Thorington – 1:17
97 – Gary McLain – 1:18
64 – Walter Applegate – 1:20
47 – Brian Dupraz – 1:20
44 – Tom Hahn – 1:21
69 – Becky Dickensen – 1:23
31 – James White – 1:28
11 – Steven Payea – 1:30
89 – Charlie Booth – 1:32
100 – Nelson Shepard – 1:37
41 – Bob Genest – 1:40
30 – Scott Sartorius – 1:41
24 – Price Hutchins – 2:35
63 – Raymond Beaudoin – 2:37
7 – Douglas Howe – 2:54

Although this event is said to be very dangerous, it can be safe if one follows the rules as proven by Mr. Hatch and his crew member. There are a few people that I feel need some recognition for doing a great job at the raft race. First of all the rescue teams: UVM, St. Michaels' and Waterbury's. The Washington and the Chittenden County Police did a great job in holding down the massive traffic that appeared that day. The State Police also had its hands full and handled it with great expedience.

I also feel that the officials at the race haven't gotten enough recognition by the press. These officials started at 6:00 a.m. and didn't stop that night until 7:30. They are the people responsible for getting the race started and running smoothly. Unfortunately the race had to be cancelled because of reasons we had no control of.

THE OFFICIALS

Sue Babcock, Nancy Babcock, Ken Bartlett, Wayne Bayer, Jay Bigman, Howard Burrows, Cathy Dell, John Cooper, Bill Flanagan, Lou Haggerty, Ed Keagle, Dave Mainer, Dave Welborn, Lynn Bitzer, Kate Daily Cooper, Kate Root.

I'm always sure that I have missed someone, hopefully I didn't. Of course if you have read any articles on the raft race one name comes up all the time and that is William Root.

I feel if it hadn't been for him the race wouldn't have even started. He put in so much work that I will never be able to thank him enough. There is one last person that I would like to thank and that is Jeff Thaxter. He alone handled the finish area and did one hell of a job, he put in a lot of time before and even after the race was all over.

Thanks Everyone

THE SPO SCENE

by Norm Robinson

Once again a University of Vermont tea season. The UVM tennis team walked thr Conference Championships this past weeken with a solid 24-15 win over second place UM out of six singles and sweeping the dou achievement for such a young team. Captain the only senior.

Special recognition should go to Hal G the racquetmen. He has built a team based they continue to astound followers of tennis

John Koerner and Tim Beal, both freshmen fantastic season as well as many other play Beal were one of the pairs that won in the d won his singles match in the style, 6-2, 6-2.

Kirk Dice and Dick Hilmer were also win competition and both will be main cogs machine next year. Jay Moorhead should a for his efforts over the four years. They've and I salute them and the entire team. (For This being the last issue of the Cynic subscribed to the Vermont Summer Cynic) I all a merry summer and hope to see you University and in "The Sports Scene"

PFG - Sched

Patrick-Forbush - Gutterson Recreation Sch
Weekend of May 2, 3 and 4
FRIDAY, MAY 2
GYM – Faculty-Staff none.
POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
TENNIS – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
SATURDAY, MAY 3
GYM – Students none.
POOL – Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.
TENNIS Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.
TRACK – Students 7–10:30 p.m.
SUNDAY, MAY 4
GYM – Students none.
POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
TENNIS – Students 1–5 p.m.
track - Students 1–5 p.m.
HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS. B
Call 656-3069.
All recreation may be superseded by special events.
MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL – Students 8:30 – 10:30 p.m.
All other facilities – Students 7–8 p.
USE OF ATHLETIC FACILITIES AFTE
The regular recreational hours for staff will be continued through the end. The pool will be open to faculty and hour, and to students 8:30 to 10:30 th evening, May 2, will be the last facu evening recreation period.
After May 8, the facilities (except th a.m. to 5 p.m. for students, faculty), and Friday. The pool will only be open fro ID's must be presented when requested.
New recreation hours will be post Summer School.

Intramurals

KAPPA ALPHA THETA defeated DAVIS 2 for the WOMEN'S ALL-CAMPUS VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

Playing for KAPPA ALPHA THETA were: Mardi Buckley, Polly Cheshire, Ruth Feldman, Lisa Warms, Sue Brooks, Pam Marshall, Cindy Cotton, Barbara Krakauer, Robbie Kleinman, Anne Ainsworth, Gayle Garland, Nancy Danielson, Jackie Force, Janet Burbank, Carol Desormeau, Robin Gallagher, Kathy Ryan, Anne Mahoney, Kathy Villemaire.

Tennis

Women's Intramural Tennis (doubles) Tournament Winners:

Nancy Haydock/Judy Ingalls (Med '78) defeated Mary Calkins/Nancy Lawless (McAuley Hall) for the All-Campus Championship.

"Ziggy's" Burlingt
BURLIN
The M
101 Church Street
CIGERETTES
Leather goods Jewel

THE SPORTS SCENE

by North Rotarian

Once again a University of Vermont team has had a great season. The UVM tennis team walked through the Yankee Conference Championships this past weekend, and came out with a solid 24-15 win over second place UMass. Winning three out of six singles and sweeping the doubles is quite an achievement for such a young team. Captain Jay Moorhead is the only senior.

Special recognition should go to Hal Greig, the coach of the racquetmen. He has built a team based on youth and yet they continue to astound followers of tennis.

John Koerner and Tim Beal, both freshman, have had a fantastic season as well as many other players. Koerner and Beal were one of the pairs that won in the doubles. John also won his singles match in fine style, 6-2,6-2.

Kirk Dice and Dick Hilmer were also winners in the singles competition and both will be main cogs in the Catamount machine next year. Jay Moorhead should also be singled out for his efforts over the four years. They've done a great job and I salute them and the entire team. (For all that's worth).

This being the last issue of the Cynic (unless you have subscribed to the Vermont Summer Cynic) I want to wish you all a merry summer and hope to see you next year in the University and in "The Sports Scene".

PFG - Schedule

Patrick-Forbush-Gutterson Recreation Schedule
Weekend of May 2, 3 and 4

FRIDAY, MAY 2
GYM – Faculty-Staff none.
POOL – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m. (7–8 under 15)
TENNIS – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.
TRACK – Faculty-Staff 7–10:30 p.m.

SATURDAY, MAY 3
GYM – Students none.
POOL – Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.m.
TENNIS Students 1–5 and 7–10:30 p.m.
TRACK – Students 7–10:30 p.m.

SUNDAY, MAY 4
GYM – Students none.
POOL – Students 1–5 p.m.
TENNIS – Students 1–5 p.m.
track - Students 1–5 p.m.

HANDBALL AND SQUASH COURTS: By appointment only. Call 656-3069.

All recreation may be superseded by variety activities or special events.

MONDAY through THURSDAY
POOL – Students 8:30 – 10:30 p.m.
All other facilities – Students 7–8 p.m.

USE OF ATHLETIC FACILITIES AFTER EXAM PERIOD

The regular recreational hours for students, faculty, and staff will be continued through the end of the exam period. The pool will be open to faculty and staff during the noon hour, and to students 8:30 to 10:30 through May 8. Friday evening, May 2, will be the last faculty-staff and family evening recreation period.

After May 8, the facilities (except the pool) will be open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for students, faculty, and staff Monday through Friday. The pool will only be open from 12 noon to 1 p.m. ID's must be presented when requested.

New recreation hours will be posted with the start of Summer School.

Women's LacrosseTeam Loses Two Tough Games

by Debi Bloom

The University of Vermont women's lacrosse team traveled down to Castleton State College on Tuesday (April 22). In a rough stick-checking lacrosse battle, UVM bowed to Castleton 7-6. With a male coach, the Castleton St. team plays a rough attack-oriented lacrosse game. The Catamounts, co-captained by juniors Lynn Larosa and Anne Margolis, played a defensive first half. Carey Haskell had two important first half goals along with Bev Blair who added another score for the Vermont team. The half-time score was tied at 3-3. In the second half lacrosse action the two teams fought to a 6-6 score. Julie Houboult scored a second-half Catamount goal while freshman star Carey Haskell added 2 more goals to her 4-goal total. With less than two minutes of play remaining in the game, Castleton scored with a shoulder-high direct shot on UVM goalie Polly Peterson. The Castleton goalie along with Vermont's Peterson played equally impressive games in the nets.

On Thursday, April 24, Middlebury's B-Team lacrosse squad traveled to UVM for a scrimmage. The Catamounts suffered a hard loss to the B-team, 11-7. Sharp passing ability and good teamwork were Middlebury's winning assets.

Three more games are scheduled for the women's lacrosse team. After a meeting with the Middlebury A team on Monday (20), the UVM team will have two home games to end off their short Spring season. The game with Castleton on Thurs. (May 1) should be filled with exciting lacrosse action. Come support the UVM team.

Rugby – One of the roughest games in the world. SPS Photo R. R. Lew

Women's Softball Wins Two, Loses One

The UVM Women's Softball team, coached by Sally Guerette have played three games. In their first game on April 18, UVM played a Green Mountain College (away) team which included 3 men. UVM lost this game 5-6 in a close contest. Pitching this game were Nancy Condit and Wendy Pierson. Pam Packard, at second base, played a fine defensive game. Offensively Barb Pulling (short stop) led UVM with a single, a double, and a base on balls.

In their second game on April 22, UVM beat St. Mike's 22-4 at home. In this game the pitchers were Wendy Pierson, Nancy Condit, and Gail LeBaron. It was a good all-round defensive effort. Offensively UVM had 21 hits, to 6 hits for St. Mike's.

On Saturday April 26, UVM beat Johnson State College (home game) 10-3 and 4-0 in a double header. Pitching in the first game for UVM was Barb Pulling, with an excellent defensive effort by short stop Sharon Farquaharson. Sheryl Grant (catcher) had a triple, and Sharon Farquharson (short stop) and Wendy Pierson (1st base) each had 2 singles. In the second game pitcher Wendy Pierson had her first shut-out of the season with a one hitter. Wendy Pierson had a double, with singles by Pam Packard, Barb Pulling, Barb Powers, and Lynn Delbianco. The women's softball team is now 2-1 with 3 games left.

Monday, April 28 – Plymouth State – Away – 3:00
Thursday, May 1 – Castleton State – Home – 3:30
Saturday, May 3 – St Mike's – Away – 2:00

Sports Clinics

Spectacular Sports Clinics!!

These are open to the public, but could fit nicely around your work schedule.

ADULT GOLF CLINIC
May 13, 15, 20, 22 and 27, 6:30 – 9:00 p.m. Limited to 20 participants. Fee $25.00. Deadline is Monday, May 12. Contact Janice Lange, 3240.

ADULT TENNIS CLINIC
May 12, 14, 16, 19, and 21. Two sessions are available, 9:00–11:00 a.m. and 6:30–8:30 p.m. Join soon, each session limited. Fee is $25.00. Contact Hal Greig, 3070.

BICYCLE CLINICS I AND II
Clinic I: May 19 and 21, 7–9 p.m., May 24–25, overnight. Limited to 16 cyclists.
Clinic II: June 2 and 4, 7–9 p.m., June 7–8, overnight. Limited to 20 cyclists. Fee: Vermont resident, $35.00; Non-resident, $48.00. Additional fees for meals and shelter. Ten-speed bicycles available for rent for the week, $20.00. Contact Summer Session office to register, 2085.

Rugby Team Downs Montrreal

The University of Vermont Rugby Team, showing signs of steady improvement, won both its A and B games against the Montreal Irish this past Saturday, as the Cats gained revenge for last fall's 9-3 defeat by the same club.

The A team was able to contain the Irish by a score of 14 to 6. Playing against the wind in the first half, UVM scored first when Marcel Bergeron stole the ball from the Irish center at UVM's 20 and raced seventy yards before passing the ball to center Tom Sawyer who scored a 4 point try (touchdown); Bergeron then added a two point conversion. The Irish were able to use the wind and keep the ball in UVM's end of the field, but were unable to score because of strong defensive plays from UVM's forwards and backs Jack Long and Paul Hodlin.

The second half saw UVM score early when the forwards were able to advance into the Irish half of the field, with wing forward Pat Freeman bringing the ball to the goal line, and hooker Steve Farrar falling on the ball to score another 4 point try. While the Irish scored 6 points late in the game, UVM was able to put the game out of reach when Marcel Bergeron scored a final try making the score 14-6.

The B team was able to score a 9-0 victory. The first score came when Marc Bayuk scored a 4 point try and Pat Freeman, playing his second game, added the 2 point conversion. Bayuk also had played earlier in the day for the UVM Lacross team and scored two goals. Dave Johnson added UVM's final points with a 3 point penalty kick. UVM will close out its season on Saturday, May 2, against St. Michael's. The game will be held at St. Michael's North Campus field, next to Camp Johnson.

Baseball Club Beats RPI and St. Mike's

by Deb Oakley

On Tuesday, April 22, the UVM baseball club journeyed to Troy, N.Y. to play RPI and returned home with a 10-2 victory under their belts.

RPI was the first to get on the scoreboard with a lone run in the first inning. UVM came back in the third to tie up the game when Scratch Sadler singled, stole second, advanced to third on Rick Lavin's single and came home as Duke Snodgrass was put out on an attempted steal.

UVM scored again in the fifth inning when Glen Bolster tripled and Scratch Sadler's sacrifice fly to right field brought him home. The Catamounts raised the score to 3-1 in the sixth when Jim Edgerton singled, stole second, went to third on Rick Lavin's sacrifice and scored on a wild pitch.

RPI got their final run in the bottom of the sixth with a single and three errors.

The seventh inning was the big inning for Vermont. Rick Lavin walked, Ed Barry singled, Chic Chichanis singled home Lavin, Tony Skorput singled home Barry, and Chris Raleigh singled home Chichanic. Glen Bolster singled home Skorput and Christensen came home on a wild pitch. Bolster hit the plate on Jim Edgerton's sacrifice bunt and Duke Snodgrass walked and scored on an error.

This proved to be the final scoring of the game. This victory left the UVM diamond men with a record of 3-0. Tony Segali was the winning pitcher allowing two walks, six hits, and striking out eight.

UVM – St. Mikes

On April 23, St. Mikes ventured to Centennial Field to meet the UVM baseball team and was handed a 10-5 defeat.

The Catamounts held St. Mikes scoreless in the first inning and then came alive in the bottom half. Jim Edgerton reached first on an error and Rick Lavin walked. Edgerton scored on a double by Tony Skorput and then Jeff Skorput singled home Lavin. After a walk to Gary Orloff, Jeff Sadler smashed a solid fly to deep right for a three-run home run.

Jeff Skorput came across the plate again in the third after he walked, stole second and came home on an error on the St. Mike's pitcher.

St. Mikes finally got on the scoreboard in the fourth when they took advantage of two Vermont errors and a pair of base hits. Three men crossed the plate before the Purple Knights could be stopped.

UVM came back in the bottom of the fourth with two runs when Jim Edgerton singled and Rick Lavin's single brought him home. Ed Barry got on by a fielder's choice, stole second and then came home on a St. Mike's error.

In the sixth inning St. Mikes scored another run as the result of an error and a single to left field. But the Cats came back with a run in their own half as well.

Ed Barry singled and Tony Skorput's single brought him across the plate. This proved to be the last Catamount score of the game but St. Mikes added one more in the seventh to round out the scoring. They could not get up enough momentum however to defeat the strong UVM team. Vermont now stands at 4-0 on the season.

The winning pitcher was Phil Brannon who went seven innings allowing eight hits, five runs, and four walks.

Footmen Lose To Maine

It was a cold, rainy and windy April 26, as the UVM Track Team took on the Black Bears of the University of Maine in Orono, Maine. The Cats traveled back to Burlington with a loss, 84-69, but the many outstanding individual performances brightened up the day.

Mike Bilza won the three weight events, all with exceptional throws: the hammer traveled 171'11" and Mike put the shot 49'9", both meet records. He flung the discus 141'6".

Tommy Harrington also had an amazing day, qualifying for the New Englands in the 220 (22.2) and in the 440 (50.5). He won both these events on an especially tough day for sprinters.

Pete Wieth and Mike Berry tied for first place in the mile with a time of 4:22.4. Mike went on to set a UVM outdoor record in the two-mile with a clocking of 9:28.6. Peter ran the half-mile in 1:57.9 to take the event.

Jeff Kaufman of the Cats won the 120 yard high hurdles in 16.3 and went on to finish second in the intermediates in 59.4.

The Cats will host the Yankee Conference Outdoor Track Championships this Saturday, May 3 on the Archie T. Post Field, featuring some of the best track talent in New England.

Intramurals

KAPPA ALPHA THETA defeated DAVIS 2 for the WOMEN'S ALL-CAMPUS VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Playing for KAPPA ALPHA THETA were:

Mardi Buckley, Polly Cheshire, Ruth Feldman, Lisa Warms, Sue Brooks, Pam Marshall, Cindy Cotton, Barbara Krakauer, Robbie Kleinman, Anne Ainsworth, Gayle Garland, Nancy Danielson, Jackie Force, Janet Burbank, Carol Desormeau, Robin Gallagher, Kathy Ryan, Anne Mahoney, Kathy Villemaire.

Tennis

Women's Intramural Tennis (doubles) Tournament Winners.

Nancy Haydock/Judy Ingalls (Med '78) defeated Mary Calkins/Nancy Lawless (McAuley Hall) for the All-Campus Championship.

Letterman's Dinner

The annual Senior Letterman's Dinner was held this past Sunday evening at the Harris-Millis dining hall. Coaches, athletes, and other athletic personnel and members of the press had an enjoyable evening while several awards were presented.

A special presentation was given to Ed Bartlett for his loyal work and devotion to the University and the Athletic department. Bernard Palmer, basketball star for UVM over the past four seasons, was presented with the Senior Award, which goes to the outstanding senior each year.

Mike Berry was awarded for his highest academic achievements as an athlete. Mike has a 3.75 grade point average.

Petter Kongsli, the number one ski jumper on the team this past winter, was recipient of the Seaman's Award, while basketball manager, Ray Kraut, was also honored as he received the Managerial Award for the second straight year.

EXXON
Ralph's Exxon
on Route 7 Shelburne Road and Interstate 189
Complete Auto Service
Expert Tune up and Repairs
All Work Fully Guaranteed
Free pickup and delivery
Phone: 862-9200

"Ziggy's" Burlington Shoe repair "Smoke Stack"
BURLINGTON PLACE
"The Mini Mall"
101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401
864-9555
CIGERETTES: 43¢ PACK, $3.89 CARTON
Leather goods Jewelry candles clothing Jokes

SENIORS:
Graduate to a fine meal
at the Sizzling Steak
SIZZLING STEAK
THE BEST STEAKS!
GREAT SEAFOOD TOO!
Salad Bar Included with Dinner

Baked Stuffed Shrimp	4.95
Baked Filet of Sole	3.95
Fried Scallops	3.75
Surf and Turf, a combination of baked stuffed shrimp and tenderloin steak	6.75
Golden Brown Fried Chicken	3.75
8 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip Steak	3.99
12 oz. Choice Sirloin Strip Steak	4.99
10 oz. Choice Top Butt Sirloin Steak	5.99
8 oz. Chopped Sirloin Steak	2.99

1218 WILLISTON ROAD
SO. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

T-SHIRTS ARE IN
AND ON SALE FOR JUST $3.00
AT: Boyd's Music Studio, 206 Main Street and Bailey's Music Rooms, 88 Church Street (Supply is Limited)

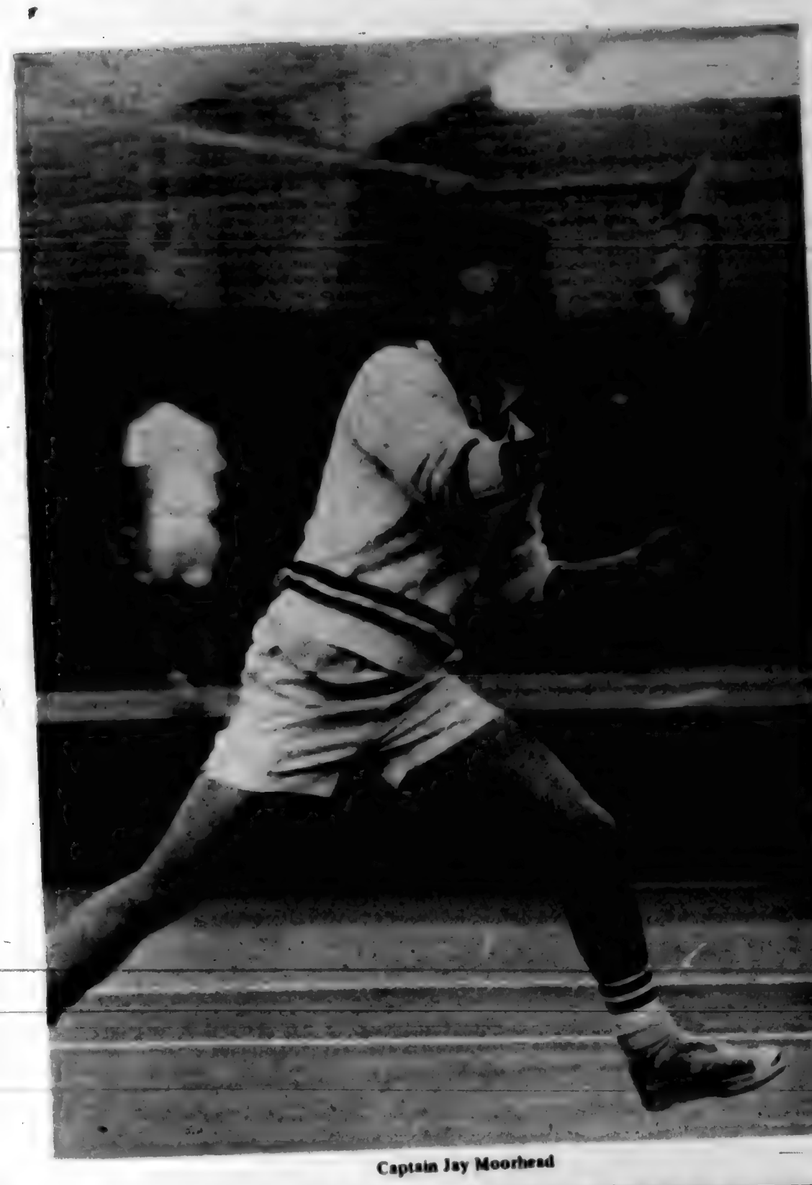
sports

Tennis Team Captures YanCon Title



Captain Jay Moorhead

Behind the strength of their doubles teams, The University of Vermont tennis team destroyed the rest of the field this past weekend as they captured their second straight Yankee Conference Championship.

The Cats swept the doubles matches and this combined with a standoff in the singles enabled the racquetmen to pull off a 24–15 win over second place Massachusetts. New Hampshire finished third with 10–9.

Cross Court, site of the championships, was good for three Vermonters; Dick Hilmer, Kirk Dice and John Koerner. Each won his singles match with comparative ease.

In the first flight, Jay Moorehead lost a tough match to Bob Schpeiser, of UMass, by scores of 6–4, 5–7, 1–6 and although the Vermont captain lost, he had to be proud of his teammates performances.

Kirk Dice defeated Chris Post of UMass, 6–4, 6–3, while Hilmer, just back from an injury soundly defeated Bill Karol 6-2, 6-3. Karol is also from the University of Massachusetts.

Flight four had Tom Lenci facing a tough opponent from Massachusetts and lost, 3–6, 6–7.

Freshman John Koerner, from Shelburne, Vermont, chalked up a tough win over Marc Oulette, also from Massachusetts. Earlier in the year Koerner lost to Oulette at Gutterson Field House.

The final singles match saw Scott Turban of Glencoe, Illonois, lose by scores of 3–6, 6–4, 2–6.

New Hampshire took care of Massachusett's chances when Andy Harrison and Scott Naylor defeated the UMass number one team. 6-2. Hilmer played extremely well, firing his serves and keeping the UNH 6–2. Hilmer played extremely well, firing his serves and keeping the UNH team off–balance. Moorhead played his consistently good game, and scored heavily with cross–court shots.

In the second doubles match, Dice and Lenci defeated Mark Noyes and Steve Krause of New Hampshire, 6-3, 6-2. And Koerner and Tim Beal had the toughest time as they beat their opponents 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Moorhead is the only senior on this year's team and though the loss will hurt the team, things look bright for next year. His leadership and constant play will be sorely missed.

Lacrosse Team Wins Three

Gary Watts (No. 24) bangs one home for UVM. SPS Photo: W. Busby

The UVM stickmen have had a very successful week. They opened up last Thursday against a powerful Plymouth State team who have been Colonial Division Champs. Plymouth State jumped out to an early lead and the first quarter ended with Plymouth on top 2-1. The rest of the game turned out to be a real seesaw battle. Plymouth increased their lead to 5-2, but a hard-nosed UVM team battled back to a 5-5 tie.

At this point two costly UVM penalties put the Cats down by two men. Both excellent defensive play and stand up goal-tending by Chuck Cheketoff enabled the Cats to kill the penalties. But Plymouth jumped ahead with two quick scores in the third quarter and UVM was faced with a 7-5 score with only 15 minutes to go. After a quick two minute breather and the Cats came out flying. They hit the net for four goals and held Plymouth to only one. Curt Duane scoring his first goal of the season broke the 7-7 tie. The final score was UVM 9, Plymouth 8. The high scorer for UVM was Gil Low who had a hat trick.

On Saturday, UVM took the field against New Hampshire College in front of a large crowd at the Red Square Affair. UVM soundly trounced New Hampshire 10-1. Trip Shell, Jamie Lang, and Gary Watts scored three goals apiece in the very one-sided game. Outstanding performances were also put in by Steve Fitzgerald, Jeff Davis, Mark Bayuck and "Professor" Bill Henry. The Blue midfield of Peter Drakos, Bruce Moffat and Tom Keenan also gave a good showing.

The UVM stickmen began their final four games, (all away), Monday by defeating a young Lyndon State team 12-4. The game lacked excitement due to the balance of talent in favor of the Cats.

UVM rallied early in the game with scores by Jeff Davis, "Bun" Watts, Barry Dombrow and Tom Humphries. The second quarter ended with two scores by Spike Jenkins, and one by Curt Duane. Lyndon also managed to net one in the second quarter. With the game under control, the Cats began to look ahead towards Norwich on Wednesday by coming out of the half-time with new plays to practice for Wednesday.

The third quarter saw scores by George Varga, Spike Jenkins and Curt Duane. Lyndon's cream attackman, Manson, scored twice that quarter. By the fourth quarter the Cats shuffled positions. The Blue midfield took over, George Varga went in the goal and goalies Chuck Cheketoff and Mark Stevenson ran midfield. Fourth quarter scoring was by Tom Keenan, a defenseman, and Mark Stevenson. The Cats now own a 7-3 record as of this writing.

Ski Captains Named

Billy Rathbone and Stan Dunklee have been named captains of the University of Vermont Ski Team for 1975–76.

The two Vermonters, Rathbone a graduate from Rice Memorial High School and Dunklee from Brattleboro Union High, were named last Thursday at the ski team's dinner.

Dunklee will captain the Nordic team and Rathbone will lead the alpine squad.

Also announced was that Gail Sussin of St. Albans was the most valuable skier for the UVM women's squad and Gail Labaron had been the most improved.

Elizabeth Howard was the most improved member of the cross country team and Janet Reynolds was MVP.

Dick Erdman, the man Rathbone replaces as captain, was the most valuable member of the men's alpine team and Senior Chris Brown, the most improved.

Chip LaCasse, the men's head coach, announced Dunklee as the MVP of the nordic team and Joe Lamb, the most improved.

Dunklee replaces Petter Kongsli who spoke for an extended effort to construct further facilities and interest.

Kongsli is expected to return to his native Norway to work for an engineering firm and try for the Olympic jumping team.

Receiving special mention as outgoing seniors were Kongsli, Erdman, Brown, Dave Dodge and Tom Oddy. Oddy will be the Nordic coach at St. Lawrence University next season.

Chris Brown will return to help Cochran with the alpine team and Dodge has another year of eligibility and he may return for another semester.

The UVM ski team finished second in the NCAA's this winter.

Keep In Touch This Summer
THE VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC

What happens to Burlington in the summer? Contrary to popular belief it is not used as a set by Hollywood producers to film a real live ghost town. Nor is it transformed into a tourist trap where vacationers walk in formation eating fresh vegetables and drinking maple syrup. In the summer the Burlington area becomes a paradise where the sun has been known to shine four days a week.

Yes, Burlington lives in the summer and this summer no matter where you are you will be able to read about it. For the first time in the history of journalism at U.V.M., we are happy to announce the publication of the Vermont Summer Cynic.

The Vermont Summer Cynic will differ from the Vermont Cynic in several important ways. It will be an exciting, readable, relevant newspaper geared to report not only the news that affects its readership, but all facets of life in Burlington. We will stress high quality not only in our stories, but also our photographs and layout to insure that the Summer Cynic will be intellectually rewarding as well as visually exciting.

Important decisions, festivals, new student experiences and events will face the UVM campus this summer. They will all be covered along with articles on historical sights on campus, On the Road correspondence, in-depth features and interviews, pictorials and poetry. Keep in touch this summer, read the Vermont Summer Cynic.

Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

SUBSCRIPTIONS: $1.50

SUBSCIBE TO THE VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC
@$1.50- make checks payable to the VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC

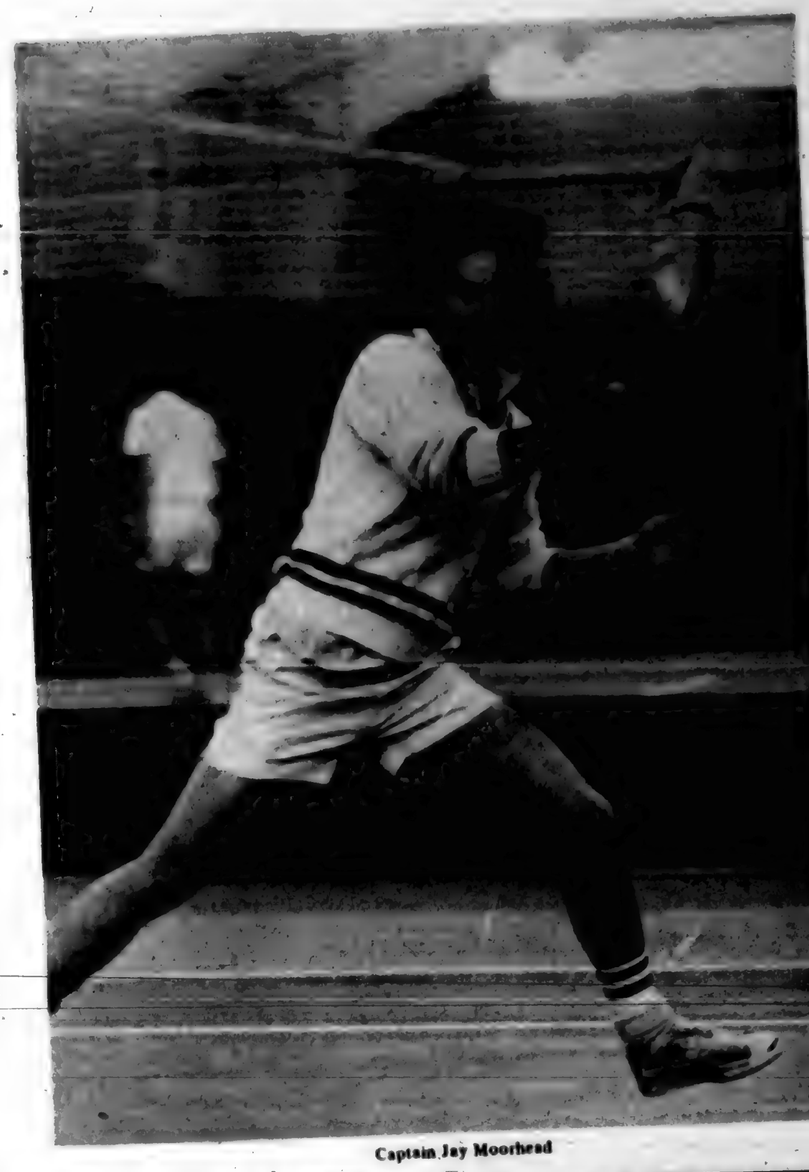
Name _____
Street _____
Town _____
State _____ Zip

Bring this form and $1.50 to the Student Information Desk, Billings Center

Subscriptions entitle you to six dynamite issues delivered where ever you are!!!!

sports

Tennis Team Captures YanCon Title



Captain Jay Moorhead

Behind the strength of their doubles teams, The University of Vermont tennis team destroyed the rest of the field this past weekend as they captured their second straight Yankee Conference Championship.

The Cats swept the doubles matches and this combined with a standoff in the singles enabled the racquetmen to pull off a 24–15 win over second place Massachusetts. New Hampshire finished third with 10–9.

Cross Court, site of the championships, was good for three Vermonters; Dick Hilmer, Kirk Dice and John Koerner. Each won his singles match with comparative ease.

In the first flight, Jay Moorehead lost a tough match to Bob Schpeiser, of UMass, by scores of 6–4, 5–7, 1–6 and although the Vermont captain lost, he had to be proud of his teammates performances.

Kirk Dice defeated Chris Post of UMass, 6–4, 6–3, while Hilmer, just back from an injury soundly defeated Bill Karol 6-2, 6-3. Karol is also from the University of Massachusetts.

Flight four had Tom Lenci facing a tough opponent from Massachusetts and lost, 3–6, 6–7.

Freshman John Koerner, from Shelburne, Vermont, chalked up a tough win over Marc Oulette, also from Massachusetts. Earlier in the year Koerner lost to Oulette at Gutterson Field House.

The final singles match saw Scott Turban of Glencoe, Illonois, lose by scores of 3–6, 6–4, 2–6.

New Hampshire took care of Massachusett's chances when Andy Harrison and Scott Naylor defeated the UMass number one team, 6-2. Hilmer played extremely well, firing his serves and keeping the UNH 6–2. Hilmer played extremely well, firing his serves and keeping the UNH team off–balance. Moorhead played his consistently good game, and scored heavily with cross–court shots.

In the second doubles match, Dice and Lenci defeated Mark Noyes and Steve Krause of New Hampshire, 6-3, 6-2. And Koerner and Tim Beal had the toughest time as they beat their opponents 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Moorhead is the only senior on this year's team and though the loss will hurt the team, things look bright for next year. His leadership and constant play will be sorely missed.

Lacrosse Team Wins Three

Gary Watts (No. 24) bangs one home for UVM. SPS Photo: W. Busby

The UVM stickmen have had a very successful week. They opened up last Thursday against a powerful Plymouth State team who have been Colonial Division Champs. Plymouth State jumped out to an early lead and the first quarter ended with Plymouth on top 2-1. The rest of the game turned out to be a real seesaw battle. Plymouth increased their lead to 5-2, but a hard-nosed UVM team battled back to a 5-5 tie.

At this point two costly UVM penalties put the Cats down by two men. Both excellent defensive play and stand up goal-tending by Chuck Cheketoff enabled the Cats to kill the penalties. But Plymouth jumped ahead with two quick scores in the third quarter and UVM was faced with a 7-5 score with only 15 minutes to go. After a quick two minute breather and the Cats came out flying. They hit the net for four goals and held Plymouth to only one. Curt Duane scoring his first goal of the season broke the 7-7 tie. The final score was UVM 9, Plymouth 8. The high scorer for UVM was Gil Low who had a hat trick.

On Saturday, UVM took the field against New Hampshire College in front of a large crowd at the Red Square Affair. UVM soundly trounced New Hampshire 10-1. Trip Shell, Jamie Lang, and Gary Watts scored three goals apiece in the very one-sided game. Outstanding performances were also put in by Steve Fitzgerald, Jeff Davis, Mark Bayuck and "Professor" Bill Heney. The Blue midfield of Peter Drakos, Bruce Moffat and Tom Keenan also gave a good showing.

The UVM stickmen began their final four games, (all away), Monday by defeating a young Lyndon State team 12-4. The game lacked excitement due to the balance of talent in favor of the Cats.

UVM rallied early in the game with scores by Jeff Davis, "Bun" Watts, Barry Dombrow and Tom Humphries. The second quarter ended with two scores by Spike Jenkins, and one by Curt Duane. Lyndon also managed to net one in the second quarter. With the game under control, the Cats began to look ahead towards Norwich on Wednesday by coming out of the half-time with new plays to practice for Wednesday.

The third quarter saw scores by George Varga, Spike Jenkins and Curt Duane. Lyndon's crease attackman, Manson, scored twice that quarter. By the fourth quarter the Cats shuffled positions. The Blue midfield took over. George Varga went in the goal and goalies Chuck Cheketoff and Mark Stevenson ran midfield. Fourth quarter scoring was by Tom Keenan, a defenseman, and Mark Stevenson. The Cats now own a 7-3 record as of this writing.

Ski Captains Named

Billy Rathbone and Stan Dunklee have been named captains of the University of Vermont Ski Team for 1975–76.

The two Vermonters, Rathbone a graduate from Rice Memorial High School and Dunklee from Brattleboro Union High, were named last Thursday at the ski team's dinner.

Dunklee will captain the Nordic team and Rathbone will lead the alpine squad.

Also announced was that Gail Susslin of St. Albans was the most valuable skier for the UVM women's squad and Gail Labaron had been the most improved.

Elizabeth Howard was the most improved member of the cross country team and Janet Reynolds was MVP.

Dick Erdman, the man Rathbone replaces as captain, was the most valuable member of the men's alpine team and Senior Chris Brown, the most improved.

Chip LaCasse, the men's head coach, announced Dunklee as the MVP of the nordic team and Joe Lamb, the most improved.

Dunklee replaces Petter Kongsli who spoke for an extended effort to construct further facilities and interest.

Kongsli is expected to return to his native Norway to work for an engineering firm and try for the Olympic jumping team.

Receiving special mention as outgoing seniors were Kongsli, Erdman, Brown, Dave Dodge and Tom Oddy. Oddy will be the Nordic coach at St. Lawrence University next season.

Chris Brown will return to help Cochran with the alpine team and Dodge has another year of eligibility and he may return for another semester.

The UVM ski team finished second in the NCAA's this winter.

Keep In Touch This Summer
THE VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC

What happens to Burlington in the summer? Contrary to popular belief it is not used as a set by Hollywood producers to film a real live ghost town. Nor is it transformed into a tourist trap where vacationers walk in formation eating fresh vegetables and drinking maple syrup. In the summer the Burlington area becomes a paradise where the sun has been known to shine four days a week.

Yes, Burlington lives in the summer and this summer no matter where you are you will be able to read about it. For the first time in the history of journalism at U.V.M., we are happy to announce the publication of the Vermont Summer Cynic.

The Vermont Summer Cynic will differ from the Vermont Cynic in several important ways. It will be an exciting, readable, relevant newspaper geared to report not only the news that affects its readership, but all facets of life in Burlington. We will stress high quality not only in our stories, but also our photographs and layout to insure that the Summer Cynic will be intellectually rewarding as well as visually exciting.

Important decisions, festivals, new student experiences and events will face the UVM campus this summer. They will all be covered along with articles on historical sights on campus, On the Road correspondence, in-depth features and interviews, pictorials and poetry. Keep in touch this summer, read the Vermont Summer Cynic.

Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

SUBSCRIPTIONS: $1.50

SUBSCIBE TO THE VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC
@$1.50- make checks payable to the VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC

Name _____
Street _____
Town _____
State _____ Zip

Bring this form and $1.50 to the Student Information Desk, Billings Center

Subscriptions entitle you to six dynamite issues delivered where ever you are!!!!

VOLUME I
NUMBER 1
JULY 3, 1975

Vermont summer cynic

Burlington, Vermont

A Day In The Life Of Governor Tom Salmon

PAGE SIXTEEN

A Musical Evening In Battery Park

PAGE TWENTY

Looking Back At Billings Library

PAGE TEN

Walk up some stairs to the lowest LP prices in Town, at the Upstairs Record Shop, 44 Church Street.
This week, at the "Top Of The Stairs", we are featuring the "Top Of The Stars" on RCA Recording Label.
Come on up - to the BEST in musical sound, at the Lowest prices around...
Both unbreakable records!!!

Burlington, Vermont

Editors
Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

Managing Editor
Wyatt Kash

News Editor
Margo Howland

Consulting Editor
Kleras Bell

Columnists
Charley Baldwin, Allen Bernardina, Carl Blumberg, Peter Campbell, Peter Duquette, Ted Flannagan, John Franco, David Latanxe, Scott MacKay, Peter MacAusland, Ken Miller, Elaine Peterson, Larry Seiden, Jay Stevens.

Photography
John Dillon

Graphics
Terry Marshal
Philip Van Wyck

Typesetter
Susan Ball

Advertising
Martha Ricardson

Layout
Beth Cohen
Lee Webster

Composition
KNE

Printer
North Country Printers

Legal Counsel
William Root

Radio Voice
Jacques Gosselin

Transportation
Wheatland

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the Vermont Summer Cynic do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont.

Seymour Photure Productions

The Summer Cynic's Photography & Creative Writing Contest

Summer Cynic Photography Contest
Deadline: Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. The contest is open to all amateurs in the Burlington community (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking photographs).
2. Photographs must be entered in the following categories: (1) Church Street; (2) Vegetables; (3) Sports Action Photos; (4) Funny Photos; (5) Family Photos.
3. All photographs must be black and white and will be approximately 8 x 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. Pictures entered in the First Annual Summer Cynic Contest must not have been submitted in any other photo contest sponsored by the Vermont Cynic.
5. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition.
6. Judges will be announced in an upcoming edition of the Summer Cynic.
7. Photographer's name, address, and phone number should be printed on the back of each photo along with a title, if any.
8. One winner will be chosen from each category and announced in the August 7 edition of the Summer Cynic.
9. All entries should be submitted at the Summer Cynic office.
10. Judges reserve the right to announce no winner in any category.

John Dillon

Summer Cynic Creative Writing Contest
Deadline: Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. There will be three categories: Short Story, Poetry, Essay (Topic — Describe your first sexual encounter.)
2. Each entrant may enter a maximum of 2 pieces in each category. All entries become the property of the Summer Cynic.
3. All entries must be typed, and double-spaced.
4. All entries will be handed in to the Summer Cynic office, with name, address, and title stapled on a separate sheet so that all judging may be made retaining anonymity.
5. Limit of 15 pages for short story, 10 pages for essay, and 10 pages for poetry.
6. Judges' names will be announced in an upcoming issue.
7. Judges reserve the right to announce no winners in any category.
8. Prizes to be announced in an upcoming issue.
9. Entries accepted from all walks and varieties of life at the Summer Cynic Office in Billings Center.
10. Only one winner will be announced for each category.

BICYCLE TUNE UP SPECIALS

Tune up: Clean and adjust your bike. Includes adjusting your derailleurs and brakes, cleaning your chain and free wheel, and adjusting your headset, bottom bracket and cones (tightening all cables). Normally $6.95.
Price through July $4.95

Total overhaul: Includes the above. Plus the repacking of all your ball bearings, opening up of the head set, bottom bracket and both hubs, cleaning out the old grease and dirt and repacking the ball bearings in new grease. This should be done every 900 miles or so. Normally $17.00.
Price through July $13.95

Ski the Rack
85 Main St. Burlington
658-3313

HOURS
MONDAY– WEDNESDAY
9:30 - 6:00
THURSDAY, FRIDAY
9:30 - 9:00
SATURDAY
9:00 - 5:00

CALENDAR AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

MONDAY JULY 7

Pottery I for High School Students begins.
Demonstration School begins.
Summer Adventure Day Program, first session begins.
American Experience Program, Section 2. Three week courses. Register at Registrar's Office.

TUESDAY, JULY 8

High School Music Session Faculty Recital, Harris-Millis Lounge.
Church Street Center Planning, What's on the Agenda? A discussion of the Burlington Planning Commission's July 10 agenda. Noon-1 p.m.
Thesis Presentation and Defense Jay O. Kipe, candidate for the Ph.D. degree in Pharmacology. Thesis Title: Oxidation of Pteridine Derivatives In Vivo. 10 a.m., room B-313, Given Building. Open to those in the University community who might wish to attend.
Mary Pickford in "Sparrows," $1.00, B106 Cook, 7:00 and 9:00 p.m.
Children's Film Classics, "The Story of Robin Hood," $.50, 101 Votey, 1:30 p.m.
Creative Arts Workshop Beginning Quilting, 2-5 p.m., Church St. Center, $3.00.
Introductory to Pottery First Session, 7-9:30 p.m., Living and Learning Center Pottery Shop.
Pottery II for High School Students begins.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9

Shelburne Lecture Series, "The Hadley Chest Viewed as a Fertility Symbol," Richard Lawrence Greene.
Children's Film Classics, "The Story of Robin Hood," see July 8.
Folk Dancing Southwick Gym, 7:30-9:30 p.m. $1.00.

THURSDAY, JULY 10

Movie D.W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," $1.00, B106 Cook, 7 & 9:15 p.m.
Children's Film Classics, "The Story of Robin Hood," see July 8.

CHAMPLAIN SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Our Town July 9, 10, 11, 12, 21, 23, 26, 29, 31, August 2*, 8, 12, 15, 18, 21, 23, 27, and 30*
Much Ado About Nothing July 16, 17, 19, 22, 24, 28, 30, August 1, 9, 13, 16*, 19, 22, 25, 28, and 30.
Timons of Athens August 6, 7, 11, 14, 16, 20, 21*, 26, and 29.
*indicates matinee.
For information, reservations, box office, Royall Tyler Theatre, phone 656-2094.

SAGA Food Service

The following is the Saga Food Service Summer Schedule:

Waterman's Faculty Dining Room has moved to the downstairs dining hall and will be open from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. for seven to eight weeks, with special items featured weekly. And Given Dining Hall will be open on its regular hours of 7:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m. all summer. Living Learning and Wright Dining Hall will be open for breakfast, lunch, and dinner from July 7 through August 16 as follows: Breakfast 7:30 - 8:30, Lunch 11:30 - 1:00, Dinner 5:00 - 6:30.

FOREIGN FARE

Beginning July 14 and every Monday night for five weeks, there will be a special international dinner at Wright, featuring live entertainment and a menu consistent with the theme of the evening.

The Saga management team for the summer includes Loren Shepard, 2569, at Given; Walter May, 4299, at Living/Learning; and Pat Hutchins and Walt Fulmer, 2189, at Wright.

Saga Food Service congenial manager, Fred Smith, "will be more than happy to assist" or be the source of help for picnics, receptions, and all kinds of home or department caterings.

Learning Exchange

There is a new service in Burlington called the Learning Exchange. The Learning Exchange is an information service which puts teachers and learners in touch with each other.

A teacher for the Learning Exchange can be any person who can teach a particular skill or knowledge regardless of how they acquired their knowledge. A learner is any person who expresses an interest in learning a skill or subject. No credentials or pre-requisites are necessary for teachers or students. In addition people who are interested in discussing a book or subject or in learning with someone else could also use the services of the Learning Exchange in what is called an interest match.

When you call in to register they give you the phone numbers of people to teach, learn, or form an interest match within whatever areas you're interested in. You make the contact and take it from there. All arrangements such as time and place of meetings are decided upon by the participants as well as whether there will be a fee or exchange of services involved.

Learning Exchanges have sprung up all around the country. They have grown out of a need to make education a personal experience so that people can learn from each other. The Learning Exchange is not a school. It has no grades, credit, degrees, classrooms, tuition, requirements, or competition. The Learning Exchange encourages learning for the sake of learning.

Already since the Learning Exchange started, about 2 weeks ago, they have had calls from people offering to teach or wanting to learn such various subjects as photography, macrame, yoga, printing, chess, self-defense, ecology, and Indian Philosophy. They have started to make matches in these and other areas but need more cooperation from the community to make it successful. Call and let them know what your interests are.

The Learning Exchange is located at the office of PACT (People Acting for Change Together) at 95½ North Street, Burlington. You can call the Learning Exchange at 658-2800 any Tuesday or Thursday evening from 7-10. It can only work if you call.

THE CREAMERY EDUCATIONAL FOUNDATION
Of Shelburne, Vermont
ANNOUNCES
A PROGRAM OF SUMMER WORKSHOPS
Led by qualified professionals

AN EXPERIENCE WITH VALUES CLARIFICATION
July 11, 9:00a.m. - 1:00 p.m. $15 The Creamery
AN INTRODUCTORY COURSE IN TRANSACTIONAL ANALYSIS (TA 101)
July 12-13, 9:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. $40 The Creamery
PSYCHODRAMA WORKSHOP: Led by Robert Siroka Ph.D., President of the American Society for Group Psychotherapy and Psychodrama
July 25, 9:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. $25 Shelburne Farms (Showbarn)
LEARNING PROCESS WORKSHOP
August 9, 9:00 a.m. - 1:00 p.m. $15 The CREAMERY
BICYCLE TOURING AND PERSONAL GROWTH WEEKENDS
Kingsland Bay, Vermont
July 18-20 PARENTS-TO-PEERS (Focus on family issues. Open to individuals, couples, families with children of all ages.)
August 22-24 THE HERE, THE NOW, AND THE BICYCLE (A Workshop using meditation, concentration, movement and Gestalt awareness.)
October 3-5 WE ARE OUR BODIES (A Workshop integrating methods of Transactional Analysis, Gestalt and body work with bicycle touring.)
For further information call 802-985-3315

Now is the Time to be thinking about a diamond engagement ring. We have a very complete selection in price and style. If you should desire something "very special in design", select it now. We can supply it, but it takes time to make. A small deposit will hold the ring of your choice or you may select a payment plan to meet your convenience.

Prices start from under $100
You are invited to open a Charge Account at Preston's.
A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

Summertime Culture

BRANDON
The Off Broadway Town Hall
July 3–5, Where's Charley?
July 10–12, Oklahoma!
July 17–19, The Fantastiks.
July 24–26, Guys and Dolls!
July 31–Aug. 2, By George (new).
Aug. 7–9, I Married an Angel.
Aug. 14–16, Seesaw
Aug. 21–23, Company.

BURLINGTON
Champlain Shakespeare Festival
Royall Tyler Theater
July 9–12, 18, 21, 23, 26, 29, 31, Aug. 2, 8, 12, 15, 18, 21, 23, 27, 30 (mat), Our Town.
July 16, 17, 19, 22, 24, 28, 30, Aug. 1, 9, 13, 16 (mat.), 19, 22, 25, 28, 30, Much Ado About Nothing.
Aug. 6, 7, 11, 14, 16, 20, 23 (mat.), 26, 29, Timon of Athens

CASTLETON
Fine Arts Center
Castleton State College
Aug. 8, Times Five, with the Manhattan Savoyards
Dorset Playhouse
July 3–6, Green Mountain Grit (historical outdoor drama, special for Bicentennial).

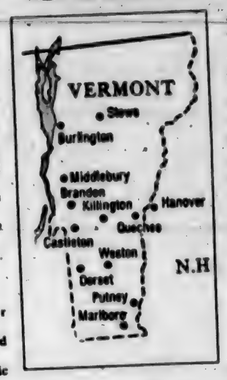
KILLINGTON
The Killington Playhouse
July 1–5, The Odd Couple
July 8–12, The Glass Menagerie
July 15–19, I Do! I Do!
July 22–26, Wait Until Dark
July 29–Aug. 2, Barefoot in the Park
Aug. 5–9, Oh Coward!
Aug. 12–16, Bad Habits
Aug. 20–23, Pygmalion
Aug. 26–30, Stop the World, I Want to Get Off

MARLBORO
Marlboro Guild Theater
Performing Arts Center, Marlboro College
Aug. 14, 15, 17, 23, 31, Sept. 6, 12, 21, 27, She Stoops to Conquer.
Aug. 16, 23, 24, 30, Sept. 4, 5, 13, Oct. 3, 10, 19, The Doctor in Spite of Himself.
Aug. 21, 22, 24, 31, Sept. 7, 14, 20, 26, Oct. 3, 10, 19, The Playboy of the Western World
Aug. 28, 29, 30, Sept. 6, 7, 19, 28, Oct. 4, 12, 18, The Wood Demon

MIDDLEBURY
Theater Group, Ltd.
Middlebury Union High School
July 16–17, 26, Aug. 1, 8, 14, Fascinatin' Rhythm.
July 18–19, 24, 30, Aug. 7, 13, Tomfoolery.
July 23, 25, Aug. 10, 16, Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris.
July 31, Aug. 2, 6, 15, The Skin of Our Teeth.
Aug. 3, The Art of the Puppeteer.
Aug. 9, Scheherazade in Soho.

PUTNEY
Windham Summer Repertory Theater
July 3–5, 12, 17, 18, Sweet Bird of Youth
July 10, 11, 19, 24–26, Arsenic and Old Lace.
July 31, Aug. 1, 2, 9, 14, 23, Ten Nights in a Barroom.
Aug. 7, 8, 15, 16, 21, 22, Picnic.

QUECHEE
The Quechee Playhouse
July 1–5, I Do! I Do!



July 8–12, The Odd Couple
July 15–19, The Glass Menagerie.
July 22–26, Oh Coward!
July 29–Aug. 2, Wait Until Dark
Aug. 5–9, Barefoot in the Park
Aug. 12–16, Stop the World, I Want to Get Off.

Aug. 19–23, Bad Habits.
Aug. 26–30, Pygmalion.

STOWE
The Stowe Playhouse
July 1–5, The Glass Menagerie.
July 8–12, I Do! I Do!
July 15–19, The Odd Couple
July 22–26, Barefoot in the Park.
July 29–Aug. 2, Oh Coward!
Aug. 5–9, Wait Until Dark
Aug. 12–16, Pygmalion
Aug. 19–23, Stop the World, I Want to Get Off.
Aug. 26–30, Bad Habits.

WESTON
Weston Playhouse
June 26–30, You Can't Take It With You.
July 3–7, 10–14, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum.
July 17–21, 24–28, Music Man.
July 31, Aug. 1–4, 7–11, Cabaret
Aug. 14–18, 21–25, Guys and Dolls.
Aug. 28–Sept. 1, George Washington Slept Here.

Demo Detox Relocating

The Chittenden County Emergency Alcohol Service (EASE) has moved to the new Howard Mental Health Services facility, the former Convent site of St. Anthony's Parish on Flynn Avenue and Pine in Burlington. Limited 5 day/week, 16 hour/day continues to social services departments of local hospitals and agencies currently providing services to intoxicated alcoholics and problem drinkers.

EASE expects to be in full 24 hour residential operation within 30 days of completion of renovations, and approval by local health and fire marshals.

The facility will provide 10 beds for detoxifying and short-term shelter of intoxicated persons, with support from professional staff and volunteer teams trained in alcohol crisis intervention work.

Great Pumpkin Contest

Great Pumpkin Contest
Rules:

1. Anyone can enter. Entry fee is $1.00 and must be paid by July 6.

2. The last 4 digits of your Social Security number must be inscribed on the pumpkin. This will be your entry number.

3. Pumpkins will be judged on weight and if necessary, quality.

4. You are responsible for bringing your pumpkin in and disposing of it after the contest.

5. The contest will be judged on the weight and quality of the pumpkin. These will be counted 75% and 25% respectively.

6. No greenhouse or growth chambers may be used for starting or growing pumpkins.

7. Pumpkins must be at least 50% natural orange.

8. The contest will be held at the Alpha Zeta Agricultural Fair at the UVM Farm on Spear Street. The date is October 25, 1975. Pumpkins should be there early for display and then judged in the afternoon. Exact weigh-in time is to be announced.

9. The winner will receive $10 and the Great Pumpkin Plaque for a year.

10. Judges will be the following: Dr. B. R. Boyce, Mr. C. L. Calahan, and Dean Kelly.

11. All decisions of the judges are final. Make all checks payable to PASS. Leave entries at the PASS office or mail to Plant and Soil Science Department, Hills Building, UVM.

ENTRY BLANK
Name _____
Address _____
Phone number _____
Social Security No. _____

ART PRINT SALE! Over 7,000 Lithos, etchings, Silk-Screen reproductions and limited editions!

Gallery 410 has one of the largest print collections in New England! You'll find a tremendous selection of old and modern masters. Traditional, Abstract, Geometric, Art Nouveau & Deco... Landscapes, Seascapes, Florals, Still Lifes, Animals, Birds, Clowns, Vogue & Sat. Eve. Post Covers, Contemporary & Turn of the Century Posters... Original old English Steel Engravings, Gibson Girl, & old advertisements... but much more!

OVER 1,000 ART PRINTS discontinued numbers, some soiled & torn Values to $5 25¢ 5 FOR $1.00
OVER 2,000 ART PRINTS Values to $7.50 Now 75¢
OVER 800 ART PRINTS Values to $10 Now $2.00
OVER 500 ART PRINTS Values to $16 Now $3.75
43 ORIGINAL LIMITED EDITIONS.... NOW 25% OFF

•DOORBUSTER! 60 FULL COLOR ART PRINTS $10. SIZES 8x10 TO 16x20

•SALE SPECIALS•
PICASSO... Don Quixote 21½x26 Reg $7.50.... $1.00
BOSCH... Garden Of Delight, 23½x34 Reg $10.... $2.50
87 FRAMED PRINTS AND PAINTINGS ON SALE..... $7.50 TO $100

GALERY 410
214 COLLE STREET 863-3695

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center
Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

SUMMER PRAYER SCHEDULE

St. Anselm's Chapel will be holding summer prayer services all summer at the following times: morning prayer at 7:15 a.m., evening prayer at 6 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, with evening prayer at 7 p.m. on Saturdays.

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.
SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY, LIGHTWEIGHT CROSS-COUNTRY, CAMPING AND MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT
100 DORSET STREET, SOUTH BURLINGTON, VERMONT
Tel. (802) 864-0473
KELTY-SIERRA DESIGNS-JAN SPORT-CANNONDALE-FABIANO-GERRY-CAMP 7-CHOUINARD-FORREST
ONE STOP SHOPPING FOR ALL YOUR BACKPACKING AND CAMPING NEEDS.
100 DORSET STREET

NEWS

Liberty Union Holds Statewide Convention

by John Franco

The Liberty Union Party held its 1975 annual convention this past weekend at Kingland Bay in Ferrisburg.

It was the party's first non-election year convention ever held, called to revamp the Party's organization, and to establish goals for its non-electoral work in the coming year.

Much of Saturday's and Sunday's discussion was devoted to a structure proposal which created a statewide steering committee, composed of representatives from county organizations and from issue oriented steering committees.

After the structure proposal was adopted on early Sunday, the convention heard reports on the Vermont economy, agriculture, utilities, and women's issues.

Many Liberty Union leaders had hoped the convention would mark a new milestone in the evolution of one of the country's most successful radical third parties, that it would mean the start of a mature organization rather than a loose knit coalition of radicals and disillusioned individuals.

It was hoped that a concrete list of priorities would be decided upon, that Liberty Union would now even more effectively reach out to low and middle income people with a concrete program. This convention fell considerably short of that mark, however. Instead it was for the most part a tired rehash of the old counter-culture, organic-food-and-pottery, hipster politics of the late 1960's and early 1970's.

The bulk of Liberty Union supporters were absent from the convention. Most of the Liberty Union's 1974 electoral support came from low income and working people. In the 1975 Town Meeting elections Liberty Union carried 25% of the mayoral vote in Burlington while winning overwhelming victories in five Vermont towns on the issue of public power. However few from working people attended the meeting. Instead the vast majority of participants were of the disaffected middle class intellectual variety. As a result, the party had difficulty in deciding its identity, and what it was going to do.

When the structure proposal came up as the first major item of debate, the main philosophies of the party soon surfaced. Some opposed the idea of a statewide steering committee feeling it was a dangerous authoritarian trend in Liberty Union, that the steering committee's members, by having representative authority and decision making powers, would constitute a privileged elite. The supporters of the steering committee proposal contended just the opposite, that the looser-goosey organization of the past years had resulted in leadership by default, resting in the hands of a few active and aggressive individuals, that the old non-organization had resulted in a "tyranny of structurelessness," which was not only undemocratic, but had also burned a lot of people out. They contended that only formal, flexible organization assured responsible and accountable leadership.

With the opposing lines drawn, the debate quickly departed into bullshitland at warp speed, with long haggling arguments over semantics and form rather than substance. Some disgusted elements, including this participant, left the meeting in mid-afternoon for a day of swimming and beer-drinking. The antagonists, especially the anti-structure group led by Peter Diamondstone, were completely immersed in minor and trivial points rather than the broad outlines, unable, in this reporter's estimation, to see the forest for the trees. Some of the bickering was over such earth-shaking topics as "can we decide to make a decision," and "if we organize and work, is it oppresive to those who desire no organization and inaction?" One observer commented that the convention couldn't organize a cheerleading section, let alone a political party. And another snorted, "I'm sick of these eggheads."

With the structure proposal finally adopted late Sunday morning, the convention heard several political reports. The first two concerned the direction of Vermont's economy and Vermont agriculture. The first, presented by this participant contended that the Vermont economy is headed into a dead end, composed of low paying service and trade oriented jobs, which exploit much of Vermont's workforce, especially women. It showed that 75% of the new jobs created in Vermont are in trade, services, and government, and that the trade and service jobs pay ⅓ the wage in manufacturing. The agricultural report showed the rapid decline in Vermont farming during recent years, laying blame both on a chaotic agricultural market which is dominated by a few agribusiness monopolies, and by a Vermont agriculture heavily dependent on dairying. It was hoped that these background reports would serve as the basis for serious planning around a political program aimed at involving Vermont's working people.

However this tenor did not last for long. The women's report, which was dubbed "socialist feminism" emphasized counter culture, consciousness raising, encounter group politics rather than organizing and defending Vermont's low paid and highly exploited women. It quickly moved the convention back to the old forms of new-left politics. The report advocated a program called "wages for housework," contending that this demand was a good way to illustrate the contribution made by housewives to society. Its opponents felt that "wages for housework" was both a sloppy concept and an ambiguous way to try to organize women. They wondered who exactly would pay the wages for housework, and how it would be of a net benefit to society. Instead, the opponents contended, it would be more effective to advocate better pay for working women. The division again was basically over an individualistic approach to women's issues, and a concrete approach which would rally the average person in the street. The discussion of socialist feminism died out with no programmatic approach to women's issues.

After the presentation of political reports, the members of the steering committee were to be elected. But as expected, many participants had by that time left, and those remaining were so tired that the members were hurriedly appointed, and the matter of priorities, which was to be the main focus of the convention, was left undiscussed. Such has traditionally been the legacy of the left.

Conspicuous in their absence were some of the Liberty Union's heaviest guns, such as Michael Parenti, Bernard Sanders, and Nancy Kaufman. Though Parenti did not show at all, Sanders and Kaufman arrived late on Sunday, only to sadly note that the convention had gone much as expected. It was unfortunate, for the event direly needed them to get back on its feet and headed for some real work. When Sanders and Kaufman finally arrived the meeting picked up somewhat because of their ability to cut through much of the hot air and make real suggestions. Parenti, the mad Italian, was missed most of all.

In sum, the fault of the convention seemed to lie in two basic areas. The first was that conventions themselves seem to bring out those consumed with the trivial, who want to rap about the party becoming a serious leftwing political party which is going to become more than a gadfly, which will develop its own political following among people and provide serious political leadership. The question Liberty Union must face is not a question of the substance of its politics. No one at the convention was asking Liberty Union to "get realistic" and move to the right. Instead it is a matter of paradigms. Will Liberty Union see itself as a hipster party, or will it change its approach to a form which will appeal to a broad section of working Vermonters? This question is yet unresolved.

Mobil

SPILLANE'S SERVICENTER

TOWING SERVICE
COMPLETE REPAIR SERVICE
ELECTRONIC TUNE UPS
ALIGNMENT MACHINE
TRAVEL INFORMATION
VERMONT STATE INSPECTION

JUST DOWN THE HILL FROM UVM NEAR THE INTERSTATE 811 WILLISTON RD.
863-2896

Appalachian
THE GAP
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbers

UVM'S New President Expected By January 1

by Margo Howland

The University of Vermont may have a new permanent President by January of 1976, one year after Dr. Edward C. Andrews, Jr. announced his resignation.

The Chairman of the University's Presidential Search Committee, trustee Robert E. Boardman of Burlington, told his colleagues on the Board of Trustees Saturday, June 7, that the committee hopes to come before the Board, possibly as early as October, with a selection of three candidates for consideration.

Boardman reported the progress of the Search Committee to the Trustees Saturday morning and later to the Alumni at the Annual Alumni Reunion Luncheon.

When the twelve-member committee began its work in February, it held eight open meetings, during which various members of the university's administrative, academic, and student community, the media, the state, and business leaders expressed opinions on the role of the President.

Boardman noted that with the beginning of April "not one word has surfaced, and there is some concern in some quarters that we have withered and died. We're alive and well."

The Search Committee has held its meetings in executive session since April 1, Boardman said, "because we're dealing with matters of a great confidential nature. We must not divulge names and personalities."

The Committee placed advertisements in the Chronicle of Higher Education and the New York Times, wrote to 125 persons in other Colleges soliciting nominations, and asked 100 faculty with contacts on other campuses for recommendations from them.

Boardman said the committee received 115 applications, and 186 nominations, of which 84 "have accepted the challenge to be a candidate."

Of the total pool of 199 candidates, the majority have been screened into one of three categories: "highly qualified," "qualified," and "not ideally suited."

"It's a subtle term, but I think you get the inference," Boardman said, of the third category.

As of now, there are 12 persons in the "high" category, 19 in the "qualified" category, and 149 categorized as "not ideally suited." Of these last, Boardman said, letters will be sent to 131 informing them they are no longer under consideration, and 18 are in a "hold" status pending further review by the committee. Thirteen applications have yet to be processed.

Boardman said the committee decided it was appropriate to assess candidates on a "three-dimensional basis" and have scheduled interviews in Boston, New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia for the week of July 7. Vermont candidates, he added, would be interviewed in a "neutral" location away from the University of Vermont campus.

Boardman said the committee realized "any good candidate will have as many penetrating questions to ask you as you will have to ask them. We, the committee, must indeed do our homework, because we are representing the University of Vermont."

Boardman said that to prepare for receiving questions by candidates, as well as for asking them, the committee conducted a simulated interview with Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, who will assume the presidency July 1 until a new president is found. Patterson himself is not a candidate for the post on a permanent basis.

"It was a very interesting procedure," Boardman said of the interview. "It showed us our total inadequacies and reaffirmed our fears!"

He said that the committee would be talking with Patterson, Vice President Lawrence McCorey, Dr. Dolores Stocker, Assistant to the Resident for Human Resources, and Secretary of Administration Robert Wilson to further help them with the interview process.

Boardman said the committee plans that by "not later than October 1 we could come back and have about five to seven candidates to invite to this campus with an in-depth interview process."

"We could then come to the Board either in December or October with a selection of three candidates for the Board's consideration," he concluded.

2870 Students Graduate At 171st Commencement

University of Vermont President Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr. handed out his last diploma Sunday, May 18 to John Anthony Zagroba, of Barre. That action marked the end of the University's 171st Commencement, which saw 2,200 undergraduates receive degrees in the School of Home Economics, the School of Natural Resources, The College of Agriculture, The College of Education and Social Services, the College of Engineering, Mathematics and Business Administration, the School of Allied Health Sciences, the School of Nursing and the College of Arts and Sciences.

A total of 70 new physicians were graduated from the College of Medicine, and the Graduate College awarded 400 masters degrees and thirty-seven degrees of Doctor of Philosophy.

Seven faculty members were given the degree of Professor Emeritus by Dr. Andrews. Retiring from the College of Arts and Sciences were: Dr. Betty Bandel, English; Dr. John H. Lockhead, Zoology; Dr. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, Music; Dr. Truman M. Webster, German and Russian; and Dr. Wendell Whitcher, Chemistry. Dr. Fred Taylor retired from the College of Agriculture, and Dr. Marion Brown retired from the School of Home Economics.

The University conferred the degrees of honoris causis upon seven distinguished members of the university community. Lola Perotti Aiken, wife of U.S. Senator George Aiken, received the degree of Doctor of Laws and Prof. Alexander Gershoy received the degree of Doctor of Science at

Kappa Sigma To Rebuild

The Kappa Sigma Fraternity, destroyed by a March 10 fire, will be rebuilt on the same site at 366 Main St., Faculty Advisor Dr. George V. Kidder said plans are to have a new building by a year from September, with construction starting this fall.

Immediately after the fire, in which one student was killed, a Kappa Sigma Disaster Relief Fund was established to help out the fraternity brothers. Most lost all their possessions.

Kidder said the chapter members have voted to turn over the remainder of the relief fund for the construction of a new building.

The remains of the house have been torn down and carted away. The members are now living in Ft. Ethan Allen in Colchester.

Charlie's Tennis Den
CHARLIE'S TENNIS DEN
85 Main St., Burlington, in the SKI RACK, 864-9118
and
Twin Oaks Tennis Center, So. Burlington, 658-0001
The Particular Store.
Get advice from Tennis Experts.
Have your racket strung or repaired.
The only certified members of the Professional Stringer Association in the greater Burlington area.
Rackets by: Davis • Yamaha • Fischer • Bancroft • Wilson • Dunlop • Head • Seamco • Slazenger • Spaulding • Squash and Paddle-Ball Rackets

$1.98
If you think one dollar-ninety-eight looks great, wait 'til you hear how great it sounds.
We've got great classical, blues, folk and jazz albums for you. With top artists and top labels. Most for $1.98! And multiple record sets at up to 40% savings. (Our prices $4.98 $14.98. Schwann comparative $9.98 to $19.98.) At these prices, the only thing cheaper is radio. And the rush is on!
UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

MAD HATTER

Doin'A Dance

by Al Bernardino

Right now the biggest rip-off, outside of organized religion, is Muhammad Ali.

That's right! Howard Cosell's verbal sparing partner is taking the sport's world to the cleaners.

Take a look back and see what Ali has done in his last two title defenses.

First and least he takes on the blood bank's favorite depositor, Chuck Wepner. This was not a fight. I've seen more contact trying to get into the men's room at the Redwood. Wepner can not fight and Ali would not fight. But then again Ali was paid only $1½ million. In today's sports lexicon $1½ million is what you pay a second baseman who has no arms or legs and is hitting .111 in the Sally League. By the way Chuck Wepner is the first heavyweight who has no muscles.

Later in the Spring Ali chose to defend his championship against a hard working ex-con Ron Lyle. By hard working I mean Lyle is doing his level best to have the ex erased before the con. It seems that in a moment of domestic unrest big Ron fired a few gun shots at his wife. Doing something like that certainly is not designed to keep you walking around outside the Big House. Well in this bout Lyle tried to fight but once again the man with the mouth refused. Ali was trying all kinds of nonsense, hiding in a corner, hiding behind the referee, damnit Ali even hid behind Lyle one time and no one found him for three rounds. A boxing fan finally stopped this sham in the 11th round. He was thanked profusely by many people.

Ali was paid $1 million for the Lyle fight. But what really galls me is the fact that Ali has always claimed he was the saviour of boxing. At a time when he could have helped boxing his strategy dictated something else. ABC with Howard beamed the fight throughout the world live from Las Vegas. With all these folks watching and waiting Ali made a complete ass of himself and everyone else connected with boxing. It certainly is puzzling...

My nomination for villain of the year goes to M. Donald Grant, chairman of the board of the New York Mets.

It seems as if Mets' left fielder Cleon Jones was found in the back of a camper in a state of shacking up with a party of the other sex. When all of a sudden police from the St. Petersburg PD opened up on Cleon and asked him why he did not have any clothes on. Just between me and you I know what I woul h have told the cops. Cleon responded to the police questioning by saying it looked rather obvious why he did not have his clothes on. At that, the protectors of old ladies, little children and women from lefty throwing outfielders hauled Cleon off to the slammer.

Back in New York Dick Young of the Daily News predictably did his now famous hoof in the mouth trick by examining what makes Cleon Jones tick.

But M. Donald Grant, (does that mean when you address him you say, Hi, M. Donald or is it okay to just say Hi M.,) went to the maximum length to embarrass and chastise Cleon and his wife. M. Donald called a press conference, and in Fear City that can be big time, and made Cleon fess up that he was not shacking up with the full consent of the Mets. Also that other Mets do not do these things. And then on top of it M. Donald fined Cleon $2,000 which makes it one of the more expensive pieces that Cleon has had recently.

Let's be realistic what the hell is wrong with Cleon Jones shacking up? If his wife says it's all right, who does M. Donald think he is to ruin Cleon's fun. It is a rather narrow view to think that athletes, especially big time stars, do not enjoy a rather liberal sex life. They are in the prime of life, in demand and make big bucks. A recent poll showed that in American males between the ages of 20 and 33, sex ranked alone at the top. You figure it out...

It looks like the New York Yankees may have bought themselves a division title. Last time I looked the Yankees, who were always known for home grown talent, had three men on the roster who are home grown. Thurman Munson, Roy White and some guy named Pagan. How the times they do change ...

Herb Bloomenthal shows how to turn a weekend into a week. Herb was in Boston to visit his sister and was blasted by one of those Hub drivers. But never say die Herb still had enough class to make the Bob Lobel sports call in show in Manchester, New Hampshire. Herb talked with his old friend Johnny Podres.

Jeff Beck's latest album, Blow by Blow, is dynamite. If you dig an outstanding guitarist grab this one.

Hope everyone is enjoying the newest bit in Burlington progress. Stop lights, stop lights, stop lights, stop lights, stop lights, stop lights. That's the way it strikes me... Sounds like General Electric... Progress is our Most Important Product. Watch the local gentry scream when they raise the rates on the parking meters to coincide with what they will be charging in that big piece of crap that is a parking garage.

Always enjoyed Larry McCrorey's Jazz Show on WRUV-FM. This cat knows his sounds...

Jimmy Breslin's book How the Good Guys Finally Won makes for a different point of view on Watergate.

No Beth, I will never forgive Richard Nixon...

You And Your Plant- Professional Vegetables

by Ted Flanagan Garden Specialist

You can grow professional quality vegetables in your own garden. There's not too much of a trick in doing this. Where the real challenge comes is to produce vegetables that are better than those you can buy in the store.

A gardener once asked me how she could grow "professional vegetables" – like the ones grown by those who raise vegetables as their business. I asked "Why?" Just because the vegetables you get in the supermarket look pretty doesn't mean they're any better than those you can grow on your own plants at home. As a matter of fact, the one you grow can be just as handsome and, at the same time, be superior in taste and nutrition.

The reason, of course, is that you are in complete charge from seed to salad, from transplant to tomato, from turning the first shovel of dirt to canning that superabundance of produce you couldn't keep up with by eating it fresh from the garden.

How to go about growing professional-plus beans, beets, peas and carrots, cauliflower and your corner of the world – ones that will grow to full maturity well within the climatic limits of your particular geographic location. By choosing varieties that are known to resist the ravages of disease, kinds of vegetables with superior nutritional qualities... And by keeping the soil in which the roots of your plants forage and feed, well supplied with organic matter, moisture and an abundance of every kind of needed plant food... By eliminating all competition from voracious pest and rampant weed... By seeing that they get full benefit of sun and air... And careful husbandry of thinning, pruning, pinching, trellising, mulching and any other needful attentions.

Given a superior plant at "go" and nurturing it all along through its race to fruition, you will have optimum conditions for producing fresh, tasty, nutritious, better than professional vegetables.

Local Diversions - Gobble,Gobble,Gobble

by Carl Blumberg

The front cover of Time, Bruce the Shark is ballyhooed all over the place. And hailed as no less than a Cultural Phenomenon. (Or so say the press agents.)

Jaws is just plain old family fun, especially if you don't want the kids to go swimming or go to movies anymore.

Bruce, of course, is a symbol. Perhaps he is Kubrick's '2001' monolith given mobility, fins, teeth and appetite. (Or, is he the communist menace come to feed on the American Way of Life?)

From a technical standpoint, Jaws is an outstanding film. (Any piracy of this last sentence must include that beginning equivocation.) Richard Dreyfuss as Hooper the scientist of sharks or shark scientist or whatever (everytime I hear the word 'ichthyologist,' I think of Oral Roberts) acts frequently as effective comedy relief. Brodie (Roy Schneider), the harried police chief of the beach community, is often confused by the conflict between the community's dependence on tourists and his own judgment that swimming is unsafe when there's a shark about. Robert Shaw is Quint, the fisherman enlisted to catch the shark (in this case, read 'fisherman' as Ahab, 'shark' as Moby Dick). But Shaw lapses from grizzled New England fisherman into the speech of a British colonel facing a native uprising in the Punjab. A fishing boat captain toiling for his daily bread in the waters off New England cannot be a model of Angle-Saxon imperiousness.

Somewhere along the line, a now-forgotten source once told me that violence is pornographic. Watching the table manners of an albeit mechanical shark and the subsequent trail of dismemberments and severances does not fit my conception of "redeeming social value." Yes, I waited in line for a half hour to see Jaws. But, as the jury foreman said after a recent local pornography trial, "Says something about the community standard, don't it?" Sharks able to swallow human beings must have awfully deep throats.

Photo and Essay by John Dillon

Energy Policy: Thinking Of The Future

"In some remote corner of the Universe, poured out and glittering in innumerable solar systems, there once was a star on which some clever animals invented knowledge. That was the haughtiest and most mendacious minute of 'world history' yet only a minute. After nature had drawn a few breaths the star grew cold and the clever animals had to die."

Nietzsche, 1873

As David Brower, director of Friends of the Earth and former director of the Sierra Club, is fond of pointing out, the planet is full of people who believe that what societies have been doing to the earth for what could be looked at as a minute portion of the earth's history can continue indefinitely. If we metaphorically reduce the four billion years of the world's past to seven days "civilized" man has only been in evidence since two and a half minutes before midnight of the last day of this figurative week. The Industrial Revolution and its associated growth in population, technology, resource use and environmental disruption started at one fortieth of a second before midnight. It is interesting to note that by this scale the big reptiles lasted for approximately five hours; we have only been around for three minutes, give or take a second or two.

Oil and coal, man's primary source of fuel at the moment for all his various needs and toys from T.V. sets and electric typewriters to snowmobiles and B-52's are the legacy of the dinosaur. Millions of years ago the sun's energy was trapped in animal and plant life, decomposed, compressed and generally regarded as fairly uninteresting stuff until the time man first made widespread use of steam power for his factories and locomotives. A short time later (a fraction of a milli-second by the Brower week) everything depended on the fossilized remains of these organisms whose unwitting remains, catayzed and refined, light up our cities and take us cruising on Sunday afternoons.

Because our mostly self-perpetuating need for these substances is increasing at astronomical rates, we have been forced to go to incredible lengths to procur them; building drilling platforms on the open sea, irreparably ravaging vast areas of land digging for coal and spanning continents with pipelines.

President Gerald Ford has what you might call a limited perspective on this whole matter. What he sees as the "energy crisis" is not the absurd rate at which man is burning up these fuels (remember the millions of years it took for these substances to form.) Instead, the "crisis" for Gerald Ford and most of our national policy makers is in meeting and supplying more of the increasing domestic demand. The plans they formulate rarely extend much beyond their term of office and total emphasis is placed on making this country energy self-sufficient not in reducing national energy consumption.

1. President Ford desires to drill oil off the East Coast where an estimated one to three years supply of oil lies beneath waters bordering not only vast metropolitan areas but also what precious little natural coastline is left in Eastern North America.

2. He would like to see the construction of over 200 new nuclear power plants in this country. As well as the 200% increase in the chances of any nuclear plant malfunction occurring, these new plants would also generate 200% more Plutonium 235 which besides being the most toxic substance known to man, just about the only thing that can be done with the stuff is to use it as fuel in atomic bombs. Add this to the fact that these 200 additional plants will be producing countless tons of radioactive wastes each year, some of which half-lives is 10,000 years. If a man's average lifetime is seventy years and at most civilizations last 500-1,000 years, it is hard to conceive of safeguarding a deadly substance for 10,000.

3. Jerry Ford wants everything to continue on easy street. Very low on his list are funds for research into the so-called "alternate" energy sources: wind, solar or geothermic power generation. Good cheap power is what he is after. Easy to get at, low labor cost thereby cheap for the consumer coal lies in rich seams under the plains of Wyoming, North Dakota, and Montana. Twice Jerry Ford has vetoed a bill that would give at least a semblance of sanity to the concept of gouging the land with a shovel that can hold ten acres of dirt. Twice Congress has failed to override it. Why? Everybody's overly concerned with the expense and not with the long range consequences. Energy has to be cheap and if putting back the land the way it was makes it a little more expensive then too bad; we ain't going to be around in fifty years anyway.

This shortsightedness of national leaders to deal realistically with the planet's future is not limited to people in Washington. Rather, it becomes painfully obvious that in every capital in the world people are primarily concerned with meeting the increasing demand by conventional measures. West Germany, for example, is selling nuclear technology to nations in South America thereby giving them free the power of the destructive atom while selling them the technology of the peaceful one. It has also been pointed out that India, who has lately gone very heavily into atomic power research and application, lies right in the middle of the best area for solar energy development.

What the world leaders are blind to is any sort of conception of the future beyond their own lifetimes. Everybody is making five year plans but with the slight exception of states like Vermont where a bill has been passed placing control of new nuclear plant construction in the legislature, most everyone in power is concerned solely with keeping energy cost low and exploiting existing resources. (Even the bill passed here earned most of its popular support because of the high utility rates increases due in large part to the Vernon atomic plant, not because of its environmental hazards).

Let us hope that the trend which is starting in some more forward looking areas like Vermont, namely research into renewable or non-depleting energy sources such as wind, wood or solar power, will continue to grow. The dinosaurs lasted five hours by the Brower week and died out when the environment changed. Only by changing ourselves and our attitudes and perspectives of our place in the earth's history can we expect to last half that long.

Meditation Corner

by Alice Blistern

If someone had asked me when I started Transcendental Meditation, what exactly I expected to get out of it, I wouldn't have been able to give an answer. I went to the introductory lecture because a friend wouldn't stop talking about it, and I was curious. Now, almost seven years later I know what I've gotten out of it, and I find myself in a position where I don't have too many opportunities to stop talking about it. That's because I've just become a teacher of TM, and am returning to the home town scene at a time when almost everybody has heard about TM, and almost everybody's mother has seen Maharishi Mahesh Yogi on television this spring on the talk show circuit with Merv Griffin.

For years we've been saying that people think more clearly as a result of the practice. Now we find a collection of data has grown pointing towards the "whats" and "whys." Something very unique is taking place in the realm of metabolic measurement. It's something that scientific inquiry has not found in any examination of rest, or activity, or other techniques of meditation or self-improvement on the market today. That something is synchrony of brain wave patterns between the left and right hemispheres.

We all know that the body takes rest when we sleep, and in TM the studies show that the rest we get in twenty minutes morning and evening is qualitatively deeper than a full night's sleep. This is an astounding thing to consider, and it happens without effort every time a person sits down and starts the technique of Transcendental Meditation.

What scientists found when they studied the brain wave patterns was that the rest was extremely profound, and also that it was not characterized by the patterns of deep sleep which indicate a dullness or grogginess in the activity of the brain. Transcendental Meditation produces a deep state of restfulness, while allowing the mind to remain active and alert. What this means to a person practicing TM is that he doesn't have to wake up after twenty minutes. All along his mind has been experiencing deep rest and yet remaining alert.

Studies of TM have been completed using EEG (electroencephlograph) and polygraph equipment. For the layman, those are machines that measure brain waves and different areas of metabolism like breath rate, heart rate, pulse rate, blood pressure and galvonic skin response. (what a lie detector measures). Prior to these TM studies, scientists knew of three kinds of metabolic activity displaying their own distinct brain wave patterns, waking dreaming and deep sleep. The measurements for TM were unique and distinct. They had a character of their own. In fact, scientists are recognizing these measurements as a major fourth state of consciousness.

People experiencing this fourth state of consciousness in their regular practice of TM report a growing clarity of thinking and precision in accomplishing desires in daily life. In all professions, athletes, students, artists, business people, doctors, etc., people are finding that they enjoy meditation and value the benefits that grow daily in their lives.

For more information contact Students International Meditation Society, S.I.M.S., 862-7259 at 308 Main Street. Or come to a free introductory talk this Tuesday, the 8th of July in Marsh Lounge, Billings Center at 7:30 p.m.

Richardsonian Romanesque Reviewed,

by Richard H. Jenson
Director of the Fleming Museum

The reopening of the old Billings Library as a center for student activities breathes new life into a revered landmark of the University of Vermont campus. No less important, an architectural monument lends its rich traditions to a new center of campus life. The library was built in 1883-86 and named for its donor, Frederick Billings, of Woodstock, an 1844 graduate of the University. The architect was Henry Hobson Richardson of Boston. A monument of indestructible solidity and romantic vision, the building belongs to an age of energy and ambition. Billings himself went West as a young lawyer to seek his fortune in San Francisco and returned as president of the Northern Pacific Railroad. Billings, Montana, is named for him. Richardson, along with Louis Sullivan and Frank Lloyd Wright, is one of America's three great architects, the first to have an international impact, and the most influential of his day.

The Library is not the only building on campus to recall a grand age. The Billings Library shares College Row with two conspicuous examples: the Old Mill, remodeled in the latest fashion in 1882, and Williams Science Hall, completed in 1896. All lent their shape to the architectural character of the campus. Together they transformed a once predominantly classical ensemble of brick and white trim into an imposing gathering of late Victorian grandeur. Yet Billings stands apart because it added something more: a building of intrinsic interest. Richardson's work is still respected, not simply because it shaped an age, but because it still has something to say on the nature and meaning of architecture.

Architectural landmarks are seldom accidents. They depend on demanding clients and capable architects. Billings wanted a building whose presence would be felt, not simply a bigger and better library for his alma mater, but a proper repository for the Marsh Collection, some 12,000 volumes, that he acquired for the University in 1882. This was the personal library of a boyhood friend and fellow-Vermonter, the late George Perkins Marsh, a noted congressman, diplomat, conservationist, and gentleman-scholar. The treasures of an honored man demanded something imposing.

To get it, Billings confronted an architect at the top of the profession. Richardson was the architect for Boston's celebrated Trinity Church, a collaborator on the enormously extravagant Albany State Capital, the designer of Harvard's Sever and Austin Halls, and a lengthy list of accomplishments that included three handsome libraries. His buildings were distinguished by their beautiful masonry, bold shapes and spaces, sound planning, and monumental aspect. Like other 19th century architects, he found inspiration in the past, notably the Romanesque styles of 12th century France. Yet to emphasize his individuality and the importance of his own ideas over those he borrowed, critics described his work as Richardsonian Romanesque.

You paid well for it: his fees were high, his methods of construction expensive. To start, Billings gave the University $75,000 and a promise of $10,000 more to get something really good. In the end he would spend nearly $150,000 — twice the original gift — without regrets.

There was nothing automatic nor immediate, however, about the architect's success. With Billings, you earned your praise. He did not go directly to Richardson, and when he did, he went annoyed by the thought that the man might prove unbendable. And if his first meeting with Richardson appears also to have been his last — the donor preferred to remain in the background — he would attend the progress of the library through the offices of President Matthew H. Buckham to the end and last detail.

Billings had ideas of his own. He could not himself give them shape, but he would know the right, or just as frequently, the wrong thing when he saw it. During the spring of 1883 a succession of architects were consulted; their proposals dismissed. When in May, Richardson was finally approached, he did not, in fact, fare much better. Exclaimed an exasperated Billings, "...I cannot understand how a man with the reputation of... Richardson could shoot so wide of the mark."

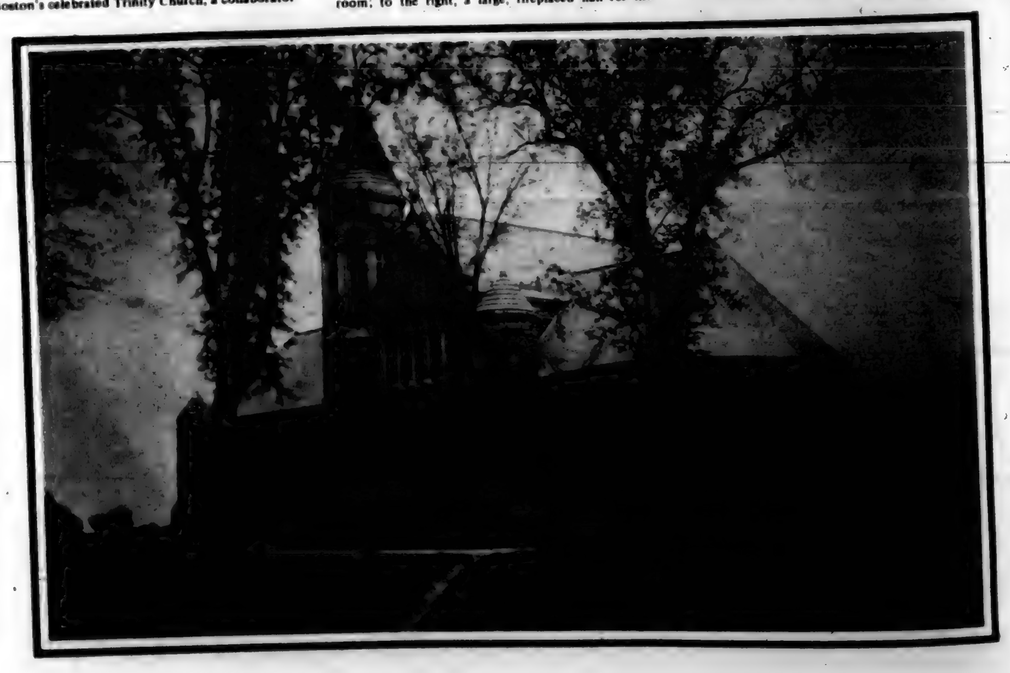
Richardson got the job, not for what he presented, but for what his accomplishments promised. Trained in Paris in the grand tradition of the Ecole de Beaux Arts, he displayed a skill for planning with breadth and clarity, and a flair for draftsmanship that made his home-grown colleagues seem tight and provincial. Even Billings came to see things worth saving in the schemes he slighted. The facade did not rise to monumental heights, but the plan was direct: three linked spaces, each handsomely shaped to suit its function. To the left of the off-center entrance was a long, galleried reading room; to the right, a large, fireplaced hall for the Marsh Collection; and straight ahead, the linking vestibule with the librarian's alcove and reference desk. Crowning all was a lofty, open-timbered, hammer-beam ceiling.

Finally, Billings discovered something he hadn't known. Richardson was the architect of the Winn Memorial Library in Woburn, Massachusetts. Built in 1877-78, this was the one recent design that Billings had seen that had also impressed him. Here was the architect who could be made to understand what Billings had in mind: "If we... change that 'pepper-box' which he has in front into a clock-tower...," Billings wrote to President Buckham, "we will get about what you and I are thinking of." Richardson agreed to revise the plans. It took most of the summer. "...One of the chief reasons why there is so much bad architecture in this country," Richardson soothed his now impatient client, "is the over-haste in making plans."

Why skimp on a work of art that hopefully would last for centuries? He kept the articulate three-part plan, but the hall became a polygonal "apse," while the vestibule itself grew to a fireplaced hall of manorial dimensions. On the exterior, dormers were swept away. The "pepper-box" stayed, but a second, tall clock-tower was added to guard the entrance arch, now crowned by a broad gable. Gable, apse, and tower were Woburn features. There, however, the flamboyant extremities of a loose-joined pile, they here became the focal features of a compact composition of balanced vertical and horizontal shapes. They also added, as the architect warned, considerably to the bill. But Billings had what he wanted. Construction began the first week of September, 1883, before even the specifications were completed.

The designing continued as the building rose, but what had been simple questions of taste and appearance now became hard ones of real construction and cost. There were things to choose or change — the tower (simpler lines and larger windows), the roof (slate instead of tile), and even the masonry (rust-brown Kibbee sandstone from Longmeadow, Massachusetts).

The interior would preoccupy Richardson's office to the end. The lofty, timbered ceiling of the reading room was lowered to a conventional one to facilitate heating. The woodwork would be Georgia pine instead of oak, and the decorative carving simplified. President Buckham was pressing economies. For good reasons — the architect's Marsh Collection; and straight ahead, the linking vestibule with the librarian's alcove and reference desk. Crowning all was a lofty, open-timbered, hammer-beam ceiling.



An Historical Perspective Of Billings Library

original estimates did not include heating, shelving, or even flooring and basement stairs. Then there were tables, desks, chairs, and other furniture to be designed by the architect and paid for. The great fireplace did rise to its full splendor in carved oak, with andirons for six-foot logs and two-man tongs and pokers to match; but a masonry arch leading to the apse was reduced to one of paint and plaster. Billings resisted the changes, championing the stone arch to the bitter end, but his pockets had bottoms. In an impatient moment he even steered the light fixtures to a commercial supplier.

Yet as the building neared completion, the rankle of deleted luxuries was forgotten. Architecture, as Richardson himself reassured his client, is made of more solid stuff: "...After the arrangement of the masses and broader lines nothing is so important... as the manner in which the bare ashlar walls are laid. And nothing requires greater care and skill..." Those walls, furthermore, would include more than rugged blocks. To enrigh the eye, there were gargoyles, carved capitals, rolls and soffits, and, filling the spandrels of the entrance arch, mosaics in geometric floral patterns done in stones of "Potomac red."

Within the rugged walls were the airy spaces of the reading room, hall, and apse. Each was distinct in itself. Yet openly joined one to the other; they were experienced on entrance in a single sweep. You could feel the whole building around you. The russet walls were picked out in black and ochre and complemented by the gold tones of wood rubbed to a satin finish through innumerable layers of sealer, varnish, and beeswax. Overhead, the open-timbered, hammer-beam construction still distinguished the great hall and particularly the apse, where the ribs sprung spectacularly to the apex. Even Billings was moved. "Let us complete all the minor details," he wrote the President, "in harmony with the loveliness we now see everywhere."

The Library was dedicated at Commencement in June, 1885, but its life on the drawing board would not cease. Billings would not let it. "...It is not simply money that I have put into the building. My love is built into it."

At the sight of his architect's accomplishments, the tough client felt the stirrings of the inspired patron. Was there no more to be done? There might be. Even before the dedication Billings had instructed Buckham to sound out Richardson, in some noncommittal way, about adding an east wing and lengthening the reading room. The excuse for the wing was, no doubt, a Marsh Room that could be closed off, but the enlarged reading room frankly a matter of effect. Ought not the interior be a little grander, Billings asked the President? With the news of Richardson's death in April, 1886, his mind was made up: if the great architect had made any drawings for additions, now was the time to execute them.

When none was found, he turned to Shepley, Rutan, and Coolidge, the three former close assistants who in partnership perpetuated Richardson's office. The Marsh Room was completed the following year; the extension of the reading room by twenty-five feet, in 1889. Although finished in oak and featuring a carved stone fireplace, the wing remained a somewhat awkward appendage — Richardsonian, but without the master's touch. The lengthening of the reading room, however, was done with skill and sensitivity. The original straight gable at the north end was replaced by a sloping hipped-roof to minimize the longer roof-line, and so avoid disturbing the balance of Richardson's composition. Of the new furnishings, furthermore, the tall "Grandfather" clock was as handsome an essay in Richardsonian style as one could want.

For Billings, Richardson's library honored the creative imagination; for the University and its students, however, it was also a place to keep and use books. And no matter how impressive architecture may be, its spell slowly fades as functions become dated. In 1908, the editor of the Cynic still spoke admiringly of Richardson's building as a design, but critically as a library. It was already too small. By silting up its windows with shelves and inundating the basement with stacks and tables, the library would squeeze through another fifty years. In the end it was hard to see, let along understand, what had once excited Billings. Even those who knew what must be there, would experience a revelation when the building's bulging contents were finally moved to the new Bailey Library, and the spaces again stood bare, just as they had risen from Richardson's plans. With a new and vital function, they would again come alive.

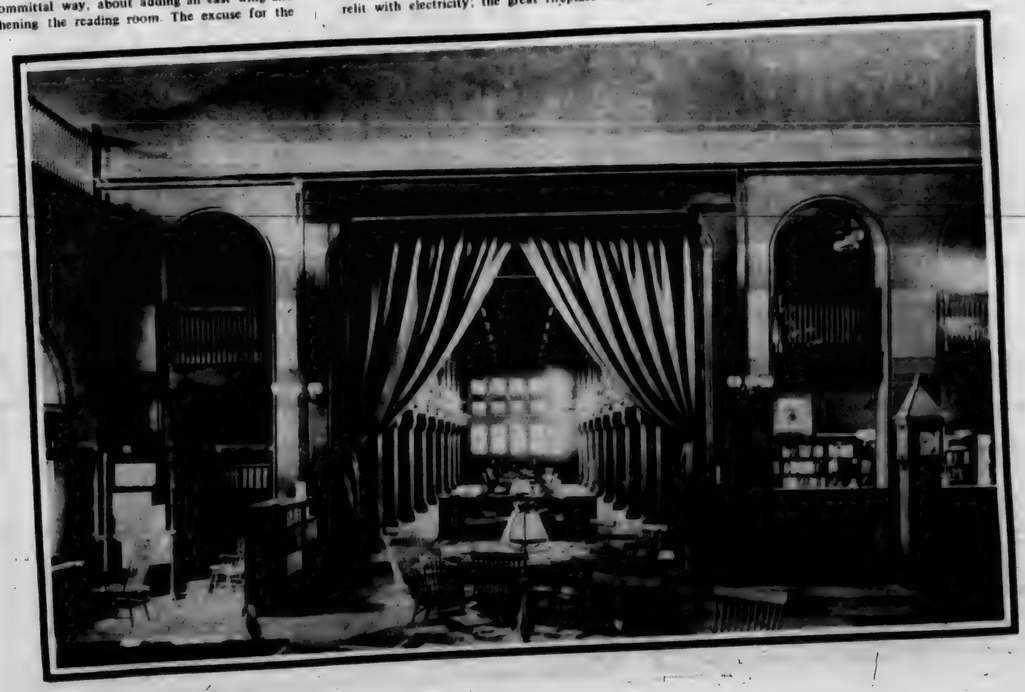
In adapting the old Library to a new hub of student activities, the University and its architects, Barr, Linde and Hubbard, picked up (in some cases, literally) where Billings, Richardson, and his successors left off. Darkened woodwork was refinished; dingy walls restored to their original colors; brass gas fixtures, extinguished for decades, relit with electricity; the great fireplace readied to take its six-foot logs; and the apse given the old Richardson chairs and a duplicate of its original great round oak table. (Perhaps the students themselves will find the bell for the tower — as Richard Jenson intended it to have to justify the belfry). Where changes were required, the new was made to grow from the old. Woodwork — spindles, rails, and mouldings — was saved and re-used, even duplicated. Downstairs in the old basement, the new coffee bar, offices, and coat-room are thoroughly modern, but old masonry and timbers left exposed to speak for the past.

Yet the surprise is not how well the new has been made to join the old, but how well the old meets the new. The ease with which the strong structural lines of Richardson's columns and beams of the old reading room accept the straight, functional patterns of new glass partitions, makes us realize how modern Richardson was beneath his Romanesque. He himself relished the functional facts of modern life, designed railroad cars, and dreamt of doing great grain elevators and the interiors of leviathan river steamers. He belongs as much to the vital present as to a Victorian past.

No surprise, then, that the students have responded to their new Center with the same excitement and enthusiasm that the Library once stirred in Frederick Billings. The architect met them half way.

This article first appeared in the Alumni Magazine in 1958, maybe earlier. Anyway, it was dredged out of those annals and permission was kindly given to us to reprint it by Mr. Jenson. It is one of the best accounts we could find of the construction of the building which houses the Summer Cynic offices.

The quotations in this article are from the correspondence of Frederick Billings and that of the office of H.H. Richardson with President Buckham, regarding the library's construction. The letters are preserved in the University's archives. Preliminary sketches and drawings for the library are in the Richardson Collection of the Houghton Library, Harvard University; building drawings in the Land Records Office at UVM.



Arts & Entertainment

Lion In Winter; A Success

by Peter Campbell

Let me be honest with you. The day of the opening night of the alumni association's presentation of The Lion in Winter was a long one for me. It involved a lot of lifting and lugging, so that by the time eight o'clock came I was dogtired. The last thing I wanted to do was review a play. I decided right then that if the play could just keep me awake I would consider it a success. I am pleased to say that The Lion in Winter did keep me from nodding out and, yes, I rather enjoyed the whole thing.

Take the sweaty melodrama of an O'Neill play, couch it in the elegant form of a Shakespearean history-drama, and then de-humidify the intensity with cool, cynical Noel Cowardish aphorisms and you've got James Goldman's The Lion in Winter.

The story is about the fight among Henry II's family for the succession to his throne. Henry favors his youngest son John, but his wife Eleanor wants Richard, the oldest, to succeed. Neither the king nor queen is rooting for Geoffrey, the most calculating of the three, to sit on the throne. Each son has a major strength that is also a defect. John is the most feeling, but he is too immature; Richard is brave, but he is cold and tactless. Geoffry – well, Geoffry is the odd man-out (as the third must always be, I guess). To complicate the situation, Henry is having an affair with Alias Capet, the daughter of the King of France who has been raised in England supposedly to be one of his sons' bride. Plot and counter-plot ensue. Bargains are made and broken, everyone talks behind everyone else's back. But it's all a family affair. When John whimpers that if he went up in flames no one would even bother to pee on him, Richard asks if anyone has a flint. These one-liners gave the play a bounce. Yet the facade of brisk sarcasm would shatter occasionally and hidden love would shine through the cracks. The actors had some difficulty making this emotional shift. However, it was never so noticable as to spoil the continuity.

The actors were, for the most part, well cast. Donovan McDonough was, as the cliche goes, "every inch a king." Gabe Barre was very entertaining as the spineless John and Bud Whitebrook was perfect as the clever son. I particularly admired his deft movement on stage. However it was Elizabeth Bernstein as Eleanor who carried the show. She managed to combine strength and style without ever being even slightly reminiscent of Katherine Hepburn (who I understand was the compelling force in the movie). The measure of her control was apparent to me down to the way she batted her eyelashes at exact intervals – and Ms. Bernstein got a well-deserved standing ovation at the end of the play.

I had an enjoyable evening, it was an enjoyable retreat to the arena theatre (the seats are more comfortable) and I am also pleased that the alumni association is directing its energy towards something other than trying to revive the football team.

I should make mention of the cheap move Mr. Merrill, owner of downtown Burlington's Flynn Theater, took when he booked the film version of Lion in Winter to beat the stage production to the public sensibilities. I hope no one was deterred by the movie from seeing the stage show. The theater deserves all the patronage it can get, free of competition from the cinema, which already does a far better trade.

A Peak At Summer Film Series

The Summer Session American Film Series and the Children's Series begin this week and shouldn't be missed. Previews follow for each of the three films that will be here. The American series will be shown twice or three times a week for the next six weeks. With the exception of Gone With the Wind (August 5th) all American films will be shown in Room B106 Cook. Most films will be shown twice each evening at 7 and 9. The Children's series will have three showings of each film on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons at 1:30 in room 101 Votey.

Admission to the children's films will be 50 cents each. For the American series the charge will be $1, or $10 for the whole series. More information and complete schedules are available by calling Summer Session at 656-2085.

FILM PREVIEW: Sparrows, starring Mary Pickford.

Sparrows was one of the many vehicles for America's Sweetheart, Mary Pickford. It is this that makes the film worth seeing for her performance as Mama Mollie, the foster mother of a brood of children, is excellent. From this story of infant kidnapping and a bogus baby farm may have come the idea for an actual plot in 1926 to kidnap Mary Pickford. The film may present another side of Mary Pickford than what her adoring fans are used to as the N. Y. Times review states that "when Millie is aroused to protect her foster brood with a pitchfork the story touches real drama and calls to mind Kipling's poem, "the female of the species is more deadly than the male'."

B106 Cook, July 8th, 7 and 9 p.m., $1. Also shown will be the short film, Why Man Creates.

FILM PREVIEW: Birth of a Nation by D. W. Griffith

Taking into account the rise in value of the dollar, Birth of a Nation is said to be the greatest money making film of all time. It was this film that first established D. W. Griffith as the greatest of film directors in his time and for years the techniques he used were mimicked by others. The story is one of the civil war and the destruction of the old South but Griffith's own Southern upbringing and pro-Southern sentiments worked to make a film which was very controversial for its portrayal of the American Blacks even in the second decade of this century. The film remains exciting to watch especially during the tremendous battle scenes and the "heroic" rescue by the charge of the Ku Klux Klan.

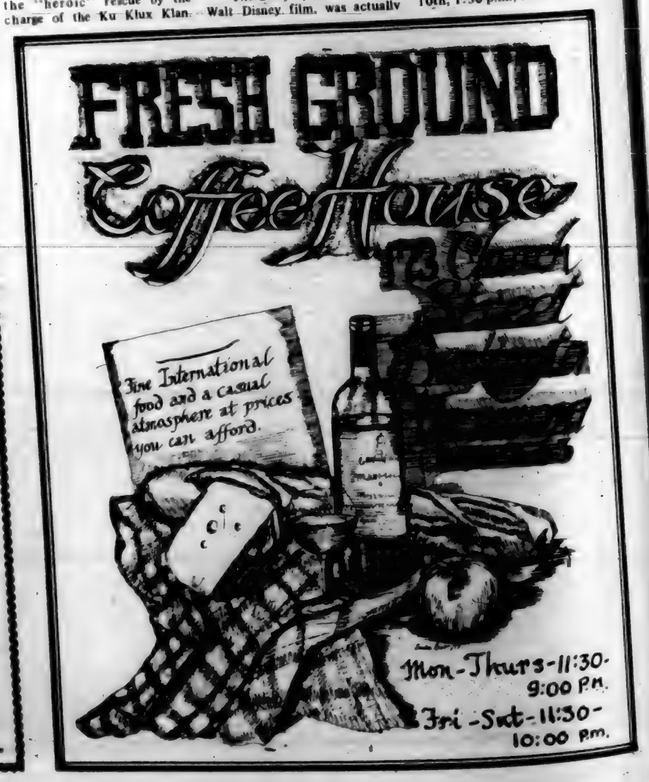
Mrs. Hazel Carlson of Stowe, Vermont will provide an added dimension seldom enjoyed by today's audiences by playing piano for this film. Her accompaniment will bring back the days when films were made with music in mind.

B106 Cook, July 10th, shows only once at 7 p.m., $1.

FILM PREVIEW: The Story of Robin Hood

The Story of Robin Hood, a Walt Disney film, was actually photographed in the legendary Sherwood Forest. The great classic will be brought with all the familiar characters, Robin, Little John, Friar Tuck, and the wicked Sheriff of Nottingham, and not to be forgotten, the entire band of Merrie Men. This is a story that every child should see and every young-at-heart adult should relive.

101 Votey, July 8th, 9th, & 10th, 1:30 p.m., 50 cents.



From WRUV To You

by Joel Bolton

As a service to you, WRUV installs aerial article number one – a visual presage as to what is up and coming from radio station 90.0. Programming notions, what's new this summer, and a special tear-out section of the week's operations herein present themselves.

AT HAND

Being educational, and therefore, by law, commercial-less, WRUV-FM is not obligated to appeal to the "listener/consumer" ear. The station's license is held by the trustees of the University of Vermont, subject to renewal and public inspection. Budget funds are determined by the Communications and Theatre Department and are partly supplemented by the Student Association organizational monies.

Situations such as this circumscribes some creativity, but confinement away from massive appeal promotes it. WRUV-FM, from the former years of underground programming has evolved to what is known in the FM market as "progressive" for lack of better words.

Ambitions for this year are designed to foster an informative, awakened air product without being portentous. Operating as the most powerful campus station in the state of Vermont – 400 watts ERP and in stereo – WRUV serves as the only major progressive alternative statewide.

Music is the pervasive identity of the station. The apparent new material and unknown artists are an educational device, secondly, appealing to the intent listener, but primarily an extension of what the staff enjoys and hopes to make enjoyable. These elements should be, and generally are evident whether in the classical evenings, and quiet mornings, raucous weekends or special events (who knows!)

Important also to those involved in the direction of WRUV is the consideration of serving to inform. News will be painlessly injected come Fall with a more agreeable presentation. Eyed generally in a lesser focus (perhaps eared we should say), WRUV is striving to increase human service communication. The Ride Board, being the most widely recognized aid, represents the station's efforts to save the listener's time and energy. Just about any announcement of listener interest can be aired, whether they concern activities or lost pets.

In fact, and in closing, comments, criticisms, suggestions, or questions are desirable. Drop us a line at WRUV studios, Pomeroy Hall, 489 Main Street, Burlington, Vermont 05401.

Stay tuned to this page for next week's article and to 90.1 mHz – 9 a.m. to 12 a.m. – a good bet daily. Check the schedule nearby.

ON HAND

1. New for the summer are a lot

(continued on page fourteen)

Vermont Mozart Festival

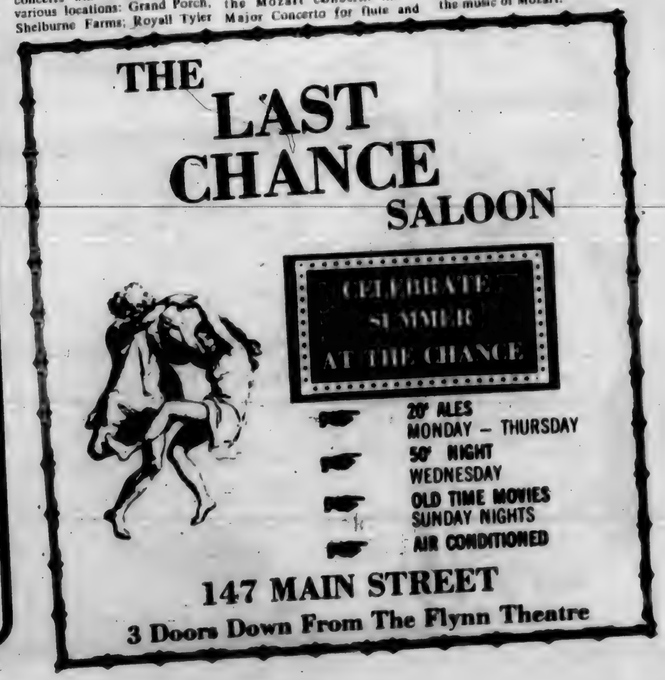
July 20th marks the opening of the second annual Vermont Mozart Festival. The Grand Opening Concert will feature New York Chamber Soloists: Charles Russo, clarinet; Seymour Bernstein, and Harriet Wingreen, pianoes and the University Choral Union under director and organist, James Chapman at the University Show Barn. The Grand opening will also include a carrousel with horses presented by the American School of Dressage. Tickets for this Grand Opening Concert are still available at the Lane Series Office of the University of Vermont.

The Mozart Festival, now in its second year will include 15 concerts (Sundays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays through August 9th). In an attempt for more community involvement, the concerts will be held at these various locations: Grand Porch, Shelburne Farms; Royall Tyler Theater, UVM; Coach Barn, Shelburne Farms; "S.S. Champlain", Lake Champlain Ferry in Burlington; The Show Barn, UVM; First Congregational Church, Burlington; St. Michael's Chapel, Winooski; Ira Allen Chapel, UVM; and the Recital Hall of the New Music Building, UVM. Though the New Music Building's Recital Hall will be having its Grand Opening with a series of concerts in the fall, it will be available for a few of these Mozart Festival concerts this summer.

This year's festival includes a greater variety of Mozart's works than did last summer's festival. The concert on August 2nd will be in evening of Mozart masses at St. Michael's College. Programmed for that evening will be the C minor Mass and the Mass in C Major. Along with numerous ensemble works, festival features include a few of the Mozart concerti: the G Major Concerto for flute and orchestra, the Concerto in B-flat Major for French horn and orchestra, Double Piano Concerto and Clarinet Concerto.

In conjunction with the Mozart Festival there will be several workshops offered. Between July 21 – 26, a Chamber Music Workshop will be held under the direction of members of the New York Chamber Soloists, the Festival Winds and the Fine Arts Quartet. Flute Master Class Workshop will begin July 28 and end August 1st with Julius Baker. Piano Workshop in the music of Mozart will be given by Menahem Pressler on August 4 and 8. Pressler is a world known pianist of the Beaux Arts Trio and has often appeared as soloist with many of the great symphonies.

Tickets are still available for eight of the fifteen concerts of the music of Mozart.



The True Art Of Mimesis; "A New Music"

by David Latane

Art, as some ancient authority has put it, imitates life. Oscar Wilde, with his usual delight in the upside down, said that life imitates art. Notice the sky, he said, as soon as the sun begins to go down, it will undoubtedly imitate a Turner. In the world of music nothing succeeds like mimesis, but the usual process is for one song to imitate another one, for art to imitate art. The result is the incestuous stagnation of popular music. The British Invasion in rock and roll in the early sixties brought in a new note, the note being an imperfect counterfeit of American rhythm & blues. This was passed off as an innovation. Lately what is new in pop music is jazz/rock, a blend generally acknowledged to be more interesting than rock and more danceable than jazz. Now that a formula has been set, we are being deluged by many groups all imitating a successful sound. That there are musicians who do not follow patterns is generally overlooked, because their records do not sell very well, and they are not played very much on any radio stations.

One hates to speak of the "Avante-Garde" in anything. The term has various stale associations with practically everything. However, some term must do for the people we are discussing, the new wave of jazz coming out of the mid west.

In Chicago there exists an organization of young musicians under the directorship of Muhal Richard Abrams, a pianist of rather awesome talents who stands with Cecil Taylor and McCoy Tyner as the modern masters of that instrument. After Abrams Experimental Band broke up he founded the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM), an organization which encompasses many smaller groups within its body, and operates a unique music school. The purpose was to provide encouragement for musicians who were playing what they believed was a new music, a post Coleman, post Coltrane exploration of improvisational ensemble playing. The music now coming from this group of fifty or so musicians exudes a togetherness and dedication to their art form which is lacking in commercial music, even among very good bands and musicians. They compose without any limitations on their sound, and are able to include any number of instruments from many countries, and they also use the recitation of poetry and chanting. The focus of the music is on Black experience, but even beyond that it is on the spirituality which they feel, the spirituality which is lacking in white America.

An example of all this is an album by the Art Ensemble of Chicago called (1969) People in Sorrow. The disc consists only of the title song. The first side is almost all prologue, the band members (Roscoe Mitchell: – woodwinds and percussion; Joseph Jarmin – woodwinds and percussion; Lester Bowie – horns and percussion and Malachi Favors – bass, zither and percussion) playing very quietly, utilizing small reed instruments, bells, tin drums. When the voices of the saxophones begin they are tormented voices, distorted and dissassociated from the main motifs of the music. Horns and reeds follow in a long array comprising a litany of distinctly different sounds, but all those of sorrow. When the second side begins, the percussion is heavier, and except for moments when all three horn players are blowing it is the dominant force. The level of intensity climbs and climbs, and during the final cadenza it begins t o sound like a form of psychological warfare, each voicing taking a previous one apart and reassembling it on a new instrument. When the pressure reaches a suitable level, the members of the band do what most listeners are inclined to do: they start screaming, using their voices as added percussion.

The experience of the Art Ensemble varies with all listeners. It has the capability of producing a catharsis like tragic theater. It also has a capability of boring many people, and outraging many others. It is a music which requires as much attention from the listener as reading poetry or watching drama, and it requires a sympathetic attention. In this way it is as far removed from music which can be put on as background for after dinner conversation as the "factory" paintings used for decoration in office buildings are from art.

Hearing various reactions to this music by people who have never been exposed to it one is inclined to believe the musicians hyperbolic claims that they are producing a "new music." To me it seems that it is a true art of Mimesis, a musical imitation of the complexities of modern urban life without a touch of pop song sentimentality or rock star jive. That it can also offer an escape from those complexities through the spirituality which has always been inherent in American jazz I will discuss next time.

WRUV Con't

of old folks from the Winter and even before.

2. Evening Concert (Yes! Culture thrives in Burlington) returns in classic style every evening, post dinner hour.

3. News from ABC-FM

4. New Releases (Tues. 8. 10)

Analyses and commentary on current recordings and artists.

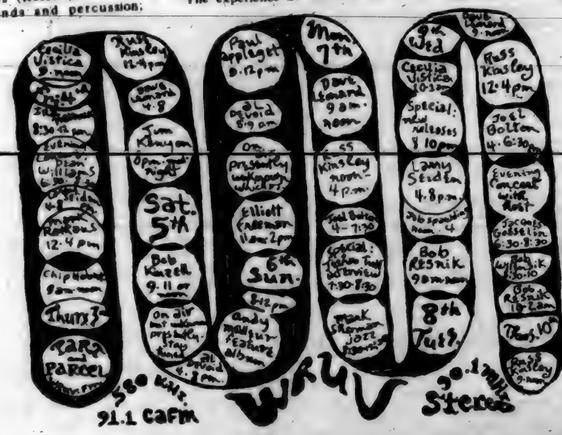
5. Serial specials and taped interview (Monday at 7:30 – Jethro Tull)

6. Saturday – late night album features (Would you believe the entirity of a current LP).

7. Concert listings – Who's when and where within the Montreal-Boston circuit.

8. "Sound Advice" – brief hints on how to consume sound soundly

9. The Infamous Rice Board – "can't teach an old dog new tricks, but it works."



CLASSIFIED

Lost – Cloth, pull string bag containing tennis clothes. Vicinity Mt Philo Road, Shelburne Falls, Route 7 North. 985-8575 or 863-5514.

For Sale – Mozart Festival Tickets. Complete set for 15 concerts. $45.00. Call 658-0843 late evenings.

House Wanted: Looking for country home to rent within 20 miles of Burlington. Needed as soon as possible. Have pet. Please call 985-8573.

Mozart Ticket Wanted for concert No. 4 (Friday, July 25). Call Meg x3024 weekdays, 985-3814 nights.

Mozart Ticket for Sale for concert No. 6 (Sunday, July 27). Call Meg x3024 weekdays, 985-3814 nights.

Classified ads are free. They must be in the Summer Cynic office each Monday before the Thursday issue.

Excellent cuisine of quality fame skillfully prepared and artfully served

Famous for our CLAMBAKE

Featuring Maine LOBSTER

Or our special SURF 'n TURF

Dinners complete with steamed clams or clamed chowder, baked potato, garden salad, demi loaf bread.

Dinner 5.95 with this ad

Good through July 10

BLACK CAT

160 Bank St.

the SKI shop, inc.

388 Shelburne Rd. Burlington, Vermont

862-5488

INDIA IMPORTS

Tops, Long & Short Dresses, Long & Short Skirts

See Our Large Selection of DANISH CLOGS

MENS & LADIES SIZES

OPEN: 9-5:30 MON–WED
9-9 THURS & FRI
9-5 SATURDAY

Just Gliding High...

Saturday and Sunday June 14 and 15 Mt. Mansfield in Stowe, Vermont, was the site of the first Spring Hang Gliding Championships.

Flyers from Canada, Colorado, California, and much of the Northeast met to compete for top prize money of $300. Tom Peghim of Newtown, Massachusetts soared for 6:07 minutes to take first in a field of 80, which is based on duration of flight as well as accuracy in landing.

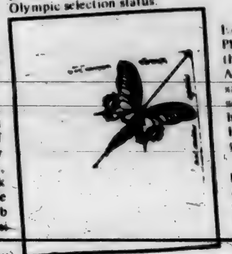
Winning $100 for second place was Shane Connor of Syracuse, New York followed by Winooski's own Jim Thomann who won $50 taking third place. Fog cancelled the second day of competition so results were based on Saturday's records.

Burlington hosted the third annual Criterium Bicycle Races Saturday and Sunday, June 14 and 15. There were three separate races.

1. The Burlington 100 kilometer Criterium for 'Senior Men's Class I and II won by Serge Poroulx of Quebec.

2. The Lake Champlain Criterium for (a) Senior III and IV won by Inge Scott of Suttfield Ct.; (b) Juniors won by Steve Clayton of Manchester, Vt.; (c) Veterans won by Dick Ring of Northeast Fuji Bike Club; (d) Women won by Barb Amburgey of the Finnish Ski Club, Mass.

The course began at Battery Park and circled down along the waterfront then back up to the park. Winners not only received prizes, but points toward Olympic selection status.



Less Overcrowding Expected In Dorms

Dr. Keith Miser, Dean of Students, expects the University will house only about 100 male students in lounges and triples this fall. That figure is lower than usual; in some years, as many as 300 students have been put on waiting lists for rooms, and have been put in temporary housing arrangements in student lounges and triples.

After room-choosing period, Miser said, there were no spaces for about 50 women and 250 men students. But he said there would be an "attrition" of students cancelling residence hall contracts, students academically ineligible to return, and a few students at the beginning of the semester who simply don't show up.

As soon as a contract is cancelled, a student on the waiting list gets the empty space. Miser noted that many colleges have the opposite problem: dormitories not filled to capacity.

"We're pretty proud of the job we're doing, and we must be doing something right," he commented.

Miser attributes the perpetual overcrowding problem to the increasing numbers of upperclassmen who elect to remain in the dormitories. He said the major reason for this, apart from cost, is the numerous residence hall programs developed over the years.

"The biggest misconception is that UVM admits too many freshmen. That's nowhere near the situation," said Miser.

"We know how many freshmen we'll have. We know how many spaces are available. The variable is the number of upperclassmen that return," Miser explained.

Phillips Resigns As Dean Of Continuing Education

The Dean of Continuing Education, Dr. Raymond V. Phillips, has resigned his post at the request of Dr. Edward C. Andrews. Phillips will be on sabbatical for a year, but is scheduled to return after that to his basic position as Professor of Education, in which he has tenure.

Phillips resigned because of policy differences with Dr. Andrews over the administration of the College of Continuing Education.

John Bushey, director of the University of Vermont Summer Session, has been appointed Acting Dean of Continuing Education by Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, the University's Interim President.

Events leading to the resignation of Phillips first surfaced February 12, when the Administration announced that Vermont Education Television officials would henceforth report to the office of the Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr.

As Dean of Continuing Education, Phillips had been directly responsible for the operation of the Vermont Educational Television Station (VET).

The change, university officials said, would "streamline administration and give greater focus to educational television's potential in overall planning and budgeting."

Reports published February 15 said Phillips would resign before July 1, and that the decision to resign was reached February 11 in a conference between Phillips and Andrews. Neither would comment on the reports, though Phillips retained the services of Burlington attorney Phillip Hoff.

Hoff, former Governor of the state, called the resignation "a satisfactory solution for all concerned."

Interim President Patterson has said the whole "outreach area" of Continuing Education will be "thoroughly studied" before a permanent Dean is appointed.

Summer Zen Training

Shasta Abbey, the Zen Buddhist training monastery at Mt. Shasta, California, announces a special two month summer training program as a comprehensive introduction to the practice of Zen training, July 15 – September 14. The participants will live in the monastery and are thus provided with a direct experience of Zen monastic life. The daily program will include early rising, lectures by Zen priests, and Zen meditation.

Buddhism was founded in India 2500 years ago by Shakyamuni Buddha. The Zen tradition has been transmitted from master to disciple through India, China, and Japan and is now growing in the West. Emphasizing meditation, discipline and hard work, Zen does not rely on doctrines or scriptures but rather insists on direct religious practice and experience in daily life. In Zen, enlightenment or Nirvana is not something to be sought outside of oneself or after death, but must be realized directly through training in one's everyday life.

Shasta Abbey was founded in 1970 by Rev. Jiyu Kennett, Roshi, an Englishwoman who trained in Japan for ten years. She is the author of Selling

Jeanne Mance For Sale?

The University of Vermont is investigating the possibility of buying Jeanne Mance Hall from the Medical Center Hospital. The University rents the building as a residence hall, but is now faced with the prospect of either buying the building or losing the lease.

The Medical Center Hospital has received an offer to buy the building, and the University has since indicated an interest in buying the building. Jeanne Mance Hall currently provides 140 spaces as a residence hall

Roaming Around With Tom Salmon

by
Stephen Tanner
Elliot Freeman

Stephen Tanner

There is a noise in the distance I can hear it. It is the phone. The phone is ringing. It calls to me to answer. The phone is ringing and ringing. I must get out of bed and answer the phone. The ringing will not cease and let me sleep. I slip out from between the sheets and run naked down the stairs. The phone is ringing, ringing. In the living room I bump into a table, stub my toes on a chair leg, step on a sleeping dog and the phone is ringing. I reach for the phone knocking a lamp over, and answer the call.

"Hello."

"Hello Elliot this is Tom."

"Tom who?"

"Salmon, Tom Salmon."

"Oh Good Morning Governor."

"Elliot I am sorry to call you this early. Did I wake you?"

"Yes but it is okay. Is anything the matter?"

"No not really. It is just that I have been up all night working on this idea I have, some legislation that would have big industry pay higher rates for the electricity they use so that the average consumer would not have to pay such exorbant prices for the small amount of power they purchase. The way it is now, the more power you waste the cheaper you get it. The little man is getting screwed and I don't think it is fair. I would really like to hear what you have to say on the matter before I make any final decision. Do you think you might be able to come down to Montpelier today?"

"Sure thing Tom. I will be down as soon as possible."

"Thanks alot Elliot. I'm really sorry that I woke you."

"Forget it governor, I am glad you called. See you in a while.

I went upstairs and took a quick shower and then dressed. Fifteen minutes later I was in the kitchen fixing up some toast and coffee. I find it tough to give good advice on an empty stomach. It was a hurried breakfast, then I was off driving down route 89 to Montpelier. As the sun rose over the green mountains I started to think about how great america is. Where else in the world could an average citizen get called in by a high government official for advice? I thought about all the talk I have heard since watergate. That politicians are slick operators who are not concerned with the issues themselves but with the issues that can get themselves elected. That these so called leaders worry more about their image and personal ambitions than they do about the plight of the common man. As I slowed down for the Montpelier exit I decided that I was going to do my best, no matter what, to shatter those lies. Politicians in America are upstanding honest men who really care. They really care, I thought. They really care.

At eight o'clock my alarm rang. I reached over and shut it off. Then I got out of bed and walked down the hall to the bathroom. About the time that I flushed the toilet, the dream fantasies of sleep faded and swirled out of sight into my subconscious.

When the elevator doors opened on the fifth floor of the Pavilion Building I had that familiar cliff-diving feeling in the pit of my stomach, which felt even more like "taking the plunge" as I caught my first glimpse down the long hall of the open doors of the governor's office. I could sense a building tension from that office that would inhibit the entire relations we had with the governor. It was not the air created by the bureaucrats who smiled mysteriously at the secretaries as they walked in and out. It was more the feeling that somewhere in that suite of offices, an animal was pacing the floor whose ferocity diffused through the walls with the penetration of an X-Ray.

Once I informed the secretary who Elliot and I were we were quickly shuttled from the receptionists desk to the office of the governor's Press Secretary, Norman James. His moustache curled up at the corners of his mouth when he smiled. James was an outwardly friendly sort, candid, and immediately wanted to help us in every way he could. He handed me the standard resume of the governor's career as well as a schedule of the day's activity. The governor was behind schedule, he explained, and we would have to wait in the office for a while. Jiggins used a table for a desk on which were piled newspapers from all over the state. He sifted through them systematically and marked articles for the governor to read. We started talking journalism in the state and James was full of interesting things. He shared our own confusion over the editorial practices of the Burlington Free Press. I asked him about the BFP's coverage of the 1975 legislative session and he said it had been fairly spotty, but that it hadn't been because the reporters on the hill had done a poor job, rather it was because editorial judgments had either deleted their stories or put them in days after they were news. In fact, two reporters who had left the Free Press recently probably did so for this very reason. James talked about his own experience in newspaper, radio, and finally his setting up the Montpelier Legislative Bureau for WCAX-TV before he went to work for Salmon in '72. As he talked, I developed a greater respect for this man. As we followed him out of his office to meet the governor, I felt I could have spent the entire day with him just as easily as with Governor Salmon. As it turned out, I think we might have had a more conversational day.

The waiting room of the governor's office was a large rectangular room with those cheesey sofas and chairs that you sometimes see the moderators of afternoon TV movie shows lounging on and telling you to buy a veg-a-matic. The oil paintings on the walls were of the same variety and the receptionist's desk looked like a feat of American veneersmanship. Once we had been shown into James' office I became totally confused by a maize of partitions. Occasionally I would round a corner and be surprised by a humming Xerox machine or a coffee-pot-toting secretary. Our appointment with the governor was for 11:00 a.m. and it was already moving on 11:20. The wait had heightened my anticipation, even though the talk with James had been somewhat diversionary. After James' office simplicity, I wasn't sure what the governor's would be like. I thought about the only time I had ever been near a governor's office. That had been in Minnesota when I was a kid on a tour of my own state capital with my grandmother. She had noticed a painting on the wall of his office done by a painter who was a good friend of hers. She walked right into his office to check it out and immediately a storm of aides descended on this harmless woman and ushered her out of the office. As nearly as I could make out (and I couldn't have been more than four at the time), the aides did it simply because that was their big chance of the day to exercise some authority. As it turned out, the governor wasn't even in his office, but as I walked through the door of Salmon's office, I realized the governor was in his painting on the wall. Suddenly, what I had sensed before permeating the walls of the office was the power of the office itself and as I looked straight ahead of me there sat the man who had harnessed that power and kept it pacing in and out of the partitioned offices and over and under the chairs and coffee tables of the rooms. He looked up to greet us, as Norman James, in his slightly raspy radio voice introduced Elliot and me. The governor's hair looked rustled. The windows in his office were not open so it must already have been a day of fingers running through his hair as each new decision faced the man. His first facial expression was almost one of a scowl. Like an angry lion, his mane dishevelled, he rose to shake our hands and growl a welcome. James had informed us earlier that only last night the governor had returned from his trip to Canada. He was apparently tired today. His handshake was firm and the greeting brightened his expression. His concentration relaxed and he sat back in the cushion of his high-backed chair. James was busy pulling up small spotlights shown down from directly above his desk. He was center stage and the perifery of the office was as dim as the edges of the theater in the round. Before I had time to acclimatize myself anymore, a group of legislators descended on the office. They smiled and greeted the governor and his face again instantly composed itself to welcome each of the legislative committee men. A reporter walked in behind us and sat down. A TV cameraman began circling the governor's desk. In my immediate excitement, I didn't catch what was going on in this meeting. But then I realized that these people were simply present as a formality, to present their report to the governor on the feasibility of the New England Primary. In the background the hushed whir of the video camera signalled smiles of courtesy on their faces.

Only moments after stepping into the governor's office, being introduced, and shaking his hand, I flashed on the last remnants of the fantasy that I had had the night before. It was obvious that not only had I been dreaming but that I also must have been crazy.

I looked at the governor, the smiling diplomat praising the legislators. I looked at the smiling legislators, our noble representatives bearing gifts for the king. I looked at the newspaperman jotting down every word of conversation in shorthand. I looked at the camera man recording the best shots possible for the evening news. I looked at myself... I felt like a vegetarian at a pig roast.

What the hell was I doing there? What had I expected to find? All these people sitting crosslegged in a circle in the middle of the governor's office passing joints and rapping? I was experiencing mild culture shock. The entire meeting was total bullshit as far as I was concerned, but one man's bullshit is another man's compost I suppose.

It was soon over and I was up walking with the herd of legislators and Elliot out of the office. We smiled at each other and rolled our eyes, wondering if this was the way the remainder of the day would be – a collection of showy time-wasting. The governor had seemed restless during the meeting, as if he was thinking of the more important things to be done.

Minutes later, the governor was walking down the long hallway ahead of us, his shoulders hunched over slightly, and legs just a bit pidgeon-toed, as if he had played college football. He was a tall impressive figure in his seer-sucker suit. Under one arm were folders and a briefcase and in his other palm he held a small taperecorder for dictation. We entered the elevator with a few of the legislators from the meeting they had just had. As we descended, the oldest of them turned to me and asked my name once again. I told him it was Steve Tanner.

"Steve Kanner?" he asked.

"No Steve Tanner," I said. "With a T."

"Oh, yes, Tanner. Like Rufus Tanner, the famous whistler."

Who the hell was Rufus Tanner I thought and nodded politely. "Like Roscoe Tanner, the famous tennis player." I added.

Another of the legislators smiled with recognition. "Indeed, that fine competitor from Tennessee."

The door opened and we proceeded to the car. A tall clean-cut young man was standing at the driver's door. He was the governor's driver and security man. The governor told us to sit in the back which were really the first words he had spoken to us since we had left the office. We sunk into the leather seats. We were on our way to Boy's State, Vermont's two-week mock government camp held at Norwich University. We were introduced to Craig, the driver, and I felt the big green Lincoln begin to roll out of Montpelier. A tank out on patrol. There was silence. It was obvious that the governor was really not going to be as amiable to us as we had expected. I cursed Ford Motor Company for making such a quiet auto, the silence was getting unbearable.

So I am sitting in the back seat directly behind the governor trying to be relaxed and maybe get a conversation going. But how? Something light I figure. Maybe talk about the weather just to break the ice and get things rolling along. No that is no good. The distance between me and Tom Salmon at this point is just a few inches short of a million miles. Steve asks if the sun roof in the car works and the driver, Craig, demonstrates. Yes it is functional. Salmon stares out the window. Steve and I look at each other. Then the unexpected... Governor Salmon talks to us. Where are you fellows from? Steve says Minn. I say New Jersey. Tom chats about how few native Vermonters there are in Vermont. Nice polite conversation. A few minutes of silence. Silence that gets broken when the governor half turns in his seat and tells us that he has to give a speech at Boy's State and then asks us if we have any ideas. Well here is my chance. This poor man needs some guidance... some direction. "Why don't you talk about how you feel on the fourth of July?" There is a second when no one says a word. Then the governor says, "Yes, well I think I will talk about my trip to Russia." We drove the rest of the way to Boy's State without a word.

When we entered the dining hall, full to the brim with the most rowdy and raucus high school boys in the state, we were once again following the hunched figure of the governor who this time had strode off quite a distance in front of us. When the boys caught sight of the governor, there arose a tremendous round of standing applause, whoops and shouts, cat-calls and bronx-cheers. The governor seemed to metamorphose before our eyes. He waved as he walked, in that determined hurried style, toward the table with the directors of the camp, waving and beaming at those boys who couldn't have been more happy at the moment. We walked in behind him and took our seats with the counselors of the camp. The governor shook hands with the few who came up from their tables to personally greet him – then he sat down and dug into the chow. I found out where the elected governor of the Boy's State was sitting and talked to him about the election and Boy's State. He was a sharp high school junior who had won on a strong platform: socialized medicine subsidies for hospitals, and environmental law reform. I took a few photos and asked how he liked being the governor of Boy's State. He wasn't pretentious about it at all. In fact he was heaping out praises like mashed potatoes. They were really getting excited that a reporter was giving them an interview, and they clowned for the camera. The new governor had conviction. He sounded serious about the reforms. "We're going to push to get our ideas out." They were planning to visit legislators in Montpelier as an outgrowth of their mock government. Ah, relevance, juniors in high school talking about socialized medicine and influencing their legislators. I returned to the counselors at the table and tried to eat the food. I managed to do pretty well, but it was grease par excellance and they told me it was the best food they had eaten there yet: steak, potatoes, and beans. The boys are selected from their high schools and sent to represent their towns. They stay in the dorms at Norwich University for two weeks and have a complete mock election of state officials. They legislate laws, complete with political trade-offs. One of the shrewder bits of politicking was accomplished by the town of Windsor, which lived on the top floor of a dormitory and for the sum of $1 bought the entire dorm from the president of the university and were then renting it to the other towns for unbelievable sums. It must have been one of the greatest land grabs in the history of Boy's State. I plowed through about half of a gelatinous confection, encased in crust, and nominally referred to as cherry turnover. Lunch was finished. We were off to the gym and the governor's speech.

It was quite a scene. Boy's State T-shirts everywhere, shouts and whistles as ever. The band was playing one of my old favorites – the theme song from Hogan's Heroes. I took a seat in front by the band so I could take a few shots. I could see Elliot keeping to the background. The band started a new number and everyone turned to the rear of the room to watch the governor walk down the center aisle. He was followed by a group of Boy's State P.R. men, one of whom walked directly behind Governor Salmon, motioning vigorously for a standing ovation. Once up on the stage the governor was animated as ever. The speech was a political gem and the psych in that gymnasium couldn't have been higher for the furher himself addressing the brown shirts. Salmon started by congratulating the new governor of Boy's State, but gave his encouragement to the loser of the election, saying that he had lost by the "Rules of the Game" which a "group of geniuses had set up 200 years ago." But he was right, and that was the beauty of the American political system – that there was the choice, like with land to grab or not to grab. He moved on to speak about his recent trip to Russia. In Russia there was "only one man who ran the show." He said the minute he had arrived in Russia he felt like he was being followed, that his phone was tapped, and his room was bugged.

Outside the boys flocked to see us leave in his car. We sat in silence again until we crossed the bridge into the city of Montpelier.

Back in the car once again and all the smiles and openness and sense of humor are gone. He slunks down in the front seat. Steve and I are invisible. Once again I try and get some conversation going. "Governor, do you get tired of answering the same questions over and over again?" "It is part of the job," is his reply. Then I said, "It goes with the territory, huh." And that was the end of another dynamic conversation.

It goes with the territory. That says it all. This man is a politician. He has to go out and spend a couple of hours at Boy's State and give a speech and smile and sign autographs. Maybe he enjoys it thorougly or maybe he would much rather be somewhere else. Nonetheless the man knows what has to be done and he does it. Willie Loman would love Tom Salmon.

All the same I feel uncomfortable as I watch the governor go through his schizophrenic transformations. It scares me. After all the days and weeks and years of going on and off and on and off and on and off, I have to wonder if it is possible for this man to get in touch with himself. His real self.

We were up in the office in the semi-darkness. The governor sat down at his desk and began pawing through some folders. His demeanor emanated the command for us to "get lost." We felt out of place. We were already tiring ourselves and we were only following the governor. We told him we were going out to catch a cup of coffee. He looked up and said that was fine as if to say "OK boys, go ahead. I'm not your daddy you know."

We asked the desk clerk at the hotel across the street if we could get a cup of coffee in the coffee shop. He said it was closed. So we walked into the bar, "The Governor's Tea-Room" it was called, and in that black velvet darkness we ordered up a regular each. We brought them out into the lobby where it was light enough to see the notes we made for the interview. We had to have a psyche up session, because so far the governor was making us play his game and it was time to take some action. Elliot said he couldn't handle too much more of this stage presence personality. He said Salmon was on his guard at all times. And who could live his life that way? Elliot said he himself had always tried to be as open and honest as he could with people he met while Salmon was straight politics full time. But then he had to be. He was an ambitious young man. One slip to reporters could have ruined his whole career. It had done that to his predecessor. We had to do something to open him up. We had felt shot down after the initial response we got from the governor and then we had shut up. The only way to finally break the ice was to ask questions because if he didn't answer them it meant there was something there to hide. Good God, there we were, a couple of rookies trying to figure out how to be reporters in a fifteen minute coffee break. We had more time all in one block with the governor than most reporters in the state and I felt so much of it slipping by in our amateur cowardice. The animal in me was awakening to the occasion. Could this cub reporter's growl even begin to match the bite of that lion king of the jungle up there on the fifth floor? I wondered and growled a little under my breath as I returned my coffee cup.

We waited for the governor to make his next [illegible] in a conference room off the main offices. A group of officials from the State Board on National Forests were sitting around a table joking and passing papers left and right between them. They all sat at one end of the table and I scribbled down some notes while waiting for the governor to arrive. When he finally came, that same feel of restraint permeated the air. Try as he might to make himself sound informal, he seemed to command a respect from these forest management men. I couldn't follow what the hell was going on other than it sounded like another land acquisition deal. Salmon was very pleased when one of the commissioners handed him a packet of information on national forests in Vermont which by some strange coincidence was exactly what the governor needed for his trip down to Bristol Cliffs. He expressed a greater than usual amount of appreciation and then remarked, that he wouldn't have to send any of his staff after the materials now. James walked in and began whispering in peoples' ears. I wasn't sure what kind of public relations he was up to at that particular moment, but the governor rose immediately after the message from James and said he had an important phone call to make. The meeting was adjourned and we went out in the lobby again to wait for the governor and go on to Girl's State.

As we drove through the Vermont countryside at 5:30 in the afternoon, heading for Johnson State, I looked out the window of that big green limosine at those big green mountains and rolling meadows in the sunset and felt a little more comfortable than I had during the other two car rides we'd taken. It was time for the interview I thought, and asked the governor if he was ready to do it. He said he was and turned to face the microphone which I had placed on the arm rest. All my questions were written on paper, so I simply read them off. They were the result of a long session that Elliot and I had the night before, thinking of things and calling various civically-minded people we both knew. I have to admit that they were pretty stock and the governor answered the way I read the questions off the page. At the end of my questioning, I asked if he would like to add anything. He turned away from the mike and nearly growled that if I wanted to talk he'd be glad to answer questions. Very tired, he sat low in his seat and nodded off in a cat nap. The governor re-awoke in time to confide in us that he didn't think the girls' dinner would match up to the dinner served at Boy's State.

...Still Roaming

Johnson State campus must be one of the most picturesque campuses in the state of Vermont. It sits on a plateau surrounded by mountains on all sides and for once the state architects have coordinated what they have constructed recently with what has been there for a longer period of time. Anyway, it was in this setting that I began to hear the faint interruption of a primitive or primordial cheerleading exercise. We rounded a building corner and there were nearly 200 young pre-pom-pom girls going through the cheers, songs, and motions of tryouts:

GIRL'S STATE THEME SONG

A man without a Girls State is like a ship without a sail is like a boat without a rudder is like a fish without a tail

A man without a Girls State is like a raft upon the sand there's only one thing worse in this universe
and that's a Girls State
I said a Girls State
a Girls State without a man

A man without a Girls State is like a beer without a mug is like a prom without a queen is like a Watergate without a bug.

(and we should know)

They were clapping hands and simultaneously moving forward in line. Elliot and I moved through the line with the governor who was receiving a greeting, a better greeting than Elvis Presley moving through a homeroom class in 1958. We went straight to the head of the line and served ourselves to a buffet dinner that made Boy's State look like feeding at the Bronx Zoo. During dinner, I got an interview with the new governor of Girl's State. She had already served two years on the Montpelier Planning Commission and wanted to be an architect. On top of that, she won the election on an independent ticket. Elliot had disappeared from the table and my gaze caught him up on the balcony overlooking the dining room making conversation with several of the young nubilee who had finished dinner early. I ate three eclairs and drank two cups of coffee, absently surveying this roomful of females and listening to the governor converse with the camp director. I joined Elliot on the balcony and the girls left. We walked outside to take a break before the ceremony began. We were still wondering what the hell we were going to say about this day with the governor.

We walked over to the softball field where some of the locals from the bars or bowling alleys were having it out. There were a couple of geodesic domes that we decided to check out. We went around behind the domes to look in at a few kayaks through the windows. Just then the coffee started to hit me. For the first time that day, I felt a surge of relief from the day's adventure. I listened to the sound of the passing water on the wall of the dome. The moment of serenity ended, and I walked back toward the softball field. Craig was sitting on the bench watching the game. He had gone to the University of Vermont himself. He had left it during his second year of studying in the parks and recreation management program. He then trained to be a State Trooper and landed this job with the governor which he liked a lot. He told us he was married and had two kids. I asked him if he thought the governor was more reserved with us in the car than he normally is. He told us what we expected: He had been instructed not to tell us about the rides he took with the governor. He said that at times the governor is more free with him than he was that day, but he thought it also had something to do with the fact that he was travel-weary. We asked if the questions we had used in the interview were the same stock questions he has heard over and over at every speaking engagement he has driven the governor to. He said a couple were new, the food question and the ones about UVM. It was getting near time for the ceremony to begin. We left him on the bench to watch the game. He had heard everything countless times before.

As it turned out, so had we. The governor talked about his trip to Russia again and how fine it was to be free. Thanks to that "group of geniuses 200 years ago." Most of the girls had calmed down after chanting the Girl's State Song and fifty others before the affair started. Salmon ended with Winston Churchill: "Democracy is the worst form of government — except for all the rest." Then each "town" was called on stage to perform some kind of entertainment. A song or a skit, such intellectual probers as "Itsy Bitsy Spider.." and "I'm a Little Tea Pot..." In between, the other girls in the audience got up and flirted "Knit one, pearl two, Governor Salmon Yoo Hoo!" A girl from the town of Gifford presented him with a key to the town and a kiss. It set off a spontaneous flood of kisses from each of the girls in the town. Governor Salmon handed me the key on his way out to the reception. I met up with Elliot in the hall. He took one look at the key and started laughing. I sang a verse from the Girl's State Song.

I was standing in the center of the room where the reception was to be held. A couple of ladies were fussing around a long table that was covered with cookies and punchbowls. The citizens of Girl's State, the future leaders of America, were still in the auditorium singing and clapping.

I looked over at the table stocked with refreshments but I couldn't bring myself to be the first one to pig out. I was being well mannered and would wait. The governor entered the room. He was smiling. He walked right up to me like I was his son or something and started talking about what a good time he was having. I was in a state of shock. This was the first time the entire day that I felt some rapport with the man. We chatted for a minute or two and then he left to take his place in the reception line saying that we would slip out in a few minutes.

The girls streamed into the room. They packed in. Well to well teen queens wearing full length gowns and white gloves. They acted like young ladies/little girls. It was amusing. Steve and I walked around eating cookies and sipping punch and smiling and saying nice semi-sarcastic remarks about the skits and asking heavy questions. Like if they thought that Boy's State and Girl's State should be integrated next year? The girls flocked around us. They pressed against us. The room was loud and crowded. Steve and I glanced at each other with the do-you-believe-that -this-is-happening look that we had been exchanging all day long.

One young miss came up to me and asked me if I were a reporter. I told her that I was from the New York Times. She asked me when the article was going to appear. "Watch for it in the Sunday magazine section maybe in two weeks or so," I said. She drifted off towards the punch bowl excited.

I walked out into the lobby. Those girls were proving to be too much for me and I was not absolutely sure of what exactly I might say next. I didn't want to be responsible for starting any commotion. Leaning up against a wall I took my glasses off and stood there rubbing my eyes. I was interrupted by a serious looking young lady who was curious to know if I was the reporter, you know she had heard that there was a reporter from the New York Times, and was I him. I looked into the reception room and saw Steve's head bobbing in the crowd. "No," I said, pointing out Steve, "not me, I believe that gentleman is the one you are looking for."

It was raining as we walked back to the limosine. Elliot joked that there was no lack of energy there in the hall. The governor was turned off: no response. Plunged back again into following that hunched figure through the darkness.

We got inside the car and the governor turned around and handed us the small tokens of appreciation he had received from each town that night. He said they were the type of things you never knew what to do with. The kind of things they gave you at the Lion's Club dinners which somehow never were useful.

Again it was a quiet ride. The governor pulled out his dictaphone and began going through some letters and responding to them on tape. There was one from a woman in California who had seen the nation-wide news telecast of him dancing at the governors' conference and had written him about it. He noticed that she had spent time in an orchard so he wrote her that he too had worked in an orchard as a youth where he said he had grown to appreciate the land and nature. His "P.S." was "No I have no intentions of running for the presidency."

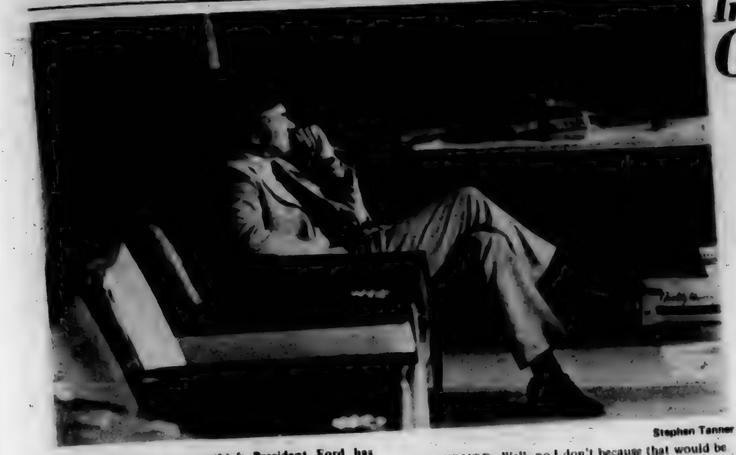
I decided to try one last bit of digging. I asked him about the press. How did he feel he was treated by it. He told us he considered the press his adversary. I asked if he had learned the hard way, tugging for an anecdote. Nothing.

I was feeling battle fatigue. We were in Montpelier. I thought about Salmon's recent moves, the Russian trip, the Governors' Convention, and the Canadian trip. All spelled political ambition, but there was no doubt in my mind that this man was working hard for it. He had another appointment and it was ten o'clock at night. He had been up since six in the morning and driven in from Bellows Falls. Tomorrow he would do the same.

The governor was finished with his dictation. He collected the papers off of his lap and placed them in a folder and then reached up and turned off the light above his head. Craig turned on the radio. I stared out the window at the rain, at the night. I recognized the first chords of Jose Feliciano singing "Light My Fire" coming over the radio. Ahhh perfect. But something was wrong, the song didn't sound right.

There was a voice singing along well almost singing along... always a couple of words behind Jose and sure enough it was the governor. There I was sitting in the same car with Tom Salmon as he crooned the words out into the darkness... Come on Baby light my fire, try and set the night on fire.

The streets of the state capitol were deserted. No people and no cars. The rain had tapered and was no more than a drizzle. The lights from our car reflected in the puddles of water in the street. At a corner in downtown Montpelier the car pulled up close to the curb. The rear doors on either side opened. Steve grabbed his camera and notebook and said goodnight to Craig and to the governor. I caught hold of my taperecorder and said, "yes you know if you are in Burlington, stop in and see us." Tom was hardly acknowledging our departure. I could hear him thinking, well it will sure be nice to get rid of these two so I can just hang loose. Steve and I were standing in the street holding the car doors open and goodnighting and thank youing the governor to death. With perfect synchronization we shut the doors. Craig's foot hit the gas pedal and the car sped away. We followed the taillights until they disappeared around the next corner. Steve looked at me. I looked at Steve. Who was that mask man? he asked. I laughed and wondered... indeed, who was that masked man?



Stephen Tanner

In his own words, Gov. Salmon

by Stephen Tanner Elliot Freeman

CYNIC: What do you think is the value of a university education in this state when a graduate has a very difficult time finding a job?

GOVERNOR: A college education equips one, so fortunate to attain it, to live in many respects a fuller and richer life irrespective of what his or her calling is. That in and of itself may be satisfactory rationale for attending schools of higher education. The job plight in Vermont is serious, but not nearly so serious as many states in this region. It is predicated heavily on the market decline in the national economy, whose ebbs and flows are felt in every state in the union. We have established certain priorities in the State of Vermont to seek to develop public policies that will stimulate that economic growth that will provide good paying jobs in the primary labor market and capacity to hire greater numbers of college graduates who attend school here. This is a long term process that can not be completed over night.

CYNIC: How do you feel about the 500,000 dollars in state aid that is going to the UVM tunnel and the 300,000 dollars of state aid which is going to the faculty dental care, in view of rising tuition in both instate and out-of-state tuition.

GOVERNOR: The tunnel issue is passed upon by the Vermont General Assembly after a full scale of hearings and decisions back in 1974. I have reviewed all the evidence and have found no reason in the evidence to abort the project. The tunnel was designed as a method to handle traffic at a high traffic count crossing in the city of Burlington. It's a public safety decision, implicit in the judgment. It has its share of critics. Though I don't purport to have any expertise on the subject, I have traveled by the perspective site of the tunnel many times and I sense there are some potential problems to the pedestrian and the traveling public in that area at certain times of the day, that should be dealt with. As to the other question on fringe benefits in terms of dental care, that's a more comprehensive question that goes with issue of what an appropriate salary and fringe benefit level should be for the faculty employed at the University of Vermont. And that's complicated. Presumably the dental care program was negotiated as a charm of some earlier contract. Without an indepth understanding of how this fringe benefit came into being, I think it would be inappropriate to comment on whether or not it's appropriate or inappropriate.

CYNIC: Who do you think would make a good president for the University?

GOVERNOR: I came before the search committee at their request and gave the benefit of some of my ideas on the subject, not in terms of individuals but in terms of a criteria. I suggested at that time that the next president of the University of Vermont must have an even keener awareness and capacity to deal with the administrative side of the management of the State University today. Although academic credentials have been the traditional rule to this job, I recommend that the steering committee not put on a set of blinders to the notion that someone who's training and discipline is outside of academia be considered. The next President of the University of Vermont in changing times and a period of diminishing resources will have to be someone who has had a sufficiently broad experience to understand inner relationships, and understand people. He or she must be able to deal with a board of trustees, a faculty, the emerging jocking for position of a labor organization seeking to represent employment units at the University, and to be able to deal with State Legislators and Governors. I further expressed my hope that the next president of the University of Vermont would have sufficiently sound feeling for higher education in the State of Vermont. He or she should have the capacity to view the balance of our higher education structure, the state colleges, the community college, and the Vermont Student Assistance Corporation, in a broader context than it has been reviewed in the past.

CYNIC: If the Weeks School were closed down, what program would the state substitute for the rehabilitation of juvenile delinquents?

GOVERNOR: Obviously, if we remove a facility such as the Weeks School, which I personally hope can be phased out in due course, we'd have to find other mechanisms, presumably in the local community, to deal with problem children. Not every kid who goes to Weeks School, of course, is a juvenile delinquent. Many are the product of neglect in the homes, some CYNIC: How do you think President Ford has performed in his first term?

GOVERNOR: Well, he's preformed very credibly on the question of establishing a face lift of the attitudes around the White House. He's a man of good humor, plain spoken, who gives you the impression that he is interested in your ideas. He's willing to listen, and that's a great substantive plus. Today he's been unable to exercise the kind of creative national leadership that will be required to bring America out of its present crisis, although he must be given a B+ for efforts to move the country in a positive direction.

CYNIC: Do you think, for instance, his energy plan for in the neighborhood of 200 or more nuclear power plants is compatable with the way you'd like to see energy policy going?

GOVERNOR: We have to look at his whole program and I think the comprehensive plan of the Ford administration is predicated on the notion that business as usual is the name of the game in the United States. Yes there will be some modifications in life style but they will be relatively minor and relatively long term, in the final analysis, the more is merrier the big is better syndrome will prevail. For instance, the President's plan is predicated on the notion that the American people can not and will not make significant and voluntary modifications on their lifestyle to save significant energy and accordingly alleviate the necessity of significant increases in the price of the product which are recommended by the Ford administration. I happen to believe that the American people have never been given a reasonable chance to choose between the conservation ethic visa ve the price mechanism ethic.

CYNIC: Do you feel that Ted Kennedy is sincere when he says that he will not run under any circumstances, even if, by the time of the Democratic convention, it seems as if George Wallace will seize the nomination?

GOVERNOR: Yes.

CYNIC: Could you support Morris Udall for the presidency?

GOVERNOR: Yes I could, if he gets the nomination, he'll have my support.

CYNIC: Do you feel that President Ford made a wise decision in choosing Rockefeller for his running mate?

GOVERNOR: Yes, I think that was a wise decision under all circumstances. Nelson Rockefeller was governor of New York for fifteen years. He has a good first hand working knowledge of the problems of America in a diversified state. He also has a fairly strong foreign relations background which was one of the weaknesses of the President coming into office, under somewhat less than normal circumstances. Also Rockefeller laid claim to affiliation with the moderate wing of the Republican party. A wing that President Ford has never been associated with.

CYNIC: Would you perceive any split in the conservative and liberal Republicans at the convention?

GOVERNOR: Well, it all depends on who the Republican Candidates are.

CYNIC: What if it were Ford and Rockefeller?

GOVERNOR: Oh, do I see Rockefeller contesting the President? No, under no circumstances.

CYNIC: Do you see the convention seriously rejecting Rockefeller?

GOVERNOR: Well, no I don't because that would be the final nail driven into the coffin of the grand old party. They wouldn't chuck a man who has dedicated his life to the public interest to the wolves. Especially over some perceived ideological split having in mind that Rockefeller has moved fairly perceptively from the left in recent years. For if so, there isn't much hope left for anyone in the Republican Party.

CYNIC: Do you yourself have any plans for the 1975 election?

GOVERNOR: Well, I'll either be a candidate or announce retirement.

CYNIC: What would you be a candidate for?

GOVERNOR: Maybe Governor, maybe the United States Senator.

CYNIC: Would you think about the United States House of Representatives?

GOVERNOR: No. I can't conceive of any circumstances where any Governor of the United States would seek to serve the House of Representatives. Well at least not me.

CYNIC: What lessons have we learned from the Viet Nam War in view of the American dead and the thousands of refugees now assimilating themselves in America and in Vermont?

GOVERNOR: I think the biggest lesson we have learned is that when the American people want to deliver a message they can by gathering together essentially at the grassroots level and sending a message to their elected officials, how be it late it comes home to roost. I think that the Viet Nam experience has qualified the views of man in terms of our dated earlier role of being a policeman to the world. And I think the prospects are negligible that in our time any such series of disasters and decisions are likely to again occur.

CYNIC: Do you think that a reexamination of the Warren Commission might provide us with the kind of insights about government and its operation that was revealed by the Senate Watergate Committee?

GOVERNOR: I think if there is credible new evidence to indicate that serious flaws may exist in the Warren Commission report and its conclusions, then the matter should be reopened for inquiry. If there is not, it should not be reopened for inquiry. I fail to see any relationship whatsoever between the efforts of that commission, headed by an outstanding Supreme Court Justice, and the Watergate, which is a telling example of high placed criminal activity in Government.

CYNIC: Have you seen any evidence to date that would convince you that it should be reopened?

GOVERNOR: I watched a very interesting program on television a couple of months ago. It showed a film, and was commentary from opponents and adversaries of the Warren Report. I personally was quite impressed with the analysis of Jim Bishop, the author. He is one of the better investigative writers that has surfaced in journalism. His infinitive analysis of the day Kennedy was shot and the book that he wrote to capture this version of America. I see nothing that would tend to change my mind on the issue. But again if a credible source, other than those that are trying to sell books, or play out the role of the ultimate judges of history, find that there is some legitimate reason to reopen the inquiry, then I think that it should be reopened. I've seen no such reason to date, based on my limited analysis of the situation.

An Evening In The Park

On the corner of Pearl and Battery Streets, there is a soft ice cream stand, modest and inconspicuous, yet an essential part in the rites of a summer evening. It is interesting to note that people, regardless of their shape, size, age, religious sect or political allegiance, cannot resist a triple dip vanilla with strawberry coating sold for under fifty cents. It's just a good cross-section of Burlington gathered around that stand. Look.

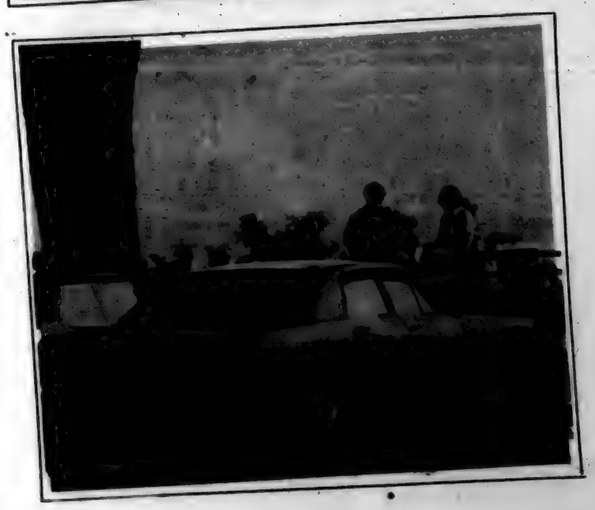
You walk across the Battery Street and into the park, past the newly poured concrete mall, complete with its multi-colored water fountain; past a crowd of young men and women perched on the hoods of automobiles and guzzling beer from the bottle; past couples ambling down the shaded walk who are occasionally obliged to dodge children recklessly pursuing each other on bicycles. Below on the lake the ferry Champlain is easing into Perkins Pier as the sun slowly descends behind the Adirondacks.

It is Sunday evening in Battery Park and the Burlington Concert Band is on the stand. A diverse group of about thirty five musicians, the band is directed by Martin McRae. Their repetoire includes everything from traditional jigs and reels to marches by John Phillip Sousa. The band has been scheduled to play Sunday evenings (starting around 7:30 and going until after sundown) from Memorial Day to Labor Day.

This particular Sunday a chorus of young men and women from Charleston, South Carolina are the guest artists. Singing a broad selection of gospel, patriotic and pop tunes the group impressed everyone with their fine strong voices and religious conviction. [illegible] with the way of Jesus Christ were shared with the audience by several members of the group.

Judging from the ample audience present every Sunday, the good feelings emanated by the crowds of children, the groups of older people relaxing in lawn chairs and the families bunched together on the grass, the Concert Band has obviously met with great success. It is commendable that the City of Burlington has provided such an opportunity for family entertainment and relaxation. While across the street at the ice cream stand, business has never been better.

by John Caulo and John Dillon



Photos by John Dillon

... Continuing Dialogue With Tom Salmon

(continued from page nineteen)

are simply unmanageable, not necessarily delinquent. That's been one of the problems of putting apples, oranges and plums under a single umbrella and attempting to define a program that meets widely individual problems among young people. It obviously has to be on a greater community capacity, for example community centers, half-way houses, and other small groupings designed to deal with individual cases.

CYNIC: Would you support tax credits, or any other form of state support for food cooperative groups that would help lower food prices?

GOVERNOR: Where would the money come from? Which groups are going to pick up the tab? Let me answer the question this way – I've appointed a food commission in Vermont, and given them some fairly comprehensive tasks. That will include an analysis of food cooperatives, to see if they now have a function in Vermont and a look at distribution marketing initiatives that may create a greater productivity capacity in terms of growing our own food here in Vermont. And were an initiative such as the one you mentioned to be a specific recommendation of this commission, to me as Governor for implementation for reasons that I felt represent solid public reasons, I think I would be likely to support it. I would want to look at the issue very closely, particularly in light of cost of the program and whose taxes would be raised to support it.

CYNIC: Would some kind of state supportive agency set up to buy and sell Vermont products be a possibility to be considered by that food commission?

GOVERNOR: Yes, those issues will be involved in the deliberations of the food commission. I have broken down a whole series of task forces, one of those will deal with sale and distribution of Vermont produce in terms of existing capacity and potentially expanding capacity.

CYNIC: Do you think that Vermont should adopt laws similar to Alaska and Oregon toward legalizing marijuana?

GOVERNOR: If the question is that I think pot should be legalized as opposed to decriminalized in Vermont, the answer is no, not based on the present evidence. I've tended to favor decriminalization of marijuana or reduction of penalties for casual use of modest amounts. I've said repeatedly that Vermont has one of the most progressive drug laws in the country. It does not require particular tampering especially as to respects of marijuana usage in modest quantities by reason of the fact that there is not a significant number of marijuana busts in the state. Before you change a law, there must be a clear reason or rationale for it, or clear abuse of the existing law, which I believe one is hard pressed to isolate in the state of Vermont.

CYNIC: What positive stance have you taken on developing alternative energy sources such as wind or solar energy?

GOVERNOR: The state of Vermont is involved with a Federal grant application which, if ultimately approved, could involve the conversion of at least one oil fired electrical generating plant in Vermont to a wood firing plant. This is designed as a demonstration project to determine the feasibility of wood for electrical generating purposes in the north east. We have one modest program in the Norwich, Vermont area on solar energy. However, national breakthroughs can occur only through initiatives done by the energy research development administration which considers this issue a very high priority. Some feel wind technology is a source of potentially significant energy in the future. I remain unconvinced to date on that score. It's my view solar, nuclear, and possibly tidal, energy represent more realistic near term prospects.

CYNIC: When you were twenty-two years old, did you have any political ambitions?

GOVERNOR: No, when I was 23 I was in law school. I didn't have any political ambitions even when I came to the state of Vermont.

CYNIC: You have said that John Kennedy had a profound influence on you. Can you pinpoint what that influence was?

GOVERNOR: Yes, he made the word politician become respectable for the first time in my conscious memory. His style, his self-depricating humor, his quest to do what was right as opposed to what was seemingly politically popular, and his ability to seek out the most capable people to fill out important public policy jobs, this impressed me a great deal and I think first stimulated my interests in a possible career in public life.

CYNIC: Would you like to return to the legal career after your political life is over?

GOVERNOR: Well, on the hypothesis that I leave politics, I have always immensely enjoyed practicing law and have no grave reservations about returning to the law. However, Senator Aiken told me once this political bug gets in your system, usually the only thing that will cure it is embalming fluid.

CYNIC: Would you say you are at an advisary position with the press? Do you watch what you are saying when you talk to the press?

GOVERNOR: Sometimes, not frequently. I remember a few episodes when I thought I was having an off-the-record discussion with a reporter, which later was printed. You tend to get a little gun shy after an experience like that. However, I'm not bitter. I don't get bitter. The only time I get really mad about the press is when they write a story that is predicated on fiction, figments of the imagination, with no rehable source at all, about a guy or gal who works for me in state government – on the chopping block, about to be fired, that type of story. These people have wives, and kids and that disrupts people, especially when it isn't true because nobody ever checks the source, if there is any at all. If they hurt people in the process, well what the hell it sells newspapers. I think that policy is deplorable and I take a crack at it any chance I get. They can say anything they want about me. I'm a big boy, but when they hurt people, that's something else again.

CYNIC: How closely do you follow the state Democratic platform?

GOVERNOR: Well, fundamentally the governor is the Democratic platform. He initiates the policy. First year I ran I got the Party to basically adapt the fine work plan, basically containing general goals and objectives as opposed to a lengthy specifics in every human endeavour. I felt comfortable with that. I could articulate and emphasize points within that framework. Other than the framework of the platform, fundamentally it's something that evolves by the people who are into the decision-making process in terms of many of its specifics.

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE

COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES

WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS

ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686

Self Portrait Of An Inmate

by Charlie Baldwin

Charlton Lincoln Baldwin, 26, fifth child of a family of nine. Parents divorced. Father is retired U.S. Navy officer, now resides in Florida. Mother graduated from Keene State College in May, 1975, and plans to become a teacher. Family moved extensively while I was growing up, due to my Father's duty assignments. I was educated in elementary and secondary schools in Massachusetts, Virginia, Vermont, and graduated from High School in Northfield, Mass. Went to Eastern Michigan University (Ypsilanti, Mich.) as a history & political science major from 1967–69. Was attending E.M.U. on a full athletic scholarship for track & cross country. Academically, save for a few subjects in journalism & English & literature, the time I spent in college was not as enjiching an experience as I had hoped for; and as a result, I feel that I gained more of an education "on the road," while travelling throughout the U.S., Mexico & Canada for athletic competition. I was an All-American several times over during my two years in school, as well as being an integral part of five national small-college championship teams. I left school after June, 1969, out of both academic boredom, and athletic pressures which required that I both compete and train under restrictive, blood-and-guts coaching attitudes which gave no freedom for individual expression (ie. no moustaches, racing four-five races virtually every other weekend, train with the team & not alone, no drinking, pot, sex, etc., etc.). College became impersonal and restrained for me, so I enlisted in the U.S. Navy on a delayed entrance program, which gave a full year of freedom before active duty began. I worked in California (and throughout the country) that year, compiling research for several organizations including: the Pacific Studies Center, Ramparts, Friends of the Earth, the Sierra Club, the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, and many smaller Berkeley-Frisco-Palo Alto-Santa Cruz political and environmental groups. My primary areas of writing included Nuclear Power Plants & the A.E.C. (mine safety and related cases of spillage, lost shipments of uranium, etc.); Vietnam; the many political stateside demonstrations and problems resulting from Vietnam, and the waning years of the Black-Panther movement. I was also a field researcher for a Dutch Journalist working for Reuters (he was based in Washington, D.C.); and basically fed him with a broad overview of the many movements and problems with them during the period from 1967–1972.

After entering active duty in November of 1970, I was unexpectedly hospitalized with kidney problems, and was subsequently discharged by late December of the same year. I then decided to move to Burlington, where I could focus my reporting and research on Nuclear Power Plants in the Eastern U.S., as well as cover the many Washington demonstrations and the related court cases as a result of both. Following the eventual demise of U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia, the wane-of the Black Panthers, and a personal desire to back away from journalism in order to work on some long-overdue personal writings, I began working in the construction and marine (boating) industries, and generally put all politics aside.

John Dillon

Much of my work since 1972 has been oriented towards law, and generally, a focus on the criminal justice system. I also began to become a rather first-class alcoholic, and immersed myself in the evil firewater at quite a horrendous rate following the loss of a close personal relationship and the demise of my athletic career to injury and illness after having had an unbelievable success between 1971 mid 1972 (I had qualified for the 1972 U.S. Olympic Trials, yet never got to compete due to an injury.) This somewhat self-generated mental and physical collapse was more than intensified by my alcoholic intake and borrowing of large sums of money to pay medical bills. I fought my way from roughly $10,000 worth of medical expenses, down to about $2,000, then just couldn't seem to make up the rest. From that point on, the fall was swift, and focused on the most available bottle of spirits and some generous, trusting friends who never really understood what was happening because I have a tendency to minimize my problems and hangups, and usually keep whatever is hassling me to myself. This period of madness, writing, the sauce and debts I couldn't pay eventually were each causal to my forging some checks last July, and resulted in my incarceration and subsequent adjudication for a misdemeanor & felony count for check forgery. My sentence (handed down last September came to 0–6 months on the misdemeanor and 0–5 years on the felony) was reasonably fair under the circumstances; though I feel that my present incarceration is not.

At the present time, I have absolutely no clear-cut idea as to how long I will be confined here before I am either given an extended furlough or my outright release on parole. If I feel that, by waiting an additional 4-7 weeks will guarantee my chances for parole, then I will refuse an extended furlough, as they are complex arrangements for the inmate on release; and inevitably, they restrict most freedom, individuality and expression to the point of making one a fourth-class citizen. I have also yet to see an extended furloughee win an argument against the system... myself included (and I can show in writing, the Department statute which supposedly gave me an absolute defense against a furlough violation, yet here I remain).

To be continued next week.

Editor's Note: Charlie Baldwin's name was given to the Summer Cynic and he was reached by phone at the Community Correctional Center. He writes from behind those bars.

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

Monday-thursday 9 a.m.-7 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

The Head Shop
hair has no sex

152 Church St.
Burlington
862-4045

You take care of the inside of your head...
We'll take care of the outside.

There is only one store in this city where you can buy Earth shoes.

Many stores sell shoes that look like the Earth brand shoe, but only one sells Anne Kalso's original patented invention.

Earth Shoe

Located at:
139 BANK STREET

summer cynic

How Be It Late Comes Home to Roost

Editorial

In this number we are reprinting an editorial that appeared in the first issue of the Vermont Cynic in April, 1883. We decided to print it because we would like to revitalize the adversary spirit that it expresses. Of course we cannot be the constant vigil of the community. We are not that capable and we admit it. We will keep watch on ourselves and try to remain true to our convictions.

This first copy of the Vermont Summer Cynic is a piece of history. Never before in the ninety two year history of journalism on this campus has a summer of the Cynic been published.

Months ago when the idea of publishing the Summer Cynic first surfaced, it was greeted with some optimism and some pessimism. The positive responses were pleasant. They always are. To those who assured us that the project was sure to fail we give our sincere thanks. Without their negative encouragement we would have had no one to whom to prove ourselves.

The editors of the Summer Cynic, with this small gesture, give our love and thanks to one bulldozer of a man, William Root, who helped us plow through gargantuan piles of bureaucratic bullshit.

Criticism has been passed upon the name distinguishing our paper. "Cynic" has been translated "dog," and, from some remarks, one might infer that the Cynic was the assemblage of all the qualities that were bold and bad. But the founder of the Cynic school was Antisthenes, a follower of Socrates; and the name "Cynic" simply sprang from the gymnasium (Cynosarges) in which their instruction was imparted. The most celebrated Cynic was Diogenes; and of him we read that he "Abused literary men for reading about the evils of Ulysses, and yet neglecting their own; musicians for stringing the lyre harmoniously, while they left their minds discordant; men of science for troubling themselves about the moon and stars, while they neglected what lay immediately before them; orators for learning to say what was right, but not to practice it."

The effusions of such a Cynic, it seems to us, would be a welcome relief from the affected aestheticism and the prurient sentimentality with which the current literature is crowded. If the name on our cover means anything, it means that we shall honestly speak the convictions of our mind; it means that our objects are utilitarian; it means that all things conflicting with the interests we represent, we shall constantly and consistently combat.

Correspondence

Trouble At Earth Peoples Park

Editor's Note: When trouble broke out in Norton, Vt. last month, we sent a letter of inquiry to a resident of Earth People's Park. His reply follows:

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Earth,

I read the letter you sent to the Park, but why so much concern over things of the past? They are over. Let's try to be more here and now and/or future optomistic, eh? Earth People's Park is your home as well as mine – concept wise – Earth. As there is distress and turmoil on the Earth – it is here – as there is Peace and joy on the Earth, it is here. If you do not know the history of Earth People's Park, the idea, the dream, indeed the miracle which is evolving here, you cannot know what is happening, or should I say hip to the status of the Earth. This new (5 years old) nation – now nation – no nation – know nation is going to rock the history of mankind – it was designed that way by the people who were inspired to create this dream into a very real reality.

A thing of the past is yesterday, Summer Solstice – very mellow – very high – very nice – a wedding – a tea-time and a baseball game, our family of Earth People had a good day – no violence – no bloodshed. The thing most people do not understand about the park is it is designed for the benefit of mankind not the abuse and destruction but as in concept, so it is in reality. – Free Land – anyone can come here and live with no rules, no regulations, therefore is the cause of trouble, there is the solution to the trouble too. We accept (love) anyone who comes to the Park – until – unless they cause too much trouble then we have no choice but to vibe them out for the good of the community.

Daniel Collver

Better Street Lights In The City

To the Editor:

Very high up in the spires and garrets of Burlington lived this young fellow with only one leg. It was unfortunate, but this young man lived, as I said, high up in the spires and garrets of Burlington. Therefore to come down to street level and to go up to his room he had to travel extreme vertical degrees for appreciable distances which would tire out a healthy man, let alone a one legged man. Fortunately, there was an elevator.

So anyway there are these spires and they get together and call themselves New York City. It is incorrect to assume that people begot New York City because buildings are always finished and then the people come to where the buildings are... the shit attracting the flies you might say. The buildings are necessary for the existence of the people, and where would people be without a very efficient streetlight system?

That gets us to the guts of the issue which are too horrible to see in the straight sunlight and thus causes people to take to the streets at night. But people don't like things too dark so they have very efficient streetlight systems.

That is all that I have to say except that man needs only two things: something good to do and light so he can see what good he's doing.

Light Heartedly Yours,
Curtis Paige Hiden

TM Moves The Garage

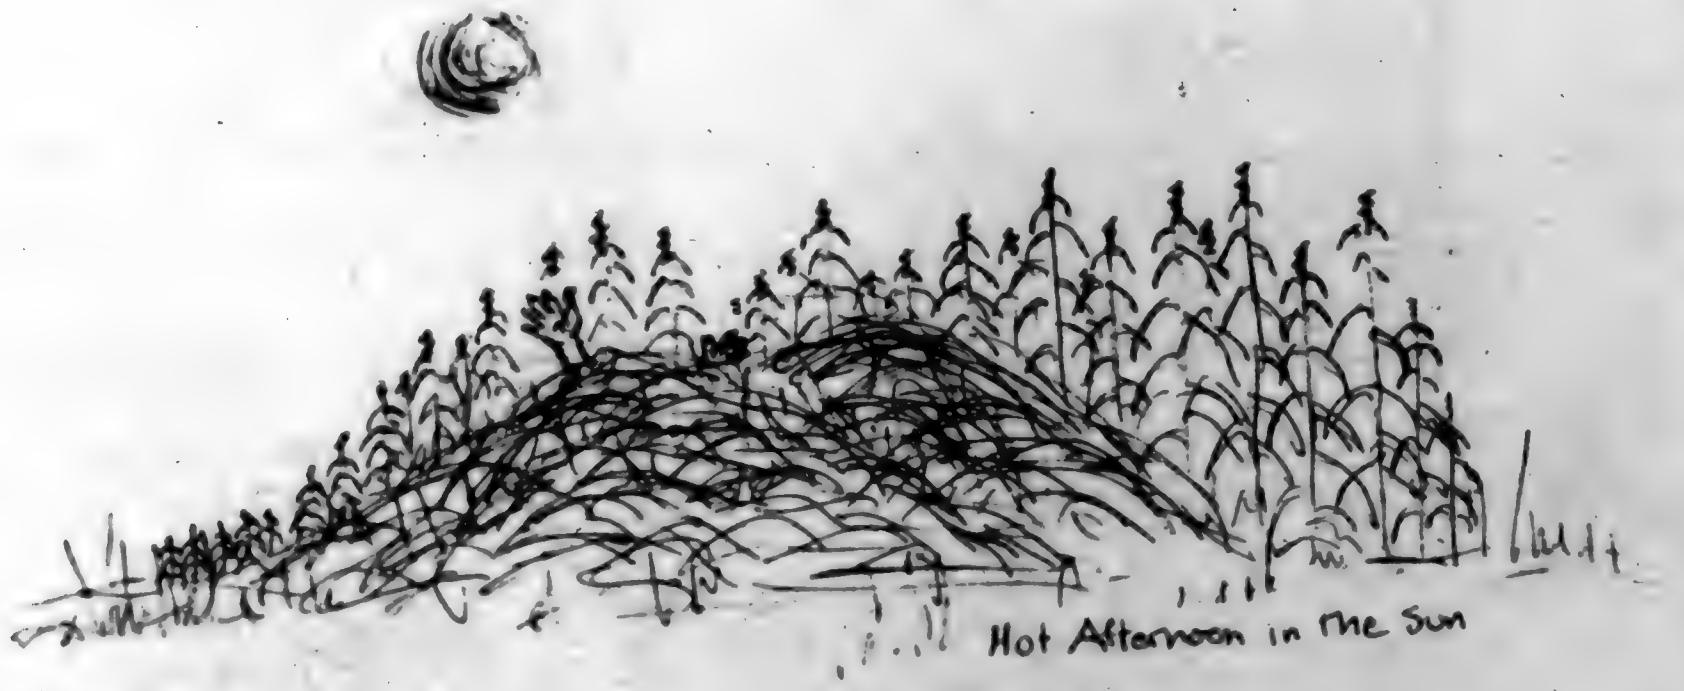
To the Editor:

The International Meditation Society has always been an expanding organization in spiritual mental and physical terms. From the acquisition of the Maharishi's villas in Jamaica and the French Riviera to the founding of Meditation University – and now to the field of automobile service.

The CARma Center of Automotive Enlightenment is to open at 50892 2/3 Church St. July 20. CARma "mechanics" won't wear greasy coveralls but instead will wear earthshoes and beads. Yes, for only $185 IMS will put your car in tune with the universe. The Maharishi has developed a method that he claims will "work for any car from Fiat to Ford." He says that most car breakdowns are due to the stress and tension of modern traffic. He further adds that this tension had been heightened by the energy crisis.

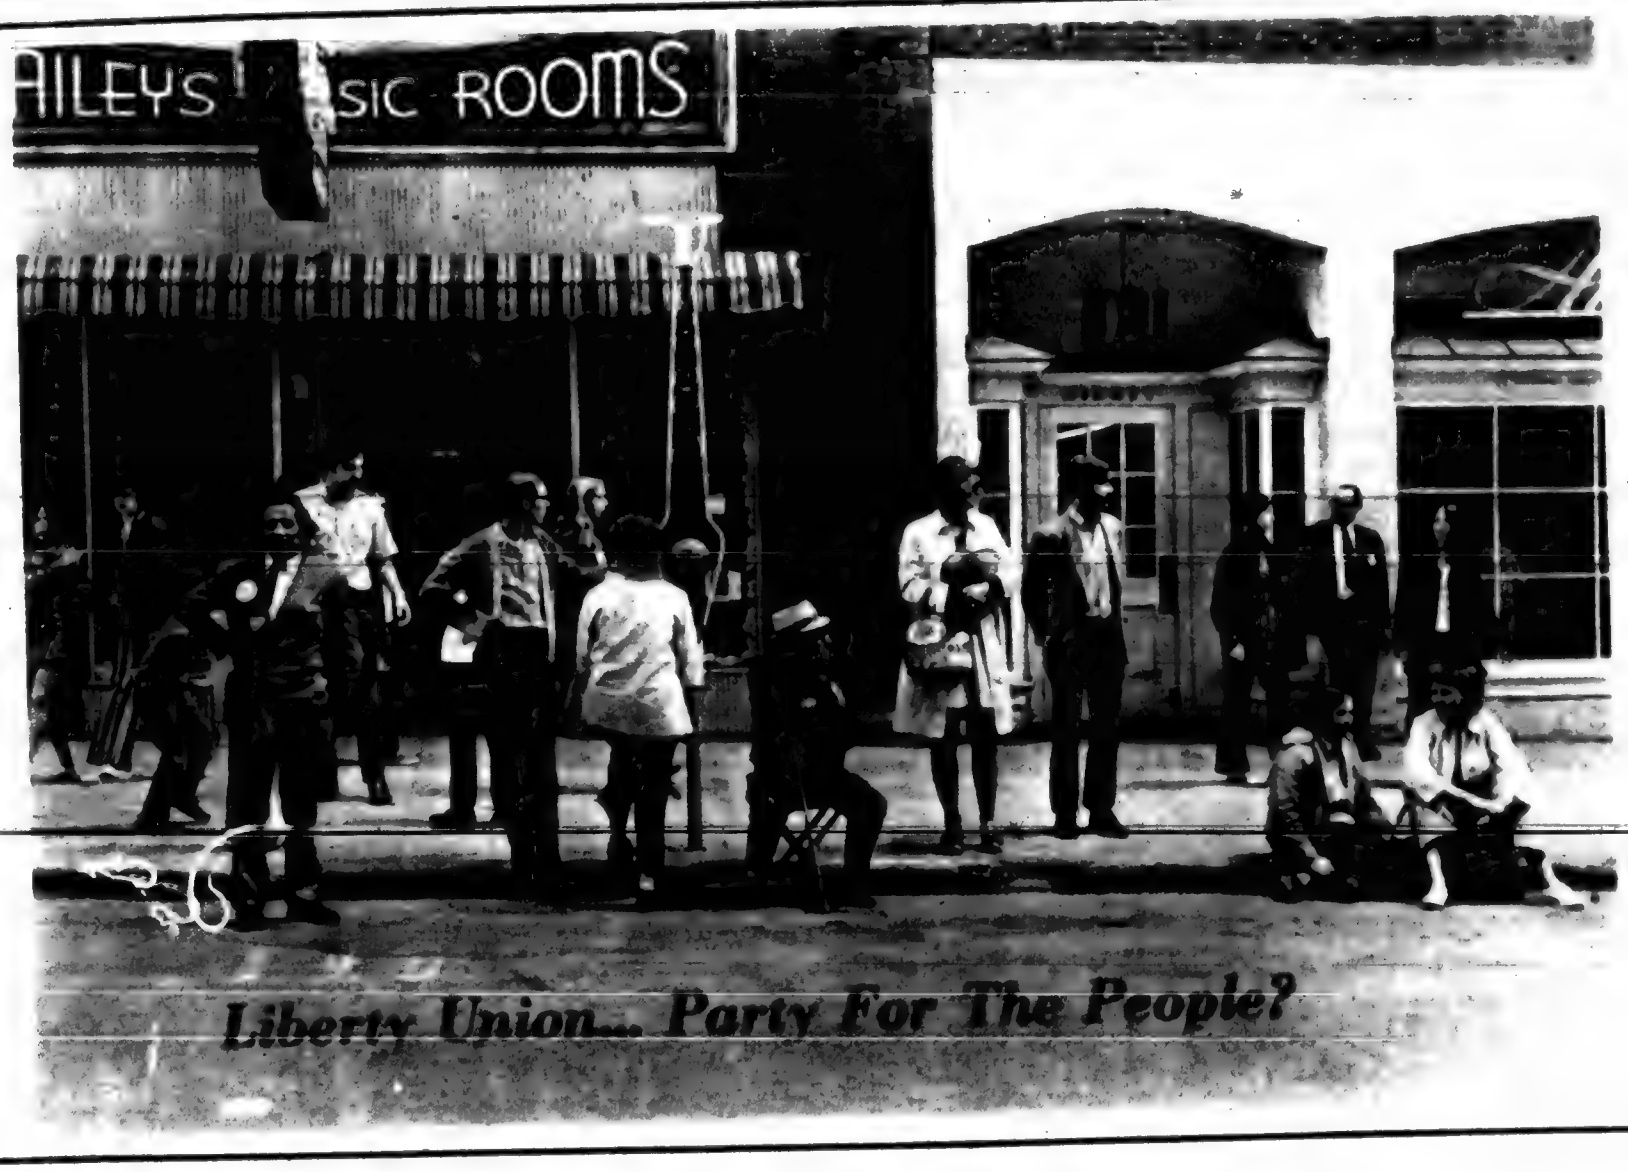
By allowing one's auto to meditate for 20 minutes twice a day IMS says car failure will be greatly reduced and most important, mileage improved. Rumor also has it that an Earth Tire dealer will be moving into CARma due to the peace and harmony that flows between the two corporations and their customers.

Fred Potter



VOLUME I
NUMBER 2
JULY 10, 1975

Vermont summer cynic



Liberty Union... Party For The People?

Varooom... Roaming Around Catamount Raceway

The Summer Cynic's Photography & Creative Writing Contest

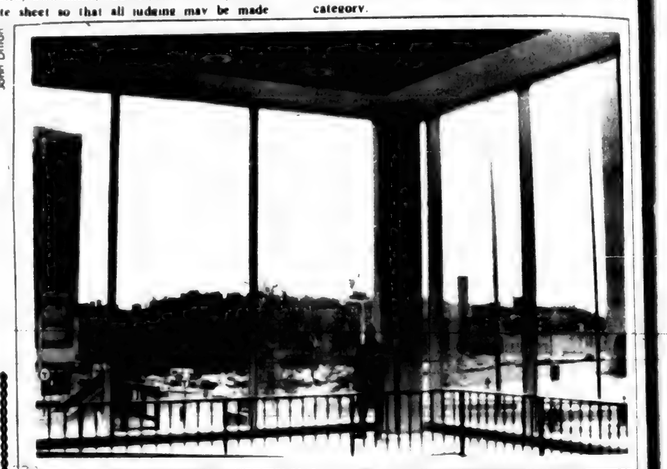
Summer Cynic Photography Contest
Deadline: Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. The contest is open to all amateurs in the Burlington community. (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking photographs.)
2. Photographs must be entered in the following categories: (1) Church Street (2) Vegetables, (3) Sports Action Photos (4) Funny Photos (5) Family Photos.
3. All photographs must be black and white and will be approximately 8 x 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. Pictures entered in the First Annual Summer Cynic Contest must not have been submitted in any other photo contest sponsored by the Vermont Cynic.
5. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition.
6. Judges will be announced in an upcoming edition of the Summer Cynic.
7. Photographer's name, address, and phone number should be printed on the back of each photo along with a title, if any.
8. One winner will be chosen from each category and announced in the August 7 edition of the Summer Cynic.
9. All entries should be submitted at the Summer Cynic office.
10. Judges reserve the right to announce no winner in any category.

Summer Cynic Creative Writing Contest
Deadline: Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. There will be three categories: Short Story, Poetry, and Essay. The Essay Topic will be to describe your first sexual encounter. (We hope this clarifies the rules as published last week.)
2. Each entrant may enter a maximum of 2 pieces in each category. All entries become the property of the Summer Cynic.
3. All entries must be typed, and double spaced.
4. All entries will be handed in to the Summer Cynic office, with name, address, and title stapled on a separate sheet so that all judging may be made retaining anonymity.
5. Limit of 15 pages for short story, 10 pages for essay, and 10 pages for poetry.
6. Judges' names will be announced in an upcoming issue.
7. Judges reserve the right to announce no winners in any category.
8. Prizes to be announced in an upcoming issue.
9. Entries accepted from all walks and varieties of life at the Summer Cynic Office in Billings Center.
10. Only one winner will be announced for each category.

John Dillon



Hand Thrown Pottery
Stained Glass
Dry Flowers
Paper Lamp Shades
India Print Spreads
Scented Candles
Music Boxes
Many "One of a Kind" Creations
Sculpture
Beaded Curtains
Imports from over 40 Countries
Miniatures
Conversation Pieces
Imported Coffee & Teas
Enamel on Copper
Mirrors
Mobiles
Stone Craft
Collector's Items
Largest Selection of Handcrafted Jewelry in Vermont
Featuring our own exclusive designs in silver

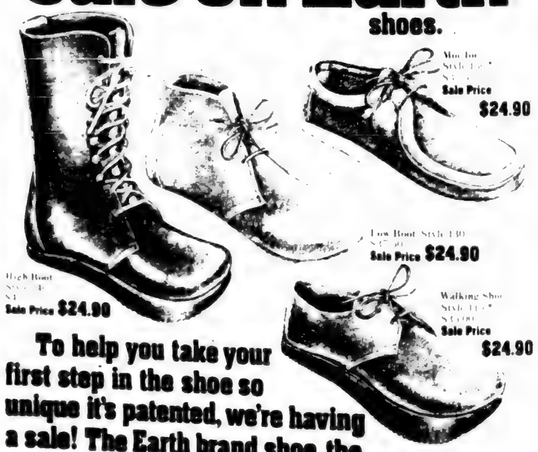
Serendipity
206 College St. Burlington, Vt.
862-5400

The first sale on Earth® shoes.



Sale Price $24.90
Low Boot Style 130 Sale Price $24.90
High Boot Style 140 Sale Price $24.90
Walking Shoe Style 110 Sale Price $24.90

To help you take your first step in the shoe so unique it's patented, we're having a sale! The Earth brand shoe, the original shoe with the heel lower than the toe, is on sale from July 7th to July 26th. And you can save from $6 to $17.

KALSO earth® shoe

* Selected Colors, Materials and Sizes

Hours: Mon.-Sat. 9:30-5:30 Fri. 'til 9:00 P.M.

139 Bank Street
Burlington, Vermont
53-3960

Vermont summer cynic
Burlington, Vermont

Editors
Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

Managing Editor
Wyatt Kash

News Editor
Margo Howland

Consulting Editor
Kleras Bell

Columnists
Charley Baldwin, Allen Bernardina, Carl Blumberg, Peter Campbell, Peter Duquette, Ted Flannagan, John Franco, David Latanxe, Scott MacKay, Peter MacAusland, Ken Miller, Elaine Peterson, Larry Seiden, Jay Stevens.

Photography
John Dillon

Graphics
Terry Marshal
Philip Van Wyck

Typesetter
Susan Ball

Advertising
Martha Ricardson

Layout
Beth Cohen

Composition
[illegible]

Printer
North Country Printers

Legal Counsel
William Root

Radio Voice
Jacques Gosselin

Transportation
Wheatland

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the Vermont Summer Cynic do not necessarily reflect the opinions of The University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont.

A Seymour Phuture Production

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Open Season: Liberty Union – Groping For an Identity ..... sight
Scott MacKay's Open Season genre of fried fulminations at what turned out to be the biggest political non-event of the Season – The Liberty Union State Convention.

Revenge of the Hipster ..... ten
J. Karl Stevens offers a pointed agrument against John Franco's report (SUMMER CYNIC, July 3) on the Liberty Union Convention. "Reverting to the hard economic line of the 'old left' is a reversion to political infancy that finds its true paradigm in senility."

Just Getting Along ..... eleven
John Franco explores income distribution in Vermont and comes up with some startling revelations: "....The distribution of Income in Vermont is so skewed in favor of the rich that the top ½ of one percent had the same share of income as the bottom 27%..."

VAROOOM... Roaming Around Catamount Raceway ..... twelve
Freeman and Tanner are at it again with an impressionistic potpourri of the action stock car race track in Milton, Vermont: Catamount Raceway.

Summer Session Rolls Into Full Swing ..... sixteen
"There's no one here to take my baggage?"
"Sorry, that's one service Summer Session doesn't provide. But lack of bell boys aside, young and old will be finding plenty of things to enjoy as Summer Session begins its main session. "Things To Do Just For Fun" is a good introduction to some of the lighter activities.

Self Portrait of an Inmate ..... twenty-one
This week, Charlie Baldwin continues his series of writings from behind the walls of the Correctional Center with his journal of a day's activity entitled "Doing Time: A Systematic Malevolence."

DEPARTMENTS
Calendar & Announcements ..... four
News ..... six
Editorials ..... twenty-four
Arts & Entertainment ..... fourteen
You and Your Plant – by Ted Flanagan ..... twenty Mad Hatter – by Al Bernadina ..... twenty Local Diversions – by Karl Blumberg ..... twenty

$7.50

Perfectly Plain - Perfectly Stunning - Pewter Bracelet

Prices start from under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Prestons.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®
40 Church St Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

Experience the only Direct/Reflecting® bookshelf speaker

The new BOSE Model 301. The only bookshelf loudspeaker to provide spacious, clear sound comparable to the top-rated BOSE 901® and 501 speakers, that allows you to adjust sound performance according to your specific room acoustics, taste, or recordings, and the only bookshelf speaker that does all this for under $100.

The BOSE Model 301 bookshelf speaker. Only an audition will tell you what an extraordinary sound experience it provides.

BOSE

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen to us, you can't go wrong.
157 Pearl St., Essex Jct.

CALENDAR AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

THURSDAY, JULY 10

Movie – D.W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," $1.00, B106 Cook, 7 & 9:15 p.m.

Children's Film Classics, "The Story of Robin Hood" see July 8.

FRIDAY, JULY 11

Concert, UVM Baroque Ensemble, Billings Center, 8 p.m.

SATURDAY, JULY 12

High School Music Session, Little Orchestra Concert, Ira Allen Chapel.

Open poetry reading at the Church Street Center, 7:30 p.m.

SUNDAY, JULY 13

High School Music Session, Student Recital, Harris-Millis Lounge.

The "Music of Mozart," and two other music-related courses begin this Monday. Details from the Summer Session Office, Grasse Mount, 656-2085.

Currently on view at the Fleming Museum: "Paintings, Drawings, and Prints" from the permanent collection (up through July 20), and through July 27: "American Plains Indians" and "The American Scene: 1890-1940."

MONDAY, JULY 14

9 a.m. – 12 noon, and 1-4 p.m., Given Analytical Facility Open House, C-455 Given Bldg. Technician Tom Witt will demonstrate the use of sophisticated instruments for precise and elaborate analysis. Refreshments will be served.

7 – 10 p.m., evening of German film at the Church Street Center, details from 656-4221.

7:45 p.m., Scottish Country Dancing at Southwick Ballroom, instruction for all levels, beginners welcome. Further information, 863-4105.

International Music Educators Clinic: A Practicum in Music Education, Harris-Millis Complex.

Don't forget Monday night Foreign Dinners this week, Italian Night at Wright Hall, 6:30 p.m. $3.25, or $2.25 plus $1.00.

TUESDAY, JULY 15

8 p.m., High School Music Session faculty recital, Harris-Mills lounge, free.

1 – 5 p.m., Creative Arts Workshop at the Church Street Center, "From Fleece to Yarn, Rope and Felt," fee is $4, call 656-4221 for details.

1:30 p.m., Children's Film Classics, "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," 101 Votey, admission 50 cents.

7 and 9 p.m., Summer Session film, Charlie Chaplin in "Gold Rush," B-106 Cook, admission $1.

7:30 p.m., Free study group on prisons, meets at Church Street Center; open to all; made possible by a grant from the Vermont Council on the Humanities and Public Issues.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16

12:15 p.m., Church Street Center presents Entertainment at City Hall Park, admission free; done in cooperation with the Burlington Parks Commission and the Friends of City Hall Park.

1:30 p.m., "Tom Sawyer" repeats, same as under July 15.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., folk dancing at Southwick Ballroom, admission $1.

7:30 p.m., free study group on education meets at the Church Street Center, made possible through a grant from the Vermont Council on the Humanities and Public Issues.

8 p.m., Opening Night for the Champlain Shakespeare Festival's production of "Much Ado About Nothing." Box office at the Royall Tyler Theatre is 656-2094.

8 p.m., Shelburne Museum lecture aboard the SS Ticonderoga, listed as a reminder to ticket holders only. Prof. H. N. Muller, "The Ironic Panacea: Vermont Transportation Plans in the Nineteenth Century."

8 p.m., Women of UVM Book Discussion Group meets at the home of Barbara Mieder, 327 Oak Hill Road, Williston, to discuss "The Descent of Woman" by Elaine Morgan.

CHAMPLAIN SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Our Town – July 9, 10, 11, 12, 21, 23, 26, 29, 31, August 2, 6, 12, 15, 18, 21, 23, 27, and 30* . . .

Much Ado About Nothing – July 16, 17, 19, 22, 24, 25, 30, August 1, 9, 13, 16*, 19, 22, 25, 28, and 30.

Timons of Athens – August 6, 7, 11, 14, 16, 20, 23*, 26, and 29.

*indicates matinee.

For information, reservations, box office: Royall Tyler Theatre, phone 656-2094.

"UYA Is Your Need Too"

(University Year For Action)

Knowledge Emerges Only Through Invention and Re-Invention, Through the Restless, Impatient, Continuing, Hopeful Inquiry Men Pursue in the World, With the World and With Each Other.

Paulo Friere

The environment, human rights of children and tenants, welfare recipients, the sick, mentally ill, land use and development, transportation, consumer protection, access to legal advice, aging, population control, and many other issues need active advocates to develop projects to meet specific needs. Research and action on issues and institutions can make a profound difference to the people they serve.

In the fall of 1971 the federal University Year for Action program was developed to provide opportunities for students to serve full time in community projects while linking learning and action. UYA began in January 1972 with 35 volunteers and was expanded in August 1972 to 50 with students working in more than 15 projects in such areas as health, education, consumer protection, youth advocacy, facilitating volunteers on other campuses through the OVP Clearinghouse Extension Project and special placements.

University Year for Action is funded by the Action Agency (Peace Corps, VISTA, National Student Volunteer Program, etc.) and provides subsistence resources for students to work full time for a 12 month period on a community action project while earning academic credit. Students work at their jobs and relate their experiences to learning goals under supervision of agency and UYA staff and faculty from their academic program areas. Experienced volunteers who would like to contribute their skills on a full time basis in learning/service project while living in the poverty community may apply to UYA. Applications and program information are available in the OVP office.

Screening for UYA positions is continuous with new placements available at the beginning of each year.

Call 656-2062 or Come: Office of Volunteer Programs, University of Vermont, Mansfield House, 25 Colchester Avenue, Burlington, Vermont 05401, Harold D. Woods, Director.

Merv Griffin's TM Talk

This Monday on television, a yogi, a state senator, a psychiatrist (and best seller author), and an actress will appear as guests of Merv Griffin to talk about something they have in common. Along with almost one million people in the world today these people are practicing and enjoying the benefits of Transcendental Meditation in their daily lives.

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi has been teaching the technique, (TM for short) in the western world for almost twenty years. Now he expresses and discusses an event entitled the Dawn of the Age of Enlightenment which has come about as a result of so many people enjoying the benefits of this simple mental technique. He shares the stage with four other enthusiastic meditators who speak of their personal experiences with the talk show circuit audiences.

Ellen Corby, widely known as Grandma Walton, is a teacher of TM and a ten year meditator. She shows a side other than the character she normally plays. Senator Allan Gregario, of California, explains how TM has become an indispensable part of his routine. Dr. Howard Bloomfield discusses his use of TM along with psychiatry. Dr. Bloomfield's book, Discovering Inner Energy and Overcoming Stress has been on the New York Times best seller list this spring.

Don't miss the Merv Griffin Show on Monday, July 14, at 4:30, channel 5 for a comprehensive and interesting discussion of five meditators' personal experiences and feelings about Transcendental Meditation.

Veteran's Mobile Van Returns

William A. Yasinski, Director of the Veterans Administration Center, White River Junction, announced that a Mobile Van will again be touring the State of Vermont in the month of August as a part of the Centers' outreach program to veterans and their dependents.

Information will be made available to Veterans, their widows, parents, or children concerning benefits for medical and dental care, education and training, compensation and pension and loans for homes and mobile homes. Yasinski said, "The Van program is essentially bringing the VA to the Veteran in his community and an outreach of ongoing efforts to insure that Veterans are appraised of their rights and benefits." The van offers privacy for interviewing and taking claims and will be staffed by trained and experienced counselors.

SAGA Food Service

The following is the Saga Food Service Summer Schedule:

Given Dining Hall will be open on its regular hours of 7:30 a.m. – 1:00 p.m. all summer. Living/Learning and Wright Dining Hall will be open for breakfast, lunch, and dinner from July 7 through August 16 as follows: Breakfast 7:15–8:30, Lunch 11:30–1:00, Dinner 5:00–6:30.

Tilting At Windmills

GRAPHICS ARTS GALLERY

100 Dorset Street South Burlington 862-6100

CREATIVE CUSTOM DESIGN AND FRAMING

FINE ART PRINTS

LIMITED EDITION GRAPHICS

DECORATIVE WALL HANGINGS

100 DORSET STREET

Baroque Ensemble Summer Concert

On July 11, at 8 p.m. in the vestibule of Billings Student Union, the UVM Baroque Ensemble will present "Music for a Summer's Eve," an informal concert of music from the Renaissance and Baroque periods. The Ensemble, numbering for this concert seven musicians, will sing and play a wide variety of early instruments including the snarling shawm, the sensuous sackbut, the curious crumhorn, and the fabulous fipple flute. Works by Dufay, Josquin, Willaert, and the ubiquitous Anonymous will represent the Renaissance; works by Monteverdi, Turini, and a ravashing motet for soprano, baroque flute, and harpsichord by André Campra make up the Baroque part of the program.

Performing in this concert will be William and Elizabeth Metcalfe, Philip and Jane Ambrose, Jill Levis, Peter Tourin, and Dale Voelker. Tickets are $1.75 and are available at the Summer Session Office at Grasse Mount or at the door.

Vermont Open Backgammon Championship

The 3rd Annual Vermont Open 1975 Backgammon Championship is scheduled to be played at Bromley Mountain in Manchester Center, Vermont, on Saturday, August 2nd, and Sunday, August 3rd. The nationally-sanctioned tournament will have beginners, intermediate, and championship divisions, with entry fees of $10.00/ $25.00/ $50.00 respectively.

Competition play is scheduled to commence on August 2nd at 10:00 a.m. Tournament prices will be awarded to all winners and finalists, as well as consolation winners. Match play will be under the rules and regulations of the World Backgammon Association. Many nationally-ranked players will be represented in the Championship flight. The Tournament is for the benefit of the Vermont Children's Cancer Research Fund/Jimmy Fund.

This is an open Tournament – anyone can enter. To register, call or write – Guy A. Thomas (tournament chairman), Way's Lane, Manchester Center, Vermont 05255, (802) 362-3900.

Accomplished Organist To Give Recital

An organ recital will be presented at the College Street Congregational Church, Burlington at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, July 18 by Rev. David F. Gallagher. Father Gallagher, a Stigmatine priest from Wellesley, Massachusetts, is a graduate of Boston University and the Angelicum University in Rome. Vitally interested in ecumenical relations, he has served as Associate Organist at Old South (Congregational) Church in Boston and as a member of the Music Commission of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts. He has also played numerous recitals in churches and temples both in this country and in Europe.

Father Gallagher is presently a member of the faculty of Emmanuel College, Boston and is actively involved in the ministry at Sacred Heart Church, Waltham.

A strawberry shortcake dessert and a bake sale will follow the recital. Proceeds from the event will go to the church's Harpsichord Fund, an effort to raise enough money for the purchase of a harpsichord in order to extend the church's musical offerings to the community.

Admission is $2.50 ($1.00 Students). Advance tickets are available at the Everyday Bookshop, 106 Church Street.

Extra! International Dinners

For the Adventurous Epicurean or the Armchair Voyageur, Summer Session in co-operation with SAGA FOODS presents a weekly tour of international dinners.

The following is the summer menu for the International Dinners Program:

July 14th, Monday: ITALIAN NIGHT

featuring a menu with names too Italian to pronounce or spell and live entertainment with a program of Italian music by the Summer Music Session for High School Students.

July 21st, Monday: FRENCH CANADIAN NIGHT

emphasizing the French in French Canadian this dinner will feature the variety of hearty Quebecois soupes and Gaspe Fish. Toe stomping French Canadian Fiddling by Camile Dubois and friends.

July 28th, Monday: ISRAELI NIGHT

Fresh fruit and a variety of kibbutzian fare will share the spotlight with a program of Israeli Folk Dancing to which all are invited to participate. Ben Bergstein and Kaval will conduct the dance.

August 4th, Monday: SPANISH NIGHT

Paella and Arroz con Pollo, Gazpacho and all those other unknowns will taste great while listening to Phil Rhinelander with a program of Spanish Classical guitar. All that lacks is the bullfight.

August 11th, Monday: GERMAN NIGHT

Hot Potato Salda, Sauerbraten, Knockwurst, etc. The Burlington German Band will certainly make the place lively. Bring your own Beer.

ITALIAN NIGHT MENU

For those who like to throw around a little Italian at the dinner table, but still can't discern the difference between dinner and desert, here's a quick, if not appetizing review for the Italian Night Menu:

Monster Breads and Cheese

Antipasto Bar

Minestrone Di Fagioli (soup with vegetables and herbs)

Fish Piemontese (fish fillet in a batter and simmered in a broth of clams and tomato)

Chicken Gismonda (sauteed chicken on bed of spinach and topped with mushrooms)

Lasagne Pasticcate (Lasagna with meat and cream sauce)

Fettucine (long flat egg noodles)

Zucchine Ripieni (stuffed zucchini)

Gali (deep fried pastries)

Gelati (ice cream)

Grapes

Expresso

Cappuccino

For more information on this and other activities, call Gerry Hunt, Summer Session, 656-2085.

The dinners, co-ordinated by Gerry Hunt, Director of Summer Session Recreation, Price Hutchins, Manager of Wright Dining Hall, and Fred Smith, Director of Saga Food Service were designed to provide a program of international dinners and relevent entertainment for summer students and the Burlington community. The International Dinners Program will be held every Monday night, beginning July 14, 6:30 p.m., Wright Dining Hall on the Redstone Campus. The price is a modest $3.25 or $1.00 with a Saga Meal Ticket.

According to Mr. Hunt, there will be a lot of attention paid to the visual aspects of these dinners as well as the others. "We will attempt to have an atmosphere of posters, costumes, etc. as far as it is practical."

*****

CLASSIFIED

HOUSE WANTED: Looking for country home to rent within 20 miles of Burlington. Needed as soon as possible. Have Pet. Please call 985-9575.

Room available – rent by month or week – price $15/week – one block from campus. Call 658-0373.

1976 Jawa 350 – luggage rack, passenger back rest, enclosed chain, good gas mileage, quiet, [illegible] reasonable offer. Phelps at 864-7244 days.

Route 6 string guitar – 2 years old – good condition – nylon strings $55. Call Sally at 862-8832 for information.

For Sale – '68 blue VW Bug, custom front, many extras, 51,000 miles. $1000 or best offer. 862-3230.

For sale – shell sno-shoe studded winter tires. D78 x 13, will fit vega or pinto, $20/pr. Fischer Imperator skis, 185 cm. Refinished past season. VG condition, $40.00. WANTED – used car cassette deck with FM radio. Will trade. 863-3341 after 5:00.

I want to buy a second-hand 35 mm camera, excellent condition. 862-1462.

Wanted to buy second hand double bed or water bed. Please call Donna at 656-2053 (days).

Mozart Ticket for Sale: for concert No. 6 (Sunday, July 27). Call Meg x3024 weekdays, 985-3814 nights.

For Sale – Mozart Festival Tickets. Complete set for 15 concerts. $45.00. Call 658-0843 late evenings.

Classified ads are free. They must be in the Summer Cynic office each Monday before the Thursday issue.

Come On A Picnic With SAGA

Recently a new and different type of lunch has been available on campus.

Continuing through August 15th (weather permitting) campus visitors, students, UVM Staff etc. may buy a picnic lunch on the green between Morrill Hall and the Royall Tyler Theatre. An additional location will be tried near Votey Hall beginning on July 7th.

A picnic-cookout is served from approximately 11:30 a.m. – 1:00 p.m. each day. A group of UVM students conceived the idea and in cooperation with SAGA are offering the following tasty items:

–Charcoal broiled burgers served on a toasted english bun

–All beef hot dogs on a toasted bun

–Homemade brownies

–Lemonade

–Fresh fruit

YARN CELLAR

NOW HAS BUTTONS

ALSO APPLIQUES, And Many Exciting Christmas Projects

yarn cellar

THE ROYAL

98 Church Street

Burlington

NEWS

UVM Hassels With Deficit Budget

by MARGO HOWLAND

The University of Vermont Board of Trustees approved a $58 million-dollar budget containing a deficit of $244,000 for the fiscal 1976 year, at their June 6-7 meeting.

"This is as tight as we can get; it's basically a fairly good budget at this point," Executive Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson told the Board.

Patterson, who became Interim President June 23, was warned by the Board that any further budget cuts would be unacceptable. Trustee Luther F. Hackett asked for, and received, a board concensus that the Administration be directed to adopt balanced budgets.

"Our concern now is with the future. It should be understood that we will not operate with deficits in the future. We could not," Hackett emphasized.

The University's red-ink budget is an embarrassing contrast to the $9.59 million-dollar balanced budget of the Vermont State Colleges, adopted the same weekend. The comparison has been likened to two families discussing transportation problems: One family is trying to find the money to trade in both cars; the other is trying to decide whether to take the bus or save money and walk.

The deficit figure of $244,000 is significantly lower than the $683,000 projected deficit the trustees were talking about in March. That figure took into account tuition increases of 20 percent in-state and 17 percent out-of-state students, effective in fiscal year 1976, and a tuition differential of $500 for the College of Medicine.

By April, the Financial Planning Committee, headed by Hackett, was recommending to the Board adoption of a budget deficit "not to exceed $700,000" but indicated that increased appropriations and careful trimming of administrative costs could lower that figure considerably. The University has also dipped into some reserve funds in their efforts to shrink the deficit.

A slight, inadvertant change in the "mix" of in-state and out-of-state students and an increase of about 50 more students has also bolstered the university revenues.

Director Richard Steele announced earlier this year that the University would have about 100 more out-of-state students and 100 fewer Vermont students than expected. There was, however, an increase in the Vermont transfer students.

The adoption of the budget ended a long year of financial woes, culminating in the adoption of what is believed to be the University's first-time-ever deficit.

The most serious blow came when Governor Thomas P. Salmon impounded $300,000 from appropriated funds, resulting in a potential $4 million dollar problem.

After embarking on a program of severe budget cutbacks, including the elimination of some 63 faculty positions, and shortchanging some academic graduate and undergraduate programs, the University shortfall was cut to $1.3 million.

The University phased out the Experimental Program and ended the 76-year reign of football as a competitive, athletic varsity sport.

Attempts to eliminate the two-year nursing program were abandoned after state-wide protests.

Tuition increases, higher than originally planned, were scheduled for both in-state and out-of-state students. In-state tuition, stable for four years, rose from $950 to $1,100, while out-of-state costs rose from $2650 to $2930.

During the past six months, the Financial Planning Committee reviewed University policy on the in-state - out-of-state student ratio, admissions of "all qualified Vermonters," the in-state and out-of-state tuition ratio, level enrollment, faculty tenure, and the University's "commitment to quality."

The effect of program cutbacks upon the academic quality of the University raised a great deal of concern among faculty and members of the Administration.

Further academic program cutbacks were ruled out, but indications from the State of no more than level funding in the years ahead prompted Vice President Patterson to say in exasperation, "If the State insists on funding us at a level it thinks it can afford, in about five years we're going to look like a fifth State College."

Patterson at one point broached the topic of reconsidering the University's position as an instrumentality of the state, and reverting to the private-school status UVM had until 1950. That proposal didn't get anywhere.

The University's financial worries are not exactly over. The states of Massachusetts, Maine, and Rhode Island have expressed their intent to drop out of a compact agreement with the University College of Medicine. Under the terms of the agreement, the University admits medical students from these three states and charges them in-state tuition. In addition, the three states pay a $5000 compact fee per student to the University.

Charged by the trustees to "recover the full costs of tuition," the University has been negotiating to raise the compact figure to $8,500. But at the Trustees' meeting, outgoing University President Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr. reported withdrawal symptoms from the three states.

The loss of the compacts would be a severe blow to the University and the Medical College. The state does not subsidize medical college tuition, and inflation has brought projected costs of a medical college education to $11,000 per year. (Tuition for Vermonters and compact students will be $1,600 next year.)

The compacts expired June 30, and Dr. William H. Luginbuhl, Dean of the Medical College, said that the University has informed the three states that they have terminated the compacts in their present form. This means that the states cannot send medical students to the University under the present compact arrangement of a $5000 fee. The compacts will extend for one year for Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and for two years for Maine, so the students will not be affected immediately.

Medical Compacts Cancelled

by MARGO HOWLAND

Last week the Dean of the College of Medicine, Dr. William H. Luginbuhl, announced that the University has terminated its medical compacts with the states of Maine, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Directed by the University Board of Trustees in June to "recover the full cost of a medical college education" the University wants the compact fee paid by each state, currently $5000 per student, negotiated upwards to at least $8,500.

Because of tuition increases going into effect this fall, the student from the compact state, who under the arrangement gets preferred status and in-state tuition rates, will pay the College (either from his own pocket or from the state compact fee) a total of $6600.

The trustees voted a $500 differential for all students in the Medical College so that when one speaks of in-state tuition, (meaning Vermonters and compact students) one is referring to tuition that has jumped from $950 to $1600 in one year.

Two medical students - one from Springfield, Vermont and the other from Essex, England, told the Dean and the Financial Planning Committee of the Board of Trustees that if the Trustees continue to raise prices and ask for "recovery of full cost" it may send the cost of a medical college education beyond the means of most.

But with the cost of a medical college education, in these inflationary times, running about $11,000 per student per year, it appears that the University has little choice.

The University can no longer afford to educate medical college students when they lose some $4000 on each one. As it quite understandably is not going to get the full amount from Vermont students, it must turn to the states which want to send their students to the College of Medicine.

The money comes from two sources - student tuition and the compact fees. It is too much, for a college that does not have scholarships for medical students, to expect the students to have to pay these extraordinary costs.

It is in the best interests for the states to have such compact arrangements. It is not much of a sacrifice when one thinks of the overall benefit to the people of the state, in the long run.

Dean Luginbuhl should be commended for his efforts, and those of Dr. Andrews, to raise the compact fees. The only danger is if we have nothing at all by next July 1, when the first compact is terminated.

The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

How to Be Awake and Alive

Credit: Lubo Paz

$4.95

HOW TO BE AWAKE AND ALIVE

Mildred Newman & Bernard Berkowitz

The authors of How to Be Your Own Best Friend have done it again—with the enormous sympathy and understanding and profound, practical wisdom that kept their first book the nation's #1 best seller for forty-nine weeks. Mildred Newman and Bernard Berkowitz now explore another central psychological concept: the unconscious.

How to Be Your Own Best Friend changed millions of lives by helping people to like themselves. This new book will similarly change lives—by teaching people to see themselves as they really are, to look their fears in the eye, and perhaps discover they are only the fears of childhood, after all.

The authors, husband and wife, are both psychologists with an extensive private practice in New York City.

Hardcover Books — Second Floor
Church and College Sts.
Downtown Burlington
658-4554

the corner bookstore

"One-stop shopping for books, stationery and art supplies"

The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

Attitude Change Regarding Secret Salaries

University of Vermont President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, who succeeded Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr. on June 23, had not been in office one whole day before he had brought a change of attitude to the Administration regarding the controversy over secret UVM salaries.

On his first day in office, Patterson said he personally wasn't opposed to the disclosure of the University's presidential and vice presidential salaries.

"I'm not personally thrilled by efforts to keep them secret - I really don't mind one way or the other," Patterson said.

While Patterson's predecessor, Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr., has been quoted as saying his own salary was $43,000 (some have said it was $44,000), Patterson's statements are a marked contrast to several members of the Board of Trustees who are pushing to keep the salary increases for Patterson, Academic Vice President Alfred B. Rollins Jr. and Vice President for Development Barbara Snelling, secret from the public.

Luther F. Hackett, the chairman of the Trustee's Ad Hoc Committee on Financial Planning, has termed as "prying" attempts to get the salaries disclosed.

Patterson, however, said that at the August Board of Trustees meeting he will present a policy proposal on the question, and he strongly indicated he would favor making the salaries public.

"I assume by the next Board meeting I'll have some recommendations. Once I talk to a number of people involved, at that point I'll have some recommendations tending towards a policy of openness," he said.

Patterson has since talked to Trustee Chairman Allan O. Eaton, of Winchester, Mass., who has indicated he will ask the Board to review the policy of keeping the salaries secret.

The matter of secret salaries became an issue last month when it was discovered that the Trustees' Executive Committee had increased the salaries of Patterson, Rollins and Snelling, by a reported seven percent. The salaries were not discussed publicly at the trustees' meeting except in the most oblique of terms.

Although the Trustees did not deny the existence of the increases, they refused to comment on them. But recently growing pressure from state legislators, Governor Thomas P. Salmon and Administration Secretary Robert M. Wilson for public disclosure has apparently resulted in the Board of Trustees taking the matter into consideration at their next meeting.

The Vermont State Colleges have pointedly observed that they don't keep their salaries secret, but no one at the University seems to know if the University has a specific policy of non-disclosure, or whether it is merely a "tradition" or "habit" of long-standing.

Patterson said the inclination of the University not to disclose salaries had been ongoing for as long as he has been here.

Senator Esther Sorrell, D-Chittenden, said recently the secrecy was "disgraceful" and hinted this was no way for a state university to act if it's going to be asking the legislature for funding later on.

Patterson said as far as he knew there was nothing preventing a member of the University Administration or any faculty member, from disclosing his own personal salary.

"Anyone who wants to can do that," he said, adding that he had no personal objections to disclosing his own salary, but preferred to wait until the Board of Trustees could deal with the salary issue in its entirity.

In his first public response to the issue, Patterson said as far as he knew, the chief reason the University did not routinely disclose salary figures was because of the different faculty and administrative groups involved.

"I don't believe we should disclose individual rank and file salaries," Patterson said, saying it would lead to administrative difficulties.

Patterson said he was not aware that any other salaries besides his own were discussed in the executive session.

"I wasn't there, so I don't know," he said, adding that salaries had been "adjusted" up to seven per cent overall by college, but not every position would be included.

Patterson's own salary increase, however, was for his new position as interim president.

"The members of the Board told me, standing out in the hall after the meeting, what they were willing to offer me as interim President," Patterson said.

Patterson said the salary increases for other positions were set by outgoing President Edward C. Andrews, Jr. with Patterson's concurrence.

Davis' Buckley Amendment Challenge Fails

by MARGO HOWLAND

The first student challenge of academic records under the Buckley amendment at the University of Vermont failed Monday, June 2, when University officials released a ruling that the records of the student involved were not "inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise in violation of his privacy or other rights."

A three-member committee of emeriti faculty, Dean George V. Kidder, Dr. Alexander Gershoy and Dr. Reginald Milbank, who heard the challenge of student Alan Davis, submitted their recommendations Thursday to the Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr.

On Friday, May 30, the University had planned to release the ruling, but the student's attorney, Richard Blum of Burlington, refused to agree, saying "I don't want my client to read about it in the papers, you can release it Monday."

Dr. Rollins has indicated that he will not order the student's record to be deleted or modified.

Davis, a pre-med student from Belle Harbor, New York, had specifically challenged a statement made by Zoology Professor Dr. Robert Keen that appeared in a composite letter of evaluation prepared by the University Pre-Medical Committee. The Buckley amendment, sponsored by Sen. James Buckley, C-New York, permits a student to challenge the content of academic records "to ensure that the records are not inaccurate or misleading, or otherwise in violation of the privacy or other rights of students."

The committee concluded that "complete omission of the substance of the letter would have resulted in an inaccurate and misleading evaluation, whereas the present committee letter should not be misleading for the purposes for which it was intended and read."

Davis had maintained that Keen's statements criticizing him as a laboratory assistant and saying he "procrastinated almost to the point of disaster" were misleading and inaccurate in light of the fact that he had received an A in Keene's course.

The Review Committee acknowledged this fact, and said the statement "could be misleading to one who fails to note that the course grade on the transcript is A. The Committee, as well as Dr. Keen, could well have called attention to the grade in some way."

The Review Committee therefore recommended that Dr. Keen be asked by "an appropriate University official to review his letter "... to assure that he considers it in each detail a clear and accurate expression of his opinion and to make any revisions he may find desireable."

Executive Reshufflings

UVM Registrar Richard Barwin has been appointed as interim Assistant Executive Vice President.

The appointment of Barwin by Interim President Wayne C. Patterson is yet another of the executive reshufflings which have been going on at the University since Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr. announced his resignation from the Presidency.

Andrews, who now heads the Maine Medical Center at Portland, has been succeeded for an interim period by executive Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson.

Patterson, who took over the reins June 23 (a week earlier than expected) will serve until the Board of Trustees approve a permanent successor.

That is not likely to occur before December.

Associate Executive Vice President Richard Powers assumed Patterson's post for the same period, following Patterson's appointment as interim president.

Barwin's appointment as interim assistant executive Vice President is related to the change of Powers' office. He will assist Powers, while Associate Registrar Charles Howe takes charge of the Registrar's office.

Barwin joined the UVM staff in 1968 as administrative assistant to the Dean of the University of Vermont Graduate College, and was named Registrar in 1971.

A graduate of Penn State, Barwin earned a masters in Education Administration at Stetson University, and joined the University staff after a career in the U.S. Air Force.

Dr. Smith Passes On

by MARGO HOWLAND

The University flag flew at half-mast this week in memory of Dr. Durwood J. Smith of the University Pharmacology Department, who died Saturday morning at the Medical Center Hospital.

Dr. Smith, 58, was chairman of the department from 1953 until June of this year.

He was born in Des Moines, Iowa, on May 10, 1917, the son of Harry P. and Colleen (Patterson) Smith.

He received his bachelors' and MD degrees from Syracuse, served as a captain in the Army Medical Corps, and came to UVM in 1953.

Dr. Smith is survived by his wife, Sue (Mauldin) Smith; four daughters, Sue Smith Aiken of Indianapolis, Indiana; Colleen Smith Slosberg of Philadelphia, Pa.; Charleen Smith Reidel of Frieberg, Germany, and Carolin Ann Smith of Burlington; a son McHardy Maxwell Smith of Burlington, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were at the College Street Congregational Church Monday afternoon. University interim President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson and Vice President Dr. Larry McCorkle were among those in attendance.

Open Season: Liberty Union -

by SCOTT MacKAY

"What do you say when people ask you what Liberty Union is... I could never come up with an answer."

Martha Abbott

"This was the most conservative – no reactionary Liberty Union meeting I've ever been to."

Peter Diamondstone

"A man who is not a Socialist at age twenty is sick of heart; a man who is a Socialist at age forty is sick of mind."

Bismarck

"An idealist is one who, upon learning that a rose smells better than a cabbage, concludes that it will also make a better soup."

H. L. Mencken

••••••••••••

Joyce Breuler was there Friday, completing the groundwork for the Liberty Union's first non-election year convention. John Franco, Jim Roach, Ron MacNeil and Dave Mahan cruised in Saturday morning, armed with camp coolers, hamburgers, and hot dogs, all swilling down 10 a.m. bottles of Schlitz. Nancy Kaufman, the indomitable power company battler, didn't make it until Sunday. Marlboro inhaling Martha Abbott, the third party's most recent candidate for Tom Salmon's job, was ubiquitous. Bernie Sanders showed up late; Mike Parenti never came. Furrowed-foreheaded Peter Diamondstone, longtime Vermont hipster left gadfly, was there for the duration. The Harold Stassen of the Vermont left, Dennis Morrisseau, paid an ephemeral Saturday afternoon visit. His closest rival for the Stassen award [illegible] Bun O'Shea, drank wine. Pat Leahy was in Moscow. Tom Salmon was at Fenway Park, tossing out the first horsehide at the Yankee-Red Sox game. Art Deloy and his callused-hand construction workers were conspicuously absent. Mike Harrington would have been in the barroom. Saul Alinsky was gyrating in his grave by noon on Saturday. Before dusk set in Sunday evening, Alinsky was spinning in his coffin like a top powered by a 1200 c.c. Harley-Davidson engine...

••••••••••••••

Kingsland Bay, Ferrisburg – Drive up the winding road past Contented Cows and Rolling Pastures and all that. The Kingsland Bay Resort soon weaves into focus on this sunny June Saturday, reminding one of an earlier, simpler America. Nestled on a Vermont Life cover picturesque setting in an algae infested cranny on Lake Champlain, it was once a camp where Mamaroneck parents banished their daughters to for the summer to ride horses and learn French, while they took the S.S. Rotterdam to Europe or played golf at Winged-Foot. Riding paddocks dot the entrance road to the fairway manicured lawns of an old estate that slightly resembles F.D.R.'s Hyde Park manor. And no macadam, city-park tennis courts with basketball hoops hung at each end for this crew – rather real country club clay, these tennis courts. Out on the bay, an obvious neophyte is fighting a losing battle with the rudder of his day sailer, while in the distance, a sloop large enough to make the Newport-to-Bermuda run plys the calm Champlain waters.

In another time this place would have been ideal for a June wedding reception. A New York Times society-page marriage between the scions of stock brokers and manufacturing interests. There would have been a trainload of Tom Buchanans and Dick Divers up from New York, sipping Martinis straight up, talking about long forgotten Yale football games, what a nice Episcopal service it was. Ah, only in America can the Better People trace their lineage to the original rum-runners and smugglers who started it all. F. Scott Fitzgerald's caricatures. John O'Hara's people. If Kingsland Bay exudes anything at all, it is as playground for the waspocracy.

But, as Dylan told us before we knew, the times they are a'changin'. The Liberty Union conclave that was about to get underway was in sharp, convoluted contrast to the bucolic setting. The convention was housed in a sweaty, sauna bath of a cabin with tawdry chairs strewn haphazardly in a semi-circle. A James Naismith-basketball rim peered from the ceiling of the dimly lit old cabin up a kaleidoscopic dressed gathering of perhaps twenty-five. A political convention? Hell, this looks like the Millard Fillmore on a Friday night.

This writer was sneaking a notepad from beneath his morning Boston Globe when he was asked if he worked for the Rutland Herald. "Are you kidding... I'm from the CIA... Actually I write for the Summer Cynic, a student newspaper at UVM that won't pay me enough to cover my bar tab for the afternoon." Jonathan, the pleasant fellow with pensive brown eyes, wryly replied that he was a free-lance who currently travailed for the Nation. He was a graduate of Columbia Journalism School who formerly was a reporter for Boston's Globe and Phoenix. He had been all over South America, even to Chile for a look at Allende's ill-fated Socialist experiment. The only other reporter in attendance was a blue jean clad young woman from Billy Loeb's neanderthal nonsense sheet, that poor excuse for toilet tissue with an editorial policy somewhere to the right of Attila the Hun. She probably knew her story would be killed anyway, but one must respect this young lady for bothering to show at all, and one hopes that someday she saves up enough money for a tank of gas and obtains an interview in Hartford, Providence or Springfield. And where was the Free Press? Ah, those Human Typewriters who paste up press releases and call themselves journalists. Monday, the Fender Bender Free Press published an erroneous story datelined Ferrisburg, written by a reporter who not only wasn't even at the convention, but nonetheless had the audacity to sign a byline. A telephone journalist who got a snow job from Martha Abbott and stated there were seventy people there. Unless Liberty Union is counting attendance like the World Football League, there was no basis in fact for releasing a figure at least double the attendance of any one session. There were twenty-five individuals there for Sunday morning's assembly, it was the largest gathering of this weekend affair.

The convention began in an insouciant, innocent fashion that rendered no hint of the racous, fractious parley that was to ensue. A brief evaluation of last November's highly successful Liberty Union revealed a fundamental, although not serious, schism between those who wanted to see the party continue to emphasize an electoral politics stance and those who believed that Liberty Union's central mission was issue-related, between-elections organizing within Vermont.

Some members, for instance, questioned the value of Liberty Union's expenditure of over three thousand dollars of profit from the Bonnie Raitt concert on television advertising designed to garner votes. They felt that perhaps the money derived from the Raitt benefit could have been utilized more effectively had it been earmarked towards community organizing efforts. Others complained that the party is overly concentrated in the Burlington-Chittenden County area of the state. John Franco, a state senate candidate from Barre, disclosed that he felt like a one-man Washington County operation during the 1974 campaign. It is true that Liberty Union's only full-time office is in Burlington; it is also a fact that roughly one-quarter of Vermont's electorate resides in Chittenden County.

"And where was the FREE PRESS? Ah, those Human Typewriters who paste up press releases and call themselves journalists!"

The only concrete discussion of the Saturday morning kick-off was a revealing one that underscored a dilemma that the left has labored under for years, for at least as long as there has been a movement dubbed the New Left. It is what a political campaign does to the personal life of one who undertakes it as a serious, full-time venture. Politics, like most other endeavours in life, is one percent inspiration and ninety-nine percent perspiration. In any campaign there are certain nuts-and-bolts tasks, like scheduling candidates, press relations, registering voters, canvassing the electorate, managing an office – jobs that someone must do as efficiently as possible. Whether one is a Democrat or Republican, YAF or SWP, these nitty-gritty chores are all alike. It is a dreary, late October afternoon in a cluttered office and someone has to drive a press release to Montpelier, someone has to distribute thousands of leaflets, someone has to run off a stencil on the mimeograph. And when one consents to involve himself in such an effort, he becomes a political robot, an automaton whose personal life ceases. The problem for the left has always been: How to change the direction of a society by playing by the rules of the political jungle and yet not become one of them, the established political order. Even consenting to play the game by their rules can destroy one's perspective, envenom one's system. Clair Kessler, who manned (womaned?) the L.U. office on Church Street during the last campaign, spoke to the marrow of the matter when she intoned, "At times... I felt like I was subjugating my personal life and beliefs."

"The convention began in an insouciant, innocent fashion that rendered no hint of the racous, fractious parley that was to ensue."

The convention continued in a rambling, desultory manner. No parliamentary procedure to shackle anyone's opportunity to speak also meant an agenda-less session that accomplished little. If not to decide really does mean to decide, then these people made numerous, weighty decisions. A proposal on reforming Liberty Union's amorphous structure so that it conformed to state election law made little headway. Time and again throughout the convention a dauntless Martha Abbott attempted to bring the convention around to settling the basic question of a party structure. Yet, by late Sunday afternoon, little progress was evident on the key matter of party structure. Also, presentations by party leaders on Vermont's economy and agriculture received little attention with regard to translating excellent research and social criticism into specific political goals.

By late afternoon, boredom and ennui had reared their ugly faces. Many conventioneers drifted to the lake for a swim, or to the tennis courts, where the dreg left was immersed in beer-drinking and the delights of cannibas. This writer retreated to the bar for some cold Heineken and a progress report on the Yankee-Red Sox donnybrook. Dave Piper, the amiable barkeep, sent yours truly back to the convention cabin with some bad news on the Olde Towne Team, Boston's Red Sox, and a pallative which consisted of two Heineken – to go. When we returned to the convention, just in time for the colloquy on women's issues, the proverbial shit was breaking the fan.

The festering wound of women's oppression, percolating beneath the surface all weekend, propelled its way to the convention floor with all the force and suddenness of a geyser. Tension inundated the room like cigar smoke at an Urban Democratic party meeting. Both Saturday and Sunday afternoon sessions ran head on into the issues raised by the encounter group-left, the militant women's "feminist socialism" espoused by Liberty Union's Swinton-Saxe left, the Dyko-Cunt Front (D.C.F.).

Initially, the forensics were relegated to objections to the woman's role in internal party affairs. Clair Kessler claimed that "tasks men were assigned to do... well, women just didn't get the same respect as men for doing the same task." Soon though, the women brought to the forefront demands like wages for housework and a proposal for organizing a wide ranging union of women – housewives and working women in Vermont – in an effort to galvanize a feminist, socialist society. No talk from these women about the ERA or day care centers. They never got specific; it seemed to this writer like a nebulous Knights of Labor – I.W.W. dream scheme, a movement totally divorced from the realities of Vermont politics.

The tautness of the discussion became as self-evident as the blistering, ninety-degree heat in the steamy cabin. The women of the DCF, supposedly together, uninhibited individuals, simply clammied up or meandered into a group therapy rap. One started to cry. Another spoke of farm women as "oppressed people who work sixteen hours per day without getting a cent." Farm Women? You mean Holstein-hefty ladies who work all day and put three squares on the table for a family of six, strong women who keep home and hearth together while the old man is milking or off on a mid-winter toot. Women who run the PTA and the Grange and Congregational Church suppers and lead self-reliant lives in the Yankee tradition. And this Dyko-Cunt Front Women's socialist-feminist melange, people who call marriage "legalized prostitution" and proclaim themselves "pure communists" who run things as a "collective" – are they going to be able to organize farm women? Or for that matter, working women?

Then the grating, lifestyle chauvinism aspect of the dilletante left burrowed its way to daylight. The irrepressible Nancy Kaufman stated, "Even in a socialist society, the question still becomes... it comes down to who is going to do the shit work, like cooking and cleaning..." Gene Bergman echoed her statement from the bleacher-section of the hall...

...Ah, where is Tom Wolfe when you really need him (or a Wednesday deadline when it is 5 a.m. Tuesday morning and Elliot wants this mess no later than 10 a.m.)... jewish, New York accents telling Vermonters how to live. A lawyer calling cooking shit work. Oh honey, I'd like to see you strut into a restaurant kitchen in Burlington and tell some Greek that cooking is shit work and alienating and that he ought to flee the false consciousness of the kitchen and join the revolution... Suburbanites, five years removed from the Brandeis – B.U. – Clark – N.Y.U. "I'm from Rockville Centa" lifestyle... these people profess solidarity with the working class, yet possess an inherent disrespect and distaste for their lives and work. Oh yeah, they'll tell you the working people are cool and all – but the I'd-never-do-it-myself attitude still prevails... Another long, hard gaze around this room and one realizes just how estranged from reality these stuck in the sixties Liberty Unionists are. They talk about things like "The Third World in Vermont!" White people with college degrees prattling about the Third World – in Vermont no less!

As I take another savage slug off the Heineken, the realization hits – there are no working people here, none of the constituency of thousands who registered their protest with the politics-as-usual stance of the state's Republiocrats by casting Liberty Union votes last November. One is immediately infused with an overweening desire to crack these dreamy nuts over the head with a jackhammer stamped "back to the real world." Yes, Virginia, there are people in Vermont who don't sleeze by in life with college and grad school and defaulting on student loans and federal grants and foodstamps and pushing paper for the bureaucracy and checks from mommy and daddy and trips to Colorado to "find oneself." People who live in Vermont most or all of their lives and are farmers, cooks, carpenters, waitresses, construction workers. People who create something tangible for society, individuals who support dreamy idiots who couldn't coordinate a pitch game. And these myopic eggheads, organic-farmer-backpack-women's movement-lifestyle chauvinists... the moral opacity of it all... And these nuts and waterheads wonder why some working people are attracted to fascists like George Wallace and Ronnie Reagans and Trick E. Dick.

"White people with college degrees prattling about the Third World – in Vermont no less!"

I wonder what my friend Bradley "Crunch" Talbot would think of all this. He is an apprentice plumber who works overtime jobs to support his family. A hulking, whale of a man who works hard every day and rarely complains. He even confesses to "loving his work." Democrats? Republicans? No, he doesn't have much use for a bunch of corrupt fools who a few years ago gave him the unenviable choice of the jungles of Vietnam or the life and career disruption of becoming a C.O. He did his alternative work at the hospital and holds no grudges or lingering bitterness. He isn't particularly fond of the realization that the Nixon's and Rockefeller's of this world don't pay Uncle Sam anything near the percentage of his paycheck that is expended to wreak destruction all over the globe. But if Crunch sat here and listened to this jaded hipster advocating "taxing beer out of existence... because we need the cereal grains to feed the starving Third World," he would have cast his last vote for Liberty Union. These Liberty Union dreamers cannot possibly be cognizant of where Vermont's vast working class stands.

Finally, Peter Diamondstone injected some sanity into the discussion. He is a dishwasher and short order cook, albeit one with a law degree. He told Ms. Kaupman bluntly, "don't you call my work shit work... I take pride in doing it well and not sending dirty silverware out... you can call it work that makes you feel shitty, but never call it shit work." Diamondstone, though another anti-structure humanist dreamer, at least doesn't need the ego mask of being a professional to define his relationship to the world. He seems perhaps more secure within himself than many others here; such questions are not for this writer to judge. But one blatant item still creeps into our consciousness: there were a lot of fragile egos in attendance, that is for damn sure.

Bernie Sanders and John Franco recessed for a swim in the middle of all this. Sanders uttered, "the less done at this convention the better." Bernie is the sort of fellow who detests meetings and bureaucratic red tape, yet has such a libertarian outlook upon life that he genuinely tolerates splinter groups in the party. Sanders, however, does become incensed when a lack of unity, communication and energy stifle a project he has been laboring at – like the utilities issue. Franco, Sanders and Mike Parenti comprise a segment of the Liberty Union that seems intent upon organizing working people around the broad-based, all encompassing issues like Utility rates, economic issues, unions (only 16.1% of Vermont's work force is organized), taxes. People who recognize that Vermont, forty-second in the nation in per capita income, is a virtual colony dependent upon out of state capital. The people realize that low income workers, the unemployed, the elderly, those on fixed incomes – these are the people to be targeted as a potential organizing reservoir. The faction of Liberty Union that seeks plausible change by organizing statewide referendums on public power, and doesn't allow the superficial lifestyle divergencies to stand as a roadblock to realistic, radical change.

Franco is a case in point. He has lived in the state his entire life. (I don't mean to harp on this Vermonter-native thing, as there is nothing more contemptible than the typical political campaign in this state where all the issues are clouded by politicians trying to portray themselves as "true Vermonters" – whatever in hell that is. Yet a politician must have a deep and penetrating understanding of his constituency, one that can sometimes only be obtained by living with that constituency long enough to engender a mutual trust. And this is particularly true of a rural state such as Vermont.) As yours truly always reminds him, "You can take Franco out of Barre, but you can't take the Barre out of Franco." He is a slightly schizoid, bifurcated individual who will walk into a bar hammered on ten draft beers, leeringly roll his tongue in his mouth, and with trippy, open eyes proceed to explain what he would enjoy doing to the waitress. He'll close up every bar in town for a week and talk about his mediocre golf game, the dismal fortunes of the New York Giants and how he hopes a lot of dregs will show up for a friend's pre-marriage stag party... but one day he'll walk up College Street and see all the Andrews, Snellings, Bored of Trustees types sipping cocktails in front of the President's mansion while two thirty-five an hour workers wash Easy Ed's car and mow his lawn. Easy Ed, the bastard who told us to write our Congressmen during Kent State... Administrators who love to clean philosophy departments out of decent, though left-leaning, teachers and yet won't release their own salaries to the people who pay them... And like a man driven, he will be working day and night on research projects or organizing people. You won't see him in the bars anymore; you might catch him pulling all-nighters to meet a goddamn Cynic deadline. He disdains bullshit and petty, ego-tripping totalism; he admires committed people of action.

Parenti seems to have undergone a metamorphosis since he first moved to Vermont. Gone are the street theater-guerilla tactics that were always more style than substance – the NLF flag in front of the Free Press, a raving Ira Allen Chapel speech with babe in arms. Despite his

Groping For An Identity

Goodyear-Blimp sized showboating ego of the past, one always could muster an intense respect for Parenti. One had to admire the way in which he never hid behind the Academic Veil, the professors' chastity belts of scholarship and tenure and bookcases and pipe-smoking – all done while the world was going to hell. Michael could never live that life, and he was fired for it. Nowadays, he is not averse to wearing neckties and organizing working class community issues. One couldn't criticize him for not appearing this weekend; at least he is cognizant that the sixties are over.

"He is a slightly schizoid, bifurcated individual who will walk into a bar hammered on ten draft beers, leeringly roll his tongue in his mouth, and with trippy, open eyes proceed to explain what he would enjoy doing to the waitress."

And one cannot even judge too harshly the humorless zealots of the women's front. These are women who are grappling with their own relationship to the world, people who knew long ago that Karen Horney is more relevant than Sig Freud. It is not improbable that one of these women will one day become Vermont's first Elaine Noble-genre politician. These are women who have been deeply affected all their lives by the meritocratic hierarchy of sex, looks, personality, Dodge girls on TeeVee, money, intellectual attributes, family, etc. ad nauseum... to the point where some of these women resemble the inmates of Ken Kesey's Cukoo's nest. It is true however, that one must get himself/herself together before they can realistically help anyone else shed the fetters of capitalism or sexism or whatever. Also, these people ought to remind themselves that most women in the state probably could eventually be organized along women's issues; hardly any women in Vermont could be attracted to a total "feminist-socialist" women's ideology.

Whither Liberty Union? Well, it is still a motley amalgam of socialists, communists, gays, farmers, working people, hipsters, dregs, drop-ins and drop-outs from the McGovern–McCarthy Democratic Left, radical lawyers, striking construction workers, children's rights people, women's rights people, individuals with single issue tunnel vision and abstruse, idealistic humanists. Most of all though, these are people who truly care about their conception of what our society ought to be. These are people who haven't retreated to the false comfort and alienation of the suburbs so they can subscribe to Ms. and New York Magazine and the Village Voice and do a once every four year tango for a McGovern or McCarthy and call it a moral victory when they lose and return to personal, dancing in the glow of self lifestyles. These Liberty Union people haven't given up the good, hard fight.

Yet one still hopes they will somehow come up with a more unified, structured, pragmatic platform of issue-organizing and electoral politics. There is simply too much at stake for the Left in the United States to recede into the dustbin of history, to become an anachronism, moribund. In the last year, the world has witnessed the denoument of the Wilsonian, liberal-capitalist world view – the same Wilsonian liberalism that the U.S. in the name of "Freedom" and "self-determination of nations" has tried to shove down every nation's throat with armies and B-52's and atomic bombs and CIA agents. With unemployment rising domestically, the contradictions in our system may soon become uppermost in Vermonters' pocketbooks. The prospects for radical change in the world are ripening almost daily. And, after all, the history of the 20th century is one of a gradual, yet global, inexorable shift to the Left. Will Liberty Union be in the vanguard in this change in Vermont? One can, if you like, hope so. But I can't predict it.

••••••••••

Driving back to Burlington Sunday evening I asked Franco for his final impression of the convention. He mouthed, only half in jest, that maybe he ought to shave off his beard. And then, drinking, he glimpsed over at this writer and deadpanned, "I think we missed two good days of golf."

Revenge Of The Hipster

by J. KARL STEVENS

Will Liberty Union see itself as a hipster party or will it change its approach to a form which will appeal to a broad section of working Vermonters.

John Franco

When James Dean, out for a little knuckle popping exercise in his new white porsche, slammed into Donald Gene Turnupseed, college student, puffing along in an obese black & white Ford Sedan, American realized that the wedding between the hipster and the college generation had finally been consecrated.

Who was the hipster? Those who achieved that protracted state of grace known as maturity in the fifties seldom impart a preposessing sense of self, yet this comparative lull in history spawned a brand of rebel whose memory is still virulent. World War II... the bomb... the korean war... all these taught society a valuable lesson to live with death, be it the instant death of the A-bomb, conscription and a percentage death at the hands of the state department, or even the slow death creative instincts suffer when left to rot in conformity. To live with death is not to live, it is to exist. And the hipster accepted this dictum with a vengeance. Existence was spontaneous, historyless, rootless, located primarily in the senses. The new Capones were outlaws yes, but outlaws of the genitals. They began creating a new nervous system. It was necessary.

During one of those apocalyptical orgasms, the rogue genes of hip fertilized both the "hippie" and the "new left." True to its lineage, new left politics inherited existential romanticisms as well as the bleaker psychopathic tendencies of the hipster. The egoism that resulted in a stampede for headlines, the immediate, that demanded that walls crumble at first horn blasts. Espousing revolution, they retained cherished spontaneity. Pursuing change; they were handcuffed by the existential imperative to exist without roots. Their method of spontaneous committment forced them to play at "revolutionaries without program." However, the hipster's desire to create a new nervous system was realized by the new left. They obeyed the demage of the synapse not the message of society and attempted to create a new politics. Logically, the body became the source of the body politic and consequently sexuality, eating, dress, morals, music, in short that province deemed culture, became political. What was lacking was what was always lacking: a way of translating consciousness into consequence.

All the old crap of the thirties is coming back again – the shit about the "class line," the role of working class etc.

M Bookchin

At bottom, the (hipster) seeks love... but love as a search for an orgasm more apocalyptic than the one which preceded it.

Norman Mailer

I arranged to have two adolescences, one at the normal age and one again in the sixties.

Marge Piercy

The psychopath is a rebel without a cause, an agitator without a slogan, a revolutionary without a program.

Robert Linder

The worker becomes a revolutionary not by becoming more of a worker but by undoing his workerness... the same applies to the farmer, the clerk, the soldier. His workerness is the disease he is suffering from.

M. Bookchin

II

The women's report which was dubbed 'socialist feminism' emphasized counter culture, consciousness raising, encounter group politics rather than organizing and defending Vermont's low paid and highly exploited women. It quickly moved the convention back to the old forms of new-left politics.

John Franco

Waking with a decade and a half of excess half digested, rotting between your teeth, the overwhelming tendency is to retch out all the terms once used to define exactly what you loved.

Words enjoy what could be termed "spontaneous obsolescence," with their longevity inherent in the amount of meat they manage to drag out of the wilderness. Obsolete words are resuscitated by constant repetition (a rose is a rose is a rose style) or by retaining spatial consequences.

"his head is hard as a rock"

When the term "head" becomes obsolete, people will be able to read the above sentence and the relation head-rock will generate meaning. Politics shares this same propensity. A particular politics may outlive its temporal urgency, yet still retain various spatial links. The gratuitous disparagement of the new left and its "old forms" fails to consider this. For one thing the old new left did not generate forms, only content. It opened vast arenas of culture to political interpretation. It invalidated the "old left" tendency (along with the society) to isolate culture and politics. Part of the inability to generate adequate forms was the "aesthetic" nature of the new left. They were concerned with the images of society and the form of criticism employed was the simple counter image. There was little penetration into what mechanisms produced the image.

* * * * *

Outside my apartment is a large army recruiting poster. It keeps its shape for about a week and then one morning I awake up to find it has sprouted beards and slogans. Ah ha I say to myself, some disaffected sixties radical, caught up in images and yet to realize what the poets have known for centuries: poetry changes nothing. Still it is nice that their sensibilities have extended to such inconsequential but absolutely essential minutiae as billboards. One day, perhaps by accident, they will discover the men who erect this billboard and then...

The new left at least erected counter images in their dress, taste, sexuality, etc. The tendency of hard line "homo economus" (who are equally concerned with an image, because that is what the wage is) merely produce an inflectional critique: bad better 'best, ten twenty thirty dollars. The difference: an emphasis on quality or an emphasis on quantity.

The problem still remains: the sixties created tons of political content but no forms. That content still exists, like matter it cannot be diminished only transformed. Denigrating the "old forms" of the new left is not only a failure of evaluation, but implicit suicide. Any party that attempts to mobilize the energy of disaffected america (and i assume the workers as well as the young and the intellectuals are disaffected) will have to accept the baggage that goes with the ride. Reverting to the hard economic line of the "old left" is a reversion to political infancy that finds its true paradigm in senility.

* * * * * *

So who needs paradigms: it's the dollar that counts.

James Dean in East of Eden

As Sartre has suggested, one would almost suppose, from reading many Marxists, that a person's consciousnes suddenly appears when they take their first job.

The Movement merely substituted new words for old, when they really needed to change the grammer.

The division between politics and culture that surrounds us is not an abstraction. It affects the innermost core of our lives and threatens to destroy us...

W. Lowenfels

The state is not something that can be destroyed by a revolution, but is a condition, a certain relationship between human beings; we destroy it by contracting other relationships.

G. Landauer

VPIRG Rates Vermont's Legislators

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group has released a rating of Vermont's legislators that tallies crucial votes on fifteen consumer, open government, environmental, and other issues of public concern. The listing includes both the House and the Senate and was compiled by Barry Stienhardt and Peter Cobb of the VPIRG staff.

According to staff member Cobb, the roll call report was published to better inform the citizens about key decisions taken by their elected representatives. "We hope that this report will encourage citizens to become more actively involved with the legislative process," he said.

Cobb noted that voting on the various issues was fairly bipartisan although Democrats voted with VPIRG somewhat more than Republicans. The VPIRG scoreboard showed that two-thirds of the legislators scored 50% or better in the ratings. Seventy of the 180 members of the General Assembly voted with VPIRG at least two-thirds of the time while only twenty-nine members scored under 30%. The VPIRG statistics also showed that Bennington County led all counties with a 75% VPIRG rating while Lamoille, Essex and Orleans were at the bottom with 43%.

Nine members of the House and four members of the Senate voted with VPIRG 100% of the time. Chittenden County 100% voters include Gail Shiman, Edwin Granai, Mary Evelti, David Curtis of the House and UVM's Professor Robert Daniels of the Senate. Other 100% voters were Reps. Thomas Foster and Jane Gardner both of Bennington County, Thomas Bonnet of Orange, Rep. Charles Stone of Washington, and William Hunter from Windsor County. The other three Senators voting 100% with VPIRG were Sen William Doyle (Washington County), Sen. Robert O'Brien (Orange County), and Sen. John Alden (Windsor County). Worst VPIRG ratings went to Rep Douglas Baker of New Haven and Sen. Fred Westphal of Lamoille County. Both officials scored zero with no "correct" VPIRG votes.

The consumer group's analysis includes both final votes on bills and secondary votes that record attempts to stall certain legislation. "Sometimes the final vote does not tell the whole story," said Cobb "Sometimes opponents will try to kill a bill by trying to send it to an obviously hostile committee. Recording this kind of vote gives the clearest indication of where a person stands on a given issue."

(continued on page twenty-two)

Just Getting Along

by JOHN FRANCO

In case you didn't know it, Vermont is an underdeveloped state. It's interesting to note, on this bicentennial anniversary, that Vermont has in the course of the last 200 years, gone from an independent republic to a colony dependent on Kentucky Fried Chicken, Holiday Inns, zoot-suited skiers, ugly America and its Winnebagos, and Wall Street's capital. Vermont has, in the last 30 years, become a pre-revolutionary Havana economy, with dog track racing, souvenir stands, and burger-land as the cutting edge of its economic growth. The rapid growth in Vermont tourism, and the subsequent decline in the Vermont economy, has made the state a banana republic in its own right, whose income and wealth are as poorly distributed as in Peru or Brazil.

Vermonters are exploited as a result. Tourism in Vermont has resulted in an interesting dialectic. The more the state grows, the worse off relatively its workforce becomes. How is this possible? Very easily. Since 1958, 75% of all the new jobs which have been created in the state have been in government, trade, or services. Trade and services, which are generally the tourist related industries, have accounted for over half of all the new jobs, but the wages they pay are only 55% the average wages paid in manufacturing in Vermont. Trade and services have accounted for 30% of the growth in the Gross State Product since 1949, and the State of Vermont estimates that 60% of the new jobs in the future will come from these low-paying, seasonally instable economic sectors. So you see, the more Vermont's economy grows, the more people are dumped into unstable, shit-paying jobs. The table below illustrates the recent growth in the Vermont economy.

NEW JOBS IN VERMONT, 1958–71

	Per Cent
Industry	10.0%
Manufacturing	31.5%
Services	22.8%
Trade	24.0%
Government	13.7%
Other

GROWTH IN VERMONT, 1949–71

	Per Cent
Industry	25.4%
Manufacturing	15.4%
Services	15.4%
Trade	8.8%
Construction	13.4%
Finance	1.9%
Transportation	5.4%
Utilities	2.1%
Agriculture	9.7%
Other

Here is the legacy of tourism in Vermont: the state dropped from 30th in the nation in per capita income in 1940 to 42nd in 1971. Vermont's per capital gross product is 82% of the national average and 75% of the New England average. And this growth in tourism also has a spinoff effect of bidding down the wages of others in reasonably paying jobs such as manufacturing and construction.

Poverty and Income Distribution

According to the 1970 census, 12% of Vermonters are living below the Office of Economic Opportunity's "Poverty Line," which for a family of 4 in 1970 was $3700, and in 1974 was raised, because of inflation, to $4500. But these rock bottom OEO guidelines do more to camoflage the real picture of poverty and exploitation in Vermont than to reveal it. Many families are living just barely above the poverty line, and thus go unrecorded by the statistics. The figures on family income distribution can be misleading. Although many are above the government poverty level, it is only because both mom and dad are out working for $4 thousand a year, and thus the family is, by the government's evaluation, "middle class." The real dimensions of poverty in Vermont are better understood when you look at the total picture of income distribution in Vermont. In 1973, 2/3 of Vermonters made under $10 thousand with nearly 30% making $4 thousand or less. The distribution of income in Vermont is so skewed in favor of the rich, that the top 1/2 of 1% had the same share of income as the bottom 27%, and the top 3% had the same share as the bottom 40%. In fact, over 40% of all the personal income in Vermont is concentrated in the top 15% of earners. Income distribution in Vermont is as bad as in India, Bolivia, and Brazil.

INCOME DISTRIBUTION IN VERMONT BY INDIVIDUAL

Group	% of Earners	% of total Income
$0–4,000	27.0%	5.5%
$4–6,000	11.0%	6.1%
$6–8,000	11.5%	8.9%
$8–10,000	10.0%	10.6%
$10–15,000	19.5%	26.6%
$15–25,000	12.3%	25.4%
$25–50,000	2.8%	10.0%
$50,000 plus	.6%	5.4%

Because of the effects of inflation and unemployment, which hit the low paid, unorganized workers the hardest, the distribution of income in both Vermont and the nation had worsened in the last few years. According to the Christian Science Monitor the bottom 40% of American earners has, since the spring of 1973, lost $65 billion in real wages. In 1974, the average worker took home $160 a week, but because of inflation, has not had an increase in real wages since 1964. As a result, inflation has transferred income from the poor to the rich. The income of the top 40% has increased while that of the bottom 60% has decreased. Between 1967 and 1973 in Vermont the share of total income for the bottom 30% decreased by 16%, while the share of the top 30% has increased by 14.5%. Again, the growth of low paying tourist-oriented jobs are just going to make the situation in Vermont even worse.

Getting the B.J.

Liberal economists, academics, and apologists downplay such facts maintaining that everything will be all right as long as the economy keeps growing, arguing that no one really cares about his share of the pie as long as the pie keeps growing. But this sleasy reasoning falls apart when you realize that first, the economy has grown very little in real terms in the past ten years, that it has got itself stuck in the Keynesian muck of inflation and recession, unable to go very far either backwards or forwards. Secondly, one must point out that this is a lousy way to run a railroad; that when a country with the resources like the US has an income distribution equivalent to that of the proto-fascist regime in Brazil, much of the society's potential goes untapped. And thirdly, it's not the apologists who are the ones at ski areas changing the grundgy sheets on a motel room bed.

What the experts don't want to tell you is that in a market based economy, especially in an economy of monopoly capitalism, poverty and low income has the effect, either by default or by design, to bid down the wages of the workforce, supplying a pool of cheap reserve labor ready to be tapped and exploited. The chief function of the economists of the Allan Greenspan variety is to juggle a trade-off between cheap labor and high profits on one hand, and recession and no profits on the other. And it appears from the pronouncements of President Dorf, that 7% unemployment is going to become "acceptable" as long as corporate profits recover. This cheap labor trade-off is well at work in Vermont. For example, more and more of the new jobs are being taken by women, but at pay which is even lower than the wages women have received in the past. This is quite astounding when you realize that 73% of the women in Vermont earn under $4 thousand, and only 2% make over $10 thousand.

This little tidbit on the pay of Vermont women is important to remember, especially when the neanderthal right, led by Senator John Boylan, start their propaganda about welfare chislers. The fact is that 80% of welfare families are headed by mothers trying to raise a family alone. And since a family headed by a woman has little chance of breaking over the $4 thousand a year line, it's little wonder that they're on welfare. In fact 1/2 of all families headed by women are under the government poverty line, even though 40% are in the workforce. It's interesting that in the cities, the right-wing politicians pick on the blacks and Puerto Ricans for "welfare chisling." But in Vermont there are few racial minorities. Yet the white welfare recipients get the same sort of vituperation. It seems as though capitalism will pick a victim regardless of race, creed, or color.

Another group getting the royal screw is the elderly. The majority of people in American society seem to have an interesting fate. In our productive working years, we make enough and are just getting along. But once we are no longer productive, and choose to retire in our late years, we are thrown to the scrap heap. Most people have little more than their social security to live on, and as a result, 1/4 of the elderly are living below the poverty line. And an even more devastating statistic is that the median income for the elderly in Vermont is a paltry $1800 a year. It's not that tough for everybody though. While the rest of us are rotting in the old folk's home, Hilton Wick and Barb Snelling will be sifting comfortably at home clipping their coupons and cashing their dividend checks.

Getting Along

When you get all said and done, most Vermonters will continue to have a hard time just getting along. Montpelier will undoubtedly continue to promote tourism in Vermont, claiming that some aspects of the industry tend to be unsavory, but there is nothing else in this world of want, misery, and malnutrition which can practically be done. They will decry poverty and unemployment while making money on it. They will dawdle around with land use plans while at the same time being up to their necks in real estate development. They will subsidize the utilities because they must "attract" David Rockefeller's capital. They won't tax the rich because, god help us, they might leave the state and take their money with them.

As long as faces and administrations change without changing the regime, we can look forward to being a clerk typist at $2.20, a receptionist at $2.25, a hotel clerk at $2.10 or a sales clerk at $2.00. But Vermonters may get sick of just getting along. And that, it seems, is what politics is all about.

Chittenden Community Correction Center Needs Volunteers

by Joan Mollica

The Chittenden Community Correctional Center in So. Burlington opened about six weeks ago, with many facilities which the old correctional center on Main Street in Burlington lacked. The new facility has an outdoor recreation yard, a gymnasium, weightlifting room, library and education center, arts and crafts room and a pottery workshop. Programs are running in a few of these areas but many are not. The correctional center lacks the necessary staff to supervise all these activity areas and is looking for interested, concerned community people to help us and the center residents enjoy our new building. Community people can better understand the correctional center by being involved and they can help center residents use their time more constructively.

Inmates Ron Cargill (left) and Emmett Parker water the lawn at the C.C.C.C.

A recreation supervisor would be asked to attend a recreation period from 9:30 – 11:00 a.m. or 1:00 – 3:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. This person would be responsible for supervising and/or participating in either basketball, softball, weightlifting or some other sport. You will not be expected to instruct in any sort of skills competency.

G.E.D. tutors in the center instruct on a one to one basis with residents who are working towards their graduate equivalency diploma for high school. You might tutor in English, math, or social sciences.

Arts and crafts instructors would teach once or twice a week in whatever field their expertise lies. Macrame is currently being taught and we are open to suggestions for other types of crafts. Another potter

(continued on page twenty-two)

Varooom... Roaming Around Catamount Raceway

John Dillon

by STEPHEN TANNER and ELLIOT FREEMAN

On Saturday night when I was a kid I used to listen to the hot rod engines roaring down the strip of highway that ran past our house. All I wanted back then was to be behind the wheel of one of those babies and lay some rubber on the line. I wanted to feel a gearshift knob vibrating in my sweaty palm and the motor racing and shaking when I put my right foot to the floor. I can still remember the squealing and screaming of those babies and it nearly gave me a chill.

I used to set up near the window with my elbows resting on the sill and watch those headlights blaze down the highway night like shooting stars. When it got late I would be laying on my bed and staring at the ceiling as those engines wailed in the distance. You know, I'd never seen any of the drivers' faces, but I would lie there and try to picture what they looked like and it was a funny thing but I pictured nearly every one of them to look alot like me.

There was this vision I had back then about this race car. My race car. The fucking fastest little bitch you'd ever care to lay eyes on. Every time I saw her she was a little different, you know, I would give her a new set of tires or a new engine or something. What never changed though, through all the times that I thought about that car, was that she was silver in pure bright and shiny silver and had "BAT OUTTA HELL" painted with red paint cross her trunk. I musta raced her thousands of times on all the roads that I could think of and against the best competition and I never lost one race. You know why? 'cause I flew like a bat outta hell.

I'd tell my Pa about that car and he used to promise me that he was gonna get it for me someday. But you know how it is when you are a kid those somedays just never come. Anyway the way things went it didn't matter much. I started working with Pa full time at the place when I was seventeen. He passed on a year or so later and I was working real hard and didn't have no time or money to spend on my race car. I married Wanda when I was twenty and she was eighteen and two months pregnant with our first boy, Jack. Maybe if things had been different and 'ill, maybe if I could have gone to school and college, you know I could be a doctor or a lawyer and drive a fancy car and maybe even sponsor some race car or something. But that ain't the way it is So Wanda and me come out here one weekend and watched the boys tear up the track and as long as there is some action we've been coming back. I been driving an old pick up, you know she's no silver racer but a goddamn work horse that's for sure. We load up the kids in back and Wanda and me sit up front and split a six pack you know, and come out here and watch the races and sit with our friends. The kids they eat all that crap, franks and sodas and candy til they can get pretty sick sometimes... but they love it here. Jack was telling me last week that he wants to be a racer and blow everybody else right off the track. Sonnabitch! but you know that in every race that I have ever watched here ... I seen that silver butch of mine catching hold of the checkered flag.

• • •

The lights are up on the center of the oval track. Standing there on the infield is the man who has been narrating tonight's action at the action track; Catamount Raceway. Microphone in hand, he stands before the podium and a group of 24 drivers who will compete in the big feature race of the night. Ken Squire, the number ONE voice of stock car racing in America is the founder and owner of Catamount Stadium. He has had a long trip up from Florida this morning where he was the anchor man for the CBS sportscasting team at the Firecracker 400 in Daytona Beach. There, "The King" Richard Petty took yet another victory cup. Squire shows no sign of fatigue now as he stands, poised like a conductor, and introduces the field of drivers to the anxious fans. It is the day after the Fourth of July and Catamount Stadium is having its own celebration of the nation's birthday – "The Firecracker 44."

The cars wait silently. Officially ordered behind the starting line, the fastest cars stand last as the result of week-long time trials. In the fierce light of the floods, bright reds and yellows and black numbers on doors seem to emanate the potential intensity of the energy locked under the autos' hoods. The blacktop winds into the first turn just beyond the entrance ramp from the pits. Scanning through the second turn across the far straightaway, the eye catches on the colors of the billboards along the rear fence. Familiar red Dominoes' Pizza Dice and thirst-quenching cups of Coca-Cola. The third and fourth turns complete the oval and the eye rests again on Squire. One by one the drivers leave the group, step up on the podium to take their bows individually, and then step down to receive good luck kisses from the "Catamount Kittens" (two local lovelies), and then regroup themselves on the other side.

"Hector LeClair," Squire announces. LeClair paces casually over the podium as the crowd greets him a cheer. He is from Fairfax, Vermont a contractor who started ten years ago in the race circuit. He's had many problems. Won only one feature race in all that time – the Harvest 50 in '73 – but this year he seems to be pulling things together and it looks like he may be a contender for the Catamount Championship.

"Ronnie Marvin," the hard-driving loner to whom winning is all there is. He's been a controversial driver all his life, even suspended from the circuit once for rough riding. The crowd boos him. He walks behind the podium AND the girls in a show of pure animalistic distaste for this polite break in the endless competition of his life.

"Jean Paul Cabana," Squire lets his voice ride over the name in a sonorous French pronunciation. Cabana walks to the podium with a heavy pride, but a light-hearted smile on his face. On top, he turns full face to the audience and reaches his hands up and out toward the floodlights making the "V" for "V-8" with the fingers of both hands. The crowd whoops, whistles, applauds, hisses, boos, laughs, smiles, guffaws, there is any and every kind of reaction for this megiomaniacal presence. He is Cabana: the French Canadian super-racer; winner of the Northern NASCAR Circuit Championship in '72 and '73; four-season winner of the Catamount Championship and by most standards, the finest stock car driver yet to emerge from Canada. He gives the "Kittens" a sustained hug and a kiss which arrouses vicarious audience participation. He then rejoins his comrades.

Squire moves through the list symphonically, lingering on every measure to allow each one the appreciation he deserves. Each name is special to at least one, if not all of the fans.

"Beaver Dragon," calls out the M.C. The ovation is overwhelming. He is by far and away the local super-star. Current holder of top points at Catamount Stadium, and long-time top racer along with his brother Bobby. The response can only be related to the quote "Enough is too much" and Beaver never gets enough. He appears humble on the podium, then gives only a peck to the girls on his way to the other racers.

"Ronnie Barcomb." Another underdog competitor is from Colchester. Barcomb won the 1970 State Stock Car Championship. He has been racing since 1966, just after he got out of high school where he was a top athlete. For him there was always plenty of influence to become involved in stock car racing because his father is owner of Mallett's Bay Salvage. He is the winner of 3 features in 1973 and then bad luck hit and hit hard in 1974 with not even one win flagged before his windshield. But this year he had a surprising upset only two short weeks ago when Benny Parsons and Richard Brookes, both Grand National Champions, came up for a visit to Catamount. Parsons blew a tire and lost his suspension before he finished the first lap and Brookes' driving prowess, in his borrowed car, exhibited itself that night. Barcomb, the local boy (and an underdog among the locals), blew everyone's doors off.

Up the podium they go, as each racer hears his name and the beckoning cries and clapping of commendation; on the other side waits the candied kisses from the "Catamount Kittens." Until last, but never least, the final name is called and measure played. Squire hits it, the peak of the crescendo, with a staccato adjective to highlight this driver: "Dynamite Dave Dion." Dion jauntily takes the podium, waves as if to his family with a grin on his face that is generous, even to his mother-in-law, and meets the Kittens who have been saving a feline caress for this guy that sends a tingle right down to the core of your senses. Squire jokes, "Mother would not be pleased." Dion grins wider. He has reason to. This year alone has brought him four feature wins, three at Thunder Roads, Catamount's sister stadium in Barre, and one at the 'Mount.' He is another underdog. Last year was a bad year with only one win on Labor Day. But this week alone has logged a win in Maine followed by a race in Canada where Dion's car blew an engine and forced him to drive all night back to his shop in New Hampshire to drop a new one in and then literally race over to Milton, Vermont to enter in tonight's "Firecracker 44."

So there they stand, 24 drivers joking on that infield as if they were the Mets along the first base side just before the National Anthem. But each racer knows that he is a team within himself and that he has his own set of fans sitting out there in front of him in that dotted collage of color, faces, and cat-calling. Squire asks for everyone to rise for a symbolic welcoming to the French-Canadians among the audience and participants. The scratched recording comes over the P.A. system as the lights dim all except for one spot which brightens the Maple Leaf atop a pole in the center infield. 'Old Glory' receives her tribute. Squire reflects for a moment before the National Anthem comes on, "Ladies and Gentlemen, please remain standing as we honor our own flag on this, our nation's happy birthday. We may still have a lot of problems with it, but it's still the best one yet devised." The whistling and shouting starts on "the home of the..." and the lights go up on the shining steel and paint on the track, "...brave."

• • •

"Gentlemen, start your engines."

The drivers are inside their cars and the deep rumbling builds to a thunderous roar as the engines awaken. The motors pant, making you feel their growl as if it were your own vibrating inside your chest like mucous in your lungs when you cough with the croup. The red, white, and blue official Pacecar is moving forward now and the 'big iron' follows in fits and starts of squealing rubber on the asphalt. They round the track slowly, in their order. They are a wolf pack in reverse – the ablest pushing the old and weak. Again around they creep as if to amass the energy under their hoods so that all at once they can release.

NOW.

There it is.

The green flag. And the energy aches from beneath the steel bodies as they enter the first straight away. It echoes out as though it should blow the hoods from the cars in a screaming bass-noted howl that generates from the essence of each machine: the driver himself.

The first few turns around the track. The pack together. The roar pulsating. Loud on the straightaway in front of the stands, then distant on the far straightaway. An Elipse. Wind, as they pass the stands again like the stone from a sling, then calm. Red-number-yellow-orange- Chevro-orange-dark inside-silver-tire-black-45-STP- autobody-blue-Mike's Bar-n.y.-Ford-red-blurring through the cyclone fencing and then plain, visable across the stands on the infield, and you can't hear a word of the play-by-play.

The cars spread out into a long line that seems to connect, like a cat with his tail in his mouth around and around in the purring whine of pumping cylinders and steel. There is the cat-like slipping out of each turn onto the straightaway. There is the cloud of dust and the spinout taking another with him and not hearing the crash over the pervasive thunder. There are the lights of the ambulance, the wrecker, the track crew's pickup, which blink red, blink-white, blink-blue. The yellow caution flag is out. The starter re-lines the cars. The pit crew sweeps in the "Speedy-Dry" to make the track ready after the radiator water has dowsed the first turn.

The Green Flag again.

The Elipse, and the sling of color and sound and sense.

CHECKERED FLAG

• • •

Here he is, "Dynamite Dave Dion, the winner tonight in Catamount Stadium's Late Model Sportsman Class Feature The Firecracker 44." It's Ken Squire again. "And how did it go out there tonight, Dave?"

"Great, great. The Stewart and Sons Ford with the new engine we dropped in last night ran with no problems. Everything was great."

Dion and Squire stand in the winners' circle which is decked with Winston Cigarette banners. "You managed to really grab the lead early and hold your own out there."

"Yea, Ken, the track said 'go', the car said 'go', and that's two against one so I didn't have much choice."

"Well Dave, it's been a great week for you and congratulations on winning this year's Firecracker 44 once again. We're all glad the conditions were 'go' for you tonight."

"Thanks alot, Ken, I am too."

"A word to you folks out there, if you want to see Dave after the race, by all means do so. He will be in the pit area which will be open for all of you at the end of the show tonight. You can go on down and visit, get autographs, and take pictures with any of the racers you've seen here tonight at the action track, Catamount Stadium."

The fireworks display follows and it feels like the fireworks really happened a few minutes ago. In forty-four laps the American Automobile, albeit modified, has blown out the firework's candle and most likely wished for a bigger and faster race to celebrate the BiCentennial year. Even though they are the best Fourth of July display on the Fourth given anywhere in the Lake Champlain Valley (out-classing the Williston and Burlington exhibitions by eight or ten laps easily), they seem an anti-climax of starfish glitter and color. The celebrative straw that breaks the camel's back in a final bombardment of your senses. The Birthday visuals do not excite the crowd nearly so much as the rockets which explode like air-borne depth-charges above the track. Their sound is penetrating enough to pierce the dulled sensibility of your ears and stimulate some response. Indeed, the onlookers cry out for more "Bangers," but the flag has already come down in the "Firecracker 44" on the real thrills.

• • •

In the course of writing this article, which involved two visits to Catamount Stadium, a number of questions arose in our minds about stock car racing. The overwhelming question, however, was why do the 5 to 7,000 fans go out there, for the most part religiously, every Saturday night to watch cars burn gas and go around in circles all night.

A number of factors were at once obvious to us after a talk with the man who started Catamount 11 years ago, Ken Squire. He had previously put together another successful track in Barre known as Thunder Road. His knowledge and experience was of great use to us in helping us to understand the sport.

When you examine the types of people who come to Catamount, it is obvious first and foremost what people come for: It is all American working class entertainment. An old saying has it that "You can always be sure a stock car race won't be X-rated." Families know that it is a safe, but exciting and

(continued on page twenty two)

Arts & Entertainment

"On The Air" With WRUV- Summer '75

by JOEL BOLTON and DAVE LEONARD

Greetings from the spacious office of WRUV. This article is the second in a continuing series of WRUV updates, designed to keep you informed as to what is happening at the studios of 90.1 FM Stereo.

First of all, I would like to thank all the summer students and Burlintonians for the enthusiasm they have shown toward our programming this summer. Because of an overwhelming public interest in and support of WRUV, the staff and management of WRUV has been able to stay on the air more hours per day than any summer before from 8:00 a.m. to midnight Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to midnight Saturday, and from 10:00 a.m. to midnight Sunday (see this week's schedule below). Remember, we're on the air each weekday at 8:00. So set your radio alarm to 90.1 and let our pleasant morning vibes get you up and trucking.

Some special programs coming up for this week: Saturday (7/12) at 11:00 p.m. "Feature Album" (it's a secret); Monday (7/14) at 7:30 p.m. "Interview with Stan Getz" (his words, his music); Tuesday (7/15) at 8:00 p.m., "New Releases" with Russ Kinsley (this week, Bob Dylan and the Band – The Basement Tapes, and Jefferson Starship – Red Octopus.

If you are interested in finding out more about WRUV, who we are and what we do, drop up to the second floor of Pomeroy Hall, 489 Main St., across from the University of Vermont Green, or call us at 656-4399. We'd be happy to hear from you. WRUV, 90.1 FM and 580 AM (91.1 cable FM) – the station that you can reach.

Note: We are at 90.1 mhz, generally upper dial FM, left hand side, or left hand lower corner; not 90.0 as mentioned last issue; though it may look it on some radios. We are hoping not to be pretentious, rather than portentous as previously mentioned. If your radio, stereo, or gold filling begins to get aggressive, slap it, enclose it in a sturdy envelope and mail it to 489 Main St. for further examination. One more word, if you will. We are not and have never diversified in Southeast Asian cultivation, nor would we offer an inferior product if that were the case. However, our Ride rather than Rice Board is infamous. In order to use, simply mail a name and phone number or phone a name and phone number in, and we will send you our latest recipe.

Fiddling, Fondue, And Fun

If you are tired of trying to take a leisurely trip where you end up doing all the driving, or fighting for a parking space once you finally arrive, the University of Vermont Summer Session is sponsoring a number of one day trips which are open to the public that you might enjoy.

The first trip is scheduled for Saturday, July 19, and will take you to Montreal. The bus will leave Burlington around 9:00 a.m. and arrive in Montreal around 11:00. There the travellers will enjoy a picnic lunch in Mount Royal Park overlooking the city. After lunch the shoppers and sightseers will be dropped off downtown, supplied with maps and pamphlets of Montreal. A Grayline Tour of the city will be available at extra cost. For the baseball fans, the bus will continue on to Jarry Park where they may watch the Cincinnati Reds/Montreal Expos' game. Tickets for the game may be purchased locally prior to the 19th or at the ballpark.

Everyone will get together again in the evening for a trip to Old Montreal where they may choose one of the many restaurants to enjoy a leisurely dinner to end the day.

The cost of the Montreal trip will be $11.00, which includes round trip bus fare and lunch. Dinner is not included. Deadline for registration is Tuesday, July 15.

July 26 is the Craftsbury Common Fiddlers' Contest. The bus will leave Burlington in the late morning in order to arrive at Craftsbury Common at Noon, when the contest begins. There will be a picnic lunch on the grounds to enjoy while listening to the fiddling. The contest continues all day, with the finals in the late evening. A barbeque type supper (extra) will be available on the grounds.

The cost includes the round trip bus fare, lunch and admission to the contest and will be $12.00. Deadline for registration is Tuesday, July 22.

On August 9, the bus will leave around noon for Stowe, where the travellers will enjoy a lunch in Smuggler's Notch. After lunch they may ride the chairlifts, hike around the mountain and later in the day browse in Stowe's shops. In the evening, all will meet again for a cheese fondue dinner which includes salad and wine.

The cost of the Stowe trip will be $11.00 including the round trip bus fare, lunch and dinner. Deadline for registration is Tuesday, August 5.

For additional information, stop in at the Summer Session Office, Grasse Mount or call us at 656-2085.

Armin Shimerman rehearsing for his stage manager in Our Town, which opens Wednesday.

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

CELEBRATE SUMMER AT THE CHANCE!

- 20¢ ALES MON.-THURS
- 50¢ NIGHT WEDNESDAY
- OLD TIME MOVIES SUNDAY NIGHTS
- AIR CONDITIONED

147 MAIN STREET

3 doors down from the Flynn theatre

WRUV presents

The McElroy Brothers

(The Best Boogying Band Around)

A Benefit Dance To Be Held At

THE BUCKBOARD TAVERN

DISCOUNT ON DRINKS

Rte. 7, In Milton,

Thursday, July 10,

9:00 P.M.-2:00 A.M.

75¢ Donation At The Door.

(good for one beer at bar).

Proceeds Will Go To WRUV FM

Commercial-Free Radio.

90.1 Stereo-In Burlington.

The Good And The Bad Of Rock And Roll

by Ken Miller

Edgar Winter – Jasmine Nightdreams

If nothing else, Jasmine Nightdreams makes one thing perfectly clear: Edgar Winter is one of the most versatile writer/musicians that there is today. He can play any type of music that there is to play, play it well, and with a style of his own. There aren't many groups, if any, that can even come close to making that statement. Edgar gets funky, (who isn't these days?), on "How Do You Like Your Love," "All Out," "Sky Train," and "Solar Strut" comprise a three song set of excellent jazz. "Tell Me In a Whisper" is a mellow love song, beautifully sung like we've never heard Edgar sing before. And then of course there's the heavy rock & rollers like "Keep on Burnin'" and "Outa Control." Edgar Winter proves himself as one of the best saxophone players around as he whales away on several cuts. The album is also complimented with excellent production and mixing which makes every instrument ring out loud and clear, and pleasant to the ear.

Todd Rundgren – Initiation

It's not a good sign when the only time you play an album is when you want to go to sleep. That's basically the main problem with Initiation, it gets boring in far too many spots. Todd actually says it all himself on "The Death of Rock and Roll" when the song begins

"Just the other day I got a call from a friend
I heard what you've been playin' and I think it's a sin.
Why can't you make a living like the rest of the boys Instead of filling your head with all that synthesized noise."

He tries to justify his music by doing a song entitled "Born to Synthesize," but even this song starts out, "A handful of nothing is all that I need," and in my opinion that's all he's got on this album. Even the lyrics on this album are hard to take. Todd Rundgren used to write songs about falling in love and living free, things that everyone could relate to, but now he seems to feel a need to explain himself in his songs, which only adds to the boredom. I don't mean to say that he's a boring person, but you can only listen to a person sing about himself for so long. The only positive thing about the album is that Todd plays all of the instruments as well as arranged, produced, and mixed all of side two, which definitely takes talent. But even that gets boring as it's over 35 minutes of instrumentation which at most only equals "Utopia." Even Todd Rundgren fans should pass this one by.

Rolling Stones – Metamorphosis

"This elpee is for your home rack,
With songs and stars to take you back
Some old, some new, some gone, some due
From days when people wrote for the fun of it and played for the hell of it..."

That segment of the poem by Andrew Oldham, the producer of Metamorphosis tells it like it is as the Rolling Stones try to take us back to the sixties. It is definitely an album made for the fun of it and for dedicated Stones fans only. Most of the songs leave something to be desired, and the good cuts like "I Don't Know Why," "Irving Sister Fanny," and "I'm Going Down" sound more like some of the Stones more recent material which defeat the purpose of the album. This isn't bad for what it was meant to be, but it is a slight disappointment following an album as good as It's Only Rock and Roll.

Stevie Wright – Hard Road

It's a good feeling to know when a new name can break into the business with a record as good as this, because we all know that it's a tough world to get a break in. Side one of Hard Road contains six solid rock & roll songs, each with their own catchy beat which keeps the album rolling smoothly along. But side two is the clincher which makes this a better than average record, and in my opinion one worth buying. Actually it's just one song that makes the difference, a three part trilogy called "Evie." It starts out heavy with "Let Your Hair Hang Down," drifts into a mellow ballad, "Evie," and comes back strong again with "I'm Losing You." Stevie Wright sings about the smooth stretches as well as the many lumps and bumps along the "hard road" of life, something we can all relate to.

Robert Palmer – Sneakin' Sally Through the Alley

Robert Palmer sounds more like Little Feet than anyone else except Little Feet, which right away is a step in the right direction. The album begins with a fantastic three song trilogy, starting off with his own version "Sailin' Shoes," the only Little Feet original on the album, and ends with the title cut and also the best song on the album. Robert Palmer's biggest asset is his way with words, with catchy phrases throughout the record that will let you keep on smilin' during each and every listening. The production of the album is meticulous which also makes for enjoyable listening. The only real fault that I can find with this record is that the last song on side two, "Through It All There's You," is over twelve minutes long with no real variation in the music. Still a good song, just way too long. If you're into the new trend of American funk, then Robert Palmer is your kind of music.

Oh, Oh, Oh, That Shakespearian Rag

(blurb) In a rare departure from its ordinarily strict Shakespearian Repertoire, the Champlain Shakespeare Festival opens July 9th with Thornton Wilder's Our Town. Set in Grovers Corners, New Hampshire, audiences can expect a nostalgic evening celebrating the 'yankee' sensibility.

Director Ed Feidner – director of last year's Tempest – will be faced with preventing Wilder's (attempted) American archetype from dwindling into yet another bi-centennial stereotype. Whether he succeeds or not, we can still expect an evening of humor and inventiveness.

WDOT, This Is Sweden

(Times-Argus) – Radio station WDOT, located at 395 College Street here, calls itself "The Great American Music Machine." But according to a letter received recently, the station may boast of a wider audience.

Tommy Madsen, a ham (amateur) radio operator from Falkenberg, Sweden, reported reception of the station on June 6, between 1:07 and 1:15 p.m. Greenwich Mean Time. Madsen reported the signal strength as "poor to fair."

According to the logs, radio host Jim Stillman was on the air at the time. Madsen reported hearing the following on the station program:

"At 01:07 GMT: Jim Stafford with 'My Girl Bill'; at 01:10 GMT: 'Rock Me Gently' with Andy Kim; at 01:12 GMT: Elton John Band with 'Philadelphia Freedom'; at 01:15 GMT: a song with John Lennon called something like 'Stand By'."

Madsen reported hearing the station on 1400 kHz with a receiver he described as a "Trio 9R-59DS communications receiver with 8 tubes, manufactured in 1973."

"The antenna is a longwire of 185 metres, 15 metres above the ground," Madsen reported.

Dave McGowan, of WDOT, said the most unusual aspect of the incident was the fact that their station was the one station among hundreds on the 1400 kHz band to be received.

"There are literally hundreds of stations in the United States at this same frequency – the interesting thing is that he heard ours," he said.

One reason given for the reception at such a great distance was that it occurred in the evening.

"Before it gets dark and after it is not really light out, you can get all kinds of signals," said disc jockey Ken Barlow. "It happened before we switched from 1000-watt power to 250-watt power at night," he said.

Barlow explained that the reason so many signals come across at twilight was because the daytime stations would be still operating at daytime power, and some of the night stations would already have started. This created a larger airwave load because of the overlap.

McGowan said nighttime atmospheric conditions were also involved, and that the radio waves go farther at this time.

"They really bounce around," he said.

IF YOU ENJOY . . . Classic continental food, excellent service, exotic cocktails, curries, rice pilaf, parfait, complete vegetarian dinners, relaxed atmosphere . . . then you must visit

Taj mahal

American & Indian Businessman's Lunch 11:30-2:30 Monday - Saturday

Take the time to browse in our Gift Shop Open All Day Monday-Saturday

115 College Street 658-4377

CARBURS

FAMOUS SINCE 1974

when in Burlington, don't miss

CARBURS RESTAURANT

Vermont's most unique menu!

~ COMFORTABLE ATMOSPHERE

~ COMFORTABLE PRICES

Downtown at 119 St. Paul St.

Excellent cuisine of quality fame skillfully prepared and artfully served

Enjoy Our Famous CLAMBAKE Our Special Live Maine LOBSTER OR Featuring SURF 'n TURF

Half-Baked Stuffed Lobster And Top Sirloin Steaks with Onion Rings with...

Both Dinners complete with steamed clams or clam chowder, baked potato, garden salad and demi loaf bread.

Dinner $5.95 with this ... Good through July 17

BLACK CAT Restaurant Lounge 160 Bank St.

UVM Summer Session Rolls Into

by WYATT KASH

More than 500 people of all ages checked in at Redstone Campus and Living/Learning this past Sunday and Monday amidst the expected "first-week-of-school" type of confusion, as the main part of Summer Session got underway.

While there was some expressed discontentment with room assignments or about minor damage (screens that didn't fit in windows properly, etc.) by those unaccustomed to "dormitory living," or+by those expecting more of the usual hotel services, check-in proceeded fairly well. Lines did occasionally back up during after-lunch, and before- and after-dinner periods.

The onslaught of Summer Session students are, however, not the only people taking advantage of campus housing. A number of students have been living in Wilks-Davis-Wing since it opened June 16, as well as in Living/Learning which has been housing people since just after/commencement. In addition, a large group of students are staying at Harris-Millis as part of the High School Music Session held here each summer.

Providing housing in the summer does have some problems unique to the Summer Session. Turn-over is high and rapid, corresponding to the two, three, and four week Summer Session classes. Imagine new and oftentimes disoriented students checking in one week with all the accompanying room and key hassles only to leave the next... every week! Linen must be provided by the University, as well as a variety of items such as ash trays, wastepaper baskets, lamps, and water glasses that sho.. term students are not expected to supply for themselves. The main desks, run by resident staff personnel, cater not only to mail dispensing, but to the sale of post cards, newspapers, soap, and other convenience items as well. And of course, they serve as key sources of information for things on and about campus.

Summer is still a bit easier for the people in charge of housing, notes Bill Ballard, Assistant Director for Financial Affairs for the Office of Residential Life. "I think the pace is a little more relaxed."

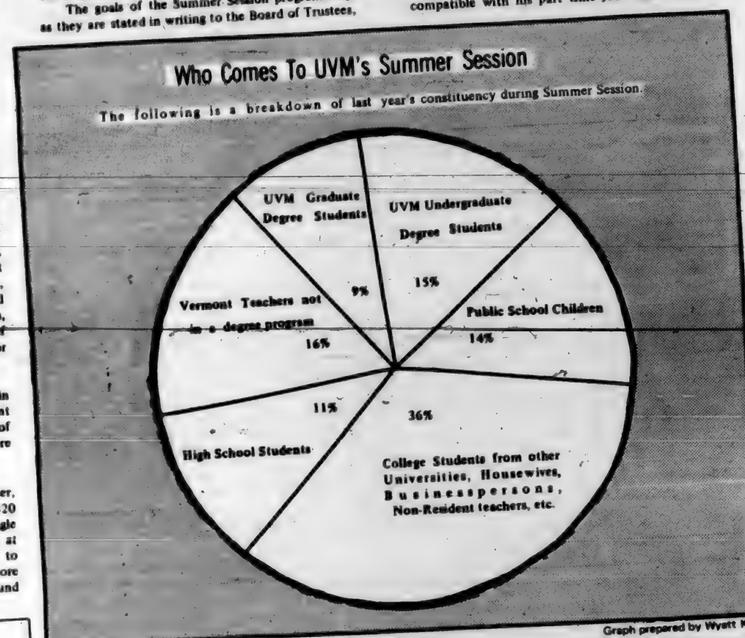
The cost of living on campus during the summer, including the usual cleaning services is a modest $20 per week double occupancy, and $25 per week single occupancy on Redstone Campus, $2 additional at Living/Learning. People this year are allowed to choose between living in the newer center or in more traditional housing, although some people have found that modern facilities are not always more convenient. One disconcerted woman sauntered up to the Common's Desk at Living/Learning and insisted that "...her room had disappeared!"

The Summer Session Organism

But housing is really only a part of the greater overall organism of Summer Session at the University. There is a tremendous amount of work that must be done with regard to setting up a viable Summer Session program. Tuitions and fees are the sole source of financial support for instruction as well as for the facilities in which classes are held. This means that the program must be one which will attract people as well as provide access for educational pursuits over a broad spectrum of interests.

The goals of the Summer Session programming, as they are stated in writing to the Board of Trustees, are "...to provide a program of academic excellence by offering a diverse curriculum of credit and non-credit activities to meet the needs of a heterogeneous constituency. It seeks to maximize the use of dorms, classrooms, dining halls and to provide income for their operation."

John R. Bushey, Acting Dean of Continuing Education, outlined a few of the necessary steps in attaining a quality program. The key thing is in developing a curriculum of excellence by offering good quality courses taught by well qualified staff which are responsive to the needs of those attending the Summer Session. But it is also important to develop a calendar that is flexible and responsive to students' needs as well... for the man who must commute every day, the teacher trying to take advantage of In-Service training programs, or the undergraduate who must take classes at times compatible with his part-time job. Then comes the



Graph prepared by Wyatt Kash

Things To Do Just

Providing a summerful of things to do is a major part of Summer Session's groundwork planning. Activities, dates, places and times all must be arranged and coordinated far in advance so that they can be finalized in time for most pre-summer publications. For people like Gerry Hunt, the Summer Session activities programming coordinator, that means meeting deadlines as early as mid-April.

Unlike funding procedures for student activities during the regular academic year, where students pay a $10.75 fee per semester to the Student Association and campus residents an additional $3 to the Inter Residence Association, the Summer Session activities programming is funded as part of the entire Summer Session budget. While many of the activities do require a little cash on the line, the overall selection of things to do is for the most part, varied, interesting, and in keeping with the general Summer Session theme "...just for fun."

A good portion of sure-bet entertainment this summer will be the Summer Session Films Festival. For those who may have just pulled into Burlington for some Vermont-spent summer days, you'll be sorry to know you missed the June Foreign Films Series. In its 14th season now, the festival presented four foreign classics, including Fellini's 8½, Antonioni's Eclipse, Kurosawa's Seven Samuri, and Los Olvidados by Bunuel. More that 500 people attended this summer's Foreign Film Series, making it one of the most successful yet.

But the summer is by no means over for films. Still to come are the Children's Film Classics and the American Film Series boasting a list of twenty classic motion pictures including D.W. Griffith's Birth of a Nation, Orson Welles' Citizen Kane, and Gone With the Wind. The Children's Film Classics can be seen three times weekly (Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons) for $.50. The American Films can be seen for $1 per show (Gone With the Wind, $1.25) or $10 for the entire series. (See movie schedule.)

Also offered in this summer's entertainment line-up are three one-day lunch-included outings which should prove to be both fun and interesting. The first – a day in Montreal – will be leaving at 9 a.m., July 19 and will include a picnic lunch in Mount Royal Park, and plenty of time to either get acquainted with Montreal or spend a lot of money shopping. The choice is yours, as is the optional Grayline Tour and the Cincinnati Reds/Montreal Expos' game (at extra cost.) promotion of Summer Session. Continuing Education printed up 60,000 copies of UVM Summer Times, an excellently-put-together bulletin of Summer Session offerings and distributed them throughout New England and to places all over the country.

Full Swing

Indeed the Summer Session program has what appears to be an excellent line-up of course offerings. Courses dealing with the "American Experience" (past, present, and future); with Vermont and its history, economy and geography; courses in the field, taking advantage of Vermont's off-campus environment; cooperative courses with Shelburne Museum; studio art courses; Demonstration School for teachers wishing to develop flexible, open, informal learning environments; as well as all the intensive study courses and non-credit music, debate, and sport programs make for a well balanced, interesting and fun selection of activities, both academically and culturally.

Mr. Bushey points out too, that those who are teaching have a greater opportunity to experiment with what and how they teach. Such experimentation is generally encouraged. This greater freedom combined with a staff including a number of distinguished visiting faculty of national and international reknown in their fields gives Vermont's Summer Session a substantial quality in its offerings.

"Enrollment so far this year is a little ahead over previous years," according to Bushy. "We're hoping for a target of about 3400 people." Last year, there were 3127 students enrolled in credited courses and an additional 1068 in non-credit courses.

An important part of what makes Summer Session different from the regular academic year is the tremendous variety of constituency in the student body attending the courses, both in terms of background and in purpose. Ages vary from high schoolers to people in the 80's. "It tends to give the classes a more mature atmosphere," noted one student. While some students are working to accelerate their academic programs, catch up on past studies, or work towards advance degrees, others are working for the sake of intellectual or cultural enrichment or to continue their education for reasons of job advancement. Thus the Summer Session is attended by people as varied as the courses they take.

One last aspect that often goes unnoticed during the summer months is the use of facilities here at UVM by large groups holding conventions. While those groups related to the field of education tend to take advantage of a university setting, more frequently the University of Vermont has hosted quite a variety of conferences.

John Dillon

Taking courses in the summer does have its advantages. Outdoor classes is one of them, as class discussion takes place outside Lafayette.

Most groups submit a proposal for all the services they wish to have (linens, food arrangements, use of facilities, etc.). Then the University figures out the total cost of running the conference and submits the cost per person based on the package of services to be included. Most conferences are too varied to come up with a fixed conference cost because of all the negotiations between the University, housing, Sasa and the group involved, but it usually runs around $30 a week per person. "The package is arranged so that the University never loses money on a conference and usually makes a little," says Alice Beemer, the gal in charge of conferences at the Continuing Education office.

The New England School for Alcohol Studies with a group of approximately 360 people were here earlier this summer. The New England School for Drug Studies, the Yankee Placement Office, and the Human Ecology Conferences are all planned before the start of the Fall Semester.

And to confirm what still may be considered a rumor, the Olympic Boxing Finals will be held here next summer (June 13 – July 3) at the University gymnasium.

Summer is indeed an exciting time of year for those in and about the University community.

Why Do They Come to UVM Summer Session?

The following is a list of reasons in order of priority of why students decided to attend UVM's Summer Session:

1. Type of course offered.
2. Within Commuting distance.
3. Short courses.
4. Social and cultural activities
5. Low tuition rates
6. Desirable summer location
7. Distinguished visiting faculty

For Fun:

The second outing will be to the Craftsbury Common Fiddlers' Contest, July 26. There will be plenty of fiddling as well as a chance to get a fun exposure to part of the summer life of Vermont.

The third outing will be a day (August 9) out at Smuggler's Notch, hiking or browsing through the stores at Stowe, highlighted by an evening get-together for a cheese fondue dinner with salad and wine.

There are registration deadlines to meet, so if you are up for a trip, get in touch with the Summer Session Office (Grasse Mount, 656-2085).

A new attraction this year which is stirring up a bit of commotion is the International Dinners Series. Every Monday night, Wright Dining Hall on Redstone Campus will be presenting an evening for the epicureans on campus, with a different foreign dish each week. The atmosphere made complete with respective entertainment ought to offer a little variety to the week's dining decisions, as well as some good fun.

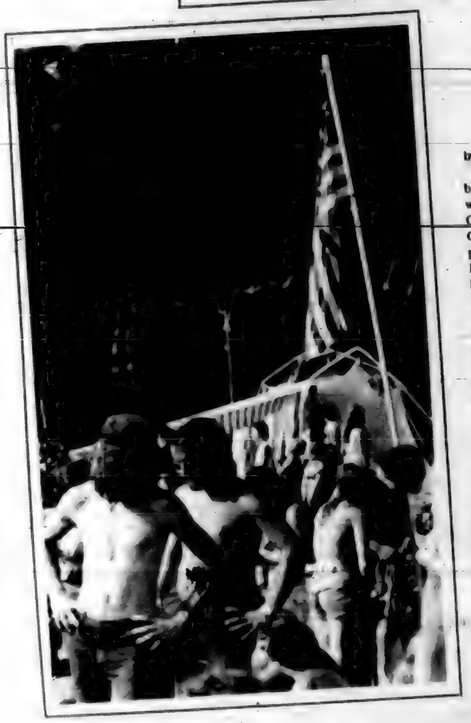
News of auctions, folk dancing, music recitals as well as the Champlain Shakespeare Festival and the Vermont Mozart Concert Series can be found each week in the Summer Cynic. Keep on top, there is a lot of things to do just for fun.

Wyatt Kash

Summer Session Film Festival

July 10	Birth of a Nation	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 8, 9, 10	Story of Robin Hood	1:30	101 Votey
July 15	Gold Rush	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 17	Thief of Bagdad	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 15, 16, 17	Adventures of Tom Sawyer	1:30	101 Votey
July 22	Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 24	The Big Parade	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 22, 23, 24	Heidi	1:30	101 Votey
July 29	Camille	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 30	Day at the Races	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 31	Citizen Kane	7 & 9	B106 Cook
July 29, 30, 31	The Prince and the Pauper	1:30	101 Votey
August 5	Gone with the Wind	7:00	235 Marsh
August 6	Yankee Doodle Dandy	7 & 9	B106 Cook
August 7	Casablanca	7 & 9	B106 Cook
August 5, 6, 7	Pied Piper of Hamelin	1:30	101 Votey
August 12	Giant	7 & 9	B106 Cook
August 14	Lonely are the Brave	7 & 9	B106 Cook
August 12, 13, 14	Hans Brinker	1:30	101 Votey

Children's Film Classics – $.50 American Film Series – $1 (Gone with the Wind, $1.25)
Information and tickets available at Grasse Mount or by calling 656-2085.



The Castleton Banjo Festival

by KATHERINE BOWERS and PETER DUQUETTE

A crowd of approximately five thousand eager bluegrass fans gathered in Castleton, Vermont this weekend to attend the fifth annual Green Mountain Country Banjo Festival. The concert, held on Castleton's Birdseye Mountain, ran for a three day period and featured such names as Bottle Hill, New Lost City Ramblers, and Banjo Dan and the Midnight Plowboys. Doc Watson, a noted Bluegrass guitarist, was billed but did not appear. A rumor that Arlo Guthrie would appear at the festival sometime on Saturday also proved false. On Friday there were several good Vermont groups. The Pine Island String Band, Green Mountain Boys, and Arm and Hammer String Band put the crowd into a hollering, dancing and hand-clapping mood. Friday evening Mike Seeger, John Cohen and Tracy Schwartz highlighted the day with over an hour of professional, folksy, bluegrass music. Another prime appearance of the weekend was Don Stover and the White Oak Mountain Boys. They performed traditional bluegrass banjo tunes.

The ninety degree temperatures and blazing sun seemed unbearable to much of the audience at times. People desperately scouted for water, and resorted to such measures as a staph infested, rainwater filled pool or a small pond filled with broken glass and snapping turtles. The heat did not stop the audience from enjoying the music and seemed at times to enhance excitement in the crowd.

One complaint registered by many was the quality of the sound system employed by the promoters. Although a larger system was installed on the second day of the concert, complaints were still heard from both the audience and the bands themselves.

The small village of Castleton handled the numbers of people quite well, although area stores were sold out of beer and wine quite early. Local police were courteous and few arrests were reported.

Many people came to the festival to camp for the weekend. An array of tents and trailers were crowded into the woods surrounding the bandstand. By Friday afternoon the water had run out and the toilets were full, some questioned whether or not they could make it through the weekend... but the music kept playing and the crowds kept dancing.

Saturday and Sunday's performances were similar to Friday's. Local groups continued to capture the audience's attention. Saturday marked the arrival of the Devil's Disciples, a New England motorcycle group who also came to listen to the traditional tunes of the festival.

The consensus of those who attended the concert was that despite the problems, the concert was a success, and provided three days of good bluegrass music in the peaceful Vermont countryside.

WRUV was present at the festival and recorded the entire three days. In approximately one month they will broadcast highlights of the festival. These broadcasts will be aired on Monday nights, at a time to be announced later.

The New Lost City Ramblers (from left, Mike Seeger, Tracey Schwartz and John Cohen)

The Good Old Boys with Frank Wakefield mandolin, and Dave Nelson, guitar.

John Dillon

MAD HATTER Bits & Pieces

by AL BERNARDINA

In the Burlington Free Press still publishing a sports section? You would never know it. Never, never check the standings of your favorite team in the Free Press and expect to get the right stats. Last time I checked they were not even close. I guess their clipping service is a day or two late.

It is too bad that Ruffian suffered such an awful fate. I think Ruffian would have beaten Foolish Pleasure, but we will never know. The way Jack Whittaker and the rest of the CBS commentators were carrying on after the race, you would have thought they were covering a State funeral.

George Benson on his last album Bad Benson definitely establishes himself as the best guitar player in the universe. All you guys who go for Jimmy Page of Led Zeppelin or Ronnie Wood now of the Rolling Stones should listen to Benson and hear what a real guitarist sounds like.

The death of former heavyweight king Ezzard Charles went practically overlooked. He was probably the most underrated fighter of all time. He beat Joe Louis badly when the great Joe was trying a comeback. He knocked out the great Archie Moore. He extended the great Rocky Marciano in one fight and then succumbed to the Rock's hitting power in the second. Yet after beating all these great fighters, Ezzard was never given his just due. I always thought Ezzard was a great fighter.

Speaking of heavyweight champions, here is my rating of the top five: (1) Muhammad Ali – too fast and too smart for anyone; (2) Jack Johnson – the only old timer who ranks in my top five; (3) Rocky Marciano – brutalizing puncher and lots of courage; (4) Joe Louis – great puncher with either hand; (5) Ezzard Charles – great boxer and an excellent hitter. All the others are just ham 'n' eggers.

I have no idea why they call Locker Room on WJOY a sports call-in show. With Paul Chapman taking your call you have about as much of a chance of getting a word in as a Protestant has of surviving in the Catholic section of Belfast. It is unfortunate because before Chapman it was a dynamite show.

Lack of planning could be blamed for the chaos at the Book Store Monday. With the start of the Summer Session the powers that be saw fit to have only two check-out lines open. There were people backed up onto Main St. and they were getting in the way of the construction of the tunnel. What tunnel?

I dare you to go into Charlie's Red Hots on Church St. and order a Pepsi. I guess Charlie holds a grudge for a while.

I also dare you to go to Beansis' yellow bus in Battery Park and have two steamed hot dogs, a pint of french fries, with vinegar, and a pop. Let me know when you will attempt this gastronomical downer, and I will bring you a bottle of Brioschi.

Bill Hunter, major domo at WDOT, is not one to write a letter to. He never answers with more than three words.

Have you driven down Battery Boulevard past Metz Plaza and the dancing waters? Check it out and you will see that 21 of the 26 lites illuminating the area have been busted. Great feat of engineering when you put these huge globes out there for Burlington's answer to the Dead End Kids to work on...

Richard Gallagher, news director at WCAX-TV, reminds me of "The Great Stoneface" when he reads the news on the Channel 3 News Hour. Never will you see this cat cracking a smile... I guess that is in keeping with station policy. Ed Sullivan, the original Stoneface, was a laugh a minute compared to this guy. By the way Mickey, kudos to your tailor, he has a great sense of humor.

The Woodstock's are leading the North End Peanuts League, Inc. and are the only undefeated team in the league. Mr. and Mrs. Billy Black and Mr. and Mrs. John Mackey, assisted by Shirley Brandolino, run the league. Each week they go out and prove it.

Joe Garagiola should be pitching for Good Year instead of Dodge cars. That extra suet around the middle does not look like a recap.

Why is it when a guy makes the cover of a couple of publications he goes into a slump? First Nolan Ryan, gracing the cover of Newsweek and Sports Illustrated in the same week, has not been right since. This week Fred Lynn of the Red Sox made the front of Sports Illustrated and The Sporting News. The truth is Lynn has been in a slump for two weeks. Probably it's that old SI bugaboo.

Be forewarned, next week's column by The Hatter will feature Distinguished and Undistinguished Awards for 1974.

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group Roll Call Report for 1975 in the Vermont House of Representatives and the Senate makes for some interesting observations.

In the House Mark Kaplan (D) District 4-3 registered a surprisingly low 64% agreement with VPIRG. It came as no surprise that Richard Snelling (R) District 5-7 voted in support of VPIRG a meager 38% of the time. But then again Richard Snelling has never been for anything for the public anyway. Richard Mazza (D) District 1-3 and Rosaire Longe (D) District 4-6 saw it VPIRG's way only 33% and 36% of the time. I wonder how they put their heads on.

On the Good Persons side 100% agreement with VPIRG was tallied by Gail Shiman (D) District 1-1, Edwin Granai (D) District 4-5, Mary Evelti (D) District 4-8 and David Curtis (R) District 5-7. Nice going folks.

In the Senate, from Chittenden County, Thomas Crowley (D) voted with VPIRG 27% of the time, one of the lowest in the entire Senate. He even voted against strengthening the bottle ban which would have banned flip-top cans and non-refillable bottles. His voting record is most questionable.

Local Diversions

Safe And Sane At An East Fairfield Fourth Of July

by CARL BLUMBERG

Despite heavy 4th of July traffic, I made my connecting flight to East Fairfield last Friday. Heading northbound on I-89 in the passenger seat of a beat-up red VW, a familiar (and similarly beat-up red) pick-up was spotted up ahead. At sixty m.p.h., I stuck my head out the window and yelled, "Going to East Fairfield?" The driver of the pick-up nodded.

An iced zinc tub was my travelling companion from Georgia to E. Fairfield in the back of the pick-up. Unaffected by the sun and wind that engulfed the pick-up, the tub provided excellent refreshment.

For several years now, East Fairfield celebrates Independence Day with events benefitting its fire department. Featured entertainment is what is nigh-on to becoming a Vermont landmark, the John Cassel Band. They is, of course, a parade (which I missed). There is a 'Dip a Hippie' booth (which I missed), and there is music well into the night in the park at the center of town. (That can't be missed.)

Cars were parked on both sides of Route 36 on the west side of town (flashbacks of another small town – Bethel, N.Y., summer of '69.) Happily, East Fairfield was no repeat in terms of numbers.

Two local gentlemen, twin brothers named Adam and Steve, were my guides later in the afternoon. I like the both of them, but as guides to East Fairfield, I hope not to use them for a while. Adam was less interested in guiding, and more interested in displaying affection for many women present. The women responded to his advances, probably for so-temporary love of Adam. Brother Steve was little help, too. All he wanted to do was dance and help out Cassel's Nightcrawlers with the back-up vocals of "It Ain't the Meat But the Motion." The twins had their third birthday in April.

The J.C.B. and Friends played well into the night. Drunkeness and dancing were the featured side shows. If the East Fairfield Fire Department made money, a good part of it had to be five-cent deposit returns. All day, Skeeter Camera's drumming competed with the snapping of the screen door at Maynard's store.

According to a highly-placed source close to a Fender-Rhodes Electric piano, 1976 will be the Fourth of July finale, which is too bad.

But perhaps East Fairfield may want to wait another two hundred years to celebrate Independence Day like it has recently. If so, you can't really blame them.

You And Your Plant - In Need Of A Drink

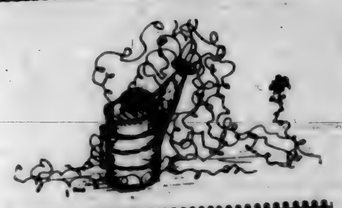
by TED FLANAGAN
UVM GARDEN SPECIALIST

This prolonged hot and dry spell has some slightly redeeming features but otherwise has been pretty tough on your plant.

Those of you windowboxing it with maybe a Tiny Tim tomato in a tub or big flower pot have had to give scrouplous attention to watering. Small pots, especially clay pots, dry out so rapidly that it almost seems you didn't water them at all. Putting your small pot, plant and all, into a larger container lined with sphaghnum moss will help a lot. Otherwise, set the pots in pans of water for that extra long drink.

If your vegetables are growing in a patch outside and you had the foresight to spread a deep old hay mulch about, your soil is most likely still moist. A lot of Vermont gardeners will testify this year that Ruth Stout was right. A heavy – and it has to be that – mulch, spread evenly enough and so thick as to keep the hot rays of the sun from filtering down to the soil surface, will go a long way to preserve what soil moisture you do have.

Those of you that have to water – if you have water to water with – will find that a good deep soaking is best. If you can't do the whole garden this way, do part of it at a time. Shallow sprinklings soon dry up and leave roots gasping for a drink. Watering at nightfall will avoid some evaporation losses.



What was good about the heat? It hastened a lot of crops into early maturity. In other words, many vegetables are getting ripe sooner than expected. This is particularly true of peas. I've seen many a local garden with vines loaded with fat pea pods. Better check yours. Of course, early ripening of some kinds of plants is not what you want. Ripening, and going to seed, of radishes, spinach and lettuce are examples.

One other benefit of the heat is that the soil has baked so hard, new generations of pesky insects have a hard time getting out of the ground. This doesn't seem to have affected the cabbage worms and potato bugs. Bean beetles will not be far behind. Cabbage worms and loopers succumb most easily to BT, short for Bacillus thuringiensis, a completely organic biological preparation sold locally as Dipel, Thuricide, or Biotrol. Try carbaryl ("Sevin") or rotonone for the bugs.

Self Portrait Of An Inmate

Editor's Note: Charlie Baldwin is an inmate at Burlington's Chittenden County Community Correctional Center. Last week he detailed the events of his life from an All American in high school to advocate journalist, injured Olympic qualifying track star, and finally check forger, serving five years on a felony. This week he has submitted a typical day's journal of events behind the walls of the Correctional Center.

Doing Time: A SystematicMalevolence

by CHARLIE BALDWIN

–From the morning wake-up between 6:00 – 6:30 a.m. each day, the life of an inmate in the C.C.C.C. begins winding its way through another day of prison and, often does not end until sometime after the 11:00 p.m. lock-up, when, tired, alone, consumed with frustration (and frequently boredom) and fear and little satisfaction, the individual allows sleep to draw him into the subconscious.

–Breakfast each weekday and Saturdays, between 6:30 – 7:00, methodically consists of juice, dry cereal, coffee/tea and two slices of margarine-soaked, rather rubbery toast (Have you ever tried to toast 100-200 slices of bread and been able to keep their texture and warmth for more than five minutes?)

–7:00 – 7:30 a.m. finds us back in our residential sections, and commencing our morning clean-ups of individual rooms, corridors, toilets, the lounge, and anything that doesn't move. Once a general once- (or twice or thrice) over by the duty officer okays our sanitation efforts, we are allowed to settle into the most difficult of our routines... finding ways in which to keep oneself busy and interested and hopefully, making progress... while the remainder of the day passes ever so slowly and viable activities are, at best, limited.

–By 9:30 each morning, the many inmates who are pass-eligible (in other words, far enough along in either their sentences or their "rehabilitation" programs) for release to outside jobs, schools, or therapy or training programs, have left the center, and the remaining inmate population must seek ways to occupy their time as constructively as possible. Without being derisive, this can consist of playing cards, watching television, writing the twentieth letter that week to one's wife, lover, friend or family, reading the Free Press (the most popular sections are the daily court reports on criminal cases, the absolutely hopeless want-ads, sports, and letters-to-the-editor (especially if they concern commentary on the Correctional system), watching television, spending fifteen minutes browsing in the library (even though it is open for a full hour), doing laundry, watching television, sleeping, listening to radios, record players, tapes (for the zillionth time, please spare me from a repeat of Stairway to Heaven!), watching television, and somewhat dubiously waiting for our morning "canteen" call, when we can betray our stomachs with soda, candy and gum, and pollute our lungs with more cigarettes.

–11:00 a.m. finds us working our way into the dining hall (I overlooked mentioning that we share our meals with the 4-8 women confined in the facility in a very distant and quite secure section... more than separate from our daily activities, excepting canteen and gymnasium activity) for lunch. Our meals here consist of frozen and hermetically sealed meats, canned fruit and vegetables, and generally frozen potatoes that somehow never manage to get fully cooked. We are also blessed with unlimited quantities of Holsum Bread, margarine and our one saving grace: Borden's milk, fresh and cold. Despite the fact that inmates prepare the food, and are responsible for the kitchen and its cleanliness, the administration has a correctional officer assigned to oversee and control the operation and schedule of the food service programs. It is painfully evident to every inmate who has ever worked in the kitchen either here or at the old Burlington Community Correctional Center that this "mess officer" is often negligent in his written duties and responsibilities, and as a result, the inmates often are without foodstuffs to prepare meals on time or quantity to put out the best possible meal under the given restrictive conditions.

–Afternoons have to be the longest and most futile periods of normal day-to-day activity, as there are few programs or activities scheduled which can, in any manner, afford relief from, the drudgery of watching television, playing cards, listening to Stairway to Heaven, etc., etc.

–Our supper usually rolls by between 5:00 – 6:00 p.m., and the equally lengthy and consuming evening's hours are again focused in the direction of the evil idiot-box. No one here ever makes any concerted effort to watch the News, but I Dream of Jeanie, Star Trek and Bonanza manage to hold considerable interest, despite what must be some of the most boring and repetitious plots this side of the vast number of police shows, which surface in full-force after 8:00. By the end of the day's final meal, our community-released inmates have returned, so our residential section overflows with conversation about the outside world, and who drank, smoked, screwed, worked or played at what while on pass. We also manage to finally receive our daily incoming mail (despite the fact that we all see the mailman deliver it no later than 2:00 p.m. each day... it is logged by the administration, and scrutinized for possible contraband), and there is the usual scurry to the privacy of one's room to read the good, bad or indifferent news from those people on the outside who so much are an integral part of our sanity.

–By 9:00 p.m., we are again back into the canteen for soda and sweets and, for those who are disciplined enough (or more commonly, for those seeking relief from the trappings of the day's boredom) the gymnasium, weight room and pool table are open to our use. Unless one chooses to exercise in their room during the day (which would be considered a somewhat strange practice...), this is the only real opportunity for anyone to obtain any sense of exercise or conditioning to offset the burden of our high carbohydrate and starch diets.

–Resident inmates must be in their rooms by 11:00 p.m., and what occurs after the bedtime hour is strictly up to the individual and his moods or whims. We are checked in a population "headcount" every half-hour by the night shift officers, which invariably means that if you are sleeping and your light is off, a flashlight is shined in your eyes, interrupting the possible pleasure of quiet dreams.... fantasies and projections to people, places and events in the ever-distant and removed outside world.

–Time for a man or woman in prison passes slowly. Every small or large move or activity or incident which captures even the slightest quirk of someone's six senses, demands immediate attention and regard. There are so few words spoken, so few events which happen, so few rumors which are not turned over and over while seeking a thread of truth or reality; in effect, there is nothing which the pervading atmosphere of prison life does not touch in the daily life of one and all of its inmates. Unlike the popular concept of individual isolation and segregation from a natural, human flow of day-to-day existence (as is so commonly associated with correctional institutions) there is rarely an instance when the circumstances or situations or decisions which effect the inmates' lives is not known to the inmate him/herself. Collectively, we all experience a certain sense of futility and an overwhelming loss of control over our present and future, and because of this, the search for identity, friendship, freedom, trust – and love – continues at an almost obsessive pace. Undeniably, credit must be given for perseverance and the hope for future independence, if such a great oppressive struggle does in fact exist.

–Unfortunately, as with any substantial group of people from reasonably diverse backgrounds, social and economic divisions (though this is markedly reduced here, Vermont being a small state with high unemployment and a definitive lower class consisting of underskilled workers and former farm laborers), and educational and employment training, there is a constant minority of individual inmates who feel that the pressures and expectations of the outside world are too excessive and demanding for them, and accept their incarceration as a way of life. It is this negative/defeatist minority that constitutes the sociologists concept of "institutionalization," and further, lends support to the societal fear we refer to as "recidivism." These men feel that they are being given care and consideration, and after having experienced frustration and failure and bitterness while in society itself, their feelings are understandable, and possibly justified. Rejection by family, schools, friends, employers, lovers and the courts have given many of these individuals no place to turn to for comfort and security – no matter how false or contrived. Several of these inmates have no place they can call home, and few people they can consider friendly and understanding. Yet the environment and peer group acceptance gives these same individuals a comfort and comradeship which many had never previously experienced. Throw in three square meals a day, no rent, no utility bills, no school, no work requirements, and quite frankly enough, often the absence of spouse and child responsibilities, and you have the perfect setting for recidivism and a cancerous crime rate.

–The inmates here are isolated from the outside though, yet it is done in a subtle and as gradual a manner as possible. It takes time to become adjusted to not having complete freedom to phone, write or see those individuals who were well known to us prior to our incarceration. Visiting is appallingly restrictive, and limited to 1:30 – 2:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and 1:00 – 3:00 p.m. on Sundays. A small four hours out of each week of 168. Our remaining contact is limited to our program workers from many different human services and rehabilitation agencies and, what pleasure, visitation or employment passes we might have to revisit the community.

–The staff and administration itself, seems to be bent more on the job of handling roughly one hundred inmates on a day-to-day basis, and frequently must respond to more security and confinement measures to maintain a workable level of operation. It often appears as though the lock-and-key comes before any real effort at communication, treatment and human needs and development. For inmates to effectively communicate with a member of the administration, he/she must file a formal, written request through proper channels, and even if the request is read, there is no guarantee that it will be acted upon. The staff itself is far too committed to operational responsibilities, and with the exception of a few intelligent and perceptive individuals, is void of compassion and understanding for the many problems and adjustments and frustrations which the residents experience on a regular basis. Normal daily difficulties and setbacks are secondary to completion of one's sentence and eventual release. And unless a member of the staff or administration is aware of what is going on in the inmate's mind, these problems are often locked inside, where the long-term harm to one's identity or self-awareness may not become evident until they are returned to society. More staff (which seems to be the general focus at the C.C.C.C.) is not the answer to these problems, but rather, more staff qualified to handle the basic problems of human nature in an institutional setting. Without this, the inmates can only hope for someone to talk to or learn from, instead of the typical 'no,' 'maybe,' 'later,' or 'we'll have to see.'

–"Doing time" has become far easier, and far more humane than historical concepts of penology and punishment which existed in the United States until the forties, fifties and sixties began to reveal programs and new ideas about the fields of rehabilitation, treatment and release privileges from all levels of correctional facilities. Yet we must not feel or begin to believe that modern institutions such as the Chittenden Community Correctional Center are so advanced that we can hope for a decline in the soaring crime rate – either here in Vermont or elsewhere – or further, an answer to the problems within our correctional facilities themselves. We must however begin to hope that we can make some headway into the more serious aspects of treating and releasing those individuals who are able to contribute and develop within the progressive domain of facilities of this type, yet also be aware that this is not possible until those who run these institutions can be equal to the task.

... Last Lap At The Raceway

(continued from page thirteen)

action-packed sport. Only two serious injuries mar the record of Catamount Stadium, a broken back and sternum, which is pretty light compared to football or baseball. It has enough thrill and danger without going all the way to racing in a hearse.

Those who come usually sit in the same seats every night and know each other well. Many of the kids hang on the rails surrounding the track or go down to the fences next to the track for the full impact of the races, but most of the parents sit on the bleachers which were purchased after being used in 1960 for the John F. Kennedy inauguration. There they can munch on Cheetos, Catamount French Fries, Ice Cream, Sodas, Pizzas, Hamburgs, or Franks while they watch the races.

Stock car racing has an essentially grass roots following. Everyone can identify whatever make of car they drive with the ones that are cruisin' down there on the track. The Automobile industry still is 19% of the GNP and the cars the racers drive are just souped up models of the ones that take mom and dad on their merry way to work every day, be they Chevrolets, Plymouths, Fords, Dodges, or Volkswagons.

There are three different classes of cars to watch. The smallest, and perhaps the answer to the energy crisis on the stock car scene, are the mini-stocks, or the Kama-Kazi squad as it's known on the circuit. They are souped up Volkswagons and small European cars. The Hurricanes comprise another category which are full size, but are mostly old heaps that have been altered for a minimum of cost ($800) to be race cars. They are driven by the novice drivers at speeds of between 65 and 75 miles per hour. The third and largest class is the Late Model Sportsman which encompasses the modified machines costing anywhere from $8-12,000. They are driven by all the big drivers (short of the Grand National racers) on the 1/3 mile track at Catamount at speeds ranging from 85 to 95 miles per hour.

But what brings these people out night after night? The chance factor is high. One mechanic told us that a race was 33% car, 33% driver, and 33% luck pure and simple. So one night a guy like Larry Carens can go out in the Hurricane division with his six-cylinder Chevrolet Nova and walk away from the rest of the V-8's on the track.

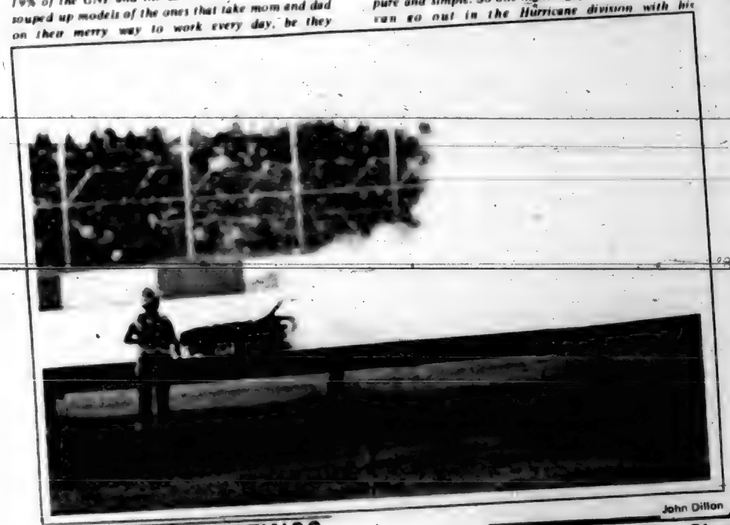
Squire and his Catamount Company have created other periodical events to spark interest in and make light of straight racing. The "Looney Tunes," or "Basic Berserkos" as they are called, are races done entirely as a spoof on racing proper. A week ago Catamount held a Grand Union Grocery Basket Grand Prix in which the drivers sat in the grocery carts and directed their blindfolded wives down the track. This coming Saturday night the Creeper Race will feature mechanics on their creepers (the dolly on which they do their repair work underneath cars) creeping down the track in heated competition.

The most notable of the Berserkos was the North American Cow-Chip Throwing Contest in which the competition was open to men, women and politicians. The governor made that one, though reports have it that he didn't win any prizes for the chips he threw (or walked in).

Stock car racing is also unique in that it is privately sponsored entirely. Other sports such as baseball and football have farm teams and high school programs from which to draw their players, all of which are subsidized by the taxpayer. It is also a unique sport in that the stock car fans have their own super-stars. It is not a team sport in the traditional sense. Each racer is in it for himself and the folks who come out to see him every Saturday night, paying their $3.50 admission, have their individual super-stars. If they travel to other parts of the country they bring with them the stories of their own local super-stars and thus a whole sub-culture of stock car enthusiasm is created by each of the 2,000 tracks in the country.

Finally, not only do the folks get to know each other in the stands, but they also can meet and talk to their own super-heroes in the pits after each race. Because stock car racing does not get the coverage of baseball or football, the racers know that if they want to keep their sport alive, they must continually expose themselves to the public. So for hours after races the drivers will hang around in the pit areas signing autographs, getting their pictures taken with the kids and talking stock car racing with anyone who cares to. Drivers, like the spectators, are both male and female and range in age from 19 year old Ronnie Bonnett to Leon Bundy who is 63 years old and still racing strong. They come from all over New England and New York and from as far away as Florida. The variety of super-heroes is all there, all that is left is to make your choice.

.....



John Dillon

... VPIRG RATINGS

The fifteen votes analyzed by the student-run public interest group include two votes on a tough law regulating the sale of hearing aids and two votes on a law that is the nation's first state regulation over the building of nuclear power plants. Also included in the VPIRG scoresheet are three issues dealing with open government including lobby disclosure and citizen access to public documents.

"We chose these fifteen issues," said Cobb, "because we think that they give a clear and fair picture of each legislator over a broad range of issues. Although there were many other roll call votes taken," the VPIRG staff person added, "many of those issues were either repetitive or of not great importance to the public."

Copies of the VPIRG roll call report are available on campus (Billings or the Book Store) or by writing to VPIRG, 26 State Street, Montpelier, Vermont 05602.

	YES	NO
	✓
	✓
		✓
		✓
		✓
		✓
		✓

...CCCC VOLUNTEERS

is needed to run a pottery workshop once a week for a few hours.

People who are willing to devote some time to tutoring, arts and craft instruction, recreation or other activities should be able to make a commitment for the summer months. Most of our programs are ongoing, year-round and a commitment of a couple hours a week is enough if it is also a commitment for a period of a couple months minimum. You will not only be helping the center but will also be making the Burlington Community a little bit nicer place to live. If you are interested, please contact Joan Mollica, Volunteer Services Director, at the Chittenden Community Correctional Center, 864-0344 or 0345. Your help is appreciated and will make the lives of some residents a little bit nicer. Thank you.

What's Growing On At Gardens For All

by Pamela Stefanek

Driving through the downtown traffic in the heat of the mid-afternoon I arrive at the fifth community garden I've visited today, the plots at St. Paul's Cathedral located on the corner of Battery and Pearl Streets. Five lengths of hose stretch across the parking lot as one gardener is watering his lettuce. Others are busy pulling weeds. They are all friendly and, if I stay a minute, will offer gardening advice or tell me stories of theirs or their neighbor's vegetables.

There are 21 community garden sites in the Greater Burlington Area with anywhere from about 20 to over 100 plots in each, for a total of about 1150 plots. Some, like St. Paul's and the UVM plots, are situated downtown and others are hidden off quiet side roads or overlooking Lake Champlain. Despite the very dry spring and the fact that it is the first time out for many gardeners, the gardens are looking very good and green and edible.

The plots are generally 25' x 30' with some gardeners choosing to have more than one while other plots are shared by two families. The gardens are plowed in the fall and spring. The plots are then rototilled and the coordinators (all volunteer) stake them out. Gardeners can return to their old plots every year or transfer to another site.

The land is made available by church groups, the Burlington Park Department, Shelburne Farms, the University of Vermont, and individuals throughout the area. The coordinating is done by B. H. "Tommy" Thompson of Gardens For All, Inc., a non-profit organization which started in Burlington three years ago with only two garden sites and less than 50 community gardeners.

Since then the original gardening enthusiasts have been joined by thousands more throughout the state who are turning to community gardening as way to beat the high prices and to assure themselves of high quality, delicious, fresh tasting home grown fruits and vegetables. Gardens For All has provided advice and technical assistance to groups and individuals all over the country and has published a manual, now in its second printing, on organizing community gardens.

The aim of Gardens For All is to encourage people to become food self-sufficient and to help provide garden space for those without land. To help re-introduce gardening classes in the schools, Gardens For All has put together a school gardening manual with lesson plans for the fourth and fifth grades.

Gardens For All has their office in the Farm Barn on Shelburne Farms in Shelburne, Vt. In front of the barn is an 18 acre field where there are community gardens, larger plots (50' x 50' and up), and several experimental plots and crop varieties. These larger plots will be available to the public again next year as will an increased number of community gardens.

Located in the same building is the first Ball Canning Center in the area. It is called the "Harvest Center" and was installed by Garden Way Growers of Charlotte. For a nominal fee people will be able to use canning and juicing and food processing equipment to allow them to properly (and rapidly) store their produce for use during the off-season. Supervision will be done by a person knowledgable in food processing.

Last year the Burlington community gardeners had the opportunity to sell their excess produce at the Burlington Farmers' Market. Cricket Laffin, coordinator of the Market, was present among trucks and stalls at the opening of the Burlington Farmer's Market last Friday. It is located at St. Paul's Cathedral also, and the parking lot was full of people selling the first vegetables of the season, plants and handcrafts.

Two Plant and Soil Science students from UVM, Aimee Aucoin and Pamela Stefanek, are working with Gardens For All for the summer. They are currently working on a survey which is a joint effort of Gardens For All, Ted Flanagan of the Extension Service, the Episcopal Diocese, and the Center for Food Self-Sufficiency at Goddard College. There will be five surveys distributed throughout the summer. The first will be a general gardening information survey to find out how people are gardening and what they are planting. It will be distributed through a special Gardens For All newsletter, by mail and by clipboard. Another survey involves organic gardening methods. This is a chance to report your successes and failures with all those "organic" techniques you've been trying. One follow-up survey asks gardeners to give yields. With this information, it will be possible to find out where people are succeeding with methods or varieties. Connected with the yield survey is another on marketing and processing. Everyone involved with this survey would like to calculate the need for processing centers and markets for local produce. The last survey involves energy inputs such as time spent in the garden and time spent rototilling, etc. This information will be used to calculate efficiencies of scale and energy-intensity vs. labor-intensive gardening and farming. Anyone receiving the first survey will be asked to indicate which other surveys they would care to receive.

For further information on anything in this article, please call 863-1371.

ART PRINT SALE! Over 7,000 Lithos, Etchings, Silk-Screen reproductions and limited editions!

Gallery 410 has one of the largest print collections in New England! You'll find a tremendous selection of old and modern masters. Traditional, Abstract, Geometric, Art Nouveau & Deco... Landscapes, Seascapes, Florals, Still Lifes, Animals, Birds, Clowns, Vogue & Sat. Eve Post Covers. Contemporary & Turn of the Century Posters... Original Old English Steel Engravings. Gibson Girl, & old advertisements... and much more!

OVER 1,000 ART PRINTS numbers, some soiled & torn	discontinued	25¢ 5 FOR $1.00
OVER 2,000 ART PRINTS	Values to $5	Now 75¢
OVER 500 ART PRINTS	Values to $7.50	Now $2.50
OVER 500 ART PRINTS	Values to $16	Now $3.75
43 ORIGINAL LIMITED EDITIONS....		NOW 25% OFF

•DOORBUSTER! 60 FULL COLOR ART PRINTS $10. SIZES 8x10 TO 16x20

•SALE SPECIALS• PICASSO... Don Quixote 20x26 Reg $7.50.... $1.00
BOSCH... Garden Of Delights 23x36 Reg $10... $2.50
87 FRAMED PRINTS AND PAINTINGS ON SALE..... $7.50 TO $100

GALLERY 410
214 COLLE STREET 863-3695

DAKINS MOUNTAIN SHOP
227 MAIN ST.

We are your complete suppliers of quality backpacking, mountaineering, and camping gear.

BANKAMERICARD
864-4122
master charge
HOURS MON.–FRI 9 - 9 SAT 9-6

summer cynic

"Journalism is literature in a hurry."

Editorial

It is often all too easy to get caught up in the tital wave of "what everyone else is doing" and it takes a certain amount of true American heroic spirit to be radically different. This spirit requires not change for its own sake but a move forward into waters that remain untested and possibly dangerous.

As of this past weekend, Burlington has proved that it is a few steps ahead of the rest of the United States and took its well-deserved place among this nation's most progressive communities.

Most every community in this great land of ours celebrated the one hundred and ninety-ninth anniversary of our independence with fireworks and festivities on July fourth. Burlington in an unprecedented move observed the holiday two days later on July sixth.

During the afternoon of the sixth, a fair was held in Battery Park. An atmosphere of easy going joviality prevailed as a few hundred Burlintonians strolled, enjoying music, good food, games and booths.

In the evening, however, the scene became a little hectic as at least a thousand people milled about Battery Park in anxious anticipation of the thrills that might accompany the July sixth fireworks. Most of the spectators were less than satisfied when the display did not reach their orgasmic expectations. The rather weak display lasted fifteen minutes and climaxed when two (that's right, two) fireworks were shot into the air at the same time.

As the hordes of people exited the park to create a beautiful traffic jam on Battery Street (an occurrence that had not been listed as one of the day's planned activities) I felt glad to see that so many members of the community had been brought together for so little.

It has been rumored that for the finale of next year's July sixth celebration marking our two hundredth year and two day birthday as a nation, the oil storage tanks that line the lakefront will be ignited in such a way as to spell out REVOLUTION in flames above the Queen City. Ethan Allen will be proud.

Correspondence

To the Editor:

I am a lonely confined prisoner at London Correctional Institution in Ohio. I am writing you this letter as an urgent appeal for correspondence and friendship.

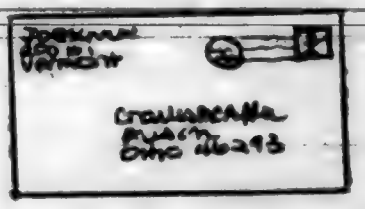
It would be very deeply appreciated if you would print this letter for me so that I may re-acquaint myself with the outside world.

My name is Charles McAfee. I'm 27, brown hair and hazel eyes. I would like correspondence and friendship with realistic and uninhibited concerned people, regardless of age, color or religion.

I've lost contact with my family and friends and would appreciate hearing from anyone.

Thank you very much for your help and consideration and time.

Charles McAfee
P.O. Box 69
London, Ohio 43140



To the Editors:

Thanks for the inside story on a day with Vermont's Governor Tom Salmon (Summer Cynic, July 3). It sounded like Tanner and Freeman had a great time joy riding ("roaming" maybe they'd prefer to call it) around in old Governor Tom's Lincoln.

I find it appalling, however, that a man with Freeman's warped, fantasy-ridden, imagination should be foisting his suggestions on the governor. How can a man who advises the governor to speak on "how he feels on the 4th of July" have anything worthwhile to say about the affairs of this hallowed state and its executive leader?

As for Tanner's animalistic impressions of the "angry lion, his mane dishelved," caricaturing the governor as "growling a welcome," I have doubts about his very humanness.

To these two crackpot (or should I say "cub") reporters, I say, "Who are THESE masked men?"

Cunningham Overy

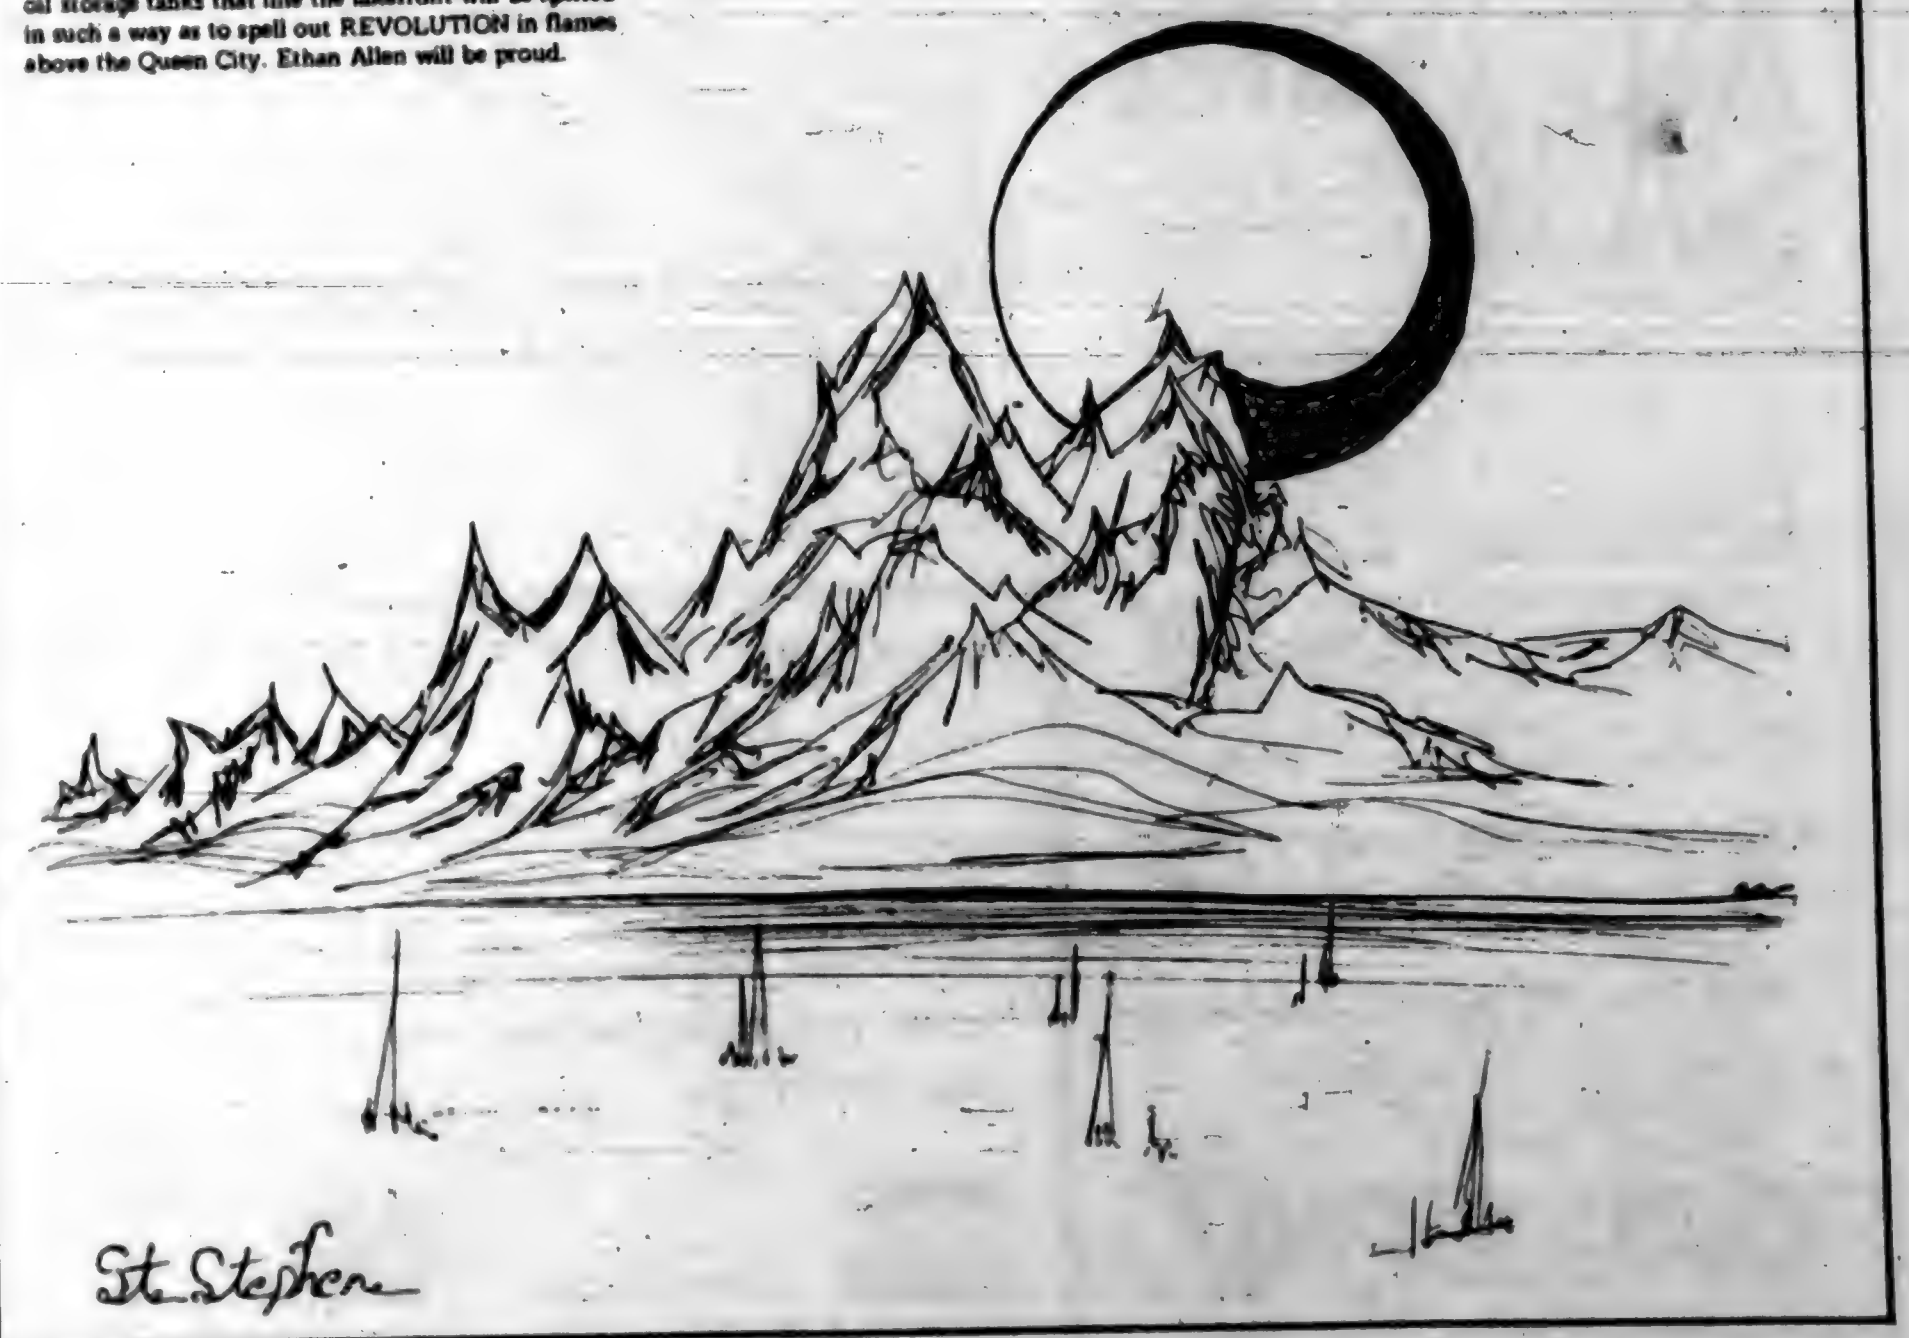
To the Editor:

Last week I read the article about the history of Billings Center in the Summer Cynic. It was very informative.

A few days ago, I was walking by Billings Center when I tripped and fell on the ground. Luckily I wasn't hurt. I figured if God wanted me to see where I was walking He would have put eyes in my feet.

G. H. Howard

Editor's Note: The Summer Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in — we are downstairs at Billings Center — or call 658-4911.



VOLUME I
NUMBER 3
JULY 17, 1975

Non Profit
U.S. POSTAGE PAID
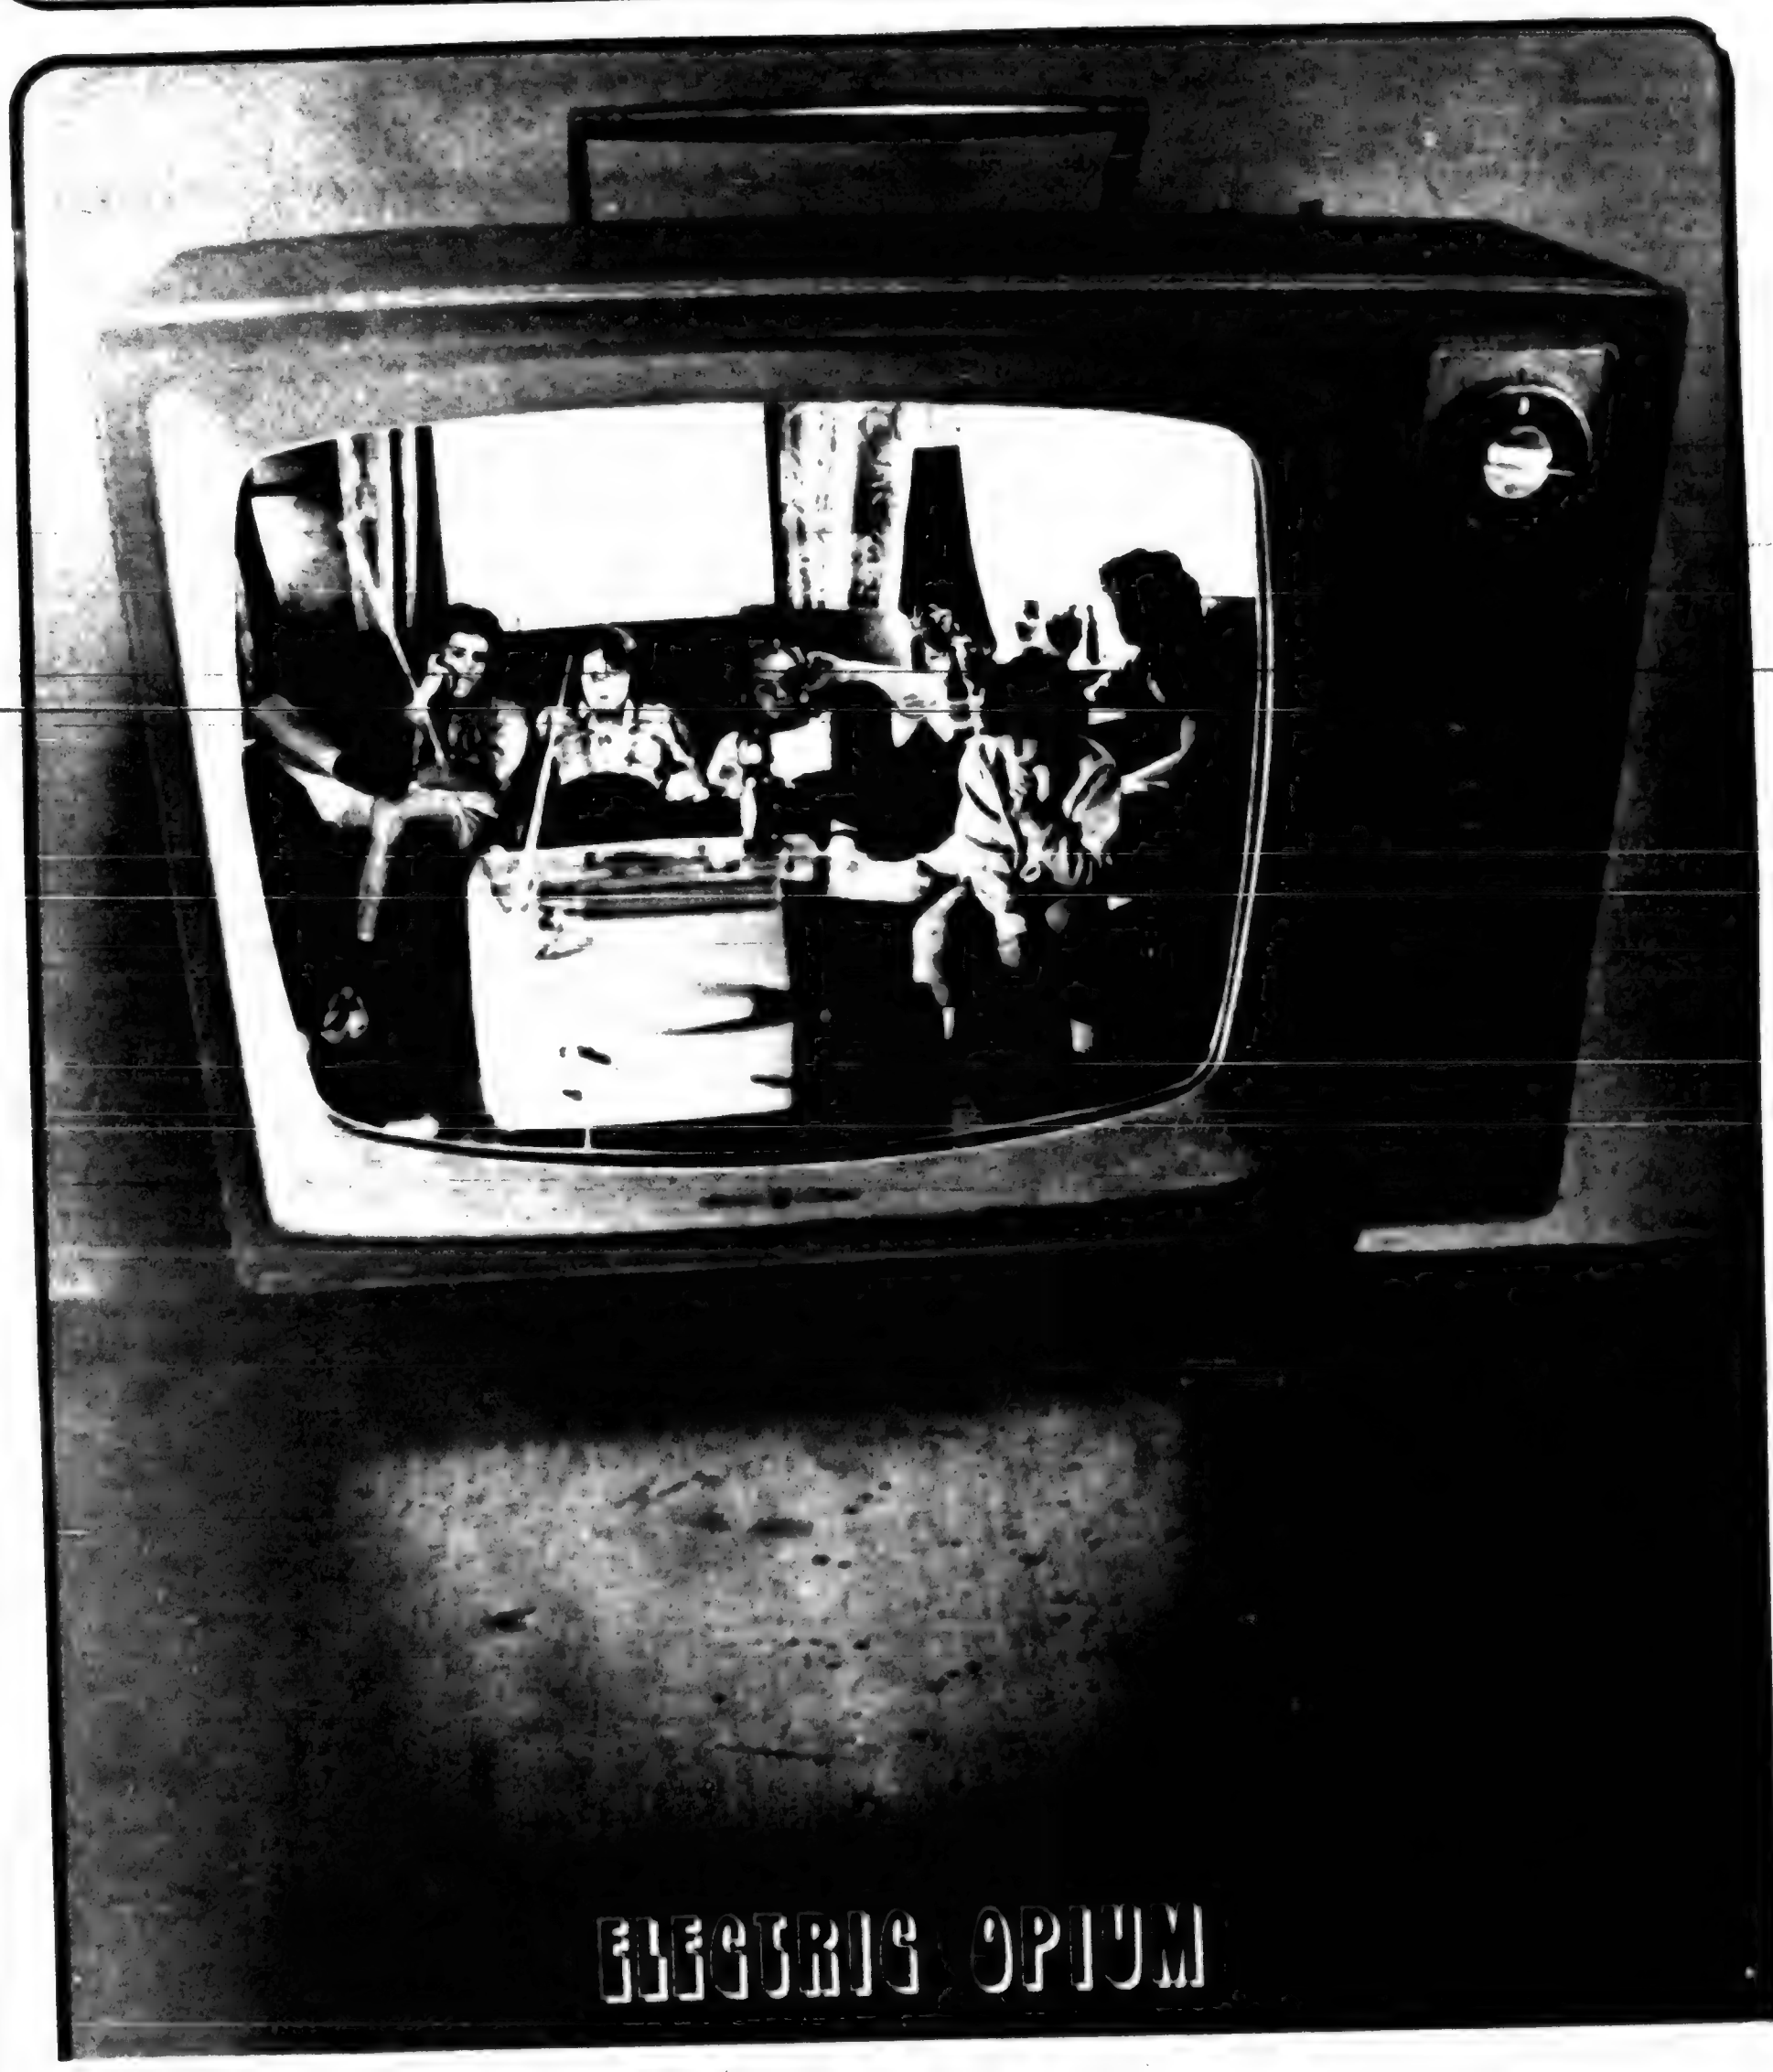
Burlington, Vt
Permit No. 141

Vermont summer cynic

Burlington, Vermont



The Summer Cynic's Photography & Creative Writing Contest

Summer Cynic Photography Contest

Deadline Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. The contest is open to all amateurs in the Burlington community (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking photographs)
2. Photographs must be entered in the following categories: (1) Church Street, (2) Vegetables, (3) Sports Action Photos, (4) Funny Photos, (5) Family Photos
3. All photographs must be black and white and will be approximately 8 x 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.
4. Pictures entered in the First Annual Summer Cynic Contest must not have been submitted in any other photo contest sponsored by the Vermont Cynic.
5. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition.
6. Judges will be announced in an upcomng edition of the Summer Cynic.
7. Photographer's name, address, and phone number should be printed on the back of each photo along with a title, if any.
8. One winner will be chosen from each category and announced in the August 7 edition of the Summer Cynic.
9. All entries should be submitted at the Summer Cynic office.
10. Judges reserve the right to announce no winner in any category.

Summer Cynic Creative Writing Contest

Deadline Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. There will be three categories: Short Story, Poetry, and Essay. The Essay Topic will be to describe your first sexual encounter. (We hope this clarifies the rules as published last week.)
2. Each entrant may enter a maximum of 2 pieces in each category. All entries become the property of the Summer Cynic.
4. All entries will be handed in to the Summer Cynic office, with name, address, and title stapled on a separate sheet so that all judging may be made retaining anonymity.
5. Limit of 15 pages for short story, 10 pages for essay, and 10 pages for poetry.
6. Judges' names will be announced in an upcoming issue.
7. Judges reserve the right to announce no winners in any category.
8. Prizes to be announced in an upcoming issue.
9. Entries accepted from all walks and varieties of life at the Summer Cynic Office in Billings Center.
10. Only one winner will be announced for each category.

Beautiful Lake Champlain

SCENIC LINE BOAT RIDES

Operating Between BURLINGTON, VT. and PORT KENT, N.Y.

- Beautiful views of historical Lake Champlain, The Green Mountains of Vermont and The Adirondack Mountains of New York.
- Refreshments, Souvenirs and Gifts are available in the comfortable passenger lounges on all three ferries.
- Stop-Over if you like, in Burlington or Port Kent.
- For Schedules of sailings call:
  BURLINGTON, VERMONT - 864-9805
  or KEESEVILLE, NEW YORK - 834-7960
  or refer to
  Lake Champlain Ferry Crossings Schedule
- Frequent Daily and Evening Sailings
- Sundecks
- Heated Lounges on Cool Fall Days

"Route of The Explorers"

LAKE CHAMPLAIN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Inc.

Burlington, Vt. — Tel. Burlington, Vt. 864-9805
Keeseville, N.Y. — 834-7960

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

Monday-thursday
9 a.m.-7 p.m.
Friday
9 a.m.-5:30 p.m
Saturday
9 a.m.-1 p.m.

The Head Shop
hair has no sex

152 Church St.
Burlington
862-4045

You take care of the inside of your head...
We'll take care of the outside.

Vermont Summer Cynic

Burlington, Vermont

Editors
Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

Managing Editor
Wyatt Kash

News Editor
Margo Howland

Consulting Editor
Kleras Bell

Columnists
Charley Baldwin, Allen Bernardina, Karl Blumberg, Peter Campbell, Peter Duquete, Ted Flanagan, John Franco, David Latane, Scott MacKay, Peter MacAusland, Ken Miller, Elaine Peterson, Larry Seiden, Jay Stevens.

Photography
John Dillon

Graphics
Terry Marshal
Philip Van Wyck

Typesetter
Susan Ball

Advertising
Martha Ricardson

Layout
Beth Cohen

Composition
KNE

Printer
North Country Printers

Legal Counsel
William Root

Radio Voice
Jacques Gosselin

Transportation
Wheatland

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the Vermont Summer Cynic do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont.

1 Seymour Phuture Production

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ENDING THE DEVELOPMENT RACKET ..... eight
Continuing his analysis of income distribution, this week John Franco probes Vermont's development policies – the lures of Big Business. "If you want to increase employment, growth, and the general standard of living, you have to get on your belly and beg for them. Or at least that's what the vast majority of development experts and politicians will tell you. The economic development game is one of the most sleazy going. In conventional politics, the object of this game is to get big corporations to come into your area and rip you off."

OPEN SEASON ..... eight
"Despite what the Public Relations Office/UVM Summer Times waxes about 'Beautiful Burlington, situated on the shores of lovely Lake Champlain...', there seriously isn't much to do after dark in this town, save going to the movies or hitting the town taverns." Scott MacKay jumps around Burlington's evening watering holes and gives Bob Colodny's reply to his coverage of the L.U. convention a ravaging riposte.

FARMERS' MARKET ..... nine
In covering the Farmers' Market, now in its fifth year, Wyatt Kash expected crowd problems in trying to locate photographer John Dillon. Wandering the streets of Burlington for nearly an hour in search of this year's Market location, the writer finally found the right parking lot... but the "crowd" amounted to less than ten people and nary a photographer. But plenty of potential lies in the Farmers' Market this year as the SUMMER CYNIC takes a look at the Market scene and the scene behind the scene.

ELECTRIC OPIUM ..... ten
"The drug is Television. In its first quarter century, TV has gone to monumental lengths to earn the title 'Opium of the Masses,' replacing religion as the main population pacifier in our Brave New World." The SUMMER CYNIC invites you to watch television courtesy of the BALD EAGLE.

"OUR TOWN" – EVERYDAY LIFE IN THE MODERN WORLD ..... thirteen
J. Karl Stevens' review of the opening night, "The Production of Wilders' "Our Town" poses a question for each viewer: is this a good production of a mediocre play or vice versa, a mediocre production of a good play?

PICTORIAL OF THE WEEK ..... fourteen
The omnipresent signs of summer are the Church Street cart vendors. Ranging from Ding Dong ice cream to hot peanuts, these roving restauranteers tantalize shoppers on the streets of Burlington, and this week John Dillon and Margo Howland have put them in focus.

AN AFTERMATH ..... seventeen
Mike Breiner penetrates the media coverage of the Indo-Chinese War and breaks the incredible story of "Operation Whopper."

SELF PORTRAIT OF AN INMATE ..... seventeen
"Thank You (or whomever receives such plaudits...) for boredom. Prison life thrives on its inactivity and pervading presence." Charlie Baldwin, an inmate at the Chittenden County Community Correctional Center, continues his "Reflections" from behind those walls.

DEPARTMENTS

Calendar & Announcements ..... two
News ..... six
Arts & Entertainment ..... twelve
Editorials ..... twenty
You and Your Plant – by Ted Flanagan ..... sixteen
Mad Hatter – by Al Bernadina ..... sixteen
Local Diversions – by Karl Blumberg ..... sixteen
Sweet Betty's Cookin' Corner – by Sweet Betty ..... sixteen
Poetry ..... seventeen

People who look to the future save at the Howard now.

Turn to the Howard Bank

The Full Service Bank For Savings

Main Office: Main and St. Paul Streets, Burlington
Offices at: Church St., North Burlington, South Burlington, Essex Junction, Essex Center, Winooski, Waterbury, Richmond, St. Johnsbury, Enosburg Falls, Barre, Orleans, Rutland, Montpelier, Brattleboro, Killington

The Summer Cynic's Photography & Creative Writing Contest

Summer Cynic Photography Contest

Deadline: Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. The contest is open to all amateurs in the Burlington community (Amateurs will be considered those people who do not support themselves by taking photographs).

2. Photographs must be entered in the following categories: (1) Church Street; (2) Vegetables; (3) Sports Action Photos; (4) Funny Photos; (5) Family Photos.

3. All photographs must be black and white and will be approximately 8 x 10 inches. There is no limit to the number of photographs that each photographer may submit.

4. Pictures entered in the First Annual Summer Cynic Contest must not have been submitted in any other photo contest sponsored by the Vermont Cynic.

5. Photographs will be judged on print quality and composition.

6. Judges will be announced in an upcoming edition of the Summer Cynic.

7. Photographer's name, address, and phone number should be printed on the back of each photo along with a title, if any.

8. One winner will be chosen from each category and announced in the August 7 edition of the Summer Cynic.

9. All entries should be submitted at the Summer Cynic office.

10. Judges reserve the right to announce no winner in any category.

Summer Cynic Creative Writing Contest

Deadline: Thursday, July 24, 1975, 12 noon

1. There will be three categories: Short Story, Poetry, and Essay. The Essay Topic will be to describe your first sexual encounter. (We hope this clarifies the rules as published last week.)

2. Each entrant may enter a maximum of 2 pieces in each category. All entries become the property of the Summer Cynic.

3. All entries will be handed in to the Summer Cynic office, with name, address, and title stapled on a separate sheet so that all judging may be made retaining anonymity.

5. Limit of 15 pages for short story, 10 pages for essay, and 10 pages for poetry.

6. Judges' names will be announced in an upcoming issue.

7. Judges reserve the right to announce no winners in any category.

8. Prizes to be announced in an upcoming issue.

9. Entries accepted from all walks and varieties of life at the Summer Cynic Office in Billings Center.

10. Only one winner will be announced for each category.

Beautiful Lake Champlain

SCENIC LINE BOAT RIDES

Operating Between BURLINGTON, VT. and PORT KENT, N.Y.

- Beautiful views of historical Lake Champlain, The Green Mountains of Vermont and The Adirondack Mountains of New York.
- Refreshments, Souvenirs and Gifts are available in the comfortable passenger lounges on all three ferries.
- Stop Over if you like in Burlington or Port Kent.
- For Schedules of sailings call:
  BURLINGTON, VERMONT - 864-9805
  or KEESEVILLE, NEW YORK - 834-7960
  or refer to
  Lake Champlain Ferry Crossings Schedule
- Frequent Daily and Evening Sailings
- Sundecks
- Heated Lounges on Cool Fall Days

"Route of The Explorers"

LAKE CHAMPLAIN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Inc.

Burlington, VT - Tel Burlington, VT 864-9805
Keeseville, N.Y. - 834-7960

CUSTOM HAIRCUTTERS

Monday-thursday
9 a.m.-7 p.m.
Friday
9 a.m.-5:30 p.m
Saturday
9 a.m.-1 p.m.

The Head Shop
hair has no sex

152 Church St.
Burlington
862-4045

You take care of the inside of your head...
We'll take care of the outside.

VERMONT summer cynic

Burlington, Vermont

Editors
Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

Managing Editor
Wyatt Kash

News Editor
Margo Howland

Consulting Editor
Kleras Bell

Columnists
Charley Baldwin, Allen Bernardina, Karl Blumberg, Peter Campbell, Peter Duquette, Ted Flanagan, John Franco, David Latane, Scott MacKay, Peter MacAusland, Ken Miller, Elaine Peterson, Larry Seiden, Jay Stevens.

Photography
John Dillon

Graphics
Terry Marshal
Philip Van Wyck

Typesetter
Susan Ball

Advertising
Martha Ricardson

Layout
Beth Cohen

Composition
KNE

Printer
North Country Printers

Legal Counsel
William Root

Radio Voice
Jacques Gosselin

Transportation
Wheatland

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the Vermont Summer Cynic do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont.

A Seymour Phuture Production

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ENDING THE DEVELOPMENT RACKET ..... eight
Continuing his analysis of income distribution, this week John Franco probes Vermont's development policies — the lures of Big Business. "If you want to increase employment, growth, and the general standard of living, you have to get on your belly and beg for them. Or at least that's what the vast majority of development experts and politicians will tell you. The economic development game is one of the most sleazy going. In conventional politics, the object of this game is to get big corporations to come into your area and rip you off."

OPEN SEASON ..... eight
"Despite what the Public Relations Office/UVM Summer Times waxes about 'Beautiful Burlington, situated on the shores of lovely Lake Champlain...', there seriously isn't much to do after dark in this town, save going to the movies or hitting the town taverns." Scott MacKay jumps around Burlington's evening watering holes and gives Bob Colodny's reply to his coverage of the L.U. convention a ravaging riposte. ..... nine

FARMERS' MARKET .....
In covering the Farmers' Market, now in its fifth year, Wyatt Kash expected crowd problems in trying to locate photographer John Dillon. Wandering the streets of Burlington for nearly an hour in search of this year's Market location, the writer finally found the right parking lot... but the "crowd" amounted to less than ten people and nary a photographer. But plenty of potential lies in the Farmers' Market this year as the SUMMER CYNIC takes a look at the Market scene and the scene behind the scene. ..... ten

ELECTRIC OPIUM .....
"The drug is Television. In its first quarter century, TV has gone to monumental lengths to earn the title 'Opium of the Masses,' replacing religion as the main population pacifier in our Brave New World." The SUMMER CYNIC invites you to watch television courtesy of the BALD EAGLE. ..... thirteen

"OUR TOWN" — EVERYDAY LIFE IN THE MODERN WORLD .....
J. Karl Stevens' review of the opening night, "The Production of Wilders' "Our Town" poses a question for each viewer: is this a good production of a mediocre play or vice versa, a mediocre production of a good play? ..... fourteen

PICTORIAL OF THE WEEK .....
The omnipresent signs of summer are the Church Street cart vendors. Ranging from Ding Dong ice cream to hot peanuts, these roving restauranteers tantalize shoppers on the streets of Burlington, and this week John Dillon and Margo Howland have put them in focus. ..... seventeen

AN AFTERMATH .....
Mike Breiner penetrates the media coverage of the Indo-Chinese War and breaks the incredible story of "Operation Whopper." ..... seventeen

SELF PORTRAIT OF AN INMATE .....
"Thank You (or whomever receives such plaudits...) for boredom. Prison life thrives on its inactivity and pervading presence." Charlie Baldwin, an inmate at the Chittenden County Community Correctional Center, continues his "Reflections" from behind those walls.

DEPARTMENTS

Calendar & Announcements ..... two
News ..... six
Arts & Entertainment ..... twelve
Editorials ..... twenty
You and Your Plant — by Ted Flanagan ..... sixteen
Mad Hatter — by Al Bernadina ..... sixteen
Local Diversions — by Karl Blumberg ..... sixteen
Sweet Betty's Cookin' Corner — by Sweet Betty ..... sixteen
Poetry ..... seventeen

People who look to the future save at the Howard now.

Turn to the Howard Bank

The Full Service Bank For Savings

Main Office: Main and St. Paul Streets, Burlington
Offices at: Church St., Merrill's Burlington, South Burlington, Essex Junction, Essex Center, Williston, Shelburne, Richmond, St. Johnsbury, Enosburg Falls, Milton, Colchester, Rutland, Bennington, Westford, Killington

CALENDAR AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

THURSDAY, JULY 17

1:30 p.m., Children's Film Classics presents "Tom Sawyer," 101 Votey; admission 50 cents.

7 p.m., High School Music Session jazz concert on the UVM Green; admission free.

7 and 9 p.m., Summer Session presents the film "Thief of Bagdad," B106 Cook Bldg.; admission $1.

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents "Much Ado About Nothing," at the Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

FRIDAY, JULY 18

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents "Our Town," at Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

SATURDAY, JULY 19

8 p.m., High School Music Session orchestra, chorus, select choir concert at Patrick Gym; admission free.

9:30 a.m., bus departs campus for Summer Session Montreal excursion; call 656-2085 for details and be sure to register before July 15.

7-8 p.m., "A Mozart Sampler," free and public concert at Burlington's Battery Park, featuring members of the New York Chamber Soloists, members of the Festival Winds, and the UVM Choral Union, under the direction of Prof. James G. Chapman. "There may also be horses," said Lane Series Director Jack Trevithick. "Terrific!" we said. "No, Trevithick," he replied. Come get a sample of Mozart – then hurry to the Lane Series office to pick up the few tickets that remain!

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents "Much Ado About Nothing," at the Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

SUNDAY, JULY 20

Mozart Festival opens at the UVM Show Barn, Spear Street, with a 6:30 p.m. "Carrousel with horses" presented by the American School of Dressage with Mozart's "Music for a Cavalry Display," and at 8 p.m., The Grand Opening Concert, the New York Chamber Soloists and the UVM Choral Union.

MONDAY, JULY 21

International Brass Symposium begins today; details from Summer Session, Grasse Mount, 656-2085.

Evening Concert by the students of the High School Music Session, at Harris-Millis lounge; program and time from 656-2135.

6:30 p.m., Summer Session and Saga join in presenting "International Dinner: French Canadian Night" at Wright Dining Hall.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., "The Golden Era of German Film," at the Church Street Center, features "M." Film alone - admission is $1.50; film and lecture, $3. Call 656-4221 for more details.

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents "Our Town," Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

TUESDAY, JULY 22

Mozart Festival "Four Hands," new recital hall, Redstone Campus; for ticket availability information, call the Lane Series Office, 656-3418.

Evening recital by faculty of the High School Music Session, at Harris-Millis lounge; time and program details from 656-2135.

12 noon, "Planning in Burlington: What's on the Agenda?" This free study group meets at the Church Street Center.

1:30 p.m., Children's Film Classics series presents "Heidi," admission 50 cents at 101 Votey Building. Film repeats Wednesday and Thursday, same time and place.

Creative Arts Workshop at the Church Street Center, 2 to 5 p.m., "45 Acrylic Techniques." Details can be obtained at 656-4221.

7 and 9:15 p.m., Summer Session Film, Rudolph Valentino in "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," admission $1 at B-106 Cook Bldg.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., Free study group on Prisons entitled "Do Prisons Work? Can Community Corrections Work?" The study group will meet at the Church Street Center.

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival company performs "Much Ado About Nothing," Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23

Mozart Festival presents "Haydn" Quartets at Shelburne Farms; call the Lane Series Office at 656-3418 for ticket information.

12:15 – 1 p.m., Church Street Center hosts a Shakespeare performance in City Hall Park by the apprentices of the Champlain Shakespeare Festival. Admission is free.

1:30 p.m., Children's Film Classics; "Heidi," 50 cents admission at 101 Votey Bldg.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., "Who Decides Where Our Education Dollars Go?" – free study group on education which meets at the Church Street Center.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., Church Street Center sponsors Folk dancing at the Southwick Gym; admission $1.

8 p.m., UVM Shelburne Museum lecture aboard the Museum's S.S. Ticonderoga, listed as a reminder for ticket holders only – no tickets available. Speaker is Herbert W. Hemphill, Jr., "Twentieth Century American Folk Art and Artists."

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents "Our Town," at Royall Tyler Theatre. Box Office is 656-2094.

8 p.m., Stan Kenton and his band will give a public concert at Patrick Gym; tickets available from the Lane Series Office, 234 Waterman Bldg., tel: 656-3418 or from the Summer Music office, 656-2135. The group is here in conjunction with the High School Summer Music Session.

THURSDAY, JULY 24

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., "Who Should Decide the Future of Lake Champlain?" This free study group on Lake Champlain meets at the Church Street Center – open to all.

CHAMPLAIN SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Our Town – July 21, 23, 26, 29, 31; August 2, 8, 12, 15, 18, 21, 23, 27 and 30*

Much Ado About Nothing – July 17, 19, 22, 24, 28, 30; August 1, 9, 13, 16*, 19, 22, 25, 28, and 30.

Timons of Athens – August 6, 7, 11, 14, 16, 20, 23*, 26, and 29.

* indicates matinee.

For information, reservations, box office, Royall Tyler Theatre, phone 656-2094.

Appalachian
THE GAP
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbers

Charlie's Tennis Den
CHARLIE'S TENNIS DEN
85 Main St., Burlington
in the SKI RACK
864-9118
The Particular Store.
Get advice from Tennis Experts.
Have your racket strung or repaired.
The only certified members of the Professional Stringer Association in the greater Burlington area.
Rackets by: Davis • Yamaha • Fischer • Bancroft • Wilson • Dunlop • Head • Seamco • Slazenger • Spaulding • Squash and Paddle-Ball Rackets

The Sweet History Of 127 College St.

In 1889, the Wells Richardson Company completed the finest of its complex of buildings in downtown Burlington. One Twenty-seven College Street became the home office for this international manufacturer of patent medicines and dyes.

In February, 1974, when Bennington Potters North acquired the building, 127 College Street was an empty, deteriorating landmark, an all but forgotten footnote of Burlington history and an apparent victim of urban decay and neglect.

Today, the story of Wells Richardson is a common topic of conversation at BPN. So is the story of converting a dilapidated historic site to a colorful, spacious marketplace.

Two questions are most often asked us. One is, "Was this building used as a bank?" The most unusual feature of the interior is a series of large vaults staked vertically from basement to roof. An integral part of the structure, three of these vaults are revealed in the present design of the building. One now houses a jewelry store. We can only speculate why Messrs. Wells and Richardson allocated such a large portion of their total floor space to safes. True, in earlier times they were often designed into buildings for protection of valuables against fire. We sense that at 127 College their unusual number and size reflected also the expansive personalities of successful entrepreneurs.

The second question phrased many ways is, "What was it like to actually do the rehabilitation?" Words like "exhilarating" and "frustrating" come to mind. Very early we recognized that rehabilitation requires unorthodox solutions, constant problem-solving and on-site improvisation. To assure the results we wanted and stay within our budget we decided (a) to do much of the work ourselves, and (b) to directly manage and coordinate the jobs we could not undertake ourselves.

For three months, with the help of a small crew, we took down walls, pulled up floors, removed plaster, pipes and pigeons, carefully setting aside all materials that might be useful later. Today, old stair treads and wainscoating have become countertops and partitions, old shutters have become display counters, thus vindicating what often seemed a most tedious demolition process.

A constant challenge was to find other people who could help us achieve our goal. More often than not we received conventional advice. Our first engineering analysis brought the recommendation that: if you must use this building, you should erect a complete new steel frame inside the perimeter walls. Our ultimate answer was a series of steel columns and heavy wood beams supplementing the existing similar system. Finding that answer meant finding an engineer sympathetic and experienced with old structures who understood our needs both budgetary and aesthetic. All along we had to seek out experts and resource people able to understand our goals and our unorthodox methods and still willing to work with us. Sometimes it took a lot of looking, but by the end we had discovered some of the best talent in the area.

We have also found that many, many people love this old building. Hardly a week goes by that someone has not stopped in to say how happy they are that 127 College is alive again.

In a way we feel more like stewards than owners. Not long ago a woman came in with a friend who had not seen the store. As she stepped across the threshold, her arm extended in a sweeping gesture of presentation, an expression of proprietory pride in her face. Wells and Richardson would have been pleased.

–CARYL J. STEWART

French Canadian Night

French Canadian Night, the second in the International Dinners Series, will take place this Monday, and includes a delectable diet of food emphasizing the French in French Canadian. The evening's menu will include:

Canadian Pea Soup
Canadian Cheese Soup
Onion Soup
Sea Food a la Quebecois
Petite Marmite (a chicken stew)
Patatouille (a zucchine dish)
Salad
Chocolate Eclair
Ice Cream

And to complete the scene, there will be plenty of toe stamping French Canadian Fiddling by Camille Dubois and friends.

After last Monday's ravine reviews about Italian Night, attended by nearly 300 people, the International Dinners Series seems well on its way to finding itself a popular Monday evening activity.

Alternative Agriculture

A three-day conference on Alternative Agriculture is being co-sponsored by the Natural Organic Farmers' Association and the Bio-Dynamic Farming and Gardening Association.

The Conference will be held at the High Mowing School in Wilton, N.H. on the weekend of August 1, 2 and 3.

Reservations and registration are by mail only, and the conference is limited to 250 people.

For complete details on Program, Reservations, Registration, Camping Facilities and Room and Meal Provisions, write today to: Conference Center, P.O. Box 6, Cornish, N.H. 03746

Vermont Premiere :"Fighting For Our Lives"

On Friday, July 18, at 8 p.m. at the First Unitarian Church, 141 Pearl St., the Burlington UFW Support Group will present Fighting For Our Lives. This newly released film, an hour long color documentary of the 1973 grape strike produced by the American Federation of Theatrical and Radio Artists has met with success at its east coast premieres in New York City and Boston, with reviewers calling it the best documentary film in twenty years. It has been entered in the 1975 Cannes film Festival.

With history-making legislation just passed in California, guaranteeing free secret-ballot elections for farm workers, this film comes to Burlington at a time when all are watching the progress of the UFW. Guest speaker at the premiere will be Vicente Silva, UFW organizer from New Mexico.

Tickets are $3.50 and can be purchased at the Fresh Ground Coffee House, Discount Records, and the Vermont Book Store.

All proceeds to go to the UFW.

VPIRG Bottle Fund Drive

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) is having a bottle fund drive in the Burlington area on Saturday, July 19th.

Bottles will be collected door to door and transported to a sorting site. Any interested persons who would like to volunteer a few hours to help make this fund drive a success should leave their names and where they can be reached with Billings Center Main desk, 656-2068.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER
40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction
Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

Levi's
Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181
10% Discount with a UVM ID

Hand Thrown Pottery
Stained Glass
Dry Flowers
Paper Lamp Shades
India Print Spreads
Scented Candles
Music Boxes
Many "One of a Kind" Creations
Sculpture
Beaded Curtains
Imports from over 40 Countries
Miniatures
Conversation Pieces
Imported Coffee & Teas
Enamel on Copper
Mirrors
Mobiles
Stone Craft
Collector's Items
Largest Selection of Handcrafted Jewelry in Vermont
Featuring our own exclusive designs in silver
Serendipity
206 College St. Burlington, Vt.
862-5400

NEWS

Lake Champlain In Big Trouble

Lake Champlain, oriented to recreational uses and some minor industries, has come a long way since its heyday 200 years ago as the focus of commercial transportation for the busy lumber port of Burlington.

Presenting an historical perspective of the uses of the lake, University of Vermont professor Dr. H.N. Muller III told a study group at the Church Street Center last Thursday night, "Burlington has turned its back on Lake Champlain."

Saying this was not necessarily bad, Muller explained that the economic importance of the lake has dwindled considerably and that the city's economic life is centered around entities such as IBM, General Electric, and the University of Vermont. He outlined what was still connected with the lake.

"These are tank farms and a ferry; we've got a power plant down there, and the waterworks of course, and a sewage treatment plant. It's good for some shipping of oil and fuel, local recreational uses, and water supplies."

"Because the lake is not economically important to the major economic industries... it's not being used by them. What does U.S. Steel give a damn about Lake Champlain? They care about Lake Erie. And there's no fishing industry here," Muller declared.

The Church Street seminar is entitled Who Should Decide the Future of Lake Champlain? The Lake Champlain seminar, which will run for five weeks on Thursday nights at 7:30 here, is being conducted by Justin Brande of Cornwall. Brande is a member of the Vermont Natural Resources Council and was former chairman and Executive director of the council. He is also on the executive council of the Lake Champlain Committee.

Muller indicated to the group of over twenty-five persons that it was important to know the past history of the lake – in fact, of anything – if the future is to be understood.

"We are the sum of our past; we are what our forebearers were. In the historical period from Samuel de Champlain to Mayor Paquette, I could describe the lake and its influence on the basin in terms of three stages.

From the early days until about 1820, the lake was not indigenously important for itself, but was important as part of a commercial and military route," Muller said.

The Lake Champlain-Richelieu River was a conduit for goods and soldiers across the Canadian border lasting through skirmishes and trade battles. It was the connecting route to centers of growing settlement and economic competition among empires.

–The second stage, of indigenous or local importance, lasted from about 1760 to about one hundred years later, during which time the lake was clearly the focus of commercial enterprise. It was an artery for settlement as well as a trade route, and this was when Ira Allen began to form his Onion River Land Company, in 1773.

In the 1880's Burlington was flourishing as a lumber port, and many of this area's mansions were built by the lumber barons. But that era ended with the arrival of the railroads, and the deforestation of the timber stands. The state turned its attention to agriculture.

–The third stage is what Muller called the "stage of entropy" or marginal use, now devoted to recreation and the above mentioned lakefront industries.

–MARGO HOWLAND

Church Street Center Offers Something Different

The Church Street Center for Community Education... "Yeah, I've heard about it but what exactly does it do?" As UVM work-study employees of the center we are often asked this question. Here is our consolidated idea of what our place of employment is all about.

The Church Street Center is an incredibly enjoyable place to work at. We, as work study students, are responsible for everything from stuffing envelopes to organizing courses, and of course helping to handle all the minor emergencies and confusions which always crop up and which make the job all the more exciting.

Affiliated with Continuing Education at UVM, the Center offers non-credit mini-courses, work-shops, and activities of special interest to the community. One of the most interesting aspects of the Center is the flexibility and wide range of topics offered. Mini-courses which range from a 2 to 6 week period, often help people to learn new skills, such as car mechanics, drawing, pendulum clock repair, languages, etc. The workshops are either half day or full day activities and often provide opportunities for people to approach life with new viewpoints such as power workshop, assertiveness training, and consciousness raising. Study groups highlight current public issues and their implications for individuals and government such as prisons, education, radical politics in Vermont, deciding the future of Lake Champlain and others. Special activities provide the chance to participate in informal activities such as Performances in City Hall Park, Open Poetry Readings, and Early Morning Bird Walk.

Working at the Church Street Center gives us a sense of being of great benefit to the community. It enables people to request courses that they would like to see offered and then we try to get them together. This is the way some of our courses are developed. Someone will come in with a proposal for courses and workshops.

The courses that are offered are also of great benefit to the instructors. Some of the instructors are professional teachers who see the Center as an opportunity to present material which they may not normally present in a standard academic establishment, using a different format. Other instructors are not teachers by profession, but find teaching their skills to be an enjoyable and valuable experience.

So remember, if there is anything you would like to learn or like to teach, let us know. We're at the old firehouse, 135 Church Street, or call at 656-4221. Let us know soon since we are now putting together our next session.

CHURCH STREET CENTER FOR COMMUNITY EDUCATION

Schedule of Events July 21-26

JULY 21 – The Golden Era of German Film – This week: "M"
7:30 – 9:30 p.m. Film only $1.50; Film and lecture: $3.00.

JULY 22 – "Planning in Burlington, What's on the Agenda?"
12:00 – 1:00 p.m. Study Group – no charge.

JULY 22 – "Do Prison's Work? Can Community Corrections Work?"
7:30 – 9:30 p.m. Study Group - no charge.

JULY 22 – 45 Acrylic Techniques – Workshop
2:00 – 5:00 p.m. – $4.75

JULY 23 – Performance in City Hall Park – This week: Champlain Shakespeare Festival Apprentices
12:15 – 1:00 p.m. – no charge

JULY 23 – "Who Decides Where Our Education Dollars Go?"
7:30 – 9:30 p.m. - Study Group – no charge

JULY 23 – Folkdancing – Southwick Gym
7:30 – 9:30 p.m. – $1.00/person

JULY 24 – "Who Should Decide the Future of Lake Champlain?"
7:30 – 9:30 p.m. – Study Group – No charge

JULY 25 – Open Poetry Readings
7:30 p.m. – No charge

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE
COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE
INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES
WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS
ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686

Emerald City of Oz, Ltd.
71 St. Paul St. Burlington, Vermont, 05401
802-862-4298
A Most Unique Furniture Shop
....and more

Dogs Have A Rough Day

From the Fourth of July through the fall days of October, it's dog show time. Thousands of dog owners across the United States and Canada travel the "circuit" regularly, whether it's to build up points towards the coveted "Champion" status, or to strive for the "ideal" dog, or to simply talk dogs, meet friends and have a good time.

For whatever reason, dog shows are decidedly popular. Last Saturday, July 12, some three thousand trainers, dog owners, dog lovers, dogs and spectators came to Essex for the twenty-second annual Champlain Valley Kennel Club Dog Show and Dog Obediance Trial, the biggest in the state.

Over 1300 dogs representing 117 breeds from across the United States and Canada, and the island of Bermuda, came to compete for the top awards of "Best in Show" and Highest Scoring Dog in the obedience trials.

A newcomer to the world of dog shows is greeted with a confusing mass of tents, rings, dogs running around in the rings, dogs barking, people watching their favorites, and dogs – zillions of dogs in all different imaginable (and some not so imaginable) shapes and sizes.

The atmosphere is in high gear; people are excited, but they are careful not to let the dogs sense this.

Sudden spontaneous furious barking erupts from the tents, but there are no fights – at least I didn't see any. The dogs are quiet in the ring, and well-behaved in general.

A class of miniature Schnauzers is being shown in one ring. They are small, gray dogs with wiry short gray hair and black button eyes. Suddenly one rears up on its legs and hisses, and another answers with a short series of yap-yaps.

"That's all right, Schnauzers are supposed to be scrappy," says one observer.

In another ring the Italian Greyhounds are being shown. Small, slender and streamlined, they are checked for form, style, build, behavior while they are in the ring, and all the other aspects that make up the judges' concept of the ideal dog for the breed.

Suddenly the judge waves with one hand and the group is reduced in force. Then he signals, rather like an auctioneer, and the three dogs trot out with ribbons and disappear, while I'm trying to find them on the program.

The dog obedience trials are a tribute to good training. There are five categories: Novice Class A and B, Open Class A and B, and Utility. The dogs must stay when told, run, fetch, go around the owner, turn in a semicircle, and jump over barriers.

Winning the top place in the Obedience Trials, in combined open and Utility classes, was Golden Retriever Morland's Golden Tonka, owned by Russel H. Kipple, of Parkerford, Pa.

By 5 p.m., the 1300 dogs and 117 breeds had been narrowed down to six, representing the best of their breed and the best of the groups of breeds in five categories.

Golden Retriever Ch. Cummings' Gold Rush Charlie was best of breed in the Sporting Breedy Category; Afghan Hound Ch. Sandina Starstream in the Hound Breeds, Newfoundland Ch. Neshuma of Newtown, Ark, Working Breeds; Pomeranian Ch. Millamon's Marketta, Toy Breeds; Bulldog Ch. Westfield Sunomorous Stone, Non-Sporting Breeds, and Kerry Blue Terrier Ch. Dook-A-Ree's Road Runner, Terrier Breeds.

Of the six finalists, Glorvina Schwartz's Afghan Hound, Ch. Sandina Starstream, won Best in Show. The dog is owned by Sandina Kennels, of Tuxedo Park, New York.

The Low Down On The University Year For Action

Volunteering at UVM began as a grass roots student movement with the formation of Big Brothers, UVM Tutoring, and Hospital Big Brothers programs several years ago. The Rev. John Perry and the facilities of St. Anselm's were available to assist in the early days. By 1969 it was apparent that more students were interested in voluntary action than could be accommodated by three programs. A committee of students, faculty, and staff was formed to plan for a broad based coordination project that would involve more students in a greater variety of volunteer opportunities. The Office of Volunteer Programs is the result of that plan.

OVP opened its doors for the first time in the fall of 1970 and was inundated by students interested in participating. Needs were identified and students placed in agencies, community centers, schools, hospitals, day care centers, and independent projects such as Adopt a Grandparent, and many others.

In the fall of 1971 the federal University Year for Action program was developed to provide opportunities for students to serve full time in community projects while linking learning and action. UYA began in January 1972 with 35 volunteers and was expanded in August 1972 to 50 with students working in more than 15 projects in such areas as health, education, consumer protection, youth advocacy, facilitating volunteers on other campuses through the OVP Clearinghouse Extension Project and special placements.

More recently OVP has extended its placement and support services to anyone who wants to help others by providing information on where the needs are, transportation facilities, a center for the exchange of ideas, both financial and informational assistance in developing new projects, a sounding board when problems arise, and other services such as recruitment, training, evaluation, and publicity.

Opportunities to volunteer abound in such areas as:

Health – Mental and medical care facilities and programs need help in human support and in services such as patient visitation, transportation, and outreach activities. Retarded and emotionally disturbed children need patient and loving attention that volunteers can provide. Broader health issues, such as dental and health care in remote rural areas need study and projects developed in response.

Social Issues – The environment, human rights of children and tenants, welfare recipients, the sick, mentally ill, land use and development, transportation, consumer protection, access to legal advice, aging, population control, and many other issues need active advocates to develop projects to meet specific needs. Research and action on issues and institutions can make a profound difference to the people they serve.

Recreation – Leisure skills don't just happen! They are learned via experience and participation. Without programs, facilities and skilled leaders the experience doesn't occur for children in many parts of the community. Games, sports, arts and crafts, outdoor activities, musical expression, cultural enrichment experiences, all can happen when there are volunteers to provide the catalyst. Almost anything that people like to do can be an interesting and meaningful experience for someone who doesn't normally have such opportunity.

There are still job availabilities for the University Year for Action program which begins in late August. Some of them are:

The Urban Youth Center (working with kids, helping them in their education skills, and recreational skills)
Howard Mental Health (Working with the handicapped, you would be amazed at what a little concern to these people would do for their self-uplifting and your own.)
Agency of Human Services (vocational and vocational rehabilitation for people in Vermont)
Laraway School, Johnson, Vermont (math and science instructor)
King Street Center (tutoring, arts and crafts, recreational skills for children more than willing to receive instruction)
Champlain Valley Regional Office on Aging (The needs you could lend our area senior citizens would be more than enough, and they are more than happy to receive them.)

For any further information you may need, contact the Office of Volunteer Programs at the Mansfield House, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vermont 05401 or call 656-2062 or 2063.

the SKI shop, inc.
388 Shelburne Rd. Burlington, Vermont
862-5488
INDIA IMPORTS
Tops, Long & Short Dresses, Long & Short Skirts
See Our Large Selection of DANISH CLOGS

MENS & LADIES SIZES
OPEN: 9-5:30 MON—WED
9-9 THURS & FRI
9-5 SATURDAY

Ending The Developing Racket

If you want to get anywhere, if you want to increase employment, growth, and the general standard of living, you have to get on your belly and beg for them. Or at least that's what the vast majority of development experts and politicians will tell you. The economic development game is one of the most steamy going. In conventional politics, the object of this game is to get big corporations to come into your area and rip you off.

You get down on your hands and knees because, the logic goes, you don't have any capital to create the jobs yourself. So you offer industrial parks, tax stabilization agreements, reduced taxes, and wage subsidies to attract capital into your area.

This shell game is not only at work in Vermont, but happens world wide. Pick up any major newspaper or financial journal and see the disgusting process at work. City bids against city, offering high yield, tax free bonds to the private capital market; state bids against state offering a variety of tax subsidies; national bids against national offering exemption from trade duties and corporate taxes; one banana republic bids against another offering the most exploitable cheap labor. The basic rule of the game is to offer Exxon and the Chase Manhattan Bank a better "rate of return" than your neighbor does.

The Dominican Republic is a good example of this. The Gulf and Western Corporation, which is a huge conglomerated multinational, virtually controls that small country's entire economy, operating in a "free zone" which is free of taxes, duties or the already meager minimum wage laws. And should the natives get out of hand, Gulf and Western has the Balaguer dictatorship which was installed in 1965 courtesy of the U.S. Marines, to keep things in line.

Back here in Vermont, things aren't quite as drastic, but the logic of the State's development policies is basically the same. The tax stabilization agreements, whereby cities and towns offer corporations exemptions from the property tax when they locate in the area, are one notorious example. Vermont's corporate income taxes are kept low in order to attract new corporations and keep the existing ones here. This is vividly illustrated by the fact that the State of Vermont collects more in revenue from the cigarette tax than from the corporate income tax. The latest rip off scheme from the wizards of Montpelier is to offer corporations tax credits based on the amount of wages they pay. It is an old scheme, especially widely practiced in Britain.

However, things don't have to be this way. If you understand that capital is not something which comes from the great philanthropy of David Rockefeller, but that it is a product of the people of the world rather than the people who clip coupons, then you begin to understand that your labor can be mobilized and organized so that you are in command of your resources. It is such an understanding which strongly demarcates the development policies of revolutionary Cuba from those of the Dominican Republic. Corporations invest capital to make money. They are hardly doing you any favors.

Vermont could make great strides to end its domination by Wall Street immediately if it wanted to. Since corporations are making money off the state, then it's simply a matter of finding out where the money is, and tapping it. One way of doing this is through the tax system.

The apologetics of the politicians concerning the tax system are quite amazing. First, they contend that there is a progressive tax system, that millionaires pay 70% of their income in taxes. But when it is pointed out that those are the nominal rates, that when you get done with all the loopholes the actual tax rates are far, far less than that, then they reply with straight faces that if there was a steeply progressive income tax, the rich would leave and take their money with them. The circle of self-contradiction is complete. The politicians have it both ways. They have the political advantage of nominally high tax rates and the practical advantage of the tax loopholes which make these nominal rates meaningless.

If Vermont did institute a steeply progressive income tax, it could be a good source of capital. You may remember that last winter there was a great hubub in Montpelier concerning the tax crisis, with the politicians asserting that the state was running out of money. This was complete and utter nonsense. Suppose Vermont had doubled the corporate income tax and had established a steeply progressive personal income tax, starting with a 10% tax rate on incomes of $15 thousand up to a 40% rate on incomes of $100 thousand. Vermont could then eliminate the state income tax on the bottom 85% of workers, eliminate the highly regressive taxes on sales, beverages, and gasoline, and would net $34 million in tax revenue than it does presently.

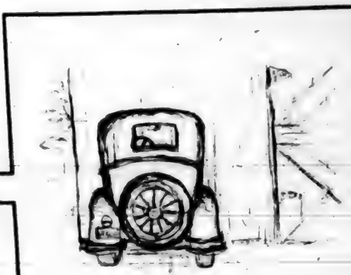
How is this possible? Income distribution in Vermont is so skewed that at least 40% of personal income is concentrated in the top 1.5% of earners, those who make over $15 thousand a year. But because the present state tax system is regressive and taxes the lower brackets more heavily, the lion's share of income in Vermont goes virtually untapped by the tax system. These new steely progressive tax rates would simply be the difference between what the rich are supposed to be paying according to the nominal rates, and what they actually pay after using all the loopholes. Vermont would simply be saying that if the Federal government isn't going to pick this money up, the State of Vermont will. If this $34 million surplus were to be invested in cooperative, publicly owned enterprises run by a system of democratic workers' control, manufacturing investment in Vermont would immediately double. Vermont could in fact raise even more capital if very low tax rates were placed on middle income levels.

This capital could be put to use building housing, putting idle capacity back to work, launching a program to save the Vermont family farm, to start food processing and forest management, to provide stable jobs for Vermont's unemployed and marginally employed workers. Most importantly, such a program would be a radical departure from the breakdown-maintenance kind of government spending, a type of spending which puts millions into welfare in order to maintain people in their poverty, but which does little to eradicate poverty. Rather than continuing the present mess, such a development policy would offer productive work, creating wealth and increasing the standard of living. A really bold program could aim to eliminate the need for welfare. Who knows, an imaginative program of public investment in public enterprises might put an end to the conservative nemisis-big government.

Such a program would not be without its problems. Vermont is part of a national economic system, with the great bulk of its products made for "export" outside of the state. While the national market economy is stuck in the muck of stagflation, Vermont's attempts at economic development could very well be thwarted. But the main point here is that both the capital and the economic technique for a rational use of resources are already available. Under the present economic regime, billions of dollars of potential economic product goes wasted because of structural unemployment and non-utilized capacity. Billions more are wasted on the military budget. In the 1960's, the Pentagon budget was equivalent to 60–85% of the total investment in the U.S. The sum of military spending from 1946–73 was equal to 46% of the total investment in the country for that same period, and the resulting cumulative loss in potential production and growth was equivalent to 135% of the current GNP.

So we see that resources are available not only to create better jobs in Vermont, but also to rebuild the nation's cities, eradicate poverty and hunger, clean up the environment, and feed the third world. It's about time we break through the rehash of Keynesian business-cycle-deficit-spending-military-budget-economics and envision a humane order, where things are produced for people's needs rather than for David Rockefeller's bank account.

—JOHN FRANCO



Open Season

They're back... well, not really, but it sure looks that way. The Wing-Davis-Wilks parking lot is bulging again. Bill Shakespeare's Fest has seized the Royall Tyler Theater and book laden students idly sun on the steps of Billings between classes. The University of Vermont, good olde Camp Catamount, is back in session, albeit without C.B. DeMille's autumn cast of thousands.

And, after a dormant June, Burlington's Great White Way, Church Street, is beginning to assume its evening playground cant. It seems the summer denizens of UVM's classes and dorms, those public housing projects for the privileged, have already discovered the Burlington students' favorite outdoor sport – Bar Hopping, an endeavour often undertaken in quest of Burlington's favorite indoor sport, sex.

Despite what the Public Relations Office/UVM Summer Times waxes about "beautiful Burlington, situated on the shores of lovely Lake Champlain..." there seriously isn't much to do after dark in this town, save goin' to the movies or hitting the town's taverns. Alas, one can only see Jaws so many times without a good stiff one...

So saunter down to Church St., hit Hannibals for a cold one or two, cruise down to What Ayles You for a look at the town's largest selection of draft beer. Over to the Rusty Scuffer to devour a reasonably priced dinner replete with drinks, plus amiable ambience. A short trek to the Millard Fillmore perhaps, for some open-aired alcohol. The Sting or The Silver Keg will appeal to those with dancing shoes on: The Sting to those who gave up psychiatrists long ago for the electronic therapy of pinball machines. The summer sojourner will find that Burlington has enough watering holes to serve the populace draft beer until the Holocaust or Prohibition, be there any difference, finally does come. And no, they won't arrest one for WWI. CRASH couldn't handle the boom in business.

••••••••

ERRATA:

This writer's recent report on the Liberty Union Party State Convention has apparently touched off an avalanche of overwhelmingly critical opinion. All one can retort is that a writer, especially one who toils for the Cynic, is bequeathed his greatest compliment by simply being read.

But my friend Bob Colodny ought to be subjected to twelve lashes with a wet string of spaghetti, preferably a sauced one from the Living/Learning dishroom, for his plagiarised, wrong-headed article concerning the Liberty Union piece. His criticism is a feeble, infantile imitation of "Open Season" in which he not only steals our lines but, like the Free Press, attempts to describe a Liberty Union Convention he didn't attend. In the past, Mr. Colodny has professed admiration for our genre of writing – perhaps he only respects "Open Season" when he agrees with us, or when we pan institutions and individuals he finds distasteful. Robby, go back to being a thorn in the side of the Gallo Wine Corporation. They need it worse than I do. Or, if you merely want to create ripples, perch yourself on North Beach, armed with a pea-shooter...

—SCOTT MacKAY

Farmer's Market: The Country Comes To Town

An aging but dependable '66 Chevrolet, garnished with wear from summers of dirt roads, and winters, unyielding winters, chugs up Battery Street. "There et iz, over there," motioned a burly passenger from behind his sunglasses towards the brown gravel parking lot on the Cherry Street side of St. Paul's Cathedral.

The car decelerates into the right lane. Blink-i-blink-i-blink-i... "Gonna be a hot 'n' muggy one today."

"Yep. Sure wish-en we'd get some rain soon. We're not gonna have us too many more beans to bring down here if this heat spell keeps on like this."

The back end, burdened with wooden baskets of green beans and radishes and other garden produce, scrapes off the steep curb entrance... It was enough to make anyone cringe. The shakened car pulls up next to a pick-up truck, already in full Farmers' Market blossom. The back end was down with baskets of their own home-grown vegetables. A large folding table was positioned very ready-for-business-like, aft of the truck with $2-a-day attention grabbing golden-orange canopy offering a shady refuge from the open-air sun. It was a miniature store explodingout the back of the truck.

The Chevy trunk hood lunges open, catching short in its upward attempt to spring off the rear of the car. A collapsable table is ushered out of the storage shed of a back seat. No. No lawn mowers or garden hoses, but everything else required for a full day's table minding was surely there.

Ten booths had assembled by the nine-in-the-morning opening, displaying tablefuls of garden delights, cheese, Vermont Maple syrup, breads, hand-wrought silver jewelry and a variety of craft goods. And so began another once-a-week gathering of local people selling their home made, hand-worked produce.

Originated five years ago as the Newmarket Festival by Marilyn Webb, a handsome concerned woman still working today (and, yes, of Webb estate relation), the non-profit cooperative market has seen a variety of locations beneath its booths. The first year was spent out in Shelburne, before moving to the Burlington area where Plantasia now roosts. The market's third year found its craft and produce tables nestled in Jupiter's, enjoying a healthy pre-Christmas season. And last year, the Farmers' Market hung its sign from lower Church Street.

Getting the market back outdoors was Cricket Laffin's idea. The Market's coordinator since last year, she has been looking for an open space close to the Church Street area for the past two or three months, but found St. Pauls Cathedral parking lot the only place that would offer suitable space for the Market. The location is a good bit out of the way for hurried shoppers, but for Friday pedestrians and Battery Street motorists especially, the new location does have its advantages. Lower Church Street had a bundle of inherent parking problems, forcing most of the booth tenders to double park in desperation for a place to unload, while discouraging those perusing Church Street storefronts from behind their steering wheels to stop in and look around.

There is more to the open air, however, than a place to park for the Farmers' Market. Miss Lafflin revealed an element of philosophy that has become as much a part of the Market atmosphere as the bright and cheery canopied booths. By encouraging the growth and sale of local produce, the Farmers' Market becomes a very important bridge between urban and rural lifestyles which is mutually beneficial to both. Helping local growers by offering a place for them to pull in and sell their food products while providing a fresh food source to consumers could conceivably launch the Farmers' Market from a local tradition to an important community service.

Every product sold from Farmers' Market tables must be handmade or hand-grown in Vermont, except for Boston Market fruits which are sold to help defray the costs of maintaining the market. It is an interesting condition that, if maintained through the years, could become a valuable prerequisite for keeping the Market from becoming another schlocky tourist business.

To set up a booth at the Market, all it takes is a bit of prearrangement and $4 a day ($2 additional for the brightly colored booth canopy) plus the agreement to pay 5% of the day's take. But more often than not, the exposure from a business point of view for fundraising organizations like The Schoolhouse and for craftspeople, like table and stool maker Suzanne Shute the casual day's revenues generally are worth the fee. The Market also provides a senior citizen run booth where people can arrange to have produce sold for them.

A Friday morning passerby makes an outdoor purchase of nectarines at the Farmers' Market.

The Farmers' Market, open every Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., from now until mid-October, has already established itself as a popular form of marketing local goods since it began five short years ago. People thought so too, at the turn of the century when Burlington hosted what perhaps evokes the more revered image of a Farmers' Market. Nonetheless, the modern version is no less important to those who do take advantage of its potential as a market and as a forum for simply getting together at the end of the week with some invariably interesting Vermont folk.

– WYATT KASH

Behind each produce and craft adorning table in the Farmers' Market parking lot procession, there invariably lies a deeper and greater realm of human life amidst the daily course of necessarily routine tasks. For most of the booth sitters, that deeper realm lies in loves of the people themselves, their lifestyle, their families... that are a significant part of the dynamics that bring these people together to sell their fruit and vegetables and artwork beneath the Champlain sun.

But for one isolated, golden orange canopied booth, the benefits from a Friday's sales are not for the family at home nor to fill the pockets of those in shaded folding chairs, but for a uniquely cooperative method of educating some of the youngsters of this area. The box of assorted change and dollar bills is one of the means a small group of parents concerned with their children's educations has to help fund the cooperatively-run Schoolhouse.

Now four years old, the Schoolhouse, formerly parting ground on Mt. Philo Road, Shelburne, represents a significant alternative mode of education to the usual schooling of youngsters ages six to nine. Following to a certain extent the Montesorri School dictum "learn how to learn," The Schoolhouse implements their own philosophy, "Harmony with self, others and nature," through the cooperative efforts of parents and concerned adults.

The element which tends to make The Schoolhouse unique is in the way the parents take such a participatory role. Having parents contribute time and energy to the school's endeavors as well as share in its direction helps allow a greater feel for their child's education. The school's (parent's cooperative) philosophy reflects that often unfamiliar concept that education should be integrated with life, which implies, naturally, a sort of fundamental inteaction with the family. But the type of education which tends to evolve because of the cooperative style has an inherent quality in its interpersonal relationships that becomes a very important part of the educational product. Parents benefit in their own way, for through the sharing processes involved in a cooperative educational venture parents learn about parenting their children. There are no grades. A child's progress is evaluated on the basis of his/her individual growth instead of compared to the progress of the other children. Parents keep in touch through parent-teacher conferences or by sitting in on the open classroom sessions. And while the Shelburne-elitish air has continued to hang heavily over the Mt. Philo Road Schoolhouse, the quality that has resulted from an educational standpoint has been enough to radiate right on through. Its importance to both child and parent cannot be denied.

Anne McCarthy, a slender young woman hosting a pleasant smile, is one of the parents trying to raise money to supplement the infrequent donations and burdening tuition that she and the parents of 15 other children must contribute to keep The Schoolhouse operating. But finances are not the only problem troubling the survival of the Schoolhouse. Plagued by a battle between the parents and the school's founding benefactress over the method of teaching by The Schoolhouse's sole teacher, The Schoolhouse found itself recently without its school as the unyielding benefactress withdrew her financial support. Out on the streets, The Schoolhouse is now making final arrangements to move into a new location in Burlington on College Street, as another school will continue on out at Shelburne with the same teaching method that was in question. The move, hopes Anne, will help increase enrollment in the long-run while at the same time allow greater access to the facilities Burlington has to offer (i.e., pool, library, cultural events, etc.)

Reflecting a deep personal investment in The Schoolhouse and its future in Burlington, Ms. McCarthy and boothmate Pam Hoodley and the rest of the parents' cooperative and friends will soon start work on the immense undertaking of a house-building project, the sale of which will go towards the financial needs of the school. But in addition to working towards a financial goal for an educational need, there is a committed undertone of working towards an educational goal for a life need – to be better equipped with the tools to teach oneself about life in a more responsive-to-the-needs pursuit towards the personal goals of the individual.

The mounting intensity of the early afternoon sun was pleasantly mitigated by the refuge found beneath the open air booth's canopy. Amy and Michelle, two young high spirited lasses, six to nine-ish, bubbled in with excitement over the cacti each had just bought across the way for a price that only the smile of a youngster could command. Somehow, their moments of discovery seemed so joyously real and unadulterated. Shades of reluctance perhaps over the way we were schooled.

– WYATT KASH

TELEVISION:

OPIUM OF THE MASSES

The most dangerous drug in the world is not Heroin, Cocaine or LSD. It is not smoked like Marijuana and Nicotine nor drunk like Alcohol. It is consumed in larger quantities by a wider spectrum of ages and personality types than all of the other drugs combined and its users generally show absolutely no desire to be rehabilitated. It is dispensed by an elite group of men who care nothing about what it does to the people who use it because they are doing it for money.

This drug is mainlined by addicts directly through the eyes and acts immediately upon the brain with varied results. Some residual particles enter through the ears at the same time and are apparently necessary for the creation of what users consider the optimum euphoric effect.

The most devastating harm suffered by those who indulge seems to be a sapping of energy and ambition along with a dulling of the wit, resulting in a trancelike state of lethergy. Quite frequently, users have been known to feel extremely insecure when they are not in this state and have been known to commit violent acts upon fellow persons.

Opinions and theories differ on whether or not these fits of anti-social behavior are caused by the drug or if it actually prevents a greater amount of violence: a pastime long indulged in by man before the invention and widespread use of the drug.

The Drug is Television. In its first quarter century TV has gone to monumental lengths to earn the title "Opium of the Masses," replacing religion as the [illegible] in our Brave New World.

[illegible] will be the replacement [illegible] TV [illegible] the standards.

TV can break even the strongest character and reduce it to mere vegetable matter, just like Heroin does. People who use TV spend alot of time sitting on their posteriors or lying down, thinking they are doing something entertaining, relaxing and educational when in fact the true nature of the beast beneath the delusion is one of boring repetition, endless paranoia and an insult to intelligence. When people watch TV, they usually stop communicating with each other, another trait of narcosis.

TV is capable of keeping some people awake all night, just like speed and cocaine, as well as putting others right to sleep like valiums or reds. In either case, it is not good because of the excessive amount of time a body spends transfixed without physical exercise.

Once a person has seen TV, he always wants more, or at least he uses it again from time to time even if he succeeds in not becoming a total slave to TV's insidious impulse.

Children are the most susceptible to this Electronic Opium since they usually encounter it before they have had any experience in determining good from bad. Consequently, millions have never had the chance to find out the number of things they could do with their lives besides stare at an electronically induced hallucination.

The final test of whether or not a substance is a drug or narcotic usually comes down to if there is a pusher trying to get you to use more than you presently do. Not only does TV encourage us to watch more TV, it does so to enable other people to prey on us and make us buy more everything. There is no doubt that some of the stuff forced on us is junk, pure and simple. Junk food, junk cars, junk appliances, junk movies, and junk TV shows.

This is not to say there aren't any good cars, foods, appliances, movies or TV shows; this is to illustrate it is very easy to compare TV with some of the things that are said about narcotics and why narcotics are bad. One must stop and think quite seriously and hard to find many good things to say about television as it exists in America today.

In order to more completely understand the phenomenon ourselves and possibly assist others to cope with this monkey on their brains, Kathy and Knox Munn and I undertook to collect pertinent data on television programming. Each of us monitored one of the three major networks on January 11, 1975; Kathy recorded NBC, Knox covered ABC and I tackled CBS.

What we found did not really surprise us; the extent to which it was so, however, saddened us greatly.

Our original intention was to record everything we could from a single 24 hour period, but first we suffered technical difficulties when all three sets caused the fuzy end to three fuses before the proper plug combination was found. They we suffered endurance breakdowns and were forced to stop after 15½ hours with splitting headaches. Each of us had certainly watched 15½ hours of TV previously in our lives without getting headaches, but we had never paid such close attention or taken notes.

So that others should not have to so brutally subject themselves to such a heavy dose of the drug, we have compiled our findings into easily understood charts.

Why must there be so much violence and so little love on TV? Jerome H. Stanley, NBC's West Coast Vice President of Broadcast Standards, addressed himself to that question in an interview with Lee Margulie of Associated Press, printed February 20, 1975, in the Boulder Daily Camera.

"Sex is not a spectator sport, to put it in a nutshell," says Stanley, "...between L.A. and New York, there are a lot of very sensitive and very moral people. There is a tendency to underestimate the sensitivity of the American people."

Sex is not a spectator sport, but death is. "A" shows us there were 64 persons graphically killed as opposed to the 13 kisses exchanged. Which would you prefer to have done to you and what would you rather do to someone else? Why does Mr. Stanley feel "sensitive and moral" Americans should be watching all this violence without an equivalent amount of sex, including even a little sex? NBC's programming certainly reflects his attitude; none of the [illegible] happened on NBC but 24 of the deaths did.

It is possible that all of the sensitive people between Los Angeles and New York have been numbed out and stripped of their sensitivity by the birth of shootings, bombings, sluggings, crashing and smashing, injected into their brains since World War II. The TV executive who will program the Sex Act opposite a war flick to check viewer ratings and preference hasn't been born yet.

American Electric Opium users subsist the network executives tell us, on "Action." This term refers to anything moving fast, hitting hard, blowing up loudly, or killing dead. There has to be enough happening to keep the viewer interested from commercial to commercial, and video violence fills the bill now and will likely not be given a good run for its money by anything on commercial public television as we know it.

If one could kick the compulsive habit and see only once in a while, it might be all right. If one had to pay for it on the spot, one would see it less. Producers would have to make it better so you would want to buy it and that opens up completely untapped possibilities for TV.

We could start a revolution for the right to creative, decent and diverse TV programming. Then each person or family would be free to buy the programming they wanted: educational, sporting events, news, gardening, war, musicals, specials, even X-rated movies with bare skin and perversions.

Pay TV or cable TV is the future. It will mean that a person can have the programming they want without the constant commercials inundating his conscience and sanity.

The Pay TV revolution could lead to a Renaissance if we play our cards right. The market is there for creative people to produce and sell all kinds of programs which would be stored in buildings similar to libraries, into which one may get his or her set hooked.

Then one would have technical information readily available as well as entertainment. You will not have to fight your way past Mason Reese, Rodney Allen Rippey and the other millions of cutie little kids selling you things right in the middle of the most exciting part.

Oh, to be a free person, able to take it or leave it!

But America could have developed Pay TV years ago; the technology is relatively uncomplex compared with the rest of the electronic water mystery which is television, but no.

$$$$$$$$

Dollars and cents is the reason for anything in America and that ancient credo is accented by television's upper echelon of it. Money doesn't talk, it announces.

Did you ever buy a product just to keep your favorite TV show on the air? Not because you really needed the product? How many do you think you'd have to buy to insure success for Jim Nabors? For Don Knotts?

With Pay TV, you simply buy the show and to hell with the sponsor's paranoid fickleness about ratings and cancellations which deprive you of something you like because not enough other people liked it too. There's where the vicious circle gets started: the more shows you subscribe to the less you watch network TV, the less the network can sell a minute for and the less its stock is worth down on Wall Street.

As sure as God made station breaks, you can bet your sweet Charmin Tissue Target no network is going to sit around and get devalued! It's Un-American. ABC, CBS and NBC have bad-mouthed Pay TV for years! (Hey man, the first one's free...)

They tried to give it the image of everybody looking frantically for the one more quarter before the trick ending on Alfred Hitchcock. Sooner or later, the end will come, they have always known, but they want to squeeze the lemon a little longer.

The networks want us to be a nation of Pavlovian Dogs, salivating at them with in front of the box eating the food it tells us we should, wearing the clothes it says we should, doing the things it says we should, doing the things and going to the places it says we want.

Commercials are a form of taxation with representation: the republican candidate, having our will to resist buying things we don't need or some which are down right bad for us in the first place. Remember all the cigarette advertising we were exposed to in the Fifties and Sixties? That is one of the few places where common sense and the will of the people triumphed over the tyke and the dollar. Now we only have advertisements for cigarettes on billboards and in magazines, still there but less conspicuous in their silent, less insidious two dimensions.

"I.S.M.F.T."

Commercials are exercises in unreality, thrust upon us by the hundreds of thousands, year after year, slowly ebbing away consciousness like the Chinese water torture. All the deodorants, soaps, toothpastes, try to make us paranoid about the way we smell. All the car manufacturers would have us believe their machines can do everything but roll over and all the quick food chains claim the fastest service and the best tasting lowest priced morsels in town. Is there no relief? Certainly it will not be found amongst the hammering, throbbing, twisting contortions of the aspirin commercials. And where did they get that squirrly lookin' turkey who does the Pepto Bismol ads, anyway?

When it comes to the wolf, sex is still king of the hill. With the emergence of the male sex symbol being the greatest innovation in years. Progress is being made in other areas with the breakdown of sexual hang-ups related to advertising.

We can now see in the privacy of our own living rooms, as well as in the corner tavern, the latest tampons and feminine hygiene sprays. This would have been unthinkable in the Fifties and Sixties... well, they didn't have feminine hygiene sprays in the Fifties but menstruation was a topic to be concealed, especially from adolescent boys. Now they do everything but show you where to spray it or how easy it is to put one in. Next, it'll be jock straps and prophylactics.

There should be a movement to band people together who would support TV programming without commercials, like on a subscriber supported cable line.

Television's lack of reality is not limited strictly to commercial aspects of the programming. We skip from one canned laugh to the next on all situation comedies except in the operating room of M-A-S-H. The police officers of Adam-12 stop a girl for going 45 mph on a bicycle and she isn't even out of breath. The SWAT team has replaced the cavalry, always arriving in a nick of time with exactly the right amount of fire power. We don't have the time or space to discuss the benign unrealism of Mission Impossible or Perry Mason.

Some viewers would obviously be ready, willing, and able to have TV more like real life than television presently is, but for every one of them, there is a covy of others who think because they don't see it, nobody should see it. For the first time in America, TV stations recently began to exhibit a warning preceeding shows with questionable material for young viewers.

"Due to the adult subject matter," parental discretion is advised. That's what it basically says. In Europe, there is occasionally a warning flashed on the screen before violence takes place so the squeamish can hide their eyes. Not so in America.

American TV gives no warning against violence generally. During our study, there was one pertaining to the last five minutes of the "Seal Song," a wildlife special in which the brutal butchering of baby seals was shown. Instead, American warnings are against and protecting us from seeing love, at least as portrayed by Hollywood.

"Summer of '42" had such a warning before its recent TV debut, alerting parents who might not want to explain things they could find embarrassing. The network went even further to insure the sanctity of the American Home by cutting out the offending footage, one of the more touching and moving scenes of the whole film, where the young boy and distraut girl take off their clothes and go to bed. In comparison to the part cut out, there is more sex and panty hose commercial. I suggest the network pay that person good money to be [illegible] and feel that he had better [illegible] them.

I would [illegible] in Europe [illegible] and [illegible] Lake Winnipesaukee [illegible] Queen Elizabeth [illegible] Queen of England [illegible] Cocoanut Grove [illegible] I've had occasion to [illegible] information, it being the word "nance" on the "money categories would have rated much higher because of the game shows and their obsessive fascination with money and material wealth. Also, divorce and illicit affairs would have finished higher because of the soap operas, but I would be willing to bet that shots, guns, blows struck, and deaths would not only finish in the top 5 any day someone would care to take the time to find out.

There are no checkmarks in hockey (only women — and usually fat ones — are allowed as contestants on "The New Treasure Hunt." Dog and cat food commercials might as well be aimed at the citizens of the American ghettos who can't afford decent food as the bomb animals who supposedly prefer this or that brand if they could voice this choice. The people of Biafra should eat so well.

Our Founding Fathers could not have had any way of knowing how technology would affect our country. It is good that "freedom of the Press," transposed itself into "freedom of the Media," and that freedom of speech also pertains to freedom of sight, when we consider how powerful the television news apparatus is.

For those Americans who could attend Vietnam in person, TV brought it right into the living room in glorious color: blood red, gut blue, and jungle green. Somehow, all those people John Wayne killed didn't look quite as dead and disfigured as those shown on Walter Cronkite and Huntley-Brinkley.

We shall never return to the good old days when the only policeshows were "Highway Patrol," "Car 54, Where Are You?" and "Gunsmoke." This does not mean we have to be stuck with "The Rookies," "Adam 12," "SWAT," "Kojak," "Cannon," and "Christy Love." One would think they would be easier to get rid of than King George.

We could do an instant replay of 1776 and replace them all with materials that had legitimate social value, similar to what we did with Nixon because of Watergate. Hopefully, we could do better than a used Ford.

Reprinted from the

BALD EAGLE

—CURT STOCKER

With help from friends

KATHY and KNOX

MUNN

CHART "A" January 11, 1975 - 8:30 a.m. - 12 a.m.
Programming Survey, excluding News & Commercials

Events & Objects	Totals	ABC	CBS	NBC
Gunshots	169	35	65	69
Guns Shown	153	30	65	58
Hugs, Kisses & Caresses	16	3	5	8
Blows Struck	122	65	39	17
Moral Issues Shown	74	28	33	13
Human Deaths	64	16	27	21
Music	56	8	12	44
Vehicle Subjects	55	6	19	30
Smoking	47	10	23	14
Fights	46	16	9	21
Drinking & Drugs	45	10	18	17
Collisions & Accidents	39	8	8	23
Knives Shown	38	7	31	0
Animal Subjects	36	12	17	7
Emotional Outbursts	35	8	24	3
Rescues	35	14	9	12
Schools & Teachers	29	7	10	12
Songs	28	11	15	2
Money	28	7	18	3
Chases	27	8	16	10
Nurses	26	0	6	17
Military & War	25	1	24	0
Doctors	21	1	3	17
Sports Participation	20	10	7	3
Animal Deaths	16	7	9	0
Coffee Drinking	15	6	9	0
Gambling	15	1	14	0
Firemen	14	0	1	13
Lying	13	12	1	0
Kisses	13	2	11	0
Discrimination	12	2	9	1
Recreation	12	1	11	0
Escapes	12	5	5	2
Police (not in police show)	12	4	3	5
Para Medics	10	0	0	10
Ships Sunk	9	0	9	0
Interviews	9	2	0	7
Conspiracies	9	4	3	2
Stealing & Robbing	9	3	1	5
Peer Pressure	8	2	5	1
Prisons & Jails	8	3	3	2
T.V.	8	1	5	2
Hunting	8	1	7	0
Love	7	2	4	1
Voting	6	0	6	0
Poetry	5	0	0	5
Prostitutes	5	0	5	0
Economy	5	2	1	2
Religious References	5	4	1	0
Flowers	5	0	5	0
Bullfights	4	4	0	0
Ecology	4	0	0	4
Kidnapping	4	1	0	3
Spying	4	1	3	0
Dancing	4	1	3	0
Marriage	4	3	1	0
Gold	4	1	3	0
Sickness	3	1	1	1
Court	2	0	2	0
Stabbings	2	1	1	0
Women's Liberation	2	0	2	0
Time Travel	1	0	1	0
Priests	1	0	1	0
Computers	1	0	1	0
Church	1	0	1	0
Violent Storms	1	0	0	1
Cattle Stampedes	1	0	0	1

CHART "A"

This is a list, in order of frequency, of occurance or appearances of things and events important enough to prompt its recording over the 15½ hour period of January 11.

Granted, there is no way an individual could record everything that passes on the screen over a long period of time and different persons might tend to vary what they record through any short period. Therefore, we tried to credit things that dominated the attention of the viewer, noting the fact some one being shot was more important than the style of the killer's clothes or type of getaway car.

CHART "B"

This chart is a breakdown of programming on the three major networks for the week of January 11-17, taken from TV Guide. Some shows were cross-indexed because they fit into more than one category; some movies have enough specific content to be both "Western" and "Comedy," for example. A "Drama Series" is also likely to fall there into other classifications. Not all "Children's Shows" were educational, unfortunately.

CHART "C"

This chart contains commercial information taken during the 15½ hours of January 11.

CHART "B" – TV Programming for the week January 11-17, 1957
Taken from TV Guide – Figures represent Hours

Category	Totals	ABC	CBS	NBC
Movies	77	20½	43½	13
Variety/Talk Shows	60	30½	7	22½
News	59	19	22½	17½
Drama Situations	55	17½	9½	28
Game Shows	40½	19	8½	13
Police/Lawyer/Detective	32½	12½	9½	10½
Soap Operas	28½	5	15	8½
Sports	20½	4½	5	11
Cartoons	14½	3½	8	3
Religious	12½	4½	5	3
Children's Shows	11	1	7½	2½
Educational	10½	2	3½	5
Medical Shows	9	4½	1	3½
Specials	7	6½	½	0
Situation Comedies	6½	1	4½	1

CHART "C" – Commercial Information from January 11, 1975 – 8:30 a.m. – 12 a.m.

Classification	Totals	ABC	CBS	NBC
Total Number of Spots	891	323	291	277
Products & Services	688	246	224	216
Program Promotions	147	65	45	37
Public Service	58	12	22	24
Product Breakdown
Appliances/Cars/Tools	231	105	60	66
Food & Drink	214	48	90	76
Do or See	169	75	45	49
Medicines	72	21	26	25
Cosmetics/Bath Items	62	31	16	15
Banks/Savings & Loans	18	6	6	6
Real Estate	14	6	8	0
Pet Products	8	1	3	4
Cigars/Pipe Tobacco	5	5	0	0
Ski Areas	2	1	1	0

Arts & Entertainment

Italian Night Is Simply Zucchini Ripieni

Commencing this past Monday evening and continuing for four more nights this summer, Wright Dining Hall is being transformed into an international restaurant, be it a French-Canadian cafe, a Spanish restaurant, an Israeli deli, or a German smorgasboard. During these summer months, Saga Foods and the UVM Summer Session have incorporated a special dinner series entitled "International Nights" which, judging from the opening night crowd, is destined to be a success.

This week was Italian Renaissance Night which brought 290 seasoned Italians, pseudo Italians, neophite Italians, plus assorted fakers and the hungry. Most came armed with their own brand of Rose and appeared eager to sample a variety of Italian cuisine as well as be entertained by the sights and sounds of Italian culture.

Saga offered a three-course menu, the appetizers consisting of antipasta, breads and cheeses, and minestrone. The entrees ranged from Fish Piemontese to Zuccini Ripieni as well as plenty of pasta and lasagna (and you thought Italian food was spaghetti and meatballs.) If that was not enough, one could dessert on ice cream, gali (deep fried pastries) and expresso coffee.

The dinner was served buffet style, and everyone was encouraged to go back for seconds and thirds if need be.

The entertainment for the evening was supplied by a high school chorus and musicians who are presently enrolled at the UVM Summer Music Session. A young lady serenaded us with her Italian, lovesick ballads while another strolled among the tables, playing a violin. Both proved easy on the digestive tract and were actually quite charming. They were followed by a co-ed chorus which ran through a medley of Italian operettas.

The peak of the evening's festivities occurred after the scheduled entertainment ended, however. With the jokes sounding funnier and the wine tasting sweeter and sweeter, older couples took to the floor and waltzed and cha-cha'ed to the melodies of a gentleman who sat in at the piano. Had the guy at the keyboard broken into 'swing', I probably would have been up there too. It was that kind of night.

The 'International Night' dinners will continue for four more evenings (this summer. Dinners start at 6:30 with the cost being $3.25 or $1.00 plus meal ticket. It is a good deal if you want to go out to dinner without leaving campus.

Vermont Mozart Festival Offers Many Extras

The Vermont Mozart Festival begins this Sunday, July 20th, at 6:30 p.m. This Grand Opening concert will be held at the University Show Barn seating 1500. Don't miss it!

The Chamber Music Workshop is the first in a series of special offerings of this season's festival. Here, amateur chamber musicians will have the opportunity to study, under the Festival Winds and the New York Chamber Soloists. This workshop will cover works of Mozart including string and woodwind quartets, larger chamber works, symphonies, and divertimenti. The Chamber Music Workshop, beginning July 21st and ending July 26th, has limited registration to twelve winds (oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns) and twenty strings.

The festival is also offering a five-day seminar in the Classical Method of Dressage by The American School of Dressage. This seminar begins on July 21st and runs through July 25th. The seminar is set up with a daily curriculum of studies, films, lectures, demonstrations and mounted instruction. All levels may apply. However, there is a limit of twenty-one students. On July 20th the American School of Dressage will have an exhibition to the music of Mozart preceding the opening concert at 6:30 at the University Show Barn. There will also be a formal exhibition given on Sunday, July 27th, at 3:00 p.m.

ATTENTION FLUTISTS: Julius Baker, the virtuoso flutist, will hold Master Classes in flute technique and repertoire. These classes are to be held from July 28th through August 1st. The class is limited to 30 students. Each student will have the wonderful opportunity to perform for Mr. Baker.

ATTENTION PIANISTS: Piano Master Classes will be held from August 4 through August 8th. Menahem Pressler will be holding these classes in Mozart's and other classical piano repertoire, including concerti, sonatas, and chamber works. An audition will determine which students will be active performers in the class and which will be auditors. This class is also limited to 30 students.

There are also courses being offered entitled "Mozart and His Times" opened to graduate and undergraduate students. These courses are offered from July 14th through August 1st.

In conjunction with the festival there will be several lecture-demonstrations given by the Festival Director and artists. Here, the compositions of Mozart will be discussed and illustrated. These sessions will be held at 4 p.m. on July 22, 24, 29, 30, August 5 and 7 at the UVM Living/Learning Center. Please note that these lecture-demonstrations are FREE and OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

If anyone would like a FREE SAMPLE of the wonderful festival that's about to begin, there will be a free concert in Battery Park in Burlington on Saturday, July 19th at 7 p.m. This lovely introduction concert will feature the New York Chamber Soloists, the Festival Winds, and the University Choral Union under director and organist James G. Chapman. Come one and all to experience the Music of Mozart.

—ELAINE PETERSON

One of the oldest motifs in Western Art is that of religious confession, the exploration of the inner world of the spirit by the devices of the artist. The first such work may have been the Confessions of St. Augustine, written towards the close of the 4th century. In modern times this has continued, though the religious input is often hidden beneath a secular purpose, for instance Proust's A la recherche du temps perdu. When John Coltrane released A Love Supreme in 1964 he changed once again the shape of jazz, and allied it to a tradition he may not have been fully aware of, for that album and the ones that followed are the musical explorations of the soul of the artist, and also the confessions of the musicians through their music. Coltrane's searching for new ways of expressing himself in music became analogous to a search for meaning in existence. On the inside of Meditations, one of the albums following A Love Supreme Coltrane is quoted:

"Once you become aware of this force for unity in life, you can't ever forget it. It becomes part of everything you do. In that respect, this is an extension of A Love Supreme since my conception of that force keeps changing shape. My

(continued on page nineteen)

YARN CELLAR
Come in and see all the PARAGON CREWEL KITS
yarn cellar
THE ROYAL
96 Church Street
Burlington

FAMOUS SINCE 1974
when in Burlington, don't miss
CARBURI'S RESTAURANT
Vermont's most unique menu!
~ COMFORTABLE ATMOSPHERE
~ COMFORTABLE PRICES
Downtown at 119 St. Paul St.

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON
CELEBRATE SUMMER AT THE CHANCE
20¢ ALES MON.-THURS
50¢ NIGHT WEDNESDAY
OLD TIME MOVIES SUNDAY NIGHTS
AIR CONDITIONED
147 MAIN STREET
3 doors down from the Flynn theatre

Our Town: Everyday Life In The Modern World

J. KARL STEVENS

I had hoped that the Champlain Shakespeare Festival's sudden departure, after seven years of strict Shakespearian repertoire, marked the beginning of a period of maturation and innovation. Unfortunately, it signaled a descent into Bi-centennial americana with about as much bite as stale meringue. The production of Wilder's Our Town poses a question for each viewer: is this a good production of a mediocre play, or vice versa, a mediocre production of a good play?

When I mentioned to my mother that I was reviewing this show, she sighed, "That play was the play of my generation. You'll never understand what it meant to us." Growing up in a town remarkably similar to the mythical 'Grovers Corners', I can guess. It's a question of space: how you inhabit and utilize it. Occurring on an almost vacant stage, a few chairs artfully arranged, you find yourself staring across a polished halflit expanse of wood. A man materializes: the stage manager. He is the logician who gives the play structure by suggesting certain scenes, interrupting others. Armia Shimerman portrays him as feisty, peppery, a man who limps slightly but whose energy has transformed that deformity into a strut. He is reminiscent of Hal Holbrook doing Mark Twain, or Whitmore impersonating Will Rodgers – an archetypal father figure. It is an inspired moment as he locomotes around the stage, wheezing and smacking on his pipe, indicating the location of trees, schools, houses, etc; imparting the exact intimacy these people enjoy with the space they inhabit, people living close enough to smell what everybody is cooking, near enough to yell algebra answers between houses. It is an intimacy that calls up one quick response: nostalgia.

For two acts: boy meets girl next door, parents pontificate, the stage manager confides and lectures, while life assumes the boredom of a culture where the quotidian has become a permanent geology. The layers of life are fixed, there will be no upheavals. Faults are non-existent except for Simon Stimson, choirmaster cultivating a taste for B&B. At intermission the lobby fills up, people outside smoking, watching the storm blow off the lake.

—hey is this the guy who wrote those kids books?

—Nah. That was Burgess, Thornton Burgess.

Then comes the last act. Death. The living, we are told, live in boxes of ignorance. They suffer incommunicado. Everyone is killed off without blood and the play dissolves into fear and loathing. It's hard to decide if Wilder is trying to kick you in the balls or if he's just another spastic playwright. Filing out, someone spit out, 'that last act was really obscene.' Laughter.

Writing about the play, Wilder defined its purpose as discovering, 'a value above all price for the smallest events in our daily life... each individual's assertion to an absolute reality can only be inner, very inner.' Should these characters, as portrayed, possess inner realities, it would take an electronic detector to discover lead beneath their gold gilding. But there are moments. The stage manager, explaining the purpose of the play, croons, 'so people a thousand years from now (will know) this is the way we were in the provinces north of New York at the beginning of the twentieth century'. Suddenly his voice jumps an octave and he screams, 'this is the way we were'. This sudden snort of megolomania shatters the 'just plain folk' veneer and for an instant you see what you have always suspected about father figures: they are just crazy sons of bitches. Shimerman should emphasize this aspect, accentuate his physical deformity, add a touch of brutal to his autocratic ordering of the stage.

This necessity to warp the usual saccharine interpretation of Our Town is made flesh by Jeffrey DeMunn's depiction of Mr. Webb. Webb is editor of the town paper, resident intellectual, moral windsock and possessor of the finest genes in town because he sired the smartest kids. DeMunn lampoons all this. His Webb is a joker, a man of offended sensibility who endures the play grimacing. A member of the company confided, "all during rehearsals, Jeffrey just kept getting broader and broader." I had the mental image of grade school kids stamping empty cups, flattening them out with a bang. Dennis Lipscomb shares this spirit. His Joe Stoddard, undertaker, is a hilarious blend of grade C horror flics.

The women of Our Town are level-headed, practical women, with heads locked into the stanchion of marriage, chewing their cuds. Content. Susan Selig and Rita Litton as the missus' Webb and Gibbs speak their lines firmly and spend a great deal of time miming kitchen work. Where is the inner reality Wilder demanded? Where was Red Emma when these women were beating eggs in 1901. As an experienced corpse, Mrs. Gibbs tells the newly arrived Emily to 'forget all that.' What is there to forget? None of these people carried any inner reality to the grave, because the sum of their life was eggs, hubby, baseball, choirpractice, etc. They had no problems, no interesting quirks, no resilience coming from struggle. Ghosts for the first two acts, why should it be a shock when they finally admit it in the third? What is shocking about the third act is that we learn these merry folk have been culpable, in fact even capable, of ignorance and suffering. Where, when, how?

The play focuses around the transferral of life from one generation to the next. George, a ferocious horsehide slinger, marries the girl next door, Emily, who is the brightest student and will, we assume, content herself with making George apple pie and babies. Susan Dunlop is intriguing as Emily because her performance is rough; she could either be one of the most annoying characters on stage or one of the most interesting. Miss Dunlop is incredibly adept at histrionics. They work when she portrays the hyper-sensitive girl always on display. She could very successfully push her excesses towards neurosis and metaphor, becoming the first person in 'Grovers Corners' with inner acne. If not she should make an attempt to mature within the play's framework. Chip Towers plays George as naive and likeable. Just before his marriage George declares that all he really wants to be is a fella. Great. Only to be a 'fella' there are some pretty stiff initiation rites: you gotta catch frogs, stick straws up their asses & blow em up until they float off whirling green balloons you explode with rocks. George is portrayed as the type of kid whose mother wouldn't let him slip out to play ball with the guys, cause he had to practice piano. In fact the play has been so sweetly camp that Emily's death, which should skew the foundation of George's life, leaves him kneeling at her invisible grave not so much the bereaved husband as Casey, who struck out in Mudville.

It seems that Our Town only works as theater when it is

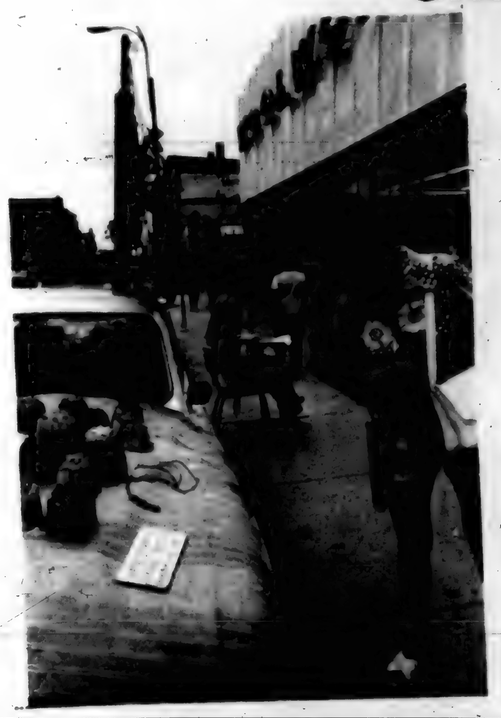
(continued on page nineteen)

WHAT ALE'S YOU
Meeting Place of U.V.M.
152 St. Paul Street
Burlington
862-1364

Enjoy Our Famous CLAMBAKE Featuring Our Special Live MAINE LOBSTER or SURF 'n TURF
Half-baked stuffed lobster and top sirloin steaks with onion rings with...
Both Dinners complete with steamed clams or clam chowder, baked potato, garden salad and demi loaf bread. Dinner $5.95 with this ad.
Good through July
BLACK CAT Restaurant Lounge
160 Bank St. Burlington

No Tom, Dick or Harry can beat our frank.
Lots of people try.
But there's just no way to improve on the great eating Lumdog. After all, nobody knows more about hot dogs than LUMS. Whether you like it with melted cheese, spicy chili or hot sauerkraut, LUMS is the place for a great Hotdog
The Lumdog
LUMS
FAMILY RESTAURANTS
WILLISTON ROAD TOWARDS THE AIRPORT
11:30 am - 1:30 am

Church Street



Summertime has brought an influx of street vendors to downtown Burlington, and their arrival has created some stir among local merchants and restaurants here.

City Clerk Frank Wagner has advised the owners of hotdog stands and other quick-service concessions to keep their operations at least 500 feet away from any established restaurants. The action came from a decision by the Board of Aldermen following a complaint from the A&W on Church Street.

A few weeks ago, "The Paddy Wagon," a push-cart vendor selling roast beef sandwiches, cold drinks and other items, had established itself next door to the A&W, and the fast-food chain restaurant called the competition unfair.

"We have no objection to them, everyone has the opportunity to make money — but I don't think people should camp on other people's doorsteps — it's more a matter of principle," A&W manager Mrs. Jean Drake said last week.

"People have told me to go to City Hall, they told me this sort of thing has happened before," she said, adding that owner Sven Johnson made the official complaint. The sandwich vendor has since moved to City Hall Park.

There have been reports from merchants here that the vendors and craft people selling off the hoods of cars on Church Street are not adding to the image of the downtown area.

William B. Preston III, of the Merchant's Bureau, explained: "The merchants on the street have to pay for the spaces that they occupy, whether they have a large store or a small one. I hope that when we put in a mall we can have spaces for them in a manner that will enhance the street." He indicated that some merchants felt that the present situation was not ideal, but that there should be a place for them. Others have complained that the merchants have taxes and rental costs to worry about, while all the vendors need is an inspection from the Board of Health and the cost of a permit.

Roman Blanchard, who was selling hand-made clay pots and hanging planters from his VW on

Vendors Prosper

Church Street last Wednesday afternoon, admitted they had a point.

"I'm sure if I was paying $5000 for rent and some $15 a year renter of space came out and competed with me, I'd talk to the aldermen. I'm sure it's been done," he said.

Blanchard, who belongs to the North Country Craft Guild, says he started selling on Church Street about three weeks ago, but nobody has complained about it to him.

Lois Bodosky, of Lojo's Beauty Salon, is becoming known to many as the "Hotdog Lady of Church Street." She said the salon had a room where they sold baked goods to customers, and that idea proved so popular that they decided to try a hotdog stand outside.

Mrs. Bodosky said she had three separate licenses to allow the selling of hotdogs and cookies from a cart. The Board of Health inspected her kitchen, where she prepares the food. It inspected the cart itself, and the City granted her a peddler's license to sell the food.

Mrs. Bodosky says she doesn't believe the street vendors are cutting into the business of restaurants, saying, "We service the people that would either carry a lunch or skip it entirely. We cater to people that just want a bite to eat," and added that it was becoming very popular with children.

"You know how kids are," she said.

On College Street, Joanne Malone's green van, labeled as "Some Like It Hot", specializes in Mexican food — tortillas, tacos, refried beans and other items. She says the business location would be better on Church Street, "where more people can see you", but that there was the problem of staying away from restaurants and other vendors.

"But," she said, "business is good. Last Wednesday was her second day on Church Street, and the day before she had sold out in an hour and a half. She expects that as a result of the direction to stay 500 feet away from the restaurants the city will be a little stricter about granting licenses and directing where people can sell.

—MARGO HOWLAND

Local Diversions; A Necessary Difference

If Jimmy Bredin is right, and money is indeed the lifeblood of politics, the anatomical metaphor continues with "media-exposure" as the political heart. I wonder who thought up the old adage "bad press is better than no press at all." It rings true right now, although I wish it weren't the case.

A few shenanigans have transpired in reaction to the publication in the Summer Cynic last week of Scott MacKay's "Open Season — Liberty Union: Groping for an Identity." Perhaps the shenanigan-makers might consider the following:

Politics, for better or worse, relies on newspapers and electronic journalism for maintaining public awareness of the politician, politicians, political events (or "non-events"). The adventures of a hypothetical Joe and Josephine Blow, a middle-aged couple trying to make ends meet with Joe's job at a lumberyard, his drinking habit, Josephine's working part-time as a waitress and raising four troublesome kids, is not really the stuff for the morning paper or the six o'clock T.V. report. Aside from your average run-of-the-mill ax murderer, politics remains among the steadfastly worthy subjects for journalistic inquiry. And there ain't a pol alive who doesn't know that, and who doesn't make accommodations for it. An unknown politician is a contradiction in terms.

Media-accommodation by politicians takes many forms but usually exists in a character called the press secretary, press liason, communications assistant, director of information or Minister of Propaganda. All practice a sophisticated pseudo-science called "flackmanship." In other words, the news events we see or read about rarely 'happen' (spontaneously). More likely, the event is generated (or 'contrived') to appeal for press coverage and prominent placement in the particular edition of an individual medium. An entire gamut from Joseph Goebbels to Ron Nessen to Ralph Nader have been successful practitioners.

It is also necessary to remember that in "source-generated" news (as opposed to 'spontaneous' news), the news source attempts to control the ultimate tone or analysis of the event. Ergo, what you read or see in the Free Press, the NBC Chancellor Report, and even the Vermont Summer Cynic MAY BE EXACTLY WHAT THE NEWS SOURCE WANTS YOU TO READ OR SEE. Or perceive. Which brings us back to Scott MacKay and "Liberty Union: Groping for an Identity."

I have my own disagreements with the article. On the whole though, it may well be the finest piece of work published in the Summer Cynic in a long while. And now, he and his article are subjected to denigration and venom by certain subjects of the article.

While courting the public eye, politics often wishes to conceal its less attractive realities from public view. Since politics is widely held to be the vehicle of our salvation, then it is best we know all of it.

If a political organization is suffering from an indecisive "identity crisis," it ought to resolve it. Because if the whole thing just sits around, getting nowhere and going nowhere, criticism hurts. A successful political entity is a product of its actions. When it becomes a product of its fears, it can no longer be taken seriously.

If Liberty Union is suffering from stagnation, it should take care. It has always been my feeling that L.U. was formed and survived in reaction to a perceived stagnation in major party organizations. If that same perceived stagnation has penetrated Liberty Union, it has become what it hates.

—CARL BLUMBERG

MAD HATTER ;

I remember shortly after UVM dropped football University prexy Dr. Edward Andrews was asked if he considered himself "anti-sports." The good doctor answered absolutely not. I guess that is some kind of double speak. In Dr. Andrews' tenure at UVM the Catamounts withdrew from active competition in NCAA baseball and football. And yet this guy is not anti-sports. Sure, Doc, Sure...

What other school has two fields, such as the football and baseball complex at Centennial Field, that are not used?

University of Oregon basketball coach, Dick Harter, says it looks like Oregon will play UVM in three or four years. Oregon is one of the top teams in the country and will be challenging UCLA for the top spot in the Pac 8.

Mark Kram writing in Sports Illustrated really called the shot on middleweight champion Carlos Monzon. It's about time Monzon gets taken to task for not being a very good fighter. Monzon was called slow and sloppy which is a most accurate description of his style. I think Sugar Ray could pound Monzon even though the Sugarman is almost 60 years old.

Babe — The Legend Comes to Life by Robert Creamer is an outstanding book. Creamer has done yeoman research to set the record straight about Babe Ruth.

There was never anyone like Willie Mays. When Willie was in his prime he could do it all and more. Hit, run, throw, and hit with power. And one more thing that is missing in most of today's athletes, enthusiasm. Willie Mays played the game with gusto and enthusiasm and it was contagious.

BAD PERSON'S AWARD To the person or persons responsible for putting all the stop lites up in Burlington. What with the stop lites, a parking garage and a waterfront hotel, Burlington is going to look like just any other wasted city. The trappings of large urban areas do not play well in Burlington...

1974 Distinguished and Undistinguished Awards

ALBUM OF THE YEAR
Chick Corea & Return to Forever
Where Have I Known You Before

Arif Mardin — Journey
George Benson — Bad Benson

JAZZ ALBUM OF THE YEAR
Weather Report — Mysterious Traveller
Thad Jones & Mel Lewis Big Band-Potpourri

VOCALIST OF THE YEAR
Stevie Wonder — Fulfillingness' Final Finale

MUSICIAN/ARRANGER/COMPOSER
Chick Corea

MAN OF THE YEAR
Billy Cobham

Table Talk

SLEEPER OF THE YEAR
Blood, Sweat & Tears — Mirror Image (side 2 only)

ALBUM COVER OF THE YEAR
Yes — Relayer (Roger Dean scores again)

ROCK N ROLL ALBUM OF THE YEAR
Lou Reed — Rock n' Roll Animal

EXTRAORDINARY 1ST ALBUM
Stanley Clarke

BIGGEST DISAPPOINTMENT
Deodate — Whirlwinds

MOST UNDERRATED
Soft Machine

—AL BERNARDINA

You And Your Plant; Pickle Peppers

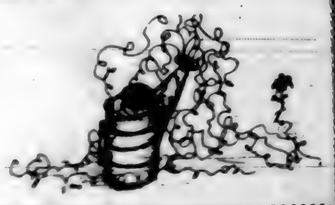
You may not be growing peppers for pickling, then again you might. Pickle peppers, historically, come in pecks. Not many around who remember what a peck is but more than one is a lot. And a lot of stuff coming ripe all of a sudden on the same day in your garden can create havoc.

What to do? Well, in the first place, you should be picking everything just as it's ready, maybe a moment sooner. This way, your vegetables are at the peak of flavor and nutrition. And you're not swamped with pecks and pecks. Continuous picking also keeps the plants producing.

Should you have a large quantity to harvest all at one full swoop, do so. Then your harvesting can get back on even keel. But what to do with this bountiful harvest?

You can eat it, well maybe try to, invite in friends for a squash bake or corn roast. Or give it away. Of course, if they're pretty nice and fresh, you could take them to the Farmers' Market on Fridays. The one right here in Burlington is outside, outback of St. Paul's, corner of Cherry and Battery Streets.

Last, but not least, you can store or preserve your produce for eating later on when the snows come and there's hardly any fresh food left in your garden. There are several good ways you can do this. It's a little too early to root cellar, too warm now, weather ideal for drying. Many fruits and vegetables can be sliced up and dried in the sun — or in an oven or other sort od dryer. Once thoroughly dry, these bits of wholesome food are stored away in airtight containers. There are several good books on how-to-do this.



Freezing and canning are other methods of preserving surplus foods. But no matter what route you take, don't let your produce go to waste or rot on the vine. You've put too much effort and energy into it.

—TED FLANAGAN
Garden Specialist

Sweet Betty's Cookin' Corner

This week the Summer Cynic is proud to begin a series of summer recipes to titillate your pallates as well as balance off your menues.

Hi out there food fans. This is Sweet Betty bringing you bundles of broiled, basted, baked, and buttery delights from the annals of my culinary categories.

This week Sweet Betty has just the summer special for you: Cataclismic Carrot Cake coupled with incredible Cream Cheese Frosting. I served this to a Summer Cynic reporter last week and now he's covering the moonshot in outer space. Out of this world.

CARROT CAKE

Makes three 9" layer or one large sheet cake + cupcakes

2 c. flour
2 t. baking powder
1½ t. soda
1 t. salt
2 t. cinnamon
2 c. sugar
1½ c oil
4 eggs
2 c. grated carrot
8½ oz. crushed pineapple
½ c. chopped nuts

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, soda, cinnamon. Add sugar, oil, eggs, and mix well. Add carrots, pineapple and nuts. Bake 350 degrees for 35—40 minutes.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

½ c. butter
1 8 oz. pack cream cheese
1 t. vanilla
1 lb. sifted p. sugar (3½ C)

Cream butter, cheese and vanilla. Beat in sugar. If too thick, add milk.

An Aftermath

A village seen so many times before. in the distance, explosions dance out of the jungle. huts explode, & the road is soon full of refugees scurrying about like insects from under an overturned rock. leading the procession a troup of children, one or two naked, all terrified, they come nearer & nearer.

Cut! Print it. The kids stop running, relax, smile at one another. The naked children shrug into robes as the coke truck pulls up.

Sound familiar? it should, or at least up until a certain point. But with the sudden secession of hostilities in Southeast Aisa, one of the best kept secrets of the post-Vietnam era of American foreign policy has been leaked to the American public. In a startling joint press release issued by the state department & the United States Army, the existence of a massive (& hitherto top secret) propaganda base located in Mendicino, California was verified. According to the report, virtually all of the news stories filed on the Vietnamese & Cambodian affairs (in short what we came to call the Indochina War) were filled at this camp.

"The facts were bound to come out sooner or later," reflects Colonel Leopold "Chuck" Szambowski, who was in command of Operation Whopper, the military's code name for the camp. —after the Paris Settlement back in '72, we couldn't get anyone in the media to go over there. It was as if the region had ceased to exist. Kissinger tried to prolong it with the haggling over the POW's, but the NVA just wanted us to get the hell out of there. And when it was over no one cared.

It was this apathy that gave birth to Whopper. In the beginning all operations worked out of a small office in the basement of the Pentagon, and were responsible for bimonthly blurbs on the continuing struggle in the South. Largely overshadowed by another war in the Middle East, and a resurgence in national concern over domestic issues, there was little need for more than this small operation... but as Szambowski has disclosed, there were no projected anticipations towards the spread and effect of the Watergate scandals or their subsequent reprecussions, especially linked with the looming threat of 'an international depression. The resignation of one president, the near constant ridicule of his successor, and the growing feeling of despair and dissent were clear indications that something had to be done when Colonel Szambowski assumed command of Operation Whopper in January, 1975.

—We needed a war, the amiable 42 year old Szambowski recalled to this reporter. But nobody wanted to fight. So we figured, what the hell, let's start up the old one. A native of Clearwater, Oklahoma, and himself a war orphan (both of his parents were executed during the Warsaw ghetto uprising of 1944), Szambowski saw the angle his unit would have to take. Within a month, army researchers had procured the names and addresses of all known Vietnamese orphans that had already come to this country. After contracts had been arranged with their parents, the children were flown to staging areas near the old Mendicino studios of Republic Pictures, makers of hundreds of B quickies during the second world war to bolster the morale of those left behind. Here they joined 123 national Vietnamese orphans flown in for their capacity of natural terror and physical dexterity. Once in camp, there began an intensive training program under the supervision of special forces men and out-of-work Hollywood stuntmen.

—They were great, just great," commented stuntman Tex Tillerman. Flying through the air after grenade blasts, carried out of bombed schools, incredible. And they used those blood packets like pros. Falls, amputations, sucking chest wounds, the works. I never saw breath control like in some of those kids. Natural stuntmen those gooks. Never saw anything like it.

Coinciding with this training program, a massive news campaign was initiated. Reports of a major Kymes Rouge offensive and a North Vietnamese troop buildup. And in the first filmed news reports, Szambowski's kids were fleeing with their parents under columns of smoke rising up from liberated hulks of hue and damage. The campaign was an immediate success. As Szambowski relates, "the public ate it up. We knew it would pay off. Nothing better than a good fight to get your mind off the troubles. And the kids. Americans are suckers for kids. Always have been. I bet Dondi's one of the greatest Sunday funnies of our time. Before they knew it the folks at home were hooked."

And what do the kids think of all this now that it's over. Xuan Tri O'Brien (see below), perhaps the most famous of the Whoppers for her pre-Whopper Pulitzer pose of 1972, was a bit bewildered at first.

"All that blood, well, it just sort of turned me off at first. But after a while it got sort of exciting. For the other children as well, it was an equally exciting venture."

Little Nguyen Heinkel of Dayton, Ohio perhaps summed it up best. "It's really something. After just watching the war, to one day realize that you're actually making it, it just blows my mind. Lots of nights after a day's filming, you could hear a scream or some yelling as a bunch of the kids would try to get down the third degree napalm burn. That was a real toughy."

And yet now it's over. Phnom Penh has redisappeared under a cloak of insurgent security, and a similar curtain is expected momentarily over Ho Chi Minh City. Unexpected news and refugees are already flooding the west coast. What precisely went wrong? Colonel Szambowski puts the blame on an eagle eyed viewer of the CBS evening news. "CBS got a letter from a Fred Anderson of Lake Charles, Louisiana. He claimed that a little girl he saw one night coming out of Hue was the same one he'd seen two weeks earlier in Phnom Penh. Of course he was right. We usually use different injuries so the kids never look the same twice but one of the girls Le Ba Dung had a mother who was a quaker. Wouldn't let us touch her face. We thought it would slip by. If the letter had come to us, things might have worked out. But CBS tried the old they-all-look-the-same gambit, and Anderson wrote the FCC, and some senator got his mitts on it and threatened to blow the whistle.

With the threat of curtailed funding, there was no option but to write out the war. Within two weeks, the war in Indochina had been cancelled.

Self Portrait Of An Inmate - Reflections

Editor's Note: Charlie Baldwin is an inmate at Burlington's Chittenden County Community Correctional Center. He has been an All-American in high school, an advocate journalist, and an injured Olympic qualifier track runner. He is now serving out a 5-year felony for check forgery. Last week he submitted a typical day's journal of events. This week he adds to those reflections.

Journal: Reflections
C.C.C.C./Farrell Street
July 9, 1975

—Must admit that I feel like I've finally gone off the deep end. Been scrounging around in my quasi-office/room for the past half-hour looking for something other than yellow, lined legal pad to type this on. Couldn't find a damn thing other than this marginally-useful tracing paper I purchased ages ago with the design of pencil-sketching one of my favorite pastimes; sailboats (I soon discovered that my lone talent was for drawing something resembling a World War II vintage Ingrham Class destroyer... no thanks to my Father's undying military influence). Whatever... the paper is before me, so I shall begin the monstrous task of attempting to write as many words with as little meaning as possible.

—Thank God (or whoever receives such plaudits...) for boredom. Prison life thrives on its inactivity and pervading presence. Such mental and physical weariness must be, at least in part, responsible for the philistine state of consciousness in this place that many consider home. I frequently observe my fellow inmates with a truculence borne of countless hours of bitching and moaning about getting "shafted" by the larger, misanthropic, law-enforcement, court and correctional systems which are responsible for their present residency within this modern, though by no means progressive institution. Many of the incarcerates here seem to share a certain intimacy with the expression of having "been fucked" by such agents of law and order, almost as if their carnal virginity had been violated for the purpose of pointing out their innocence and, as a result, at last laid naked their human condition. However, forgiving all faith in hindsight, this is an ass-backwards approach to the reality of doing time in a penal institution.

—It is striking when one listens to the normal conversation concerning such "shaftings," to find that most who vent their feelings about the power-structure controlling their lives, seem to inhibit any improvement in their present environment by continually rehashing their infamous "day in court." I find this for the most part oppressive and frequently destructive. The inmates refuse to accept even a marginal degree of guilt for their actions, and obsessively lay blame with the judges who adjudicated their cases. Despite my cynicism for my fellow inmates' menial struggles with a dead and buried past, I can understand their rationale, at least in a controlled measure.

—The average individual in this institution, as elsewhere, is confused as to the agency or organization which actually does determine their confinement in terms of how long and for what reason. Indeterminate sentences (those carrying both a minimum and maximum period for incarceration) generally serve to only perplex the inmate about the actual purpose or role of the correctional system. Each understands the reasoning of "good time" or segregation for the opposites of good and bad behavior, and yet, the concepts of treatment and "rehabilitation" never seem to hold any real meaning for them, as few legitimate efforts are being made in this direction. The "average" inmate can no more discern the distinction between a work program and the requirement of taking Antabuse (as a deterrent to alcohol abuse) as concepts of therapy, treatment or rehabilitation. To comply with such supervised demands would mean the admission of guilt and further, the acceptance that a problem does indeed exist in their lives and needs attention before they can be worthy of release. The implementation of such therapeutic programming (while generally done with the individual's well-being in mind) often functions only to polarize the inmate into a state of self-defeating "I don't give a damn," and must be considered a major factor in the failure of our correctional facilities.

—The inmate frequently convinces him/herself that nothing is wrong with their life that either booze, pot or sex wouldn't be able to treat. It is a popular belief among the inmate population that it is their jailers who have the problems, and it is they who must "have their heads examined..." I often agree, simply as a matter of my finding this to be true in certain instances. However, I would not harbor such a belief if I had not had such a thorough exposure to sadism, arbitrarily applied punishment and restrictive controls which often are totally without reason or justification.

Finally, before I slip into my daily withdrawal from the squalor surrounding me, I will leave this one unfriendly thought (taken from poet and writer Gary Snyder)

"Once a bear gets hooked on garbage... there's no cure."

On The Road

I'm on the road I cruise all day
I want to reach the end highway.
the hot sun turns my skin to red and no tennis cap for my head.
Just next door to the roadside ditch is the breakdown lane, where I hitch.
An ice cream cone goes driving by my mouth waters and I just sigh.
Endless solid and dotted lines with two-toned colored traffic signs barely brighten the travelled road.
They're all part of the traffic code.
Roadside sleeping, waking at dawn with my first ride, I shall be gone.
I live the road cruising all day
I want to reach the end highway.

–QUAZY WABBIT

To Christina In The Picture

I watch you blind and beautiful in that tall grass. Don't worry, the circle of lawn lies just ahead;
you cannot see it or move there,
but the wooden house of your fathers' stands in the horizon of light right across the colors of my eyes.
You sit in the picture for twenty-seven years, and I wonder from wherever I am if you are ever lonely or afraid or only listening to the grass as it traces across your fingertips in the wind.
Your hair, it pulls so nicely behind your head.
You know someone must have seen the pink dress.

Bill Campbell

Keep Wide Your Sight

Keep your eyes wide my son
The Beggars toll has just begun
Your mind is fresh the hour young
The breaker rides before the run

Note the hour's changing guard
The peasant girl stands in the yard
The geese have flown the air stands still
The wind is soft upon the hill

The factory sounds its metal call
The children play, the hammers fall
The gears grind on and forge the years
And whistles sound when dusk is near

A woman waits and tends the child
With gentle skin and hands so mild
And thinks of spring when fields are high
And days to come and times gone by

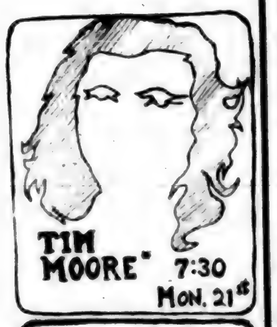
The bells chime loud and peel the law
Of stone and block and concrete wall
And guard a building straight and tall
Her lofty thoughts now safe from fall

The sparring clans stay with their fight
Their cause their life, their dead their plight
The past their rudder guiding true
Thru hills and fields and lives a'strewn

The old ones slow and stop their toils
And days now past become their spoils
And sunset glows with fading light
And now comes softly gentle night

This and more still meet thy eye
And raging wind and bitter cry
But you are young the time is right
This life's now yours, keep wide your sight

–BRUCE MALLOY



ALSO ON WFUV-fm THIS WEEK:

TODAY: 7-8:30 P.M. TAPED DISCUSSION W/ THE DIRECTORS OF THE VERMONT MOZART FESTIVAL
FRIDAY: 3:15-4 P.M. V.P.I.R.G. TALKS ON PLANS + PURPOSE OF THE PUBLIC INTEREST GROUP
MONDAY: TIM MOORE AT THE PIANO; SOLO PERFORMER/ 7:30 P.M. BROADCAST LIVE TUESDAY: NEW RELEASES & BIG CARNEGIE CHINESE SHORTS LP

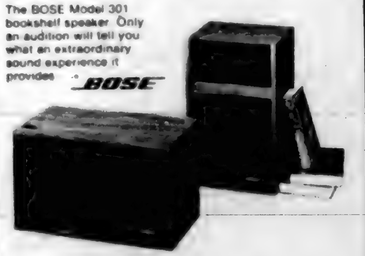
at 89.1 mhz.

Experience the only Direct/Reflecting® bookshelf speaker

The new BOSE Model 301. The only bookshelf loudspeaker to provide spacious, clear sound comparable to the top-rated BOSE 901® and 501 speakers, that allows you to adjust sound performance according to your specific room acoustics, taste, or recordings, and the only bookshelf speaker that does all this for under $100.

The BOSE Model 301 bookshelf speaker. Only an audition will tell you what an extraordinary sound experience it provides.



Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen to us, you can't go wrong.
157 Pearl St., Essex Jct.

SWIMWEAR SALE

• Swimwear
• Cover-ups
• Accessories

50% OFF
Reg. $18.00 to $39.00
NOW 9.00 to $19.50

Bertha Church
Intimate Apparel

Our Town

(continued from page twelve)

subverted. Of the cast, only Shimerman, DeMunn, Lipscomb and perhaps Dunlop appear to recognize this. In fact, it is not so much the text that demands subversion as the incredibly moribund manner it is produced. Constantly emphasizing the niceness and sweetness can only produce puzzled faces when it is declared that these folk are blind to life, that they suffer. The salvation to this production would lie in flopping it over on its stomach, cleaning out the prostate and then getting on with things. I keep reminding myself that only a decade after Wilder wrote Our Town, Grace Metalious, within sight of the same Mount Monadnock, wrote Peyton Place.

Vermont Mozart Festival

(continued from page thirteen)

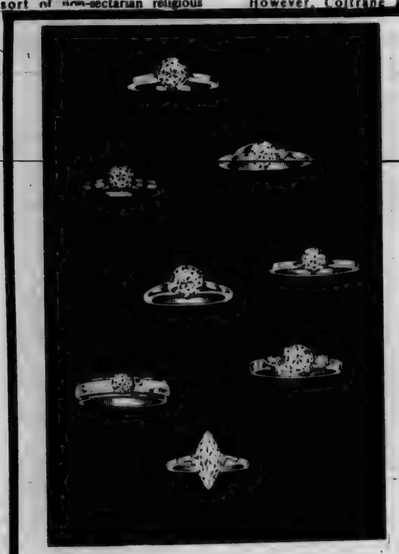
goal on mediating on this through music, however, remains the same. And that is to uplift people, as much as I can. To inspire them to realize more and more of their capacities for living meaningful lives. Because there certainly is meaning to life."

This sort of affirmation came to permeate the world of jazz, and Coltrane assumed a larger position than just the premier tenor man; he became a sort of non-sectarian religious leader, a focal point, and the many albums dedicated to him after his death in 1967 only serve to emphasize his status. Now, with jazz finding its first commercial success in many years, this spirit is being diluted. One cannot help but notice a difference not just in the sound (jazz lives only by change) but in the approach to the music in, for instance, Herbie Hancock's early, Maiden Voyage and his later, funkier albums like Headhunters.

However, Coltrane and others have left a solid body of recorded work from the mid-sixties which is now becoming popular for the first time. Some people may have only approached this work in derivative form, such as the version of "A Love Supreme" on the McCaughlin/Santana album, but new albums of Coltrane in concert have been released since his death, and this is worth looking into. Two of the best are Concert in Seattle, and Concert in Japan, both of which contain extended concert versions of songs performed by Coltrane's last band (Rashied Ali, percussion; Alice Coltrane, piano; Pharoah Sanders, reeds; Jimmy Garrison, bass). Concert in Japan embodies in its two long compositions the ideal that Coltrane was working for: the spiritual seeking, the fall from grace, the condition of painful existance are worked out in long and searing solos by Trane and Sanders, the reunion or the rebirth is envisioned in a lyric coda to the main work, either by the piano or by solo saxophone. The very simple and childlike solo at the end of "Peace on Earth" can assume a cathartic effect because of its positioning after the extremely complex music of the first two/thirds of the song.

For those interested in modern jazz, the Hanover Center at Dartmouth College sponsors a John Coltrane Memorial World Music Series, which has first line jazz artists in concert the year round. This summer on August 1 the Sam Rivers Trio will be performing, and on August 15 McCoy Tyner is scheduled for a rare solo performance. Prices with a valid student I.D. are only $2.00. With prices in most clubs pretty high, and the general paucity of music in the area so great, this is an exceptional value.

DAVID LATANE



The Best Gift of All

A Diamond Engagement Ring
It's the one gift she'll never forget.
Illustrations slightly enlarged
Prices start from under $100
You are invited to open a Charge Account at Prestons.
A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

Small speaker. Big price.

If you don't mind paying for it, Interface A can give you just about everything you've ever looked for in a speaker system.

Like accuracy. Clarity. A response range wide enough to handle any recorded program material. Greater efficiency (more sound per watt) than any competitive speaker its size.

All in an enclosure whose volume is a mere 3/4 cubic foot.

How do we get this kind of sound in such a compact size? First, there's our unique vent substitute 12-inch radiator. It goes all the way down to 32 Hz within 3 dB (honestly). Then tweeters mounted front and rear ensure flat response and uniform dispersion. And finally, an integral equalization unit.

So take your favorite record down to your Interface A dealer for a listen. When you decide to buy, bring $450.

AUDIO DEN
100 Dorset Street
Burlington, Vermont
Phone 863-4398
100 DORSET STREET

CLASSIFIED

HOUSE WANTED: Looking for country home to rent within 20 miles of Burlington. Needed as soon as possible. Have Pet. Please call 985-8575.

Wanted: Two bedroom apartment within walking distance to campus. Needed by August or September. Please call (203) 334-7104.

I'm looking for the ideal living situation. Call 862-5137 late evening or early morning or leave message.

Wanted: Four bedroom recycled building apartment – must be 19th century wood panelled and fireplace. P.S. I'm looking for ideal living situation too. Call Steve, 862-5008.

For Sale: 1968 Travelall 12-14 MPG, new tires runs well. $350. Call 864-4972 evenings.

For Sale: Datsun 510 1971. Good condition. Call Steve, 656-2053.

For Sale: Unused Klee & Maxwell Organic Chemistry text, $6. Call 899-2133.

Wanted to buy second hand double bed or water bed. Please call Donna at 656-2053 (days).

1975 Jawa 350 – luggage rack, passenger back rest, enclosed chain, good gas mileage, quiet, dependable, best reasonable offer. Phelps at 864-7244 days.

Route 6 string guitar – 2 years old – good condition – nylon strings $55. Call Sally at 862-6832 for information.

For Sale – '69 blue VW Bug, custom front, many extras, 51,000 miles. $1000 or best offer. 862-3230.

For sale – shell sno-shoe studded winter tires. D78 x 13, will fit vega or pinto, $20/pr. Fischer imperator skis, 195 cm. Refinished past season. VG condition, $40.00. WANTED – used car cassette deck with FM radio. Will trade. 863-3241 after 6:00.

I want to buy a second-hand 35 mm camera, excellent condition. 862-1452.

For Sale – Mozart Festival Tickets. Complete set for 15 concerts. $65.00. Call 658-0843 late evenings.

Classified ads are free. They must be in the Summer Cynic office each Monday before the Thusday issue.

summer cynic

"Blame it on a simple twist of fate."

EDITORIAL

"You've got to be in the right place at the right time to amount to anything great in this world." Or so the old lament goes. Historians and hard-luck cases alike have handed down this supreme explanation to us through the ages as a reason for "great" men arriving at "great" places. But it is all only too obvious to the objective eyes of the press that this fine old adage is not hallowed, but hollow.

The Apollo Soyuz mission astronauts Stafford, Brand, and Slayton are caught in mid-town traffic if we talk of being in the right place at the right time. In a world where freeways have become the longest distance between two places, why is it that the crew's parallel parking exercise will rate "greatness" in the American History books particularly when it's done with a foreign import?

It becomes apparent from this final Apollo mission, and from all the previous "successes" in space, that we have a poor system for grading the "greatness" of such an historical event. Think of it, world-wide press coverage will be showing you every minute of the Apollo-Soyuz docking today and not one camera will be trained on you

It is most often the press coverage of such an event as today's that creates its "greatness." Thus in stunning coverage of the space-shot, we hold to our firm belief in reporting the news as we see it. And in keeping with this spirit, we are pleased to announce our exclusive coverage of next year's "Hotshot" to link up with the Chinese at the earth's core.

Correspondence

Revenge On A Dreg

To the Editor:

If Scott MacKay, "liberal" hatchet-man of the Dreg-Cock-Front (D.C.F.), has been dredged out of a Church Street gutter bloated with Heineken like von Hindenburg after the Armistice, I would like to offer a small suggestion: cynicism now a respectable art among some crowds, and MacKay an acknowledged Da Vinci of said profession, he would be doing Vermont an incalculable favor if he took his bag of cheap-shots-tongue-in-cheek "wit", his poor imitation of Tom Wolfe et al, and caught the next bus (one would hate to see him drive in his condition), back home to Boston, Mass. There he could practice throwing "curves" at the "New Left," (after all, McGovern did capture his state) and besides, Fenway Park is right around the corner...

For those not otherwise familiar, Mr. MacKay is the renowned author of "Open Season," which I hear, may succeed All in the Family in the Saturday Evening prime-time spot; Scott is the liberal's Archie Bunker, no sacred cows in his book. And speaking of cows, he should have stayed with the contented Guernsey's of Kingsland Bay, for his dialogue (or lack thereof), would have been just as meager there, as it apparently was at the Liberty Union convention. If Gene Bergman "echoes... from the bleacher-section of the hall...," where does that leave MacKay?

I do appreciate Scott's detailed description of the "tawdry chairs" and "James Naismith basketball rim" peering from out the shadows, but for analysis, it might have been best had he stopped there – what followed was a strange brew of proferred criticism and sarcastic jibe, benign commentary and old fashioned bullshit, and like oil and water, it just didn't settle...

On the one hand, he touches upon an initial point of serious concern for all of us at all involved in the Left: i.e., "what a political campaign does to the personal life of one who undertakes it as a serious, full-time venture." Yet he quickly retreats "to the bar for some cold Heineken," and, properly annuied, adds an off-hand sexist remark vis-a-vis "Liberty Union's Swinton-Saxe left" to a rhetorical "journalism" void of compassion or honest evaluation of a Party he is forced to admit is dealing with the day-to-day realities of an exploited Vermont populace: utility rates, economic issues, to use his own examples. If Mr. MacKay had bothered more with establishing dialogue with the very people he categorizes as the "dilettante left," with their "grating, lifestyle-chauvinism," instead of his beer, he would not have been so ubiquitous in his reporting. Yes Virginia, there is such a word...

...Ah, where is the pepto bismol when you really need it? MacKay's caricaturizing the Liberty Union members as those who "sleeze by in life" etc., seems more an autobiographical statement than one of fact. If Liberty Union is truly made up of "myopic eggheads," what does that say for the "farmers, cooks, carpenters, waitresses, (and) construction workers," who voted for them in November? The chauvinism is on the other foot, as anyone can glean from Scott's frequent monologue on the "chucks and chicks" of the Green Mountain State. When he describes John Franco as "a slightly schizoid, bifurcated (?) individual, (who) with trippy, open eyes (explained) what he would enjoy doing to the waitress," it was like listening to Jack the Ripper lecture to the Women's Movement. "Ah, the moral opacity of it all..."

Many may consider Scott MacKay's article another crusading vehicle of free speech, that protects the innocent from the ravages of the D.C.F. (his, not mine) and "idealistic humanists" – are you reading this Norman Mailer? But he is not. The typewriter is a phallus for Scott – he'll screw anybody with it. Instead of allowing his audience the chance to judge Liberty Union for themselves, strengths and weaknesses, he prefers to spit out his personal invectives against the Left in America. Has MacKay even heard of PACT (People Acting for Change Together), Vermonters for Justice, or the King Street Youth Center? That is where he will find many of the "organic-farmer-backpack-women's movement-lifestyle chauvinists," whom he brazenly criticizes in sweeping epithets without proof – where have you gone Joe McCarthy?

The danger of MacKay's "style" is that its bourgeois critique is a blanket of unsupported innuendoes, mixed with an all too superficial analysis of the Liberty Union personnel. Scott is a Marxist, but it is Groucho rather than Karl whom he mimics. After his tirade (was it the Heineken or the 'Yankee-Red Sox donnybrook), the author has the gall to add: "One still hopes they (Liberty Union) will somehow come up with a more unified, structured, pragmatic platform of issue-organizing and electoral politics" – what did they campaign on in last November's election, the ten-cent draft and the five-cent ounce, or precisely the issues-oriented platform MacKay desires? Though he may personally prefer the former...

Readers may be swept away by his lengthy dissertation on the failures of Liberty Union (or as he calls them euphemistically, the "inmates of Ken Kesey's Cukoo's nest"), and shake their heads in disgust at such a conspiracy of "hipsters" etc. Does MacKay care? Do liberal "eggheads" care if Vermonters receive a one-sided "analysis" of a convention all in attendance agree could have been better? Ask them when they stagger out of Hannibal's after having blown "mommy and daddy's money" on beer and pizza? And expect no for an answer...

Bob Colodny

The University Store: For The Students?

To the Editor

I wish to bring to your attention the evils of a growing capitalist institution on campus The University Store.

I am told, on the first day of this summer's six week courses, a certain student bought a Plane Trigonometry textbook for the Trigonometry course he had enrolled in. He thought the $10.95 price for this skinny small book was exorbitant but paid it anyway realizing the monopoly of the UVM Bookstore. Four days later, finding out that Trigonometry was beyond his cognitive abilities he decided to return the book. As he pulled the receipt out of his pocket, the "book return lady" advised him that he could only get back half price because his name (four letters that occupied 1/3 of an inch) had been written in the top left hand corner of the inside cover. Shocked, the summer student shook his head and agreed, hoping to recover whatever he could. Unexpectedly, the lady checked the book on a special type of list and advised the student the book was discontinued and offered to pay $2 on its return. Absolutely repulsed, the student went outside, gave the book to the first passerby and is now somewhere in the Ozarks, repressing his initial idea of continuing his education.

This tragic story is quite indicative of the University Store's current policy: rob the student for any cent he's got! It is prevalent in T-shirts (which are on sale for $1.99 because they get $3.69 during the regular semesters), to records (which are higher priced than any record shop in town), to books (which is a monopoly and a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Acts).

The experience that this summer student has encountered has happened to many of us. The University Store has asked for top retail prices on almost every item with virtually no discounts on anything (except $1.99 records which are so unpopular that only a minute portion of the student population buy anyway).

I submit that the University store must be returned to the students. The student council should take over the University Store and make it a "Student Store." They could sell popular items (such as records and books) at discount prices and sell the other items in inventory at their present rate so that they could break slightly ahead (as opposed to the current practice). Unless some radical changes are made in this corrupt capitalist institution, we may all have to resort to the Ozarks (perhaps, a favorable alternative.

Ira Daniel Turkat

Editor's Note: The Summer Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 658-4911.

"Misleading Information" Ghost Writing Summer Session Article

To the Editor:

Last week's edition of the Summer Cynic contained an article entitled UVM Summer Session Rolls Into Full Swing. Wyatt Kash wrote this piece with the assistance of what I regard as misleading information supplied by the Office of Continuing Education. One is left with the impression that the campus is filled with a multitude of knowledge seekers learning from distinguished experts in a resplendent setting. What is not revealed by the article is the more in-depth analysis of the composition of the summer session student body. This picture cannot be depicted by any forced-choice questionaire which limits responses.

I submit that there are a great number of teachers who attend this Summer Session because they are coerced by their respective school systems to obtain additional course credits in order to assure certification. Their quest for more wisdom and insight is therefore externally rather than internally motivated.

An additional segment of the campus is comprised of teachers, former teachers, and a general class of retired people who are taking a pottery course (or some other altruistic three credit offering) simply to be able to take advantage of the relatively low dorm and food rates and therefore enjoy a vacation at a bargain rate.

I would hope that your staff would do whatever possible to supplement the "party line" emanating from official sources in order to provide your readers with what's really happening.

Bret Holmes
North St.
Burlington

VOLUME I
NUMBER 3 4
JULY 17, 1975

Vermont summer cynic

Burlington, Vermont

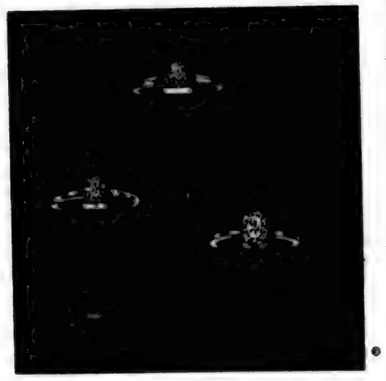
Get In On The Back To School Issue With VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC

Stephen Tanner

This year the VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC will be publishing the UVM back to school issue. This will be a special issue printed to help reorient students to the Burlington area. Eleven thousand copies will be printed. Three thousand will be distributed the fourteenth of August, and the remaining eight thousand will be distributed the first week that students return to campus. The paper will retain the high quality controls evident in the previous issues printed this summer. Advertising rates will be those of the VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC. The deadline date for advertising is August 4th.

For further information contact:

VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC
Billings Center
University of Vermont
658-4911



You have an "Engagement"

to see our Oval Diamonds

Select them "loose" or in a beautiful 14 or 18 karat gold setting. Priced from $150.

Illustrations slightly enlarged

Prices start from under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Prestons.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1894

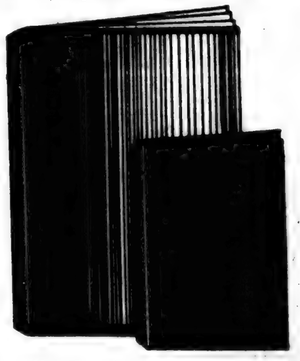
E.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street

Member American Gem Society

The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE The CORNER BOOKSTORE

Cloth Bound Sketch Books

The genuine sketch book with fine white drawing paper expertly bound and protected with hard black cover.



5½" x 8½" now $2.25
8½" x 11" now 3.50
4" x6" new size 1.85

Art Shop — Lower Level
Church and College Streets
Downtown Burlington
658-4554

the corner bookstore

"One-stop shopping for books, stationery and art supplies"

UVM summer cynic

Burlington, Vermont

Editors
Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

Managing Editor
Wyatt Kash

News Editor
Margo Howland

Consulting Editor
Kieras Bell

Columnists
Charley Baldwin, Alen Bernardina, Wayne Blocker, Carl Blumberg, Clair Cutter, Commodore Davidson, Ted Flanagan, John Franco, David Latane, Scott MacKay, Ken Miller, Elaine Peterson, Molina Ripieni, Jay Stevens, Frank Zuss

Photography
John Dillon

Graphics
Terry Marshal
Philip Van Wyck

Typesetter
Susan Ball

Advertising
Martha Ricardson

Layout
Beth Cohen

Composition
KNE

Printer
North Country Printers

Legal Counsel
William Root

Radio Voice
Jacques Gosselin

Transportation
Wheatland

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the Vermont Summer Cynic do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont.

A Seymour Bhuture Production

TABLE OF CONTENTS

THE REVOLUTION IN PORTUGAL: TOWARDS MILITARISM, STALINISM, OR SOCIALIST DEMOCRACY? ..... seven

John Franco points his sword at the Revolution in Portugal and begins cutting to the meat of the two political animals living there now — Portuguese Communist Party and the Armed Forces Movement (MFA).

"It is this writer's contention that the danger in Portugal is not one of a Stalinist form of socialism imposed from the top, but rather a Chile-like coup led either by right wing officers or by the MFA itself.

OPEN SEASON: A DAY WITH THE PROFESSIONAL GOLF TOUR ..... eight

This week Scott MacKay sojourns to Sutton, Massachusetts to witness the Pleasant Valley Country Club's annual PGA tournament for a scrutiny of what people turn out for which sports and a recap of Sunday's star performances. "There is a striking never to be transgressed line between the hard core sports fanatic and the curiosity seeking dabbler... At a professional golf tournament, it's the gap between the clubhouse passholder who watches the play on the barroom television set, and the guy who walks thirty-six holes in the blazing sun, scurrying past the fairway marshall to catch an approach iron shot.

DOO–DAH, DOO–DAH: WHAT'S NEW WITH THE JOHN CASSEL MOB ..... nine

"Push up the adrenaline, get 'em dancing (and sweating), and drinking."

"As crazy as it sounds, a wild-haired musician is the chief liquor salesman..."

"But seeing the same people each time personalizes the performance... you see those familiar faces that make up a family."

Carl Blumberg of Local Diversions notoriety points a sustained camera's eye on a group that is Vermont's Blue Ribbon Boogie Band — John Cassel and Company.

TWO REVIEWS OF OPENING NIGHT: "MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING" ..... thirteen

"...(the play) is an excellent vehicle for spectacle, Director John Milligan has responded with an elegant, streamlined comedy. The evening can be summed up in one word: professional." — by J. Karl Stevens.

"Much Ado About Nothing" is not to be believed, but to be enjoyed and admired. It's plot is not realistic, but contrived to create delightful situations. Nevertheless it reminds us of the miracle of love in our own lives. Cupid (Danny London) begins and ends this Royall Tyler production, blindfolded, aiming his golden arrow not only at the actors on stage, but at those in the audience as well. — by James Howe

ROCKIN' AND ROAMIN' WITH JIMMY "T" AND THE COBRAS ..... fourteen

"Hey Wanda, you want to go down to the Buckboard tonite? I think that guy is playing... we can do some good dancing and drinking. Hey Wanda what you think?" Freeman and Tanner have travelled into the depths of Milton's Buckboard Bar to uncover a sensational local rock 'n roll talent from the old school, Jimmy "T" and the Cobras

SELF PORTRAIT OF AN INMATE — WOMEN IN FOCUS: A COMMENTARY ON THE HUMAN CONDITION ..... sixteen

"In an environment that has established guidelines for the deprivation, dehumanization and frequent arbitrary practices which each work against individual expression, growth and experience; these women are the repressed objects of some of the most depraved and vicious verbal punishments I have ever witnessed." In his continuing series, Charley Baldwin describes the treatment of female inmates at Chittenden County's Community Correctional Center.

DEPARTMENTS

Calendar and Announcements ..... four
News ..... six
Arts & Entertainment ..... twelve
Editorials ..... twenty
You and Your Plant — by Ted Flanagan ..... sixteen
Mad Hatter — by Al Bernadina ..... sixteen
Sweet Betty's Cookin' Corner — by Sweet Betty ..... seventeen Meditation Corner — by Melanie Van Riper ..... seventeen

People with goals manage their money with a Howard Checking Account.

A free book of checks for students.

Turn to the Howard Bank

Member FDIC

Main Office: Main and St. Paul Streets, Burlington
Offices at: Church St., North Avenue, South Burlington, Essex Center, Essex Junction, Richmond, Shelburne, Winooski, St. Johnsbury, Enosburg Falls, Barton, Orleans, Rutland, Montpelier, Wrightsville, Killington, Berlin

CALENDAR AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

In addition to the permanent collection, Fleming Museum now has on view "The Janus Press: 1955–1975," featuring prints by lithographer Claire Van Vliet.

THURSDAY, JULY 24

Children's Film Classics presents Heidi, 1:30 p.m., 101 Votey, tickets at the door.

High School Music Session Symphonic Wind Ensemble Concert, 7 p.m. on the UVM Green.

Who Should Decide the Future of Lake Champlain? – a free study group meeting on Lake Champlain which meets at the Church Street Center, 7:30 p.m., open to all.

Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents Much Ado About Nothing, 8 p.m., Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

FRIDAY, JULY 25

Mozart Festival presents Three Quintets, Royall Tyler Theatre. Ticket information – contact the Lane Office, 656-3418.

7:30 p.m., Open Poetry reading at the Church Street Center, admission free.

SATURDAY, JULY 26

Mozart Festival, Two Concertantes, Shelburne Farms; ticket information – call 656-3418.

Summer Session Excursion to the Craftsbury Common Fiddler's Contest is today. Call Summer Session Office at 656-2085 for more information.

High School Music Session Band and Jazz Band concert at Patrick Gym, probably 8 p.m., but call 656-2135 to confirm the hour and find out about the program.

8 p.m., Our Town, at the Royall Tyler Theatre; box office is 656-2094.

SUNDAY, JULY 27

Mozart Festival Flute Concerti, at Shelburne Farms; ticket information from the Lane Office, 656-3418.

MONDAY, JULY 28

High School Music Session Concert; call 656-2135 for details as to time and place.

"American Experience" summer program: third session begins; register for three week courses at the Registrar's Office, Waterman Building.

1:30 p.m., visiting professor J. Lloyd Trump, director of the Model Schools Project, National Association of Secondary School Principals, speaks on Problems and Prospects of American Secondary Education, at 103 Rowell Bldg. Discussion follows.

International Dinner, 6:30 p.m. at Wright Hall, is Israeli Night this week. $3.25 or $1 plus meal ticket, BYOB.

7:30 p.m., Golden Era of German Film at the Church Street Center; details from 656-4221. This week: two free films.

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents Much Ado About Nothing, Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

TUESDAY, JULY 29

Faculty recital by the High School Music Session, Harris-Millis Lounge; time and program from 656-2135.

Mozart Festival, Classic Sounds, new auditorium, Redstone Campus; for information call 656-3418.

12:30 – 4:30 p.m., creative arts workshop at the Church Street Center, Macrame Your Own Wall Hanging; $4. Details from 656-4221.

1:30 p.m., Children's Film Classics, Prince and the Pauper, admission 50 cents at the door of 101 Votey Bldg. Film repeats Wednesday and Thursday.

7 and 9 p.m., Summer Session Films presents Greta Barbo in Camille, $1 at the door of B-106 Cook Bldg.

CHURCH STREET CENTER FOR COMMUNITY EDUCATION

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS FOR THE WEEK OF JULY 28 – AUG. 2

MONDAY, JULY 28

The Golden Era of German film – 2 free films being shown. 7:30 – 9:30 p.m.

TUESDAY, JULY 29

Macrame Wall Hangings Workshop. 12:30 – 4:30 p.m.

Do Prisons Work? Can Community Corrections Work? Study Group. No charge. 7:30 – 9:30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30

Performance In Park, This week – Stephen Thomas – Classical Guitar. No charge. 12:15.

THURSDAY, JULY 31

Natural Wildflower Walk – 12:30 p.m.

Who Should Decide The Future of Lake Champlain? Study Group – No charge. 7:30 – 9:30 p.m.

7:30 p.m., Do Prisons Work? Can Community Corrections Work? Admission is free to this study group meeting at the Church Street Center. Details from 656-4221.

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Our Town, Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30

12 noon, thesis presentation and defense by John R. Stahl; candidate for the Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology, The Effects of Behavioral Contracting, Behavior Rehearsal and Self-Evaluation Training in the Classroom Behavior of Problem Youth, 238 John Dewey Hall; open to those in the University community who might wish to attend.

Mozart Festival, Winds on the Water; for information call 656-3418.

12:15 p.m., Church Street Center hosts a musical performance in City Hall Park, admission free. This week: classical guitarist Stephen Thomas.

1:30 p.m., Children's Film Classics repeats; see under Tuesday.

7 and 9 p.m., Summer Session Film presents the Marx Brothers in Duck Soup, admission $1 at B-106 Cook Bldg.

7:30 p.m., Summer Session hosts folk dancing at Southwick Ballroom; admission $1.

8 p.m., Shelburne Museum lecture aboard the Ticonderoga, listed as a reminder to ticket holders only, Dr. Richard H. Janson, Architecture as it Happens: H. H. Richardson's Billings Library from Start to Finish.

8 p.m., Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents Much Ado About Nothing, Royall Tyler Theatre; box office 656-2094.

THURSDAY, JULY 31

12:30 p.m., Church Street Center hosts a Natural Wildflower Walk. Details by calling the Center at 656-4221.

CHAMPLAIN SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Our Town – July 26, 29, 31; August 2, 8, 12, 15, 18, 21, 23, 27 and 30*

Much Ado About Nothing – July 24,28, 30; August 1, 9, 13, 16*, 19, 22, 25, 28, and 30.

Timons of Athens – August 6, 7, 11, 14, 16, 20, 23*, 26, and 29.

* indicates matinee.

For information, reservations, box office, Royall Tyler Theatre, phone 656-2094.

ABRAHAM'S

COSMETICS
PRESCRIPTIONS
GREETING
PIPES • CARDS

Vermont's Largest CAMERA CENTER

ABRAHAM'S

111 CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

BREAD AND PUPPET HOSTS RESURRECTION

The Bread and Puppet Theater will present the Fourth Annual Domestic Resurrection Fair and Circus on August 2nd and 3rd at the Bread and Puppet Farm on Route 122 in Glover.

The Fair begins both days at 3 p.m. and features hand and rod puppet shows, marionette shows, masks, exhibits, Punch and Judy, larger-than-life tableaux, mime, Sacred harp singing, country fiddling and chamber music. Performers will include Burt Porter, The Word of Mouth Chorus, The Blackbird Theater. There will be a free sourdough rye bread store, and meals will be provided later in the afternoon.

The Circus will start at 6 p.m. in the natural amphi-theater and end at dusk. It will include the Puppet history of the United States, puppet dragons, horses, birds and oxen, flag dances, clowns and the Bread and Puppet Circus Bands. The Circus will close with a pageant utilizing hundreds of puppets, ten acres of meadow and the setting sun.

The Bread and Puppet Museum, an exhibit of over a thousand puppets and masks, is now open daily until dark at the Bread and Puppet Farm.

The Bread and Puppet Theater has been performing in the United States and Europe for over 12 years. Last year the theater moved from Plainfield to Glover, and this is their first Circus in the Northeast Kingdom. Admission to the Museum, Fair and Circus is free.

VERMONT PHOTO CONTEST

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum at the University of Vermont in Burlington announces the up-coming juried exhibition, "Vermont Photography '75". Cash prizes will be awarded and some final selections will comprise an exhibition that will travel throughout the State.

Aided by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, and co-sponsored by the Vermont Council on the Arts, the competition is restricted to residents of Vermont. Entries must be photographic work of the last two years and will be accepted at the Museum through September 25th. Prior to the judging, all work submitted will be on public view on Saturday, September 27th. The exhibition will be juried by Mr. Nathan Lyons, Director of the Visual Studies Workshop in Rochester, New York. He will give a public lecture at the Museum on Sunday, September 28th at 3:00 p.m. "Vermont Photography '75" will officially open at the Fleming Museum on Friday, October 3rd at 8:00 p.m.

EXHIBITION AT FLEMING

The Robert Hull Fleming Museum at the University of Vermont announces the opening of "The Janus Press 1955-1975" with recent prints by Claire Van Vliet, on Friday, July 25th. The exhibition, which marks the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Janus Press by Claire Van Vliet, will be on view through September 14th in the Main Gallery. Thereafter, it will travel throughout the country to various museums, libraries, and galleries for about two years.

The show brings together a representative selection of texts and images from the thirty-two books that the Press has published, including Jim McWilliams' experimental three-dimensional books.

Because most of Janus' publications are now housed in rare book libraries and private collections, the exhibition provides a unique opportunity to see the range and quality of the work that has been produced.

The exhibition is accompanied by a forty-eight page catalogue by Ruth Fine Lehrer, with sixteen pages of illustrations. An article by Clemens Kalischer on the Janus Press is in the summer issue of Vermont Life.

In the Front Gallery of the Museum there is an exhibition of Ms. Van Vliet's recent lithographs, mainly Vermont landscapes. These works are available for purchase, as well as small prints which are at the Museum Sales Desk.

The public is invited to the opening of the exhibition from 4–7 p.m. on Friday, July 25th. Regular Museum hours are Mondays through Fridays, 8:30 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.; Sundays, 1:00 p.m. – 5:00 p.m.; closed Saturdays and most holidays.

DR. TRUMP TO "SHOW HIS HAND" WITH SECONDARY EDUCATION

The public is invited to attend a lecture and discussion with J. Lloyd Trump, Director of the Model Schools Project of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, held July 28 in conjunction with the Summer Session American Experience Program, "America's Future: Problems and Opportunities." A former Associate Secretary for Research and Development for the NASSP, Dr. Trump has had a significant role in the development of team teaching, differentiated staffing, and the format of large group and small group instruction and individual study. He is currently teaching a course on campus with Dr. Robert Larson, an Associate Professor in the College of Education and Social Services, entitled "Model Schools: Concepts and Practices."

Centering on the problems and prospects of American secondary education, the presentation will focus on the questions: "Who should speak for secondary education?" and "What is and what ought to be the role of foundations, the USOE, educators, laymen, and other groups?"

Dr. Trump will critique several recent national reports proposing ways to reform high school education. Two of the most noted reports are Youth: Transition to Adulthood prepared by the Panel on Youth of the President's Science Advisory Committee and The Reform of Secondary Education prepared by a national commission of the Kettering Foundation. Some of the recommendations from these reports are:

–youth may be better served by specialized rather than comprehensive high schools

–high schools no larger than 500 students may best meet students' needs

–a variety of alternatives for high school completion should be available with students largely responsible for setting their learning goals, identifying activities to meet the goals, and appraising their progress

–the voucher plan should be developed to encourage youths to make their own education decisions.

–schools' curricula should be realigned so that students could take advantage of career opportunities in community.

–credit should be awarded for accomplishments outside the school

–all youths should receive basic global education

–youths should have the option of leaving school after age 16.

The presentation will be held at 1:30 p.m. in 103 Rowell Building. This is near the Given Medical Building.

MORE PR ON UNIVERSITY YEAR FOR ACTION

University Year for Action is an off-campus, student-intern program jointly funded by The University of Vermont, the Vermont State Colleges, and ACTION (the agency which sponsors Peace Corps and VISTA). U.Y.A. projects primarily serve the needs of low-income Vermonters. The program is one of a number of community service-learning programs administered by The Office of Volunteer Programs (OVP) at UVM (Mansfield House) and the Vermont State Colleges.

The Office of Volunteer Programs staff solicit new project proposals from human services agencies throughout Vermont. Typically, projects are developed in the areas of legal services, corrections, business, housing, environmental protection, consumer protection, health care, social services, and education.

Any undergraduate or graduate student at UVM, Johnson, Castleton, or Lyndon who is a full-time student in a degree program is eligible for University Year for Action.

Your commitments as a U.Y.A. volunteer are to serve full-time for twelve months; to integrate the internship year with your academic program and personal learning goals; to live, in so far as is possible, in the community where you serve (UYA provides a "living allowance" during your internship); to remain a full-time/ tuition-paying student in a degree program.

Academic arrangements differ among the four participating colleges. At the University of Vermont, U.Y.A. students earn some of their credit through special, field-related seminars run by OVP Staff and associated faculty. The remaining credit is usually earned through the student's major department, or related department, via independent study arrangements negotiated directly between the student and sponsoring faculty member. In all cases students earn a year's academic credit for their year of service. By working University Year for Action, you have the chance to nourish personal growth and learning needs.

For any further information, stop in or call us at the Mansfield House, 25 Colchester Avenue. Telephone 656-2062 or 656-2063.

HEAT ON IN WILLISTON

The Williston Police Department has advised that the Williston Quarry is legally posted by the landowner, and that the road beside the quarry is a "No Parking at Any Time" zone.

Apparently, individuals and groups have been ignoring both the legal posting and the no parking, and the Williston Police Department requests cooperation of the public and warns that trespassers on the Williston Quarry will be prosecuted; and that violators of the parking restriction on the road beside the quarry will be ticketed and may have their vehicles towed away at the owner's expense.

TENTATIVE MENU FOR ISRAELI NIGHT

Kibbutz table of fruit and vegetables

Fish fillet in orange sauce
Stuffed Potato Pancakes w/ beef
Stuffed Fried Chicken Breasts
Eggplant casserole (Aubergine Casserole)

Cinnamon Jellied Baked Apple
Orange Cheese Tart
Melon

This list is partial. There will also be a soup course.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®

40 Church St. Burlington
Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction

Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far-out reading

NEWS

VPIRG WANTS A CAMPUS WIDE VOTE ON FEE

The Board of Trustees of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) has called for a campus referendum on the question of student support for the student-run consumer lobby. According to VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein, the referendum would either reaffirm or end the lobby group's mandate at UVM.

VPIRG was founded in the fall of 1971 by a group of students who petitioned the College's Board of Trustees to allow the University bursar to act as a collecting agent for the organization's funds.

The college administration is also under pressure from a number of conservative legislators who were stung by the lobby group's successful efforts during the 1975 session "We're going to get VPIRG out of there," said Representative Stuart Rouse, D-Hartford.

Part of the reason for the anti-VPIRG sentiment by the conservatives was the passage of a bill that would require legislative approval before any new nuclear power plants can be built in Vermont. Also many of the conservatives are irked by a scoresheet that the group printed and distributed throughout the state. The VPIRG "Roll Call Report" examines 15 important votes in each house of the General Assembly. Part of the report averaged the voting percentages of each legislator on how they voted for or against the VPIRG position.

UVM represents the largest single source of VPIRG's funding. The legislators who oppose VPIRG hope to pressure the University's administration to change the present funding arrangement with the lobby group. By cutting off the bulk of VPIRG's funds, they hope to cut down the group's activities and destroy the effectiveness of the lobbying organization.

At present, VPIRG is funded by the addition of a VPIRG fee on the student's bill. The college acts as a collecting agent for the three dollar ($3.00) per semester fee. Unlike most student fees, however, the student does not have to pay the fee. The lobby group also offers a week long refund period for those students who paid the fee but want their money back.

Acting UVM President Wayne Patterson said that he personally favors a new referendum on the VPIRG fund agreement. Patterson believes that win or lose for VPIRG, such a vote would clear the air over the controversy. He also said that there will be a discussion of the VPIRG question during next October's Trustees' meeting.

During the first three years of existence VPIRG has, in addition to successfully lobbying for the nuclear power bill, issued a report that led to the passage of an important new law which opened up dental care to many low and middle income Vermonters. VPIRG has also issued reports on small claims court, sex discrimination, Vermont's Consumer Fraud Division, highway planning and other issues of public concern.

ELBOW TO ELBOW IN THE DORMS AGAIN THIS FALL

University Acting President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson said Wednesday that he believes the University will continue to have a problem of overcrowded residence halls this fall.

"It looks like the same situation we had last Fall," said Patterson, noting that the overcrowded conditions are usually eased by the end of the fall semester, and do not carry over into the spring.

The residence halls at the University have had an overcrowding problem every fall for the past four years. At times as many as 300 students have been put on "waiting lists" for rooms, and the crowding of three or even four students into rooms meant for two people have not been uncommon. Students have also had temporary setups in lounges, with five or six students to a lounge.

Earlier this spring, Dean of Students Dr. Keith Miser predicted a lessening of the overcrowding problem, saying that it appeared that only 100 students would be in overcrowded situations.

Miser said "attrition" of students cancelling contracts, students academically ineligible to return and the few students who simply don't show up at the beginning of the semester would lessen the problem. As soon as a contract is cancelled, he said, a waiting student gets the empty space.

Miser said at the end of May that the problem of overcrowding in the residence halls this fall would be the lowest in the past four years.

But President Patterson told a group of legislators touring the campus last week that he believes the overcrowding problem will continue.

"This coming fall we will jam this place. And it will be jammed until some students leave or find other quarters," Patterson had said.

On Wednesday Patterson said, "I made a generic prediction, not a specific one."

Referring to an article in a recent issue of the Atlantic, Patterson said that the population of students that will be in college in 1990 will be roughly one/third less than it is now.

The article by John Silver indicated that the people who will be of college age in 1990 have already been born, and that birth statistics show that the college population in fifteen years from now will be drastically reduced because of the declining birth rate.

"If you translate that from millions of students into schools, that means that 500 colleges roughly the size of Castleton and Middlebury will have to close," Patterson said.

"There will be no students to fill them," he declared.

The University has adopted a "no-growth" policy, which means that the enrollment will be level and that no new dormitories will be built. The college is still talking about buying Jeanne Mance Hall from the Medical Center Hospital, for use as a residence hall.

Patterson said Wednesday that the acquisition of Jeanne Mance was still in the talking stages. The University has leased the building from the Hospital for a residence hall, but learned earlier this year that the hospital had received an offer for the building.

UVM was thus faced with the prospect of either making a counter-offer or losing the use of the building.

Patterson also pointed out that the University of Massachusetts had just built a new medical facility building, despite all the indications of declines in student enrollment. The Atlantic article apparently referred to the building in light of the fact that higher education had badly overbuilt in spite of declining enrollment.

Patterson said in reference to the article that it was foolish to the taxpayers' money to construct new buildings "when you know that they will be closing others down."

—MARGO HOWLAND

SUMMER CLEARANCE SALE

Mon., July 28 - Sat., August 9

Sleeping Bags Cooking Accessories
Parkas Shell Parkas & Clothing Tents
Sleeping Bag Accessories Packs

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.
SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY, LIGHTWEIGHT CROSS-COUNTRY, CAMPING AND MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT
SOUTH BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401 Tel. (802) 864-0473
100 DORSET STREET
Hours: 9:00 am - 9:00 pm, Mon. - Sat.

Ask the Chittenden people.

Chittenden TRUST COMPANY

NEWS

THE REVOLUTION IN PORTUGAL: TOWARDS MILITARISM, STALININSM, OR SOCIALIST DEMOCRACY

Portugal is in the midst of a revolutionary upheaval. Since the outster of the Salazarist regime in April 1974, a regime which stood as Europe's oldest fascist government, Portugal has undergone a series of political crises. The first of the crises were the two unsuccessful coups by the remnants of the fascist right. Then attention shifted, in the beginning of 1975, to the nationalizations of key industries by the Armed Forces Movement (MFA), the holding of elections to the Constituant Assembly, and the latest political crisis involving the closing of the Socialist newspaper Republica by the printer's union, which is alligned with the Portuguese Communist Party. The Republica incident, which has precipitated the withdrawal of the Socialists from their coalition with the Armed Forces Movement, has been the focus of attention in recent weeks.

Ever since members of the Portuguese Communist Party received cabinet portfolios with the MFA government, the analysis by the American press of the Portuguese situation has been predictably lousy. The most prevalent analysis is to draw a parallel between the Portuguese situation and the so-called "Prague model." This model, whereby members of the Communist Party sit in strategic cabinet posts and by various maneuvers of intrigue, systematically eliminate members of the opposition from power, was dubbed after the takeover of the Czech government by the Soviet backed Communist Party in 1948. The Cold Warriors, hounded into obscurity by the Vietnam War, are again coming out of the woodwork, pointing to the authoritarian tactic of the PCP, especially the closing of Republica, as evidence of Portugal's forced march to socialism. Eric Severeid, long an alumnus of the Rockefeller's exclusive Century Association club, trundles out his Cold Warrior headpiece to warn of Communists plotting to wreck Western European democracy from London to Lisbon, financed by Moscow gold and implemented by the KGB. Of course the 50 year old fascist regime in Portugal, a regime which saw 40% illiteracy, destitute poverty, a state-imposed church, and most of the land and manufacturing wealth concentrated in the hands of a few families of the old nobility, somehow never found itself subject to the wrath of Severeid's commentary.

Despite the hypocrisy of such liberal commentators, who really are more concerned with the preservation of class privileges than with the establishment of democratic institutions, key questions concerning the course of radical social and economic change, and the course of social democracy, are at the center of attention in Portugal. It is this writer's contention that the danger in Portugal is not one of a Stalinist form of socialism imposed from the top, but rather a Chile-like coup led either by right wing officers or by the MFA itself.

Who's Running the Show?

What is at the heart of the matter in Portugal is not so much the machinations of the Portuguese Communist Party, although they are a key element, but the relationship of forces released by the overthrow of the Salazarist regime. The question is, who represents the specific gravity of the Portuguese government, and the answer is the Armed Forces Movement, which is composed mainly of the officer corps of the old fascist apparatus. To contend that the PCP is controlling or manipulating the MFA is to say it is the tail which wags the dog. To draw an analogy to the Prague model is way off base, because in 1948 the Soviet Red Army already had state power, and simply sat back allowing the Czech CP to do its thing. But in Portugal, the Armed Forces Movement, not some occupying army nor the Communist Party, holds state power. It has been the MFA which has steered the course of state decision. And in light of recent threats to ban all political parties, it becomes clearer every day that the MFA is solidly in the driver's seat. The MFA is not subordinating itself to the PCP, rather it is the other way around.

These officers of the former fascist junta now proclaim themselves in favor of progressive social reforms, some even claiming to favor socialism, and so they have won the uncritical endorsement of the Communist Party. But the hitch is, that the armed forces of Chile too proclaimed themselves to be progressive and democratic, pointing to a tradition of non-interference in the affairs of the Chilean democracy. It was these same officers, many of whom had only weeks earlier served in the "Socialist" presidential cabinet, who overthrew Salvador Allende.

If in fact the MFA is in command, is it a motor force of social transformation, or is it simply a capitalist government taking a long tack to the left in response to a massive popular upheaval, flanking the mass movement in order to defeat or contain it? If the latter is the case, then the Communist Party's subservience to the MFA, and their notorious authoritarian policies assume an entirely different complexion. Rather than bamboozling the MFA leadership into a Stalinist system ala the Prague model, the PCP is in fact being used by the MFA to prevent the social upheaval from becoming a full-blown revolution. Such a role has been played many times by the Stalinists before.

This policy of forming a "Popular Front," that is an alliance between Social Democrats, Communists, and 'progressive' elements of the ruling classes, has been pursued by the Communists since the Nazi victory in Germany. Such coalitions, which usually mean support by the left for liberal [illegible] without direct [illegible] have historically involved civilian governments. The Portuguese MFA is the latest twist in this phenomenon, but it is a bit different in that it is a military government. The Velasco government in Peru is much the same as the MFA. However, no such Popular Front coalition has resulted in victory for the left, and many have gone down to brutal defeat, such as the one in Chile. Arthur Schlesinger commented, "Portugal going Communist is not a happy prospect. It is also a considerable exaggeration. The immediate prospect is rather the establishment of a military regime using the PCP for counsel and support."

The Battle for Production

The MFA has been in the leadership of few of the mass mobilizations in the past year. When General Spinola attempted a coup in September, it was more the spontaneous response of the general population, rather than the initiative of the MFA, which nipped the coup in the bud. One MFA general explained, "We were bypassed by the people. This was extremely dangerous in my opinion... It is impermissible that the people's forces came to take over a task that belonged to the forces of order." In March, the MFA decided to nationalize a few key industries. However, it did not initiate the nationalization drive in this situation either. The employees of the major Portuguese banks had seized them and demanded they be nationalized under workers' control. Only then did the government accede, nationalizing the banks, insurance companies, steel, oil, and transportation, trying to take the cutting edge off the demand of the lower strata of the population to dismantle the wealth of the monied classes. Nationalizations were not envisioned in the economic plan published early this year by the MFA. That was relegated to the distant future.

The Communist Party has backed the MFA right down the line. It played a key role for the government in busting the Postal Workers' strike in June 1974, and has since assumed the role of maintaining labor discipline in the economy with its well-oiled and strictly organized machine. Any workers calling for strikes have been labeled by the CP as "pseudo-revolutionary leftists" who are actually trying to provoke the right. Even though the vast bulk of the economy remains in the hands of the old monied interests, and that the nationalizations haven't been as extensive as those in Britain, France, or Scandinavia, the CP is calling on the trade unions to cool it, and to win the "Battle for Production." The MFA apparently feels that the CP is the best instrument in enforcing its labor discipline.

The Republica Crisis

In the course of instituting this labor discipline, which is designed to improve the international competitive position of Portugal's economy, which is plagued with 35% inflation and 8% unemployment, the CP launched a drive to take hold of most of the country's news media, to serve as a mouthpiece of the MFA's policies. As a part of that drive, the Communist sympathizing Printers' Union demanded that control of the Socialist Party newspaper Republica be turned over to them. The printers contended that the paper's editorial policy was resulting in a loss of circulation, and that the printers had a voice in that policy. But the issue was hardly one of workers' control, and quickly became one of freedom of the press. Even the Communist parties in France and Italy, which are on the verge of taking cabinet posts in their own bourgeois governments, were compelled to criticize the PCP's heavyhanded tactics.

Though the Socialist Party played a progressive role in mobilizing support for democratic rights, which are much desired by the Portuguese people after a half century of fascism, the Socialists have been as guilty of collaboration with the MFA as has the CP. The political program of the SP is very timid. Its politics are of the Willy Brandt-Harold Wilson variety, having forsaken socialism for the pump priming of Keynesianism. In fact, the Socialists are as responsible for the strangulation of the press as anyone else. Socialist Party member Raul Rego served as the first information minister of the MFA when it began its crackdown in June of 1974. He even presided over the sanctions levied against a paper of his own party. Nor is Socialist Party leader Mario Soares that vehement a defender of democracy, as long as he can pursue a career with the MFA. He commented, "One thing that the Communist Party leader said is correct. That is, if there is a completely military government it doesn't mean that a military dictatorship has been established in Portugal. The government can be military, but if public freedoms are respected, if we have pluralism in the media, elections in the unions, and municipalities... there will in fact not be a military dictatorship here in my opinion."

Direct Democracy

After the considerable vituperation between the Socialist and Communist Parties concerning the fate of Republica, the MFA threatened to ban all political parties on the grounds that it was tired of all the bickering. In the place of parties, the government proposed to establish a system of what it called "direct democracy" between itself and the mass organizations such as

YARN CELLAR
Come in and see all the PARAGON CREWEL KITS
yarn cellar
THE ROYAL
96 Church Street
Burlington

Experience the only Direct/Reflecting® bookshelf speaker

The new BOSE Model 301. The only bookshelf loudspeaker to provide spacious, clear sound comparable to the top-rated BOSE 901® and 501 speakers; that allows you to adjust sound performance according to your specific room acoustics, taste, or recordings; and the only bookshelf speaker that does all this for under $100.

The BOSE Model 301 bookshelf speaker. Only an audition will tell you what an extraordinary sound experience it provides. BOSE

Lafayette RADIO ELECTRONICS
Listen to us, you can't go wrong.
157 Pearl St., Essex Jct.

OPEN SEASON: A DAY WITH THE PROFESSIONAL GOLF TOUR

What sick specimen of humanity will arise at five a.m. on a July Sunday morning, violently hung over from an evening of delightful decadence with the John Cassel Band, umpteen bottles of Schlitz, and drive nearly six hundred miles round trip to an obscure Massachusetts hamlet for the pleasure of walking ten miles in intermittent rain to watch seventy-four professional golfers chase miniscule white balls around a neatly manicured former cow pasture? Well, I did it. What's more, I'd do it again.

••••••••••

The Sports mosquito bites many Americans, primarily male, early in life. Like its malarial counterpart, this bug's tremors can linger into ripe old age, can cling to one's consciousness from crib to coffin. Out of the womb into a world of tossing baseballs with the old man in the backyard, of endless afternoons spent flipping and bartering bubble-gum cards – those "I'll tradeja two Pumpsie Greens for one Rookey Calavito" deals that cherubic eight-year olds ponder with all the conniving earnestness of so many nascent Kissingers. Through a life of pre-dawn peewee hockey practices and smelly locker rooms and the caddy shack and Little League and futile squirts of Firm-Grip on too small for basketball fingers. Homework? Never before perusing the sports page. Math? Yeah... better learn how to divide this year in school so I can figure a batting average. Years in pursuit of the American Jock dream of becoming the next Bobby Orr, Arnold Palmer, Willie Mays, Johnny Unitas, Walt Frazier.

"The Sports mosquito bites many Americans, primarily male, early in life. Like its malarial counterpart, this bug's tremors can linger into ripe old age, can cling to one's consciousness from crib to coffin."

Only to graduate one day to the frustrated jockdom of the intramural game gym rat, the weekend hacker, the industrial bowling league, the municipal tennis court. To become one of the legions who hide from mid-terms, rotten politics, lovers' quarrels, unemployment statistics, dead-end jobs, car notes, bad marriages – The Real World – in front of a television set, eyes rivited to grown men playing children's games. The barroom critics of Howard Cosell and Curt Gowdy, the fellows who can tell you who the New York Giants traded to San Francisco for an aging, bald quarterback named Y. (Yelberton) A. (Abraham) Tittle (Guard Lou Cordileone).

The denizens of ancient, cavernous Boston Garden or glittering, fashionable Madison Square; it matters naught. For these people, athletic events are not "happenings," akin to rock concerts or political campaign rallies, but rather a part of oneself, a strand, however gossamer, to one's past. There is a striking, never-to-be-transgressed line between the hard core sports fanatic and the curiosity seeking dabbler.

One can visualize the difference in every sport. At Fenway Park or Shea Stadium, it is the gulf between the Double Knits in the box seats, at the ballgame to impress a date or a prospective sales client and the buck-fifty bleacher dweller, with a smuggled six-pack and scorecard, raving about a three-six-three double play. At a UVM hockey game, it is the dicotomy between the late-arriving IBM execs in the best seats, who only want to see the Harvard, B.U. and UNH games and the guy who cashed in all his bottles to buy a grandstand ticket, and yet still waits three hours in a snaking, football-field length line in below zero Arctic chill to snatch a decent seat. The contrast between the sorority jockette who never saw a hockey game before she came to college, and doesn't know the difference between a hockey puck and a Smith Brothers licorice cough drop, and the true fan who can discern a hooking penalty before Giles Threadgold does, can explain the difference between a boarding infraction and a charging call and still speaks glowingly of the idyllic days of the six team N.H.L. At a professional golf tournament, it's the gap between the clubhouse pastholder who watches the play on the barroom television set, and the guy who walks thirty-six holes in blazing sun, scurring past the fairway marshall to catch an approach iron shot. The non-trespassable border between the real hacker-tour follower and the groupie-dilletante who thinks a fade is what happens after too many martinis.

This is not to claim that the American sports cult is the second coming. No encomiums or panegyrics in fulsome praise to that. If Marx were alive today, he could reasonably perceive that sports have supplanted religion as the opium of the masses. There is the depraved, wired aspect of all this, the brutal cognizance that the individual who buries himself in sports is no different from the jaded, eternally bored suburban housewife who live a vicarious existence via the TeeVee soap opera.

But enough of all this. If you want more of this genre of sports journalism, read Roger Kahn's Boys of Summer, or catch his monthly column in Esquire. He is far more proficient at this than I. Even uses Greek words better...

••••••••••

Sutton, Mass., July 20 – Billed as the "Golf Capital of New England," the Pleasant Valley Country Club sits on a few hundred acres in the undistinguished central Massachusetts village of Sutton. Designed in the early 1960's by a hustling Thompson, Connecticut Racetrack-Golf Course entrepreneur, it may well be New England's finest test of championship golf. Since 1965, it has been the site of an annual PGA tour stop, and has also hosted numerous women's LPGA professional tourneys. It is a seven thousand yards plus long layout, replete with huge, well-trapped greens and strategically placed water diversions. The course plays to a par of seventy one; thirty-six on the front side, thirty-five on the challenging back nine. The last five finishing holes (par 3 - 4 - 3 - 4 - 5) are tortuously difficult, and they set the stage for dramatic, horserace Sundays where the lead changes hands like common stock on the floor of the New York Exchange. Pleasant Valley draws throngs of over forty thousand per day to what is one of only two New England tour tournaments, the other being the Greater Hartford Open, held at the Weathersfield Country Club, a mere pitch-and-putt course compared to lush Pleasant Valley's mean doglegs and ten thousand square foot greens.

The field of golfers appearing at Pleasant Valley this year is less than outstanding. Not participating in this $200,000 purse tourney are the familiar names of golfdom's pantheon – Johnny Miller, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nichlaus and Gary Player are all absent. But one genuine conqueror of the world's golf links, this writer's favorite shotmaker, Lee Trevino, is only three shots off the lead on this overcast, drizzly Sunday. The story of the Mexican-American Trevino, the happy-go-lucky pro from El Paso, is one of the unadulterated rags-to-riches tales that abound in the annals of American sporting heroes: For Trevino's enormous success on the pro circuit is as improbable as a Horatio Alger-dime novel yarn come true, as if the overweight girl with terminal acne who couldn't get her cousin to accompany her to the junior prom really could win the Miss America pageant two years later. Like the outlaw heroes of Hollywood's version of the wild west days, it is sometimes difficult to separate the fact from the fantasy in assessing "Super-Mex's" trek to stardom.

Trevino was a lowly assistant professional at a Texas driving range when he first qualified for that Mount Everest of the golfing world, the United States Open. He is said to have played his first Open without a matched set of clubs, checking out of his motel every morning in case he bombed out or missed the fifty-four hole cut, thus evading paying for another night he could hardly afford. He finished around fortieth in a field of the world's topflight golfers and quietly packed home for Texas to assume his driving range job. He never had a lesson in his life, or a college golf scholarship or a moneyed sponsor to help him along the way. So the next year, his wife sent in the qualifying entry fee of fifty dollars, behind his impoverished back, and Trevino again got past the regional qualifying roadblock to win a spot in the U.S. Open proper. He ended up third, cashed his prize check of six-thousand dollars, and wisely decided to follow the tour. He has since won eighteen tour tournaments, including five coveted major championships – two British Opens, two U.S. Opens and a PGA Championship. Even his mode of play reveals his school of hard knocks upbringing. The colorful, humorous Trevino possesses a swing so flat and choppy that he resembles more a plumber on his day off than an internationally acclaimed star.

Today Trevino is playing (with few exceptions, pro tournaments are played with threesomes) with lanky, bespectaled Habe Irwin, a mild-mannered chap whose accountant-like appearance belies the Winged Foot U.S. Open Championship he holds title to. The other member of the triumverate is Mark Hayes, a virtually unknown tour Rabbit yearning for his first victory. "Rabbit" is professional golfing parlance for a fellow who plys his trade in obscurity, one who chases week after week across the continent in search of a paycheck, only to usually not garner enough cash to pay his caddy fee. These are the fellows who are not content with the comfortable sinecure of a club professional's job, men who refuse to relegate their golfing careers to giving Wednesday afternoon clinics to old ladies. They would rather scratch and starve and sleep in fleabag motels and eat at McDonald's in quest of becoming the next Arnold Palmer. Obviously, most of them fail miserably, but this is little deterrent to the Rabbit. Their tribe has actually increased in recent years, to the point where almost two hundred of them compete with the established pros for a paltry thirty or so pay checks. And, the Golf tour, unlike other team professional sports, still lends itself to the individualistic, Social Darwinistic paradigm of make-it-on-your-own-or-perish.

Trevino has had an inconsistent tournament through the first three days. He carded a fine seventy on Thursday and a magnificent five-under par sixty-six on Friday only to limp home with a dismal seventy-four on Saturday. The happy Mexican started the Sunday closing round in winning form, by firing two birdies in his first five holes. His tee-to-green game was perfect, and he dropped two twelve foot putts on the birdie holes. When he is hot and playing like the champion he is, his pace quickens, unlike the pensive, dilatory Nicklaus, who will study a shot with the exactitude and intensity of a general assigned the task of planning an invasion on the scale of D-Day's Normandy Landing.

But this was not to be Trevino's afternoon. He three-putted the tricky eighth hole for a bogey, and on the picturesque par three fourteenth, missed his only green of the day by dumping his tee shot in the trap. Left with a sharply inclined sidehill lie, the feisty Trevino's par try slipped past the hole and he lost another precious shot to Almighty Par, that irreversible supreme court of golf. Except for a masterful, backspinning seven-iron approach over the pond on seventeen, and an ensuing easy birdie putt, Trevino was not to break par again this afternoon. He eventually ended up in fifth place, earning $6150 for his four-day labors.

The seventeenth hole at Pleasant Valley is often the bane of a golfer who is in contention on Sunday. It is a narrow, winding dog leg par four, bordered by forest on either side, featuring an immense green that is stridently guarded by a pond. The seventeenth invariably produces more bogeys than birdies, especially when the pin placement is tucked on the front of the green, a mere fifteen yards from the ever to be avoided water. As the lead bounced back and forth all day, it was once again the mighty seventeenth pocket that was to emerge the arbiter of victory.

"The story of the Mexican-American Trevino's, the happy-go-lucky pro from El Paso, is one of the unadulturated rags-to-riches tales that abound in the annals of American sporting heroes."

After seventy holes, Mac McLendon, a veteran tour unknown who has never won an official tournament, and rookie Roger Maltbie came to seventeen tied for the lead. Both cracked perfectly executed second shots to the pin, within birdie range. Roger Maltbie exercised the touch of a billard player with his soft, rolling putt that broke right to the center of the hole for his birdie and a slim one-shot lead. In the next threesome, the gaunt, lean McLendon read the putting surface precisely, only to stroke the ball ever so slightly past the hole. His putt lipped the cup like a basketball spinning around the rim and rolling out; his par left him the bridesmaid, albeit one with a second place prize of $22,000. Ah... so near and yet so far.

For the twenty-four year old Maltbie, it was truly a triumphant day. His sizzling sixty-six, one stroke off the course record, earned him a sure victory, but it was the manner in which he carried it off that was most striking. He played the last seven stingy Pleasant Valley holes in a belief-stretching four under par, parlaying this Arnold Palmer vintage Sunday charge into his second straight tour victory. Maltbie, the rugged Californian who was Jim Plunkett's back-up quarterback in high school, had realized his dream. Plus he was $40,000 richer. No longer is Maltbie one of the hordes of Rabbits fated to the golfing equivalent of political exile. He was rather, on this Sunday, the reigning Sultan of the profesional golf tour. Until, that is, next Thursday, when the pro golfer's mad pursuit of fame and fortune begins anew.

–SCOTT MacKAY

WHAT'S NEW WITH THE JOHN CASSEL MOB

The limes, lemons and oranges are all cut, waiting to be pushed hurriedly into the collinses, gin-and-tonics and whatever else later thirsts will demand. The chairs and tables are arranged almost in vain, because later on, all the careful arrangement of seating will be meaningless; destroyed by the necessity of expanding the dancing area and the social requirements of fitting more than four people at a table.

Just before eight o'clock, the lights are dimmed. All is in waiting.

They start slowly, restrained jazz slowly raising their musical temperatures, conserving their energies for the final onslaught. There are still many empty chairs; waitresses can still catch a cigarette, bartenders can sit back on the bottle coolers as if it's going to be a dull, dull evening.

Will they draw tonight?

Around nine-thirty, Debbie, Ellen and Nancy saunter up to the cramped stage as Tommy Steele is putting the finishing touches on a bubbling saxophone solo during "Satin Doll." Doo-doo; doo-doo-doo-doo, doo-doo, (higher) doo-doo, doo-doo, doo-doo, doo-doo, "My Satin Doll."

As if suddenly called, the customers flow in. A few find their way out to the dance floor. It is still slow, still restrained. But the tables and barstools fill up rapidly. An insane momentum is building. The alcohol flows like some mystical fountain of youth, as long as you can cough up for it. There is more yelling, more laughing, more clapping, more footstomping as booze and music catalyze into some weird magic. Fist meets jaw occasionally. "I haven't got any money; I've got to find some guy to buy me drinks." The dance floor is packed now; it looks like fun when you're watching, sitting away from it all. Once you try to dance, it is a rugby match played without rules, elbows are flying, another dancer is keeping time stamping on your foot. The air conditioners can't recirculate cooling air fast enough; the exhaust fan is running on high speed but can't pull enough cigarette smoke out of the room to prevent your eyes from watering. It's hot. It's smoky. You rub your eyes and you feel the sweat flowing. But perspiration is no sin now. The bartenders are working entirely by reflex by now – "What can I get you?", glass, ice, bottle, oneandtwoandthree, mix, shake oneandtwoandthree, and "That'll be..." An infrequent quiet moment to be savored is broken by the RING, RING, RING of some garish pinball machine gone electronically mad. Last call. LAST CALL? You're kidding. Nope. The momentum still builds. Dancers are overflowing into the aisles; chairs and tables are abruptly pushed away. Where does it end? 1:50 and three-quarters of the place is dancing. Doesn't the Vermont Statutes Annotated or the State Liquor Regs say something about closing times? It is a Disneyland of no hangovers, no empty pockets, no front-door refusals or breath tests tonight. It's a long way to the concern of daylight. THEY'RE STILL DANCING! The bartenders are oblivious with six hours of dirty glassware staring at them. "CANEYEGETANNUDDER?" "Uh-uh." THEY'RE STILL DANCING! And it all goes on until 1:55 when the final drum beat fades into cheering and yelling and clapping and "MORE!"

"MORE!" "MORE!"

"MORE!" "MORE!" "MORE!" "MORE!"

Mere seconds to two o'clock. A thin, graying, spectacled figure steps up to a microphone. Smiling devilishly, he pushes sweat-weighted hair off his brow and brings a shining trumpet to his lips. On top of all the cheering and yelling and clapping, the trumpet screams out the familiar fanfare-reveille of those opening bars of "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy." The cheers and shouts and yells and applause are washed away by "HE WAS A FAMOUS TRUMPET MAN DOWN CHICAGO WAY/HE HAD A BOOGIE STYLE NO ONE ELSE COULD PLAY/HE WAS THE TOP MAN IN HIS CRAFT/THEN HIS NUMBER CAME UP AND HE WAS GONE WITH THE DRAFT..."

They're all dancing again.

So goes an evening with the John Cassel Band.

••••••••••

Sunday afternoon and my notes are a mess. "26. Paul Asbell U. of Chicago divinity dropout grew up South Side Chicago."

All week I wrestled with this article. The question: "How to write feature on musicians I have known and loved for eight months?" All week long, "I'll do it, I'll do it," ever trying to convince myself. Finally, on Saturday, "The problem is that I'm trying to write a fan-mag piece." You know the stuff:

WHAT'S NEW WITH THE JOHN CASSEL MOB

—"Somewhere along the way, graying curly-haired John Cassel went sour on the whole schmear: the whole trip complete with Yale University, singing with the Whiffenpoofs, sailing on Long Island Sound, writing a novel." Or, "Back in his native North Carolina, Tommy Steele..." Or, "After teaching music in New Orleans and Boston, coaching swimming at Tulane University, and two children, Al Zanzler picked up his trumpet, chortled that devilish laugh of his, and..." And what? If you want to know, go out and organize a fan club a la 1964.

Yes, Skeeter Camera, percussionist, is also an auctioneer. Yes, Perry Cooper, soundman, used to oversee the assembly of nuclear reactors for atomic submarines. Yes, Debbie Toen is originally from Tappan, N.Y. Yes, Nancy Austin is originally from the Philadelphia area. Yes, Ellen Powell used to play banjo with the two other ladies in a band called Soapy Toad and the Nightcrawlers. Yes, Billy Patton plays a fretless Fender precision bass guitar.

Pray for me. Pray that this doesn't turn out like something for the fan magazines. Forgive the displays of admiration, for they are genuine. Amen.

••••••••••••••

Push up the adrenaline, get 'em dancing (and sweating), and drinking. A simple equation for anyone in the so-called nightclub business. There is one helluva profit in pouring draft beer. Take it on faith, the more you pour...

Good entertainment can be, at the very least, an enhancement to bar business. At best, it is the obviously most important factor in predicting how much business the bar does in a given evening. In clubs like The Sting, Red Dog, Silver Keg, and Winery, the quality of the entertainment is the obvious draw; often more important than the price of a drink. As crazy as it sounds, a wild-haired musician is the chief liquor salesman, in terms of initially attracting the crowd, keeping the crowd there, and encouraging them to drink. After that, all the bartender does is keep up with the demand.

It is unfair to call the John Cassel Band a bar band. They are familiar to most because the largest part of their work happens to be in bars; they can certainly pack a place, and generate the excitement to keep the crowd there and keep them thirsty. Yet I often associate "bar band" with a highly-variable, unoriginal musical recitation of some idolized overplayed, radio song, devoid of improvisation, confined to the mechanical operation of musical Xerography. Very often, the musicians are no more than a bunch of people more interested in performance for the sake of performer's ego, the salving of the "musician's" spirit by screaming crowd and screaming amplifier. Originality and improvisation are squelched by the "music consumer's" need for the familiar, and the musician's need for the acceptance of the music consumer. Very often, the least imaginative is the most successful. Too often, bar bands confine themselves to the safety of compositions by Jagger-Richard, Allman, Taupin-John, etc. It happens to work, and work well. But... it is not musicianship, it is the mastery of the audio Xerox machine.

If that is a bar band, the JCB ain't even close. True, the occasional Top-40 number sneaks in, usually by way of saxplayer Tommy Steele, but it is in the form of a imaginative interpretation of tunes by Stevie Wonder ("Sunshine of My Life") or Marvin Gaye ("What's Goin' On?").

A bar band couldn't warm up the crowd on a chilly February evening in Patrick Gymnasium this year. The usual Cassel Band style slowly built a mood that ended up in sheer pandemonium just "warming-up" for the Earl Scruggs Revue that night. If the JCB did anything, they made themselves a hard act to follow. Scruggs' eminence on the banjo, inappropriately backed by the loud (albeit musically-imaginative) guitars played by his sons, was disappointing. The Scruggs sons' rock artistry cancelled out their father's banjo artistry and the sum-total was uninteresting. Despite Cassel trumpetman Al Zanzler's vain attempts to play over a dead microphone, the nine members of the John Cassel Band easily upstaged the Scruggs outfit in a memorable performance. Not that they did it deliberately; it just happened that way.

Many in Northern Vermont have been affected by an evening's magic created by the John Cassel Band. The JCB following (especially in Burlington) has grown from the small admiration of a cult to [illegible]ng "voguish" widespread popularity. In other words, the "cult" characterization still rings true. Jerry [illegible]se, owner of Stowe's Baggy Knees (another must stop for the JCB) told me over the phone, "They are) one of the more popular bands in awe... Just popular among a lot of people who've been in town a while... Cassel comes in and brings a different group (clientele) that won't generally come out." Variations in local popularity notwithstanding, for many clubgoers, the JCB provides a musical smorgasbord that excites the musically-hungry, providing a terpsichorean menu that runs from Duke Ellington and Glenn Miller to the more contemporary Dan Hicks and Junior Wells and in the meantime, throwing in some mighty-fine original stuff.

••••••••••••••

"The Call of the Wild," Vermont country living, has always attracted artists of all types. There are difficulties, i.e. feeding oneself (a friend of mine always says "You've got to afford to be poor"), but breathable air will always attract artists more than the opportunities in urban areas. Aside from limited opportunities for pecuniary rewards, the newcomer-artist must also learn to live with his neighbors. An artist's work may not always be comprehended by the folks next door, so there may be problems. The effort must be there.

The Cassel Band's members have all adapted themselves to the requirements of living with the neighbors in a rural community, avoiding that MacKayism, "lifestyle chauvinism," the limiting of relationships to those fitting your requirements of similiarities in backgrounds: education, interests, and where-you-came-from. Drummer Skeeter Camera is establishing a growing reputation as an auctioneer in Franklin County. Paul Asbell is teaching guitar. But the community relations aspect is best illustrated by the East Fairfield Independence Day celebrations.

This past Fourth of July was the fourth outing for the John Cassel Band's fundraising party for the East Fairfield Volunteer Fire Department. Lasting all day, and well into the night, the JCB and several other bands play in the park at the town's center, entertaining hundreds of Old and New Vermonters. It is not just an opportunity for a bunch of beer-crazed hipsters to gather and raise hell. This past Fourth, East Fairfield Fire Chief John Irish says, "We done well... We figure we're gonna make a thousand... We really appreciate what he does for us."

••••••••••••••

UVM researcher (female): "He looks rugged."
UVM prof (male): "Awww... what good is he? All he can do is play the piano and make money."

Saturday, July 5. It is right around noon and glaring sunlight illuminates the two hundred or so acres of John Cassel's place nestled in the hills four miles south of the town of East Fairfield. Two Afghan hounds wander around the barn he's living in as we finish coffee — before going up to look at the house.

"The house" burned down a while back. Up in flames went John's writings and a major part of the stock of The Price of Love, the Philo Record's LP made several years ago. As far as the album went, the fire may have been a blessing in disguise. The recordings were inconsistent and spotty, yet it still was a John Cassel album. A new album is in the works, recordings were started at Earth Audio this spring. (Nightcrawler Nancy Austin is recording a radio commercial Monday, as Earth Audio's Mike Couture tells me over the phone that the new album will be out October first, that John himself has still to add some tracks to the taping, and there is no title yet.)

The house is being rebuilt slowly, hopefully ready by the coming winter. There will be a piano in this room and this is the guest room and that there we're gonna put another stained glass window. The view is amazing. Only one neighbor's house can be seen. (Now if I had a place like that...)

A walk around the vegetable garden. I pick a few radishes. John is walking around like a freaked-out thirtyish country squire admiring the garden's progress.

The graying, curly-haired countenance of John Cassel peering over an upright piano in some Vermont bar or nightclub is a familiar image. A native of Ridgewood, N.J., Cassel came to Vermont eight years ago. After a B.A. in English Literature from Yale, he undertook writing a novel. There was a period of travelling through Europe, earning his keep playing piano, and writing. A Sixties musical version of a budding Hemingway or Fitzgerald, tempered by an admiration for the dramatic works of Samuel Beckett and Eugene Ionesco. The Novel was accepted, on the condition of extensive re-writing. John was not too keen about the re-writing, convinced that it would subtract from what he was trying to say. Instead, he put it aside, "to cool" in his words. It never cooled. The manuscript was a casualty of the October 1973 fire which destroyed the lovely house in Lost Nation Valley.

The band may carry his name, and frequently perform a John Cassel original like "Sap Beer," "Blowin' Away in the Country," "Canadian Border," or "Just One Step Ahead," but the Cassel persona is remarkably absent. Surprisingly, the John Cassel Band is not a military-disciplined outfit ruled by the iron hand (and artistic ego) of John Cassel. Far from it. It is more the opposite; a relaxed, benign anarchy seems to rule the group. The JCB's output is less a function of its title star, but more a result of an outwardly-visible sense of musical consensus among band members. Debbie Toen told me that John is the leader, but, in her words, "mediator."

As pleasant as this "benign anarchy" sounds, it could ultimately prove destructive. As a romantic, devil-may-care symbol as the modern musician is, there must be a tight discipline between band members holding them together, compelling them to constantly search out new and untried directions. However sweet popularity is, however joyous the final hour of a JCB gig in the Sting or anywhere else, the band is close to a point where they must offer something new to keep their local admirers. Many friends of mine (and admirers of the band) have said recently that they still enjoy the mood of JCB performances, but they are wearying of the sameness of the content of those performances, the predictability of a repertoire everyone knows. But getting nine or ten people together to work out new songs has to rank as a helluva chore when they are scattered around E. Fairfield, Bakersfield, Waterbury and Chelsea.

Aside from the impending release of a new album, there are some interesting scheduled events coming up. The first week in August, the John Cassel Band is playing a number of engagements on Martha's Vineyard. There is also the coming outdoor festival at Burke Mountain. There are inklings of some other out-of-state engagements.

One very interesting development has been finalized. This past spring the John Cassel Band was added to the Vermont Council on the Arts' Touring Artists Register. According to David Crook, VCA Director, the Register "aims to help develop an audience... many young performers must sustain by their performances." Further, "so far as I know, Cassel is the only boogie band on the register... seems to me what John Cassel does is play revival stuff... American music keeps growing and developing; Cassel tries to show that."

Essentially what the Register does is that a listed artist or group is paid fifty percent by the VCA and fifty percent by the local sponsor of a performance. In this way, performers can diversify from their normal audiences. For example, the John Cassel Band will play a number of high school assemblies, a remarkable innovation considering the high school assemblies I remember; speeches by local politicians and movies about venereal disease. I can't imagine what a JCB performance in morning assembly will do to a high school student body for the rest of the day. But that's someone else' problem.

What's left? Maybe some music-biz sharp will "discover" them. Maybe not. I personally hope to see some new musical directions; an expanded repertoire, for instance. I also hope that they receive any recognition they want.

But for now, everything looks safe and comfortable for them. There is something very healthy about it all. Why risk the perenially-closed doors of a notoriously uninnovative music industry, punishing yourself daily searching for the Big Break in the Tin Pan Alleys of New York, Chicago, L.A., Nashville or Memphis? Why not stay in Vermont? Sure, the winters are colder. There are not that many clubs to play. You see the same people each gig.

But seeing the same people each time personalizes the performance, and instead of an anonymous crowd cheering and screaming (and then leaving) an unfamiliar one-night stand in Boise, back in Vermont you see those familiar faces that make up a family.

Yes, there is also "the lure of the fresh air and fresh eggs." You don't have to take the 'A' train to Columbus Circle every morning, walking through dirty urine-smelling subway corridors to come out to the dirty sunlight on W. 61st St. to go and make another pitch to Atlantic Records. You can just sit in Franklin County, waking up most days around noon with a slight hangover, and watch the seasons change in the trees. Let the Big Break come looking for you.

Sure it's unreasonable. But maybe it'll happen. And the Big Break comes looking for you, gets lost on some dirt road, looks around, and figures that it's pretty nice here.

—CARL BLUMBERG

Arts & Entertainment

MOZART FESTIVAL...
OPENING NIGHT...
A BIG SMASH

Sunday at 6:30 p.m. hundreds gathered at the UVM soccer field to view the classical dressage exhibition to the cavalry music of Mozart by the American School of Dressage. Immediately following the exhibition crowds flocked to the atmospheric UVM Show Barn for the Grand Opening Concert.

The concert opened with the University Choral Union, led by James Chapman, strolling in while singing canons for chorus. The entrance was quite moving. Canons and Motets of Mozart followed which caused some laughter among our German friends. The Choral Union was well received as they gave a most professional performance.

The New York Chamber Soloists followed with the A Major Clarinet Concerto, K. 622. Charles Russo was the soloist. Despite the heat, the performance was excellent and the audience was extremely attentive. Intermission was gladly welcomed by the 1500 sweltering people in attendance.

The highlight of the evening was most definitely the Concerto in E-Flat Major for two pianos, K.365. Soloists were Harriet Wingreen and Seymour Bernstein. The pianos were placed to the rear of the stage which helped the acoustics tremendously. The soloists displayed amazing facility and precision, especially in the fast passages. Accompanied by the Chamber Soloists, the balance between soloists and ensemble was superb.

The concert ended with a welcomed return of the Choral Union singing two early motets for voices and strings.

This was a marvelous concert for the opening of the Second Annual Vermont Mozart Festival. However, it is just the beginning of a three-week series of concerts, held on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays. Tickets are still available to many of these concerts at the Lane Series Office in Waterman Building, UVM. If the opening concert was any indication of what is to come, then next few weeks cannot go missed by anyone.

—ELANE PETERSON

SUMMER SESSION FILMS: PREVIEW

Camille

Greta Garbo is the featured star in the 1936 version of Camille directed by George Cukor. The story was hardly new material when it was made, as Camille had been done with Sarah Bernhardt in 1912, Clara Kimball Young in 1915, Theda Bara in 1917, Nazimova in 1920, and Norma Talmadge in 1927.

The Alexander Dumes story of a young courtesan in nineteenth century Paris dying of Tuberculosis is sure to bring tears to many eyes. Certainly this was the intent of Cukor. Robert Taylor is also notable though often underrated for his role in the film.

Camille with Greta Garbo will be shown at 7:00 and 9:00 on Tuesday, July 29th in B106 Cook. Admission is $1.00.

Duck Soup

In a change of schedule the Marx Brothers' Duck Soup will be shown instead of A Day at the Races. For many this will be a welcome change as Duck Soup is known as one of the best films with the Marx Brothers.

Groucho is the Great Prime Minister Firefly, come to save the country of Freedonia. Within a very short time he has reduced queen Margaret Dumont's kingdom to shambles. Chico and Harpo round out the comedy as peanut vendors turned secret agents.

For the best one liners in the book and the inimitable style of the four (yes, Zeppo is in this one, too.) Marx Brothers, don't miss Duck Soup.

Duck Soup will be shown at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. on July 30th in Room B106 Cook. Admission is $1.00.

Citizen Kane

Citizen Kane was one of Orson Welles' first films but it still stands as one of his greatest and considered by many to be the best film ever made. The story is one that loosely follows the life of newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst. In probing the death of Charles Foster Kane reporters try to solve the mystery behind his last utterance, "Rosebud." The film probes with the reporters the past life of Kane.

Citizen Kane is especially significant for the influence Orson Welles had on later filmmakers. His use of glamorous technical wizardry and special effects hardly obscures the compassion of the story and the theme of damnation for a narrowness of aspirations in the American capitalist system.

Citizen Kane will be shown at 7:00 and 9:00 p.m. on Thursday, July 31st in room B106 Cook. Admission is $1.00.

The Prince and the Pauper

This week's children's selection is the Walt Disney version of the Mark Twain Classic about two identical boys, one an English pauper and one a member of the English Royalty, who swap places to see how the other one lives. The most serious problems occur not with the switch in places but in the attempted return to their rightful positions.

The Prince and the Pauper will be shown at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons in 101 Votey. Admission is $.50.

THE RECORD FILE

Masters of the Airwaves — Epic KE33060.

Although this phenomenal album was released more than a year ago, with barely any promotion in trade magazines and no reviews that I know of, it stands up as one of the best rock records ever made.

Featuring soaring harmonies by lead vocalists Jimmy Berick and Jon Falk, the Masters sing all original material in a style vaguely reminiscent of Led Zeppelin and Deep Purple — but one all their own. It's hard high rock: stunning 16-string steel guitar work by Berick over Randy Rand's bass and acoustic guitar and David Rada's precision drumwork. At times Derick sounds like Robert Plant, then again like Rod Stewart. But this is an American band, with themes like cruising, cheap thrills, the good old days ("Back in '51").

The production is so clean it hurts, and the interplay of the four musicians is remarkable. I have never read anything about the band, but from notes on the record, they're apparently from the Bay Area in California. It's a shame Epic — not one of the leaders in rock promotion — passed up its chance to push this record, for it will last. It knocks you out when you first hear it; then it grows on you. Not many rock records can make that claim.

Timeless, by John Abercrombie — ECM (Polydor) 1047.

This album by jazz guitarist Abercrombie, keyboardist Jan Hammer and drummer Jack DeJohnette at first impresses you with its speed, fierdness and shimmery textu:e. But, on further listening, Abercrombie's lyricism and Hammer's inspired comping stand out.

Abercrombie first gained notice on Billy Cobham's great jazz-rock album, Spectrum, and has since worked with the Brecker Brothers and performed on various CTI big band records. A fine technician, Abercrombie is as fast as Alvin Lee, but has a great deal more depth.

All six pieces on the album feature Abercrombie's speed, but also possess moments of great lyricism and quiet, turning the music into meditative space, a soundtrack for contemplation.

Master of a high, clean attack, Abercrombie is doubtless the leader on this date. But sometimes keyboard virtuoso Hammer, a veteran of the Mahavishnu Orchestra, steals the show with his mastery of synthesizer. And De Johnette, an alumnus of Miles Davis and Wayne Shorter's groups, provides percussive backup with a lightness and spaciness the music needs and evokes.

Fleetwood Mac — Reprise MS 2225

This group, which has undergone many personnel changes and management problems over its life of more than 10 years, has just released a new record. Its first in over a year, the record focuses, as have its immediate predecessors, on a soft, romantic sound.

Two new musicians are in the group: Guitarist and vocalist Lindsey Buckingham and vocalist Stevie Nicks. Ms. Buckingham perfectly complements Christine McVie's vocals, and Nicks provides harmony.

Mrs. McVie's vocals and lyrics dominate this record. The former Christine Perfect and wife of bassist John McVie, Mrs. McVie has been pushing to the forefront of this group for the past three years, slowly insinuating her sensuality into dominance.

Fortunately, she has a beautiful voice: Husky, sexy, caressing, dark. She should make another solo record besides her import Christine Perfect which was never released in this country.

Fleetwood Mac just keeps rolling on and, although it shifts emphasis from record to record and seems to have given up on the straight blues, its forte several years ago, continues to release fine records.

The Dream Weaver Gary Wright — Warner Bros. BS 2868

Wright's first album in more than two years, this record represents a refinement of his husky, soul style and reminds one of the late-lamented Spooky Tooth, a great Anglo-American rock band that came to prominence in the late '60's. Wright headed Spooky Tooth, along with Mike Harrison.

On this album, Wright focuses on keyboard abilities, playing Moog bass and brass, clavinet, Hammond organ and Fender Rhodes piano as well as employing many special electronic effects. The record is comparable to Leon Russell's recent Will O' the Wisp in that both artists revel in the electronic possibilities of their instruments.

The Wright album is greatly influenced by Russell, and by Stevie Wonder. Wright embroideres keyboard tapestries like Russell, but backs his flights with deep, chunky rhythm tracks, like Wonder. Not a great lyricist, Wright's strength lier in his voice: Rich, it has great range, both in sound and emotion.

A good introduction to Wright's work, this album nonetheless does not represent any great breakthrough, either for Wright or for rock music. Nevertheless, it is a good, workmanlike record, pleasant to listen to and good to dance to. Soul disco music from an American, with a British rock overlay.

—CARLO WOLFF

FAMOUS SINCE 1974

when in Burlington, don't miss

CARBUR'S RESTAURANT

Vermont's most unique menu!

~ Comfortable Atmosphere

~ Comfortable Prices

Downtown at 119 St. Paul St.

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

CELEBRATE SUMMER WITH US

20¢ ALES MON.-THURS

50¢ NIGHT WEDNESDAY

OLD TIME MOVIES SUNDAY NIGHTS

AIR CONDITIONED

147 MAIN STREET

3 doors down from the Flynn theatre

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING, A CELEBRATION ABOUT LOVE

Much Ado About Nothing is not to be believed, but to be enjoyed and admired. Its plot is not realistic, but contrived to create delightful situations. Nevertheless, it reminds us of the miracle of love in our own lives. Cupid (Danny London) begins and ends this Royall Tyler production, blindfolded, aiming his golden arrow not only at the actors onstage, but at those in the audience as well.

The play is light and witty. It is an appreciation, perhaps a celebration, of the world we seem to live in when we are in love. The two principal lovers, Benedick and Beatrice, set this tone. He is played by Dennis Lipscomb, and is superb. His fine modulations of mood perfectly reflect his changing situations as he turns from superficial courtier afraid of love, to the depths and delights of love itself. Rita Litton as Beatrice is also very good; together, their wit-combats, and later their growing seriousness in mutual affection, establish the significance and power of love.

This couple is in contrast to Claudio and Hero, who are 'quicker to fall in love, and whose love is easily threatened by suspicious jealousy, then as easily cured by facile repentance in the ceremonious love-celebration of the finale. Marcus Smythe and Margaret Klenck play these roles, their artful posing contributing to the play's comedy-of-manners-witty tone, while suggesting how fragile yet valuable is this love which Benedick and Beatrice finally achieve.

This fragility is also emphasized, particularly in the middle of the play, by the villainous Don John, played by Armin Shimerman. He moves slowly, purposefully, across the stage, declaring his enmity to all goodness and happiness, and achieving his greatest success in momentarily blocking the marriage of Hero and Claudio. His brooding presence is strongly acted, and his servant Borachio (Jon Farris) convincingly seconds his evil intentions. Through them, the value of such threatened love increases, and so does our celebration at the conclusion when all the love-situations are resolved.

The clever and courtly wit of the lovers is sometimes used as a smokescreen for their real affections, and sometimes used to express them. Posed as contrasts to these characters and their wit are the Watch (Greg Patnaude, Jonathan Bourne, Keith Gaylord, Eric Raymond), led by Dogberry (Gerald Moses) and his aged assistant (Charles Towers). Dogberry is used by "Much Ado About Nothing," Dennis Lipscomb as Benedick and Rita Litton as Beatrice.

Shakespeare to parody the pomposity of authority. Dogberry is a master of the malapropism, the misuse of words; rather than being witty, he uses the wrong words, sometimes the word whose meaning is the opposite of what he intends. It is this inability to communicate which allows Hero's marriage to be delayed, and which by contrast exalts the wit of the main pair of lovers, Benedick and Beatrice. Dogberry and the Watch are magnificent! costumed and choreographed for their parts, he in huge and colorful pantaloons, they besmirched with soot and ashes, and generally suggestive of the bovine stupidity and laziness which are indeed their character. Charles Towers as Verges, Dogberry's assistant, brilliantly enlarges the potentiality of a normally small part.

The whole play is surrounded and punctuated by music, even as it is by verbal wit. Sarah Brooke, who is also a fine mincing servant girl, Sara O'Neil, and David Godkin all sing well, accompanied by Steven Freeman, Sally and Susan Reit, and Kilo Van Der Wyk on harpsichord, recorders, bass and lute. This too maintains the tone of gaiety and celebration.

The gentle older generation also values love, and initiates intrigues to get the couples together. Tom Carlisle as Leonato and Robert Ousley as Don Pedro carry many scenes with their convincing good

(continued on page eighteen)

MUCH ADO, FROM ANOTHER SEAT IN THE HOUSE

Messina, Sicily. Blessed with unusual topography, the deep water off Messina, responding to the solar-lunar tug, begins to move. When these deep-water currents smash against the barrier shallows, they surge upwards dragging with them squid, hatchetfish, viperfish. Twice a month the spring beaches are littered with thousands of marine curiosities squirming, frying under the mediterranean sun. Appropriately, Messina is also the location of Shakespeare's Much Ado..., a play that shares an affinity in topography with Messina by possessing a flavor of scrapped plots, characters that didn't quite jell, moments consigned to oblivion... all swept together into a play devoid of ideas and where style is everything. An excellent vehicle for spectacle, Director John Milligan has responded with an elegant, streamlined comedy. The evening can be summed up in one word: professional.

The play is designed around a tandem of love affairs which tend to counterpoint each other. Claudio, favorite of Don Pedro, ascertains that Leonato's daughter, Hero, is a suitable match. Don Pedro intercedes, arrangements are obtained, marriage seems inevitable. THEN Don John, bad-gene-bastard brother of Don Pedro, presents bogus proof that Hero's purity has been sewered by a commoner. Claudio shames Hero at the alter, she faints in bewilderment, the audience murmurs at the injustice of it all. Marcus Smythe is a very cavalier Claudio. Boyishly handsome, Smythe tends to obliterate that streak of conventional ignorance that motivates Claudio. What is essentially an astute social match is misleadingly played as a love match. Claudio merely likes the cut of Hero's jib. Later he probably will grow to like her. But later, Margaret Klenck, as Hero, has an impossible role. She logs a lot of stage time and looks very beautiful, yet Shakespeare wrote her hardly any lines. Her reaction is a consummate swoon.

The ugliness of this conventional torture chamber is brightened by the incongruous mating of Benedict and Beatrice. Sworn assains of love they are early versions of Archie Bunker and Maude. Glib to the point of annoyance, they insult and amuse each other with a 'bet you can't top this one' fervor. They reminded me of the acid relationships that signal true love among grade school kids. As Benedict, Dennis Lipscomb is ambidextrous: equally at ease with comedy and drama. His Benedict is a sensitive individual distancing himself from the world with his flippancy. His sidekick, Rita Litton, gambols around the stage, too lively for social stereotypes. It occurred to me that Benedict and Beatrice have no quarrel with love, only with the atrocious language of love. It also struck me that, while Ms. Litton is excellent, one senses inner depths to Beatrice that are only scratched. When Claudio shames Hero, Beatrice's cousin, the smiles and bad puns evaporate as she persuades Benedict that to love her well he must kill his best friend Claudio. What a punchline. This illustrates a problem: to plumb the psyche of Beatrice would ruin the smooth Laurel & Hardy routine. She remains light and lively, albeit demanding slightly insane dividends for her love.

The local constabulary insures a happy ending. These provincials, piloted by the Mutt & Jeff duo of Dogberry and Verges, skillfully extort full confession of Don John's villainy. Gerald Moses' Dogberry is a voluminous man, literally bouncing with self-righteous authority. Dogberry should be blissfully unaware of his own absurdity, yet there is absolutely no way Moses can avoid knowing he is riding a caricature. Dwarfed by Dogberry, Charles Towers spagetti-thin Verges is endowed with the finest case of senile teeter-totter I have ever witnessed.

Robert Ousley as Don Pedro is commanding and witty, while his brother Don John, inheritor of that long line of Shakespearian villains who love gratuitous pranks, is enhanced by Armin Shimerman's amazing voice. Shimerman's Don John is sinister the way a Saturday Night Special is sinister: stubby, almost laughable, but cheap enough to be lethal.

As written, Much Ado.. has darkness and brutality commingled with humor and inventiveness. John Milligan has opted to gloss over the brutal side of things leaving a smooth comedy, a professional production, an enjoyable evening.

— J. KARL STEVENS

There is only one Earth brand shoe. The perfect shoe for people who stand on their feet all day. The shoe invented to make walking and standing easier and more comfortable.

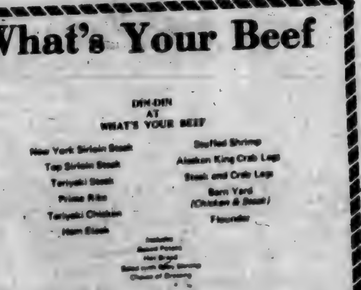
Earth shoe

Available only at:

139 BANK STREET

BURLINGTON

What's Your Beef



152 St. Paul Street

Burlington

Stephen Tanner

ROCKIN' AND ROAMIN' WITH JIMMY "T"

It is Friday afternoon. The end of another nine-to-five five day work week is in sight. America sits staring at the clock on the wall. Restless, turning, twisting and waiting. Waiting to leave all the work-a-day bullshit behind. Waiting for one more weekend without having to look at no big boss man. Waiting to be free. The hands on the clock are barely moving. America is tired. America wants to get high. Every minute is an hour. America pretends to be busy. America can be very sly. America is tired. America wants to get high. The clock finally says it is time to go and America says goodbye.

Clair Cutter is sitting at the desk in the corner of her room trying to write a letter to her folks. She starts off, "Dear Mom and Dad, Everything is wonderful...." then tears up the paper and throws it away. She lights up a cigarette and stares out the window at the sidewalk below.

On a street corner in front of a downtown bar Browne Jackson is waiting for his connection. He checks out his reflection in the plate glass barroom window and adjusts his hat just slightly forward so that it tilts perfectly across one side of his forehead. He says, "wha happening, bro?" to a friend of his who slips by and then Browne takes out a smoke... lights it and leans up against the side of the building. Burned again he is thinking. Motherfucking burned again. He glances at his watch and figures that he will wait a couple more minutes. A late model Cadillac Eldorado pulls up to the curb. Jackson slinks across the pavement, opens the passenger side door and slides into the front seat.

Dizzy Deville leans her body against the bar and makes eyes at a most likely lover, some local loser,... a hot-Johnny-bad-boy, who is sitting at the other end of the bar.

In a small apartment, June is cooking a very nice dinner. Chicken and potatoes and green beans and rolls. Jerry is bringing the wine. He ought to be over in a half an hour. She is standing near the sink peeling potatoes and thinking about maybe going out to a movie later on.

Martin is standing in the driveway wiping sweat off of his face just having hooked up the camper to the back of the family car. His wife sticks her head out the front door and asks him whether or not she should bring along their portable stereo? Goddamnitall, why the hell do we need the stereo on a camping trip? His wife is already halfway to the car lugging the turntable and speakers. He shrugs his shoulders and walks over to help her load the equipment into the trunk.

Claire Cutter is sitting at the desk in the corner of her room trying to to write a letter to her folks. She starts off, "Dear Mom and Dad, The job at the insurance company really is great...", then tears up the paper and throws it away. Listening to the radio she looks at the picture of Elton John that is pasted on the wall above her desk.

Tom and Chuck just picked up a case of C[illegible] and are headed out to the lake to meet Angie and Sue. Tom smiles as Chuck says he wants to get laid.

The television light cuts through the darkness of the living room where Martha and Sam are watching the evening news.

Jack Rhodes is in town for a series of business conferences. As his panting and moaning fade into the dusty silence of a cheap motel room, Jack completes a meeting that has given him the most satisfaction of any that he had attended all day. Jack gets up and starts putting his clothes on while Molina, the spanish beauty, lights a cigarette. He asks her if she accepts credit cards? No comprendo. He places two twenties on the dresser and then leaves the room.

Clair Cutter is sitting at the desk in the corner of her room trying to write a letter to her folks. She starts off, "Dear Mom and Dad, Been meeting lots of really fine people....", then tears up the paper and throws it away. Getting up from her desk she grabs her purse off the bed and decides to go down to the bar for a drink.

Wayne is pissed off sort of. He had a bitch of a day down at the place. Wanda is in the kitchen washing the dinner dishes and dodging the flies. "Hey Wanda," he yells into the kitchen. She can't hear him cause of the water. "Hey Wanda... shut the fucking water off for a minute will ya." Wanda turns the water off. "What you want?" "Hey Wanda, you want to go down to the Buckboard tonight? I think that guy is playing... we can do some good dancing and drinking. Hey Wanda what you think?" Wanda takes off her apron and puts it on the counter. She leaves the rest of the dishes piled in the sink and dances out to the living room where Wayne is sitting.

There. Rolling down route seven. A van. Written on the side in multi-colored letters... James Thurston Jr., Painter. James is behind the wheel driving. The back of the van is stacked high with equipment. Speakers, amplifiers, guitars, lights, drums, microphones.

James pulls into the parking lot of the Buckboard, a bar in Milton, Vermont. He backs the van up to a side entrance and jumps out and greets some friends. They begin to unload the contents of the vehicle. Bending and lifting, pulling and schlepping, and pushing through the door, across the dance floor and then finally up to the stage.

Thurston is sweating. He grabs a pile of clean clothes and goes into the bathroom. Ten minutes later a man who resembles Thurston emerges from that chamber, dressed in a rock and roll uniform he saunters across the barroom and stands in his place — center stage.

ON STAGE

"Good Evening everybody. We're Jimmy "T" and the Cobras. We been shit on a lot. We been told to keep our volume down. And when you been shit on a lot, all you can do is to get your shit together and stick it in the hole."

Elliot spills his gin and tonic all over the table and onto his pants. Jimmy "T" is unwinding the first verse of "Listen to the Music." by the Doobie Brothers. The Buckboard's barroom is empty and heavy with humidity. The waitress is asking me if I want another gimlet and I'm trying to edit my notes from our talk with James Thurston Jr., alias the infamous Jimmy "T". It is dark even though I am sitting at a table on the edge of the vacant dance floor, lit by Jimmy's red home-made flood lights. I tell the girl "Yes I want another gimlet, but give me a slice of lime in it this time." It is too late, she is getting a rag to wipe up the gin and tonic in Elliot's lap. He is laughing and trying to decide which is more [illegible], the spilled drink or the music.

Looking for the waitress, I glance around the bar and discover it is not empty. One table has a group of Jimmy "T" 's "Roadies" seated around it. They show signs of warming to Jimmy's plywood rock 'n' roll sound. His harmonies on "Listen to the Music" fill out the song and almost rival a Doobies' chorus. There is Mark Ryan, his drummer, keeping a simple driving beat. Mark's brother, Charlie, compliments on base guitar and harmonies. The fourth and most recent addition to the group is Mike Bottigi on lead guitar. He started playing lead 2½ months ago and plays a cautiously paced ride. The musicians are all dressed in jeans tonight except Jimmy "T" himself, who wears a pale gold jump suit with what resembles a black cumberbun around his waist.

I can feel the Cobras slowly snaking upward in the air as if to the sound of an Indian's pipe. There isn't anyone to help them up, other than their dark faceless crew on the other side of the barroom. Elliot and I clap loudly, the only applause on this side. The gin and tonic has been mopped and my gimlet is on the way. I check my notes for what Jimmy said about his sound. He had admitted he sounded a little hollow. He wanted a keyboard man to fill out the group's sound. "But I wouldn't want the best musician. I want someone who listens to me and won't give the band hell. "To be a Cobra," said Jimmy, "you can't get too drunk, you can't get too stoned, and you can't stand still. You gotta boogie."

Jimmy has dedicated tonight's show to John Mayo, an old friend of his whose long fingers strummed rhythm gutter for Willie and the Tradewinds back in the days of the Electrodes and the Dynamics, all well-known Burlington rock bands of the sixties. Jimmy told us that Mayo had stopped in. He had said he was glad to see Jimmy was still cookin'. He hadn't been able to stay because he had a chick with him in the car. Once Mayo had filled out a band's sound with his rhythm guitar, but now he had quit music. "People make mistakes, that's why they put erasers on pencils," Jimmy had told us.

I looked up on stage, at the short, side-burned and mustachioed Jimmy "T". He hadn't quit. Jimmy "T" was making the comeback.

EARLY DAYS

Jimmy "T" was a rebel. He grew up in Waterbury Center which is across Interstate 89 from the town of Waterbury. He was the first of Waterburians to don long hair. The local Vermont folk thought he was crazed, a good-for-nothing, a lowly beatnik-hippie-freak. The first original tune Jimmy "T" ever penned was about his lone wanderings in the town of Waterbury. It was titled "The Rogue" and laid down the local scene as Jimmy "T" dug it. He grew to hate parts of Waterbury, preferring home turf in Waterbury Center. Now Jimmy reflects on those days and grins, "There was only five miles distance between those two towns, but they were more than five miles apart."

James Thurston, Jr. was the youngest of 4 children. He had a brother 9 years his elder and a twin sister. The family lived on Loomis Hill below Mount Hunger where young Jimmy "T" fished and hunted. He attended a one-room country school house with a wood-burning stove. In these humble origins he learned the paint business from his father and music from his uncle, who was a fiddle player. He took Jimmy under his minstrel's wing and showed him music. At the age of ten, Jimmy was calling square dances. His uncle was soon to die, but before he did he told Jimmy never to give up music. "I loved that man and I believed him, so here I am today," Jimmy told us.

Jimmy's brother played rhythm guitar and piano on Friday nights at the Waterbury Grange Hall. One night Jimmy went down and joined the act. His brother was a hellraiser, but soon got married and settled down. Jimmy "T" fit right into his brother's guitar strap.

Twenty-two years ago he got his first group together. They played country and western music. A later group of his called "This 'n That" were on their way to the big time. They had booked an audition for the Ed Sullivan Show, but a week before it was supposed to happen Jimmy "T" and his lead guitarist had a spat which cancelled it. Jimmy came home, spent a week in the bars, crying and scheduling a new course in life for himself.

He got a new group together and began painting for his father on the side. Later he started his own painting business. For the 22 years he's been playing he's evolved a credo: "When I say I'm going to do somethin, I do it," Jimmy boasts. For all those years he's stuck to it and never had an agent. "If you been around long enough there are things you learn in the business, but the most important thing of all that you learn are the two greatest words in the English language: Common Sense." And that's why Jimmy "T" is his own manager. It may seem futile to try to make it at the age of 34, but Jimmy says "When it's bad, I feel like I'm thirty-four, but when it's good I feel like I'm eighteen."

He had dropped out of high school in his sophomore year. He reflects now, "Man cannot be happy unless he does what he loves."

EMPTY DANCE FLOORS

As I look up from my notes I am surprised to see a few more tables filling in the Buckboard's copious watering area. There are five softball players who are whopping and spilling froth onto the indoor/outdoor and wading through it in their stocking feet. They are standing at the bar in uniform and drinking hard. A couple of grease monkey guys from the local Texaco have cut off their sleeves and brought their women along for some frosties. An obese couple are seated nearby. Each sits three feet from the table, so they won't be pinched between it and their chairs. They are sipping Bloody Marys and toe-tapping to Jimmy "T".

Elliot and I are on our second round of gin coolers this evening. Neither of us are accustomed to sitting around in bars, getting drunk on music and alcohol, though Jimmy "T" is sounding better than when I first heard him months ago. I am beginning to appreciate Jimmy's tight arrangements and admire the way the Cobras capture the essentials of a song. "All right now, baby it's allright now." They reduce that hard rocker by "Free" to its raw rhythmical bore and hammer it down. I am surprised no one is dancing because I actually feel like it. I sense the crowd is building up to it and it will only be a matter of time, though.

Jimmy "T"'s act has shifted into high gear. Jimmy has started to dance on stage a little on "Long Train Runnin' " and his feeling for rock 'n roll wells up in a gusher from his heart on the slow tune, "You're -So Beautiful." The Buckboard has drawn pretty well tonight. Here a group talks over their bowling scores for the evening, there the Catamount Raceway standings are argued, but everywhere in the bar people are looking to the charged performer on stage in his gold jumpsuit. They want him to get themselves moving... dancing... into the Cobra spirit.

"The world is too depressed now. People are really hitting the bars, especially the poor and the unemployed. If I can satisfy just one person while I'm entertaining, I've made my night worthwhile." Jimmy had said to us. The Cobras kick into a rock tune from way back, "Rockin' Robin," and suddenly the tension is released, the ice on the dance floor is shattered and it begins to melt under the jumping jitterbugging toes of a couple dressed in black that look like they are proteges of Wolfman Jack or have just jitterbugged away from a demonstration for Dick Clark. Jimmy had said before that he loved to jitterbug and now before our eyes there he is, bouncing down off stage and cutting in for a few bars. "Rockin' Robin – Tweet, Tweetle-Dee". He can step it just as well as any remnant from "Shindig" or "Hullabalboo." He rebounds back on stage and slaps his green tambourine. He's had it for 14 years. He looks out at that lone couple stepping, twirling, and sidling up to each other. On the next number he'll get everyone at the Buckboard hopping to Jimmy "T" and his Cobras.

CHILDREN'S CHILDREN

Like his father, Jimmy "T" is in the painting business, and has been for 16 years. He used to work summers for his dad and later, for his older brother.

Jimmy "T" was married 12½ years ago. After 3 children he got a divorce this year. He loves his children though and enjoys taking them horseback riding or blueberry picking on Mount Hunger. His oldest son is 13 and wants to get into muscle therapy. The 11 year old girl wants to become a veterinarian. But his 9 year old son strikes a familiar and resonant chord. Jimmy calls him a "boogier" because he wants to sing like his daddy.

"I want them to do what they want to do," said Jimmy. "They know all about Mother Nature and 'scrogging'." Ignoramouses that we are, we ask about the term 'scrogging' before for. "Well you can't say fucking on stage here at the Buckboard, so I say 'Scrogging.' You know I'll say things to the audience like 'Sorry fellas you gotta bring your own scrog', or 'absolutely no scrogging inside here'."

A LITTLE SPORTING COMPETITION

The Buckboard used to be a slaughterhouse and a meat market until its present incarnation. Peter Greenburg, who manages the place, says he "can't complain about business one bit for a new place which has just opened up." We offer the best entertainment and drink prices for the money, considering there is no cover, no minimum." The Buckboard is really the only big bar once you head north of Winooski. Many Catamount Raceway fans stop in at the Board after the races, but the biggest segment of the Buckboard's regulars are from the nudist camp in Georgia, Vermont. "They come dressed to kill – naked with their clothes on" said Greenburg.

Jimmy "T" has been an inconsistent crowd drawer. "His unique style and his natural rapport with audiences are his fortes." Jimmy never has a written order of the songs in his sets. He likes to lead each particular crowd in the direction it feels like going. "We are what we eat, like Lenny Bruce who was himself, that's us Jimmy "T" and the Cobras, just being ourselves."

Tonight the crowd looks like it could use a little push so Jimmy is organizing a twist contest. To the best twisting couple, the Cobras will award a round of double shots of tequila. Jimmy rears his balding head back and commences "Well shake it up Baby now!"

and the harmonies mellow his shout, "Shake it up Baby."

"Twist and Shout!"

"Twist and Shout" echo the Cobras again. The dance floor is filling up with inspired Chubby Checkers fans from way back. I flash back on too many Ricky Nelson or Elvis Presley beach movies.

Elliot is sitting, smiling, and galking at the jitterbugging couple dressed in black. They dominate the scene, dancing directly in front of the Cobras, capturing Nureyev precision with each twist of the hips. The obese couple is up there as well as one of the boys from the Texaco station. Even one of the rowdy softball team is shakin' in his number 31 gray uni with one of the girls from a table full of secretaries. The entire floor fills with twisting, writhing, bodies of all shapes and ages.

Jimmy "T" winds down the song and announces the obvious: "You gotta admit it folks. You have to say it. The couple in the black. The couple in the black get the win. Hold on til breaktime and I'll get those doubles over to you and we can sit down and shoot the shit."

A couple more numbers and Jimmy "T" is at the bar and then bringing them back to the table to talk jitterbugging and twisting with the best.

SUPERSTAR

"The only thing I've never done is to cut a record and I'm gonna do it on my own."

Jimmy "T" is painting this summer for the last time he hopes. He's going to cut a 45 this fall and then turn full-time professional musician. He [illegible] at me during our interview. His ever present [illegible] showed from beneath the mustache. He sat on the edge of his chair hovered over the table. His voice was fast like a salesman's and bursting with energy. Way back he had missed that audition for the Sullivan show. "I gotta try one more time," he spoke with conviction.

Jimmy has two major heroes in the rock world: Mick Jagger and Bobby Daren. The Cobras used to play almost exclusively Stones' music he liked them so much. Once Jimmy went to California and, by a simple twist of fate, got introduced to Bobby Daren. He said he "rapped all day with him." Jimmy was, "like a kid with a new toy."

If he does make it big, Jimmy would like to be someone like The Who or Led Zeppelin who have always had a song drifting around in the top 10 or 20, unlike the Beatles or the Stones who go in and out of the Top 10.

However, Jimmy "T" doesn't play any original material. There is no such animal as a 1975 version of "The Rogue." He hasn't performed any original music with the Cobras for 8 or 10 months. Jimmy feels he is successful with the tunes he is playing right now however. "If you been around long enough, you can pull off the numbers even though they're just 3 or 4 chord progressions. The trick is to play them with feeling. That's it, feeling."

If he ever makes it as big as The Who or Led Zeppelin, he still wants to be able to play a dive once in a while, i.e. go from Milton to Madison Square Gardens, then an occasional return to the Buckboard. Jimmy "T" has played the Waterbury State Hospital every Christmas and has played for the inmates at Windsor State Prison. "You can't turn these people off, they're human, too," he believes.

"I've just never had a break," laments Jimmy. "I need one. Like Jean Paul Cabana on the Catamount Raceway hopin' for that opening so he can slide between the cars and take first, I'm waiting for my chance."

"Like that superchick Janis Joplin. You gotta get it while you can. I wake up in the morning and say 'AAAHHHH... Another day'." He chuckles at himself, Mark Ryan waves him up to the stage. "This is a rush," pronounces James Thurston, Jr. referring to our conversation. He looks at us, raises his glass and polished off a last draught, then says, "If I ever make it big, I'm gonna get you guys front row seats." He puts down his glass and he's on stage, crooning the words to what must be one of his all time favorites, Bobby Daren's "Splish Splash Takin' a Bath."

–STEPHEN TANNER
–ELLIOT FREEMAN

WOMEN IN FOCUS: COMMENTARY ON THE HUMAN CONDITION

Unlike the now-defunct Burlington Community Correctional Center, which had no unit for the housing of women incarcerated (though occasionally one would be retained overnight), the new correctional facility in South Burlington boasts of having an integral section capable of housing eight women. One of the original premises of such a unit was to give this modern facility a more realistic appearance of "community," as advertised in the name of the institution itself. However, any lofty intent to design of integrating women into the lives of men confined for alleged or proved criminal activity has already failed miserably, and unfortunately, it is the handful of women in this institution who must endure this wretched and disappointing setting.

In an environment that has established guidelines for the deprivation, dehumanization and frequent arbitrary practices which each work against individual expression, growth and experience, these women are the repressed objects of some of the most depraved and vicious verbal punishments I have ever witnessed. The sexist aggression directed at these women stems from the purely male-consciousness approach which views these individuals as lacking in any real mental or physical capabilities and/or attributes save for those as oft-depicted, "whores, sluts or pigs." It is ironic that among the many inmates levelling their abuse at these women, many are confined here for the commission of such abhorrent crimes as rape, assault and murder. This ugly situation is further magnified by a predominantly male security and administrative staff, which not only condones this abuse, but adds to its intensity by their own sick, profane language and attitudes.

As with so many of the communication and inter/intra-personal difficulties between men and women in contemporary society, we can see this particular environment as being dominated by diehard, despotic "machismo" attitudes and behavior. It seems as though the men here, by virtue of their separation from their sexual partners, must constantly seek ways in which they feel that they can assert or define their own masculinity. In doing so, no consideration is given the women in terms of their own feelings or their personal concept of their feminity. I feel deeply for these women, from having to share this experience with them, and from realizing that nothing can be given them in the future to reaffirm them of their own individuality and womanhood, that could ever balance the systematic destruction of their dignity and humanity as it has suffered within this institution.

I have struggled with my fellow inmates to try and make them aware that these women share (...and not deserve) the squalor and pain which surrounds us, and that for doing so, compassion and supportiveness should be mutual just for the sake of survival and survival alone. We all need to collectivize our energy and strength and ideals to fight a system that continually breeds on the suppression of individual expression and more importantly, group harmony and purpose.

Four walls are one of the greatest tests of an individual's mind and, in a facility such as this, only an alliance of conscience of all those confined here can alleviate the massive burden of oppression as dictated by an obscene and destructive organization. Though this might seem futile given present circumstances, I hope that my brothers can realistically begin to accept the fact that the changes needed to make this a viable, working "community" can come only through a willingness to respect the decency of another human being.

–CHARLES BALDWIN

MAD HATTER

Quoting WJOY owner Frank Balch in the Burlington Free Press (you have to be careful when you quote the Free Press because you will include their inaccuracies) is a delight.

"I'm deeply disappointed, dismayed, disillusioned and disgusted."

That is probably one of Frank's greatest statements. At least I think so. But I have always been a sucker for alliterations anyway.

No matter how hard he heralds the loss of UVM hockey and basketball games (those are the only sports left aren't they) WJOY and Frank Balch are in a precarious position. With Frank's finesse he could not get exclusive rights to UVM football and baseball.

Balch claims he was hurt after such a long and fruitful relationship came to an end with the awarding of exclusive rights to WVMT. I'll tell you this Frank you have to bid more than a package of Nabs, a Snickers and a Coke.

By the same token you will not hear a better hockey play by play man than the recently defrocked (he no lodger is the Voice of the Cats) Paul Chapman.

But Balch goes on to say, "Just because we lost out at UVM does not mean we are going to abolish sports." I guess if there is no abolition of sports in the next few days you can thank Frank. Thanks, Frank.

Tennis players take the cake. The last few mornings I have been playing basketball at Leddy Park around 6 a.m. Just about every morning at this time all the tennis courts are taken. Some very heated games have been taking place.

At Jarry Park the other nite to see the Big Red Juggernault. The Expos are just a bunch of guys named Pepe. That name just does not make it in Montreal...

Bouquets to the Burlington Park Department for the fine job at city parks this summer. Instruction in tennis, supervised park areas have shown that departments can work for the many instead of the few...

Dan Rather and Gary Paul Gates have a book The Palace Guard that traces Nixon's administration from Day 1. Remember Daniel Patrick Moynihan when he was the fair haired boy. A book well worth reading. Also Frank Mankiewicz's U.S. v. Richard M. Nixon – The Final Crisis.

Record wise is the owning of John Abercrombie's Timeless. With Jan Hammer and Jack DeJohnette Abercrombie is about to find a place in the sun for his guitar. Abercrombie is formerly of Dreams and Billy Cobham's great group.

Checking Major League statistics shows that a lot of so-called stars are having difficult seasons. Brooks Robinson of Baltimore is hitting the ball rarely and his average is hardly visible at .199. Sal Bando, third baseman for the World Champion Athletics, is hitting a paltry .215 with only 38 rbi's. In the National League last year's home run king, Mike Schmidt of the Phils, has an average of .233 with 18 home runs. Far off his pace of 1974. Dusty Baker and Darrel Evans of Atlanta are major disappointments hitting only .233 and .234 respectively.

Speaking of Atlanta and the Braves they are in rough shape. No manager, no front office and no fans. What magic does a front office have when it drives players out of town. First Henry Aaron gives the finger to the Atlanta top hats. And then Richie Allen, who did not even get to town, said no way. That does not seem to be the best way to run a team.

What with the Braves averaging 8,500 per game it will not be too long before the greedy people upstairs will move to yet another territory. They better hurry because the territories are going fast.

Here's a sample of the kind of mail I get:

Hi Hatter or is that High Hatter or is that Hat Hier or is that Hat Higher: Well Hat I guess it's time to take my jimmy page doll off the wall and see if inanimate dolls can pluck the strings (g strings) on a guitar. To hear you speak deeply saddens my heart. To be able to perform phlebotomy in one terse line on a "real" hero frightens me. In a comparison of the nature you chose to prostitutionalize one must realize it is not fair to equate performers like you did. (great sentence huh?) I find you erroneous not so much in your choice but the method that you used to establish george benson as the greatest guitar player this side of the Wincoski river. What are the guidelines for excellence when dealing with contemporaries? Is it record sales? Frequency of a variety of performances? What then. Is Andy Capp a better drunk than Judith Crist is a critic? Is the Empire State Bldg. a better structure than the Hotel Vermont? Are Maxi pads better than tampax? Who knows? Jimmy Page could lose both hands and still be one of my favorite git box players... end og maudlin metaphoric metamorphosis from rational individual to incompetent critic (and typist)

Signed
Led Zeppelin Forever

Former Philadelphia Phillies' pitching star Robin Roberts does a great service in writing in this week's Newsweek.

The headline reads "Strike Out Little League." Roberts goes on to paint a rather bleak picture concerning the pluses and minuses of such a system.

In speaking of children from 8-12 Roberts says, "These adults are in most cases unqualified as instructors and do not have the emotional stability to work with children of this age. The dedication and sincerity of these instructors cannot be questioned, but the purpose of this dedication should be."

Roberts goes on to point out that we are working with the wrong age group plus the fact that winning is still the Little League's battle cry.

–AL BERNARDINA

YOU AND YOUR PLANT: ROTS, WRETCHES,AND WRECKS

This sounds something like the doldrums of nautical lore. And indeed, they do have a lot to do with mid-summer weather. Your plant is often exposed to and could suffer from excesses or shortages of water, wind, plant food, even not enough as well as too many insects.

Hot muggy or at least damp weather often accentuates disease problems. One rot, which is not really an infectious disease at all, is blossom end rot of tomatoes – and possibly of squashes too. Its cause – an insufficient supply of calcium. The cure – to quickly supply some water soluble calcium such as a very dilute solution of calcium chloride. If anyone has had any success with calcium pantothenate or lactate – or milk for that matter – I'd like to know about it. The long-term solution is to lime. Of course, the soil should be kept continuously moist and a heavy mulch does wonders here.

Under "wretches" we could lump all of those wretched insects and bugs that bother us. Of course there are lots of insects that often bug us but that's perhaps simply because we've been conditioned to fear insects. Not all bugs are bad – like not all insects are technically bugs. Praying mantises, lady bugs, lacewings, ant lions, some stink bugs and many others are insects that eat other insects, not your vegetables. And many an insect seen on your plant is simply "passing by".

What to do about garden insects? Firstly, find out if they really are pests. Then, decide if you can put up with them. If they appear intolerable, then resort to getting rid of them. Pick them off. Trap them. Use pesticides only as a last resort and then use only just enough to do the job, no more.

Your garden could look like a wreck if it were overrun by weeds. This could well be the occurrence of your return from vacation. Some pre-vacation care would have been in order. A good watering and weeding. A good, thick mulch to keep the weeds down.

Even with a weedy garden not all is lost. You can pull the weeds and rejuvenate the vegetables. Some of the weeds could even become food for your table. Many are edible, especially the tender new growth. Smooth pigweed, called lambsquarters by some, is very tasty as well as nutritious. Others are sorrel, red root, pigweed, purslane, dandelion, milkweed, chicory, and more.

You'll notice that half the battle of combating diseases, insects and weeds is to keep ahead of them. Apply preventive measures. Then there's often no battle at all.

–TED FLANAGAN
Garden Specialist

MEDITATION CORNER

Several months ago, if anyone had told me how much and how soon my life would change, I don't think I would have listened. If another person had suggested that all changes would be good and stem from the same source, I'd have given even less credence.

But then, in March, with a handful of reservations, I began to practice Transcendental Meditation. Now I find that, in spite of myself, I am growing better in every way. To me, better has always meant being more dynamic, confident and easy with myself. Most of all, it has meant being able to choose a goal and know that I am capable of doing my best to reach it.

Psychologists say that we only use 5 to 10% of our mental potential. This means that when we say "I'm doing my best," our best is only 5 to 15% of our actual potential. We are all prevented from living our full potential by stress which is caused by the major and mundane events of everyday living. We bumble about making mistakes trying to avoid our problems by retreating. We may make unreasonable demands on other people because we are not satisfied with our own behavior. How many of the world's problems are caused by these things?

Now I have a way to relieve myself of the pressures of this stress: something to lighten the load. I find that when I am not struggling with that inner burden I can more successfully deal with the rest of the world. Scientific research and the experience of nearly one million people have shown that the Transcendental Meditation Technique is most effective in releasing stress. I found it to be incredibly simple and natural. It demands nothing more outlandish of the meditator than to sit comfortably with eyes closed for twenty minutes twice a day.

I am convinced by my own experience that TM works. Although I was skeptical, I have lost a psychosomatic illness, can concentrate better and get more things done. I am more perceptive and understanding, and interact with other people better. I understand my motives and goals as never before. Things in general can only get better because I am better.

–MELANIE VAN RIPER

SWEET BETTY'S COOKIN CORNER

Hi Hi Hi once again food fans. This is sweeter than sweet Betty bringing you another fantastic fancy from my food favorites for all you fun-lovers to fabricate.

I sure hope you've recovered from last week's fabulous first: Carrot Cake with Cream Cheese frosting. If you missed it, consult my enticing entry in a back issue.

This week's concoction can be conjured conveniently from a conventional cucumber to create a convivial combination with your catch – fish that is. The cucumber mold is simply scurrilous with salmon. So invite old Governor Tom over and serve it up. He can always use a light lunch.

CUCUMBER MOLD (good w/ salmon)

1 T gelatin
¼ C H2O (garlic?)
3 oz. pkg. cream cheese
2 C. cucumber (drained, grated, pared)
1 C. mayonnaise
¼ C. onion
¼ C. parsley
½ t. salt
8" mold

Soften gelatin in H2O (or cuke juice) and dissolve over hot H2O. Stir cheese to soften, add cuke and mayonnaise, etc. Last, add gelatin.

POEM FOR A SUICIDE UNCOMMITTED

I once had a lover who told me that poets are trying to capture their bodies in their poems. They lose themselves in broken minds and aching hearts, to words they can never recover and thoughts that don't rhyme. I asked her not to leave and she went away.

Poem for a Suicide Uncommitted
(i'd rather be invincible)

It's torn me into broken pieces
Like a romantic's crushed heart.
I thought I'd look to you for consolation
At the right moment or even just to say
Ready, get set, please don't let it go to waste.

I couldn't be what you wanted,
I didn't want to be anything at all.
You said pause, head changes move slowly
Like old people in the hot sun.
Come to the cooling lake find what's real in the rain.

The lake offers nothing but water,
A place to hide my salty tears.
I have no time left to drown my nightmares,
So I walk between the raindrops.
Comfort, I cry it to my emptiness and your shoulder.

You said my star is not slipping.
Still I grip the razor blades, goofballs and a lamenting rosary
Like a beggar hangs onto his tin cup.
There is nothing as real as not knowing where to go
Or why I can't see my tired soul in the mirror.

I remember the last attempt, the one that failed
On the blunted, rusty edge of pain that still lingers
on.
Tonite, I say I'm a pro, I can do it for the money.
I'll do it for you but I'm not really that generous,
And you've always been able to weep without trying.

I am a stranger, devoted to myself
And stranger to those who know me.
I can't take anyone with me this time
Though I'm sure they'd all love to go,
And like brahmans they say do it "my way".

I thought I might find my own way
Like a lover stealing through the night's sheets.
A lover alone is on the road to end it all.
So I scrambled in the dead end of my ways
Crumbling the lines and ties to those I once touched.

Once I might have told you unknowingly
That I really don't want to die, not even tonite.
I rather be invincible like a king of divine might,
But like my wrists I slice my life too thin.

Still I turned away when you did try to listen.
Remembering the past and that night by the lake
When you, like a sorceror said you knew me.
But I lost you when I decided all I wanted to be
Was forgotten like a stenciled character
Or a paper cut that never healed right.

All you knew was the person you were with then
And he's gone now and I can't remember his face.

–LARRY SEIDEN

FRENCH CANADA? C'EST PAS MAL!

There is nothing quite so relaxing (and sometimes painful) as the sedate state of a gastronomically satiated feeling. The entire body becomes physically inert from the invasion of these natural sedatives, unless you are one whose back breaks for want of a cigarette.

French Canada would hardly qualify as a dieter's haven or heaven as it is practically impossible for most people to lose weight up there. It's no myth really as a leading Canadian nutritionist claimed that nearly 85% of Canadians are overweight to some degree or another. Be that as it may, I should hope that Canada has become noted for more than its hockey players, Dudley Do-Right, Molson's beer and maple-leaf flag-toting beavers. Procreation and gastronomy have left their unmistakably indelible marks in certain parts of Canada, at least. I'm somewhat reminded of the LaBatt commercial which in a way summarizes the feeling pretty well - "Lui y connait ca!"

The second in a series of five international dinners hosted by Saga at Wright Dining Hall on Redstone Campus, French Canada Night was a very reminiscent and filling experience as hordes of the hungry and curious came sallying forth to infiltrate the premises for a sampling of a little something more than just plain pea soup. Food abounded that would defy the strictest and most miserly of diets as well as the sturdiest and heartiest of appetites. (You were expecting maybe Black Jacques Chalacke or Big Jean LaFoote?) The facilities, replete with the familiar nourishment, sported the buffet style, with three distinct serving tables boasting the quality of wares: one containing various salads, another a variety of soups such as Soupe aux Pois de Chez Nous, Soupe de Fromage Canadienne, and Gratin a L'Oignon with plenty of bread to go with it, and finally the last and proudest of the three contained the main dishes with savoury gastronomical delights as Petite Marmite which is a very tasty melange of chicken, beef (non-tainted) and vegetables; Seafood a la Quebecoise which is cod fish covered with a spicy tomato sauce; Ratatouille, a splendid blend of squash and eggplant; and finally fried potatoes and fresh peas.

To accent the occasion, several people toted along their favourite beverage as there were no Molson's beer to be prevailed upon. Camille Dubois and friends provided the appropriate musical atmosphere reeling out quadrilles and some toe-stamping French-Canadian (what else) bluegrass tunes to assist the digestive process.

A healthy congratulations to the people at Saga on their French lessons as it was definitely a meal you couldn't knock with a ten-foot maple-leaf.

—ALEXIS MacTAVISH

FESTIVAL OFFERS FINE PRODUCTION OF OUR TOWN

To make the simplicity of an earlier day real and unembarrassing to the disillusioned audience of 1975 is difficult, especially when the earlier day isn't far enough off to have entered the universe of make-believe.

The Grover's Corners of Thornton Wilder's Our Town is a New Hampshire town at the turn of this century, so our mothers and grandmothers remember it well.

Director Edward J. Feidner and his Champlain Shakespeare Festival cast meet the challenge, and do a disarming job of this visit to our former unsophisticated selves. The simple story of the life of a small town can still be told convincingly if the actors are expert enough to avoid the embroidery and give us the plain, tough, amusing, touching fabric straight from the loom. They're doing it this summer at the Festival.

Armin Shimerman is the busy little stage manager who trots about describing his village, introducing its population, bringing them on for key scenes, and taking a couple of parts himself when needed. He is the bustling, understanding, twinkly but matter of fact creator who opens the curtain on other lives for his audience, cheerfully but not unsympathetically lets it fall when timely, and gives us the overview of the familiar last act from the graveyard, when the dead look back upon the living with the detachment of those who view eternity and can never again adjust their vision to any shorter view.

Mr. Shimerman's partnership with the audience never wavers, and his purposeful vitality, like that of a puppeteer playing all the parts, keeps the play moving smoothly.

As you may remember from "doing" this play in high school, (we didn't, as the last production we saw, some years ago, was highly forgetable) the two central families in the play are the Gibbses - the town doctor, his wife, son, and daughter; and the Webbs - the weekly newspaper editor and his wife, son, and daughter.

Next door neighbors George Gibbs and Emily Webb ultimately marry, and during their school days and courtship we get a clear picture of their town with its newsboy, milkman, constable, town drunk, town gossip, and its two central, mainstay institutions, the schools and the churches.

Rita Litton's Mrs. Gibbs and Susan Selig's Mrs. Webb are both heart-warming as the attractive, hard-working, practical wives and mothers whose endless daily activity kept home and community going. Robert Ousley is a pleasant Dr. Gibbs, and Jeffrey DeMunn an outstanding Editor Webb, wry, acerbic, certainly the traditional dry and unfalkative New Englander with a heart of gold, but this side caricature.

Charles Towers as George and Susan Dunlop as Emily, the boy and girl next door, have the toughest job, and do it superbly. Can you watch a young couple so simple they can only communicate their feelings obliquely, whose profoundest love scene is played at an ice cream soda fountain and expressed by the glow in their eyes, the uncontrollable smiles of discovered joy, culminating in the ecstasy of a handclasp - and not laugh? Certainly you can, and you will.

Their wedding, with Emily's mother hoping someone has told her daughter a little about sex, because she certainly couldn't, and George frightened of the whole thing, and everyone recognizing the totality of the commitment and the creation of a new household in Our Town, is as powerful as genuine simplicity can be.

You will also find Sarah Brooke lots of fun as gushy and gossipy Mrs. Soames, and Claude Albert Saucier good as the typical - but still laughable - absent-minded professor.

The final act, which puts life in perspective from the cemetary on the hill and makes Grover's Corners relevant to human life anywhere on earth in any century, is beautifully staged. There are the dead - some of whom we met alive in earlier acts - up on their beautiful cemetary hill, able to see their former loved ones, now motes in the cosmic vision. Below them, in a sea of black umbrellas, are the townspeople come to see Emily's interment. And there is Emily herself, with difficulty making the transition from involvement with those she loved on earth to withdrawal from all that is ephemeral.

Polly Smith's costumes have charm and fitness. The lack of a stage set, except for a few chairs, helps promote Mr. Wilder's aim of putting life in perspective (you can sketch in people and scenery anywhere, in any era, and the ending won't vary). All in all, it's a fine show as forerunner to the 1976 Bicentennial Year.

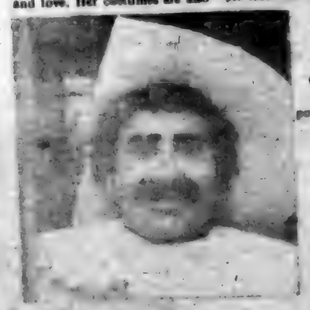
—RUTH W. PAGE

MUCH ADO CONT.

(continued from page thirteen)

fellowship.

Polly Smith's period costumes convey the feeling of a Renaissance court, the appropriate milieu for such wit and love. Her costumes are also extremely colorful, and help to characterize the players' roles. For example, the two main lovers, Benedick and Claudio, are in dark and light shades of brown, respectively. They are set off from the black gloves, cane, and somber red of the evil Don John. This pattern of differentiation is generally carried through.



Gerald E. Moses, portraying Dogberry in "Much Ado About Nothing"

The stage is almost bare, the same from scene to scene. As in Shakespeare's Globe, only a few emblematic props are changed to suggest change of location. An artificial tree is brought on to indicate that the acting area is now a garden. Shortly after, a large candle and portable colored "window" suggest a church for the wedding.

This puts primary emphasis where it belongs in a play of wit and love - on the poetry, not the visual spectacle, and on the affections of the lovers.

It is a fine, and a thoroughly delightful, presentation in which all aspects of the production nicely mesh with one another.

Come, rejoice, and be gay in love.

—JAMES HOWE

Correspondence cont.

(continued from back page)

SOME MORE SWEET REVENGE

open support to men who refuse to give up their male privilege as they hide behind innocent wide eyed faces. Why do you glorify a man who wants to DO something TO a woman. That's what a rapist does!!!

Have you ever asked yourself if racism exists in Vermont against Black and Brown (i.e. Third World) people as well as French speaking people. I've heard too many first hand reports of "chasing frogs" and burning out, running out and shooting dead black and brown people in Vermont to think there is no racism here. As a Jew I've heard my share of antisemitism too. Racism has always been used by the ruling class - yes, MacKay, there is a ruling class - to divide workers and bring Fascism or Fascistic terror. Do you remember the populist party in the South in the 1890's or the Workingman's Party in California in the 1880's? Both had the potential to confront the Monopolist rulers of the U.S. Based on the multiracial working class solidarity, both resorted to racism which kept workers divided and defeated. In each case Black and Chinese people were subjected to fascistic terror: Mob beatings and lynchings, burning of houses and stores, disenfranchisement and Jim Crow social status. In Nazi Germany it was little different, in Boston today it is not much different. Why is dealing with racism in Vermont "prattling"?! Shouldn't white Vermonters fight racism anywhere and everywhere it exists. Wasn't the American empire founded on racism as well as capitalism and doesn't its dismantling require analizing, exposing, and crushing RACISM!! Scott MacKay, your prattle about the "Third World in Vermont" sounds like Louise Day Hicks and the good folks of ROAR in Southie.

Throughout the article your bourgeoise attitude comes out. You were not a participant, only an observer. Your observations of the lifestyles, and class of the people who were at the convention reveals the fact that you are sheltered MacKay - sheltered in a mediocre college state of mind. "Myopic eggheads, organic farmers," et al, where were you!! Do you know where the people who attended the convention work, or what they do in their communities. Coop workers are eggheads, aren't they! NOFA - Natural Organic Farmer's Association - members who are 300 strong and have organized Farmers' Market and producer cooperatives around Vermont, are eggheads too, MacKay, right? I guess you consider the people who work in low cost community health centers which serve poor working people in political and real economic ways lifestyle chauvisists too. How many times did YOU have to go to the People's Free Clinic because you couldn't afford a doctor or the hospital?

Those women, they don't work do they, not in the hospitals, phone company, offices, etc. which Franco keeps referring to. Have you seen a lot of those women you criticize at UVM like yourself. Maybe you should look into who works at the Women's Health Center, My Sisters' Place, and in WAR before you put down my sisters. Maybe you should see where people work before you pass such poor judgment.

Ever go to PACT MacKay? Ever been evicted or had the lights and heat shut off? Ever been to the welfare office or to a welfare hearing? Ever been in a room with 30 angry, radicalized poor working folks? If you go to PACT maybe you'll see some of the same eggheads you found at the convention. By the way, ask the people who didn't go why they didn't go. Maybe you'll find peoples' lives more complex and hard than you thought. No carpenters, mechanics, or unemployed folks there? You were too busy drinking MacKay - you should have hung out with people other than the dreg left!

Finally, you dealt with the convention in a classic bourgeoise way, through individualism and sensationalism. Personalities were glorified or put down. There was no realization that the L.U. is just forming, that this last convention was just the first painful step in trying to forge a mass party of workers and farmers in this state. Why do you glorify someone who showed up 1½ days late when he should have been trying to create a positive political climate throughout the entire time. Politics is more than mouthing the oppressions of our day. It is getting an analysis out to people and organizing around it everyday - not just at elections. It is struggling to understand where Vermonters are really at through practice. Unfortunately, you have glorified the "stars" at the expense of the workers. I criticize the "stars" for lack of discipline and lack of political insight. A party works because it is organized collectively to produce a real analysis and strategy, not because its "stars" have individual energy or charisma. This convention was in part a revolt of party workers who want to work collectively instead of separately. It was a first attempt to have people instead of events regain control over the party.

I was looking for a good analysis of the convention. I have yet to find a real analysis of its good and bad points. But your analysis, MacKay, has me wondering how long you're going to remain on the fence through the up and coming repression, depression. The decline of an Empire is slow and painful. Its opponents are mercilessly beaten. Which side are you on MacKay, what are you doing to move people toward Life.

Sincerely,
Gene Bergman
L.U. Party member & worker

FRIENDSHIP NEEDED

To the Editor:

To many people I'm just an anonymous convict paying his debt to society. I don't blame anyone for that either, and I realize that I am responsible for making that wrong decision which ultimately brought me here. But, inside my own heart, my anonymity becomes anonymous as the individuality of my personal loneliness aches out its identity to remind me that I am me.

Years of yesterdays have gone by, and my today and tomorrows can be expected to be nothing more than carbon copies of the cruel loneliness which has haunted me. To elude the ghosts of solitary, I try to read books during my hours of leisure. At times, it seems as though the only people I know are the characters from pages of fiction. Although they are interesting, they are poor company because they don't respond to my need to be in contact with reality, however cruel it is at times.

So, at nights I lay awake wondering whether there is someone, somewhere that might take a sincere interest in me. Could this be a dream never realized? I hope not. I will never know unless I take the time to inquire.

It doesn't make a difference who you are, just reach out your hand of friendship, and I will surely grasp it. I need a friend.

Please write.
Sincerely,
Robert Mackie
No. 136235
Box 787
Lucasville, Ohio 45648

PORTUGAL REVOLUTION CONT.

(continued from page seven)

the trade unions. The proposal quickly met with a holler from many quarters. Many viewed it as the establishment of a transmission belt directly from the MFA down to the workforce in order to maintain its labor discipline, that its actual function was to help the MFA preserve the economic status quo as much as possible.

Presently, the Portuguese have precious few independent class organizations, such as factory councils or strike organizations. The Constituent Assembly, which was elected last spring with the Socialist gaining the most seats, has been given explicit instructions to limit itself to the formation of a new constitution. This is pretty much an empty task, for the real shape of power has already been carved by the military, even though 60% of the Portuguese have voted for working class parties.

In past weeks, the MFA has successively proposed, withdrawn, and proposed again this plan of direct democracy. The Communists have supported the plan, and the Socialists have quit the government in protest. Apparently, the CP feels sure it will continue in its role with the MFA, and the MFA feels that the CP, with its political machine and control over the trade union federation, is the best vahicle for enforcing labor discipline. But it seems unlikely that the actual existence of the Socialist Party will be threatened. The Socialists have for the most part been loyal to the MFA in its schemes, though they have been critics of the more heavy-handed tactics. The Socialists await in the wings, with their milk-toast Keynesian politics, hoping to serve as the more flexible partner in tackling the problem of labor discipline in Portugal's privately-owned industries.

Socialism and Democracy

The basic fact in the Portuguese situation is that neither the Socialist nor Communist parties are going to lead the country to democratic socialism as long as their capitulation with the MFA continues. The Communists, for all their strong arm tactics and heavy rhetoric, have long since ceased to be a radical force in politics, content instead to do the dirty work for any regime that comes along proclaiming itself progressive. The Socialists, for all their prattling about democracy, have too easily catered to the MFA whenever a ministerial portfolio is waved in front of their noses. They have neither the program nor the fortitude to mobilize Portugal's working class for a genuine drive against restrictions on democratic rights, for economic justice, for an end to the dominance of the country by a few wealthy families.

The MFA will be able, at least in the near future, to defend Portugal's old, crusty monopolists and landlords in the name of the people. If the present tension continues, the officers of the military government may just decide that the relationship of forces are ripe to put the left to bed once and for all, just as the "progressive and democratic" officers of Chile did in September of 1973.

—JOHN FRANCO

CLASSIFIED

HOUSE WANTED: Looking for country home to rent within 20 miles of Burlington. Needed as soon as possible. Have Pet. Please call 985-8575.

For Sale: Mercury 1973 Comet, 4 door, 302 V-8, auto trans., P.S. AC, excellent condition, has to be seen to be appreciated. Call 863-1413 after 6.

Moving - must sell colonial sofa excellent condition $80; table loom $40; bureau $12; pair V.W. snow tires $30. Call 863-6249.

Horseshoeing & trimming. Tim Wentzell, Farrier. All work guaranteed. 863-7375.

Experienced MA in English. Will edit and/or type manuscripts. Call 862-4178.

Black men's wallet lost on campus. Reward offered. 863-6504.

For Sale: Detson 510 1971. Good condition. Call Staige, 658-2053.

For Sale: Unused Kice & Maxwell Organic Chemistry text, $9. Call 862-2133.

Wanted to buy second hand double bed or water bed. Please call Donna at 656-2053 (days).

Resita 6 string guitar - 2 years old - good condition - nylon strings $65. Call Sally at 862-6832 for information.

I want to buy a second-hand 35 mm camera, excellent condition. 862-1462.

Wanted: Two bedroom apartment within walking distance to campus. Needed by August or September. Please call (203) 334-7104.

I'm looking for the ideal living situation. Call 862-5137 late evening or early morning or leave message.

Wanted: Four bedroom remodled building apartment - must be 19th century wood panelled and fireplace. P.S. I'm looking for ideal living situation too. Call Steve, 863-5008.

For sale - shell sno-shoe studded winter tires. D78 x 13, will fit vega or pinto, $20/pr. Fischer Impersator skis, 195 cm. Refinished past season. VG condition, $40.00. WANTED - used car cassette deck with FM radio. Will trade. 863-3241 after 6:00.

For Sale: 1968 Travelall 12-14 MPG, new tires runs well. $350. Call 864-4972 evenings.

Classified ads are free. They must be in the Summer Cynic office each Monday before the Thursday issue.

summer cynic

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

Editorial

It was usually around seven in the morning when Cowboy Calloway would come roaring onto our street with his big, old grey garbage truck. I was always out sitting on the red brick stoop out in front of our house.

Cowboy would pull the truck up close to the curb at the beginning of the block and set the brake. Then he'd come flying out of the green cab door and head to the rear of the truck grabbing hold of a huge orange barrel and swing it up so it balanced on his shoulder then start half-trotting half-dancing off towards the first house.

Good Old Cowboy. He would have a hold on some ugly banged up can of garbage and with one swift steady move swing that sucker up in the air and pour its contents into his barrel. Off again down over to the next house, and then the next. As his barrel filled it didn't slow him down at all. In fact, he moved faster and faster until he had collected the refuse from at least half the houses on the block. He'd race back to the rear open end of the truck and heave his load into that huge metal mouth. He would give a pull on the lever and the bang-clang-grind of machinery would set the metal mouth into motion. Biting and chewing and knawing and chopping all kinds of shit. Gulp... swallow... ahhh... Cowboy would jump back into the driver's seat. He would slam the clutch to the floor and jam it into gear and be gone to get the other end of the street. Sometimes I would cry when his truck would disappear around the corner.

When my elders would ask me (as so many did) what I wanted to be when I grew up, I always said a garbage collector. They thought I was a cute kid... with a lousy prospect for the future.

Last month in Boston, the infamous pollster Louis Harris told a group of mayors meeting there that according to his studies that the public has more confidence in their garbagemen than in their politicians.

If you want an honest answer to a question, for example, What it means to be an American?... I would talk to Cowboy Calloway before I would talk to Gerald Ford.

Correspondence

FROM ACROSS THE BORDER

To the Editor:

When my husband and I were in your lovely city last week I picked up this copy and an earlier one, and really it is a most informative and intelligent paper!

Page 11 is a real eye-opener! (Vol. 1 – No. 2)

Page 7 – salaries. I think ALL government salaries should be made public – all over the world. After all, those people are the employees of the taxpayer!

I do have a little gripe!

We parked on a street, put our 20 cents in the meter – thinking 2 hours would be sufficient to visit the book shops, etc., and then back and down to the Battery Park!

It expired, and we returned 30 minutes later to find a FINE notice! But, what we DID notice coming up the street that several VERMONT cars had expired signs, but NO fine notices, only three of us – ALL VISITORS. We spotted the homely "meter maid" and we told her we did not think she was being very hospitable to visitors!

On going to pay the fine at the city hall, we passed a small parking area, 25 cents for 5 hours!

I would suggest a 25 cent for 3 hours be put on the street meters. I do hope visitors to Montreal are treated with leniency!

Wishing your paper success in all its endeavours!

Sincerely,
Nora Manitius

P.S. Any vacancies at the Correction Center! The inmates seem to have very relaxing life style! sandals, shorts, cigs., watering the lawn!

CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

To the Editor:

I think you missed the boat (or gondola) when you reviewed the International Dinner debut (Italian Night) at Wright Dining Hall. The spirit was there, but hardly a mention of the High School Music chorus and soloists, who incidentally put the whole program together in a relatively short time and provided the spirit of the evening. We are greatly moved by the fact that some people enjoyed their wine and dinner to the point that they could feel uninhibited to get up and dance to their hearts' desires. However, I feel your reporter lacks a certain sophistication when he regards the impromptu entertainment as the highlight of the evening. Your photo hardly relays the real spirit and enthusiasm which the strolling soloists provided. Let's give credit where credit is due!

Fond Admirer of International Cuisine and Music, Barbara Moser

SOME SPORTING THANKS

To the Editor:

Just a note to let you know that I think the SUMMER CYNIC is fantastic. I find it very entertaining and informative as well.

In particular, I would like to extend my feelings to Al Bernardina and his "Mad Hatter." Al, you've succeeded in bringing true wit and tactful sarcasm to Burlington sports journalism. I turn to your column immediately and have been thoroughly pleased, though not always in agreement with you! Best of luck with it, and by the way, Locker Room is a drag now! I look forward to your comments on the All Star game.

Best wishes for equally successful issues.

Zoe Breiner
UVM Purchasing Dept.
"Local Baseball Enthusiast"

SWEET REVENGE

To the Editor:

I've got a few reactions to your writer Scott MacKay and his article you called "OPEN SEASON: LIBERTY UNION: GROPING FOR AN IDENTITY." I had better explain that I am a worker, a shit worker in construction. I've been active in the Liberty Union for the last year and I am an ex-student at your school.

MacKay is misleading your readership by leading it to believe that the Liberty Union lacks working class support. In fact, the great bulk of our support is from working class communities and virtually none of our 10,000 votes come from "Suburbanites, five years removed from the Brandeis-B.U.-Clark-N.Y.U. lifestyle" Unfortunately, most working class folks don't have the time and energy for convention politics, although, thankfully, most also do not have the time to read MacKay.

My second criticism is that while I am glad you are able to understand Vermont's position as an economic colony, I am sorry you are unable to understand the relevance of the Third World's anti-colonial revolution in a Liberty Union convention.

My third criticism is that Martha Abbott smokes Salems, not Marlboros.

We got off easy on these points. Then MacKay turned his energies to the feminist women and men at the convention. I must say that in retrospect, it doesn't surprise me to find that "Cynic reporter" MacKay was that obnoxious drunk in the corner of the room whose tasteless nonsensical remarks left all those near him embarrassed. You all know the type.

He directed some pretty obscene remarks at our long overdue and difficult discussion of feminism and sexism in the Party. Unfortunately, the discussion failed to find its way into his Heineken drunk world.

I can just picture him and a couple of frat brothers laughing it up at the tennis courts. The brave brothers, far out of earshot of any threatening feminists, probably began by cajoling the Party and its feminist struggle.

Then suddenly, as voices reached their crescendo, our champion Male Chauvenist Pig of the Year/Women Hating Division's raised his voice above the others to announce a new women slur: "Dyke-Cunt Front (D.C.F.)." No one will ever have to call them "cooties" again. And our over-intellectual, underfeeling reporter gets a laugh with his cute rhyme. The only thing now missing from his Norman Mailer image is a pipe and a mocho dry martini.

I have just got to say this guy is offensive of the lowest order. I suppose he is the type who figures it is all made OK again if he is able to laugh at himself as well as the "D.C.F." Well, "honey," that is a pile of reactionary slop. A pig is a pig, no matter the mark.

"DYKO CUNT FRONT." The obscene extremes some people are willing to go to in order to come off as clever.

Very sincerely,
Bob Mueller

"Furthermore, Mr. MacKay..."

To the Editor & Scott MacKay:

One wonders if Scott MacKay really attended the Liberty Union Convention. If you did, I wonder where you got your analysis.

Did you have any idea what kind of party the Liberty Union was when you walked in the door at Kingsland Bay? Did you know who did the work or how decisions were made? What about its mass base, how many of those working people do you know? Are you trying to make real social change in Vermont? From reading your article I have to conclude the answer to these questions is no.

Your article was sexist, racist, and bourgeoisy. No amount of tongue-in-cheek can excuse the phrase "Dyko-Cunt-Front." Or the swipe at Pat Swinton or Susan Saxe, both political prisoners, whose politics you dare not go into for fear of what I do not know. There was a lot of reaction to the discussion of women's oppression on both days. One such person equated the oppression of women to that of children. Did you agree with that? The feminist analysis was not all muddled, as you implied; men as well as women tried, it seems in vain, to explain that women are oppressed, that this oppression occurs within the party as well as outside of it, and that sexism along with capitalism and racism are the three major forces which keep people down in the U.S. and elsewhere in the world. Apparently you weren't listening. Your article with its sexist jargon and analysis gives

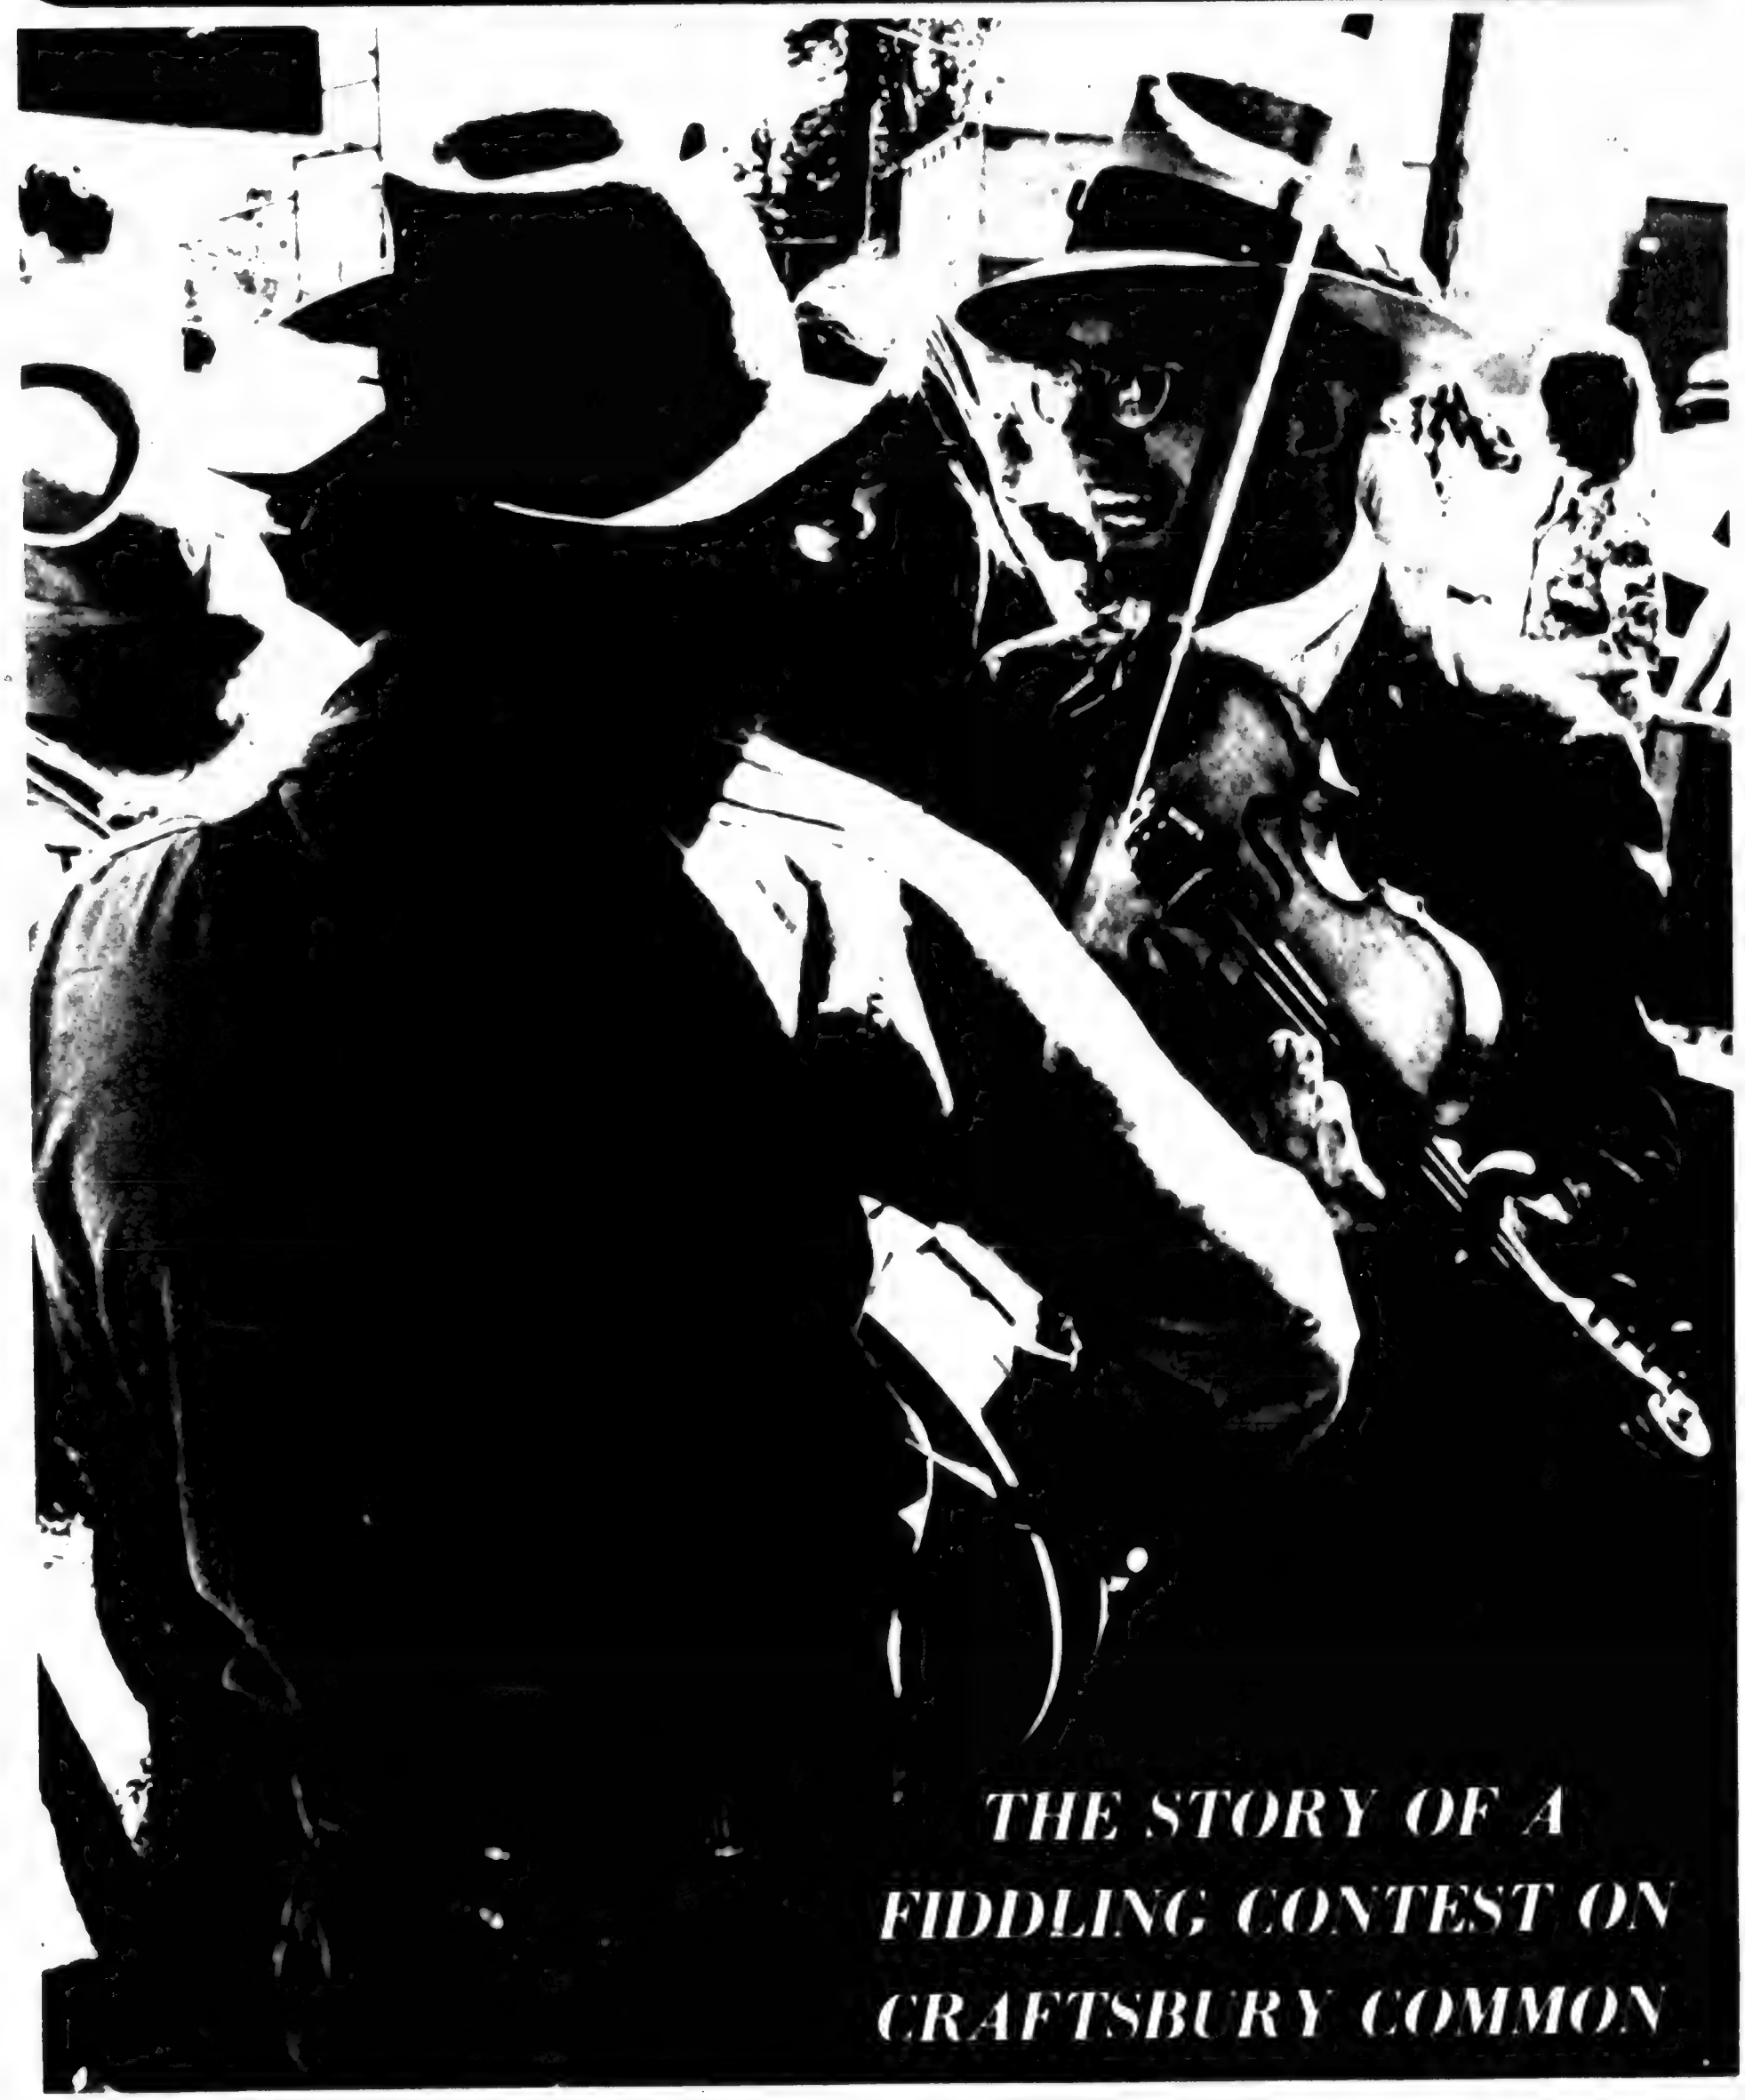
(continued on page nineteen)

Editor's Note: The Summer Cynic welcomes and encourages articles, columns, and letters from all interested students, faculty, and members of the community. All material must be submitted no later than Monday noon before the Thursday of publication. Material must be signed, names will be withheld upon request. If you are interested in writing or perhaps curious about how things are done, stop in – we are downstairs at Billings Center – or call 656-4911.

VOLUME I
NUMBER 5
JULY 31, 1975

Vermont summer cynic

Burlington, Vermont



THE STORY OF A FIDDLING CONTEST ON CRAFTSBURY COMMON

Get In On The Back To School Issue With VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC

This year the VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC will be publishing the UVM back to school issue. This will be a special issue printed to help reorient students to the Burlington area. Eleven thousand copies will be printed. Three thousand will be distributed the fourteenth of August and the remaining eight thousand will be distributed the first week that students return to campus. The paper will retain the high quality control evident in the previous issues printed this summer. Advertising rates will be those of the VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC. The deadline date for advertising is August 4th.

For further information contact:

VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC
Billings Center
University of Vermont
658-4911

Announcing a Big Money Saving Deal on Mobil Radials

at Spillane's Mobil

Radial Tire Sale

$36 $42 $49

Mobil Radial
Any Size Listed

Spillane's Servicenter
A FULL SERVICE MOBIL STATION

SUMMER CLEARANCE SALE

Mon., July 28 - Sat., August 9

Sleeping Bags Cooking Accessories
Parkas Shell Parkas & Clothing Tents
Sleeping Bag Accessories Packs

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.

SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY, LIGHTWEIGHT CROSS-COUNTRY, CAMPING AND MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT

SOUTH BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401 Tel. (802) 864-0473

100 DORSET STREET

Hours: 9:00 am - 9:00 pm, Mon. - Sat.

UGGGGGGG
summer cynic
Burlington, Vermont

Editors
Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

Managing Editor
Wyatt Kash

News Editor
Margo Howland

Consulting Editor
Kieras Bell

Columnists
Charley Baldwin, Alen Bernardina, Wayne Blocker, Carl Blumberg, Clair Cutter, Commodore Davidson, Ted Flanagan, John Franco, David Latane, Scott MacKay, Ken Miller, Elaine Peterson, Molina Ripieni, Jay Stevens, Frank Zuss

Photography
John Dillon

Graphics
Terry Marshal
Philip Van Wyck

Typesetter
Susan Ball

Advertising
Martha Richardson

Layout
Beth Cohen

Composition
KNE

Printer
North Country Printers

Legal Counsel
William Root

Radio Voice
Jacques Gosselin

Transportation
Wheatland

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the Vermont Summer Cynic do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont.

A Seymour Phuture Production

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ON TOUR: POLITICS IN QUEBEC – by John Franco ..... six
"If you're tired of the jaded politics of Gordon Paquette, Tom Salmon, George Meany, and Ronnie Reaguns... take the short two-hour trip to Montreal and surrounding parts." John Franco is onto another analysis, this time of radicalization in the province of Quebec.

"STUDIIS ET REBUS HONESTIS BE-EXAMINED" – by Z. Philip Ambrose ..... seven
UVM has reverted to the seal of 1800 which marked the stationary and official proclamation of the University in that day. Z. Philip Ambrose of UVM's Classics Department elucidates the seal's motto, "...studiis animumi at rebus honestis," by putting it in the context of its source in Horace's Epistles.

THE STORY OF A FIDDLING CONTEST ON CRAFTSBURY COMMON – by Wyatt Kash ..... eight
Wyatt Kash, Summer Cynic writer, provides an in-depth review of the history and the fiddlers of the attendance record-breaking Fiddling Contest last Saturday at Craftsbury.

EAST FAIRFIELD PARTY ..... fourteen
Reporting took a back seat as a team of Summer Cynic writers and photographers descended upon an unadvertised (but much-rumored) party in the small, farming community of Fairfield. They found every sort of person enjoying an entire weekend of music in a huge, brand-new dairy barn. Combined reports by Steve Tanner and Carl Blumberg. Photos by Steve Tanner and John Dillon.

LETTER FROM PARIS – by Elly Clay ..... sixteen
"She began to feel to the bottoms of her feet that she was going to be able to do it: to live in Paris as she had hoped she would be able to before coming," writer Elly Clay enrolled at the Sorbonne in Paris where she is living for the first time.

"A DREAM WITH NO STUMP ROOTS IN IT" – by David Huddle ..... seventeen Fantastic fiction regarding the roots of a garrish nightmare in a front lawn, reprinted from UVM English professor David Huddle's collection of stories, "A Dream with No Stump Roots in It: Stories."

DEPARTMENTS

Calendar and Announcements ..... four
News ..... six
Arts and Entertainment ..... twelve
Editorials ..... twenty
Mad Hatter – by Al Bernadina ..... seventeen
You and Your Plant – by Ted Flanagan ..... eighteen

Sweet Betty's Cookin' Corner – by Sweet Betty ..... eighteen Meditation Corner ..... nineteen

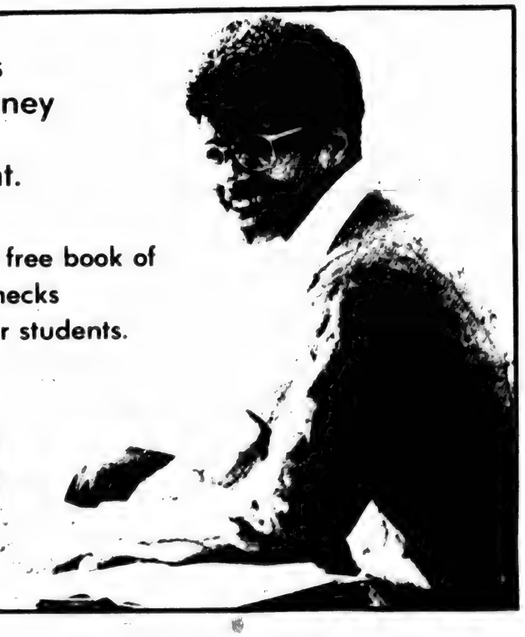
To our readers: THE VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC will not be publishing next week. However, a gargantuan Back-To-School Issue will be distributed August 14.

–The Editors

People with goals manage their money with a Howard Checking Account.



A free book of checks for students.

Turn to the Howard Bank
Member FDIC

Main Office: Main and St. Paul Streets, Burlington
Offices at: Church St., North Avenue, South Burlington, Essex Center, Essex Junction, Richmond, Shelburne, Winooski, St. Johnsbury, Enosburg Falls, Barton, Orleans, Rutland, Montpelier, Waitsfield, Killington, Berlin

CALENDAR AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fleming Museum

Champlain Shakespeare Festival

FRIDAY, AUGUST 1

Vermont Mozart Festival

Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents Much Ado About Nothing, at the Royall Tyler Theatre. [illegible]

SATURDAY, AUGUST 2

Vermont Mozart Festival presents Don Giovanni at St. Michael's College Chapel, 8 p.m. Tickets available from the Lane Series Office, 214 Waterman Bldg., 656-3456.

Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents Much Ado About Nothing, at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office [illegible]

SUNDAY, AUGUST 3

Mozart Festival Piano Concerto, 8 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel. Tickets still available from the Lane Series Office, 656-3456.

MONDAY, AUGUST 4

4 and 7:30 p.m. Scottish Country Dancing at Southwick Basement for both beginners and the more advanced. Details from Ben or Dot Stein, 862-6417.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 5

Children's Film Classics

Summer Session Films presents [illegible]

[illegible] choir concert

[illegible] festival

Shakespeare Festival

[illegible] AUGUST 3 [illegible]

[illegible] concert [illegible]

Shelburne Museum lectures

Mozart Festival

Champlain Shakespeare Festival

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7

High School Music Session [illegible] to present a ballet and modern dance concert at 8:30 p.m. Burlington High School; program details and tickets from 656-2134.

7 and 9 p.m. Children's Film Classics repeats; see details under August 5.

7 and 9 p.m. Summer Session Films presents Humphrey Bogart in Casablanca; admission $1 at Bittersweet Bldg.

8 p.m. Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents Much Ado About Nothing, at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office 656-2094.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 8

Student Appreciation Day, hosted by [illegible]; [illegible] for more information.

Summer Session Films presents [illegible] students, others $1.00, B-[illegible]

[illegible] at UVM Book [illegible] campus outside B[illegible] [illegible] per [illegible] [illegible] Chamber [illegible]

[illegible] choir concert

[illegible] festival

Shakespeare Festival

[illegible] AUGUST 3 [illegible] Excursion [illegible]

[illegible] concert [illegible] program [illegible]

Mozart Festival final concert, Burlington Unitarian Church; ticket information [illegible]

Champlain Shakespeare Festival presents Much Ado About Nothing, at the Royall Tyler Theatre. Box office 656-2094.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 10

[illegible] annual High School Debate Program [illegible] sponsored by Summer Session and directed by Professor Robert Huber.

MONDAY, AUGUST 11

Institute on Improving Adult Child Relationships. Register at Grasse Mount.

International Dinner German Night, 6:30 Wright Dining Hall. $3.25 or meal ticket plus $1.00.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 12

7 and 9 p.m., Summer Session Films present Elizabeth Taylor in Giant, $1.00, B-106 Cook.

Children's Film Classics, Hans Brinker or the Silver Skates, $.50, 101 Votey, 1:30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13

Children's Film Classics, Hans Brinker or the Silver Skates, see August 12.

Folk Dancing Southwick Gym, 7:30 - 9:30 p.m., $1.00.

Summer Session Films presents Alfred Hitchcock's North by Northwest, $1.00, B-106 Cook, 7 and 9 p.m.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 14

Summer Session Films presents David Miller's Lonely are the Brave, $1.00, B-106 Cook, 7 and 9 p.m.

Children's Film Classics presents Hans Brinker or the Silver Skates, see August 12.

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS FOR REMAINDER OF SESSION

August 1 Little Orchestra Concert, 8:00 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel

August 2 Symphonic Wind Ensemble, Stage Bands, Jazz Ensemble, 8:00 p.m. Ira Allen Chapel

August 3 Student Recital, 3:00 p.m. Harris-Millis lounge

August 3 Faculty Recital, 8:00 p.m. Harris-Millis lounge

August 4 Student Recital, 8:00 p.m. Harris-Millis lounge

August 8 Final Concert, Little Orchestra, Select Choir, Stage bands, 8:00 p.m. Patrick Gym

August 9 Final Concert, Band, Orchestra, Choir, 8:00 p.m. Patrick Gym

THANKS FROM VPIRG

VPIRG would like to thank all volunteers and persons who contributed to our bottle fund drive on Saturday, July 19th.

The bottle drive, although not turning out as many volunteers as we would have liked, proved to be fairly successful. About a hundred dollars was brought in over the weekend.

We would like to express our thanks to Kerry, owner of Kerry's Kwik Stop and Kerry's Pizza, for all his help in the redemption of the collected bottles.

BANJO DAN

Banjo Dan and the Midnight Plowboys will be performing at a Sunday celebration, August 3, on the green at Fort Ethan Allen. Starting at noon the celebration will include barbequed chicken, pony rides, games, etc. at no charge for admission. The outdoor affair is sponsored by the Ethan Allen Child Care Center. Rain location St. Michaels Auditorium.

LITTLE PROFESSOR BOOK CENTER®

40 Church St Burlington

Essex Jct. Shopping Center Essex Junction

Largest Paperback Selection in Vermont
Complete Study Notes
Small presses & some far out reading

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE

COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES

WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS

ROUTE 2, WILLISTON
862-7686

SHELBURNE CRAFT SCHOOL

Peter: Early evening, hot, sunny. Clouds stacked up like hay mows over Shelburne. I've been surveying the garden created in the Craft School lawn. Hopefully, by next year I'll have perfected a process by which the rampant zucchini can be converted into a building material, thus guaranteeing low cost housing for all. Zucchini board will be worth a fortune.

The students for the evening classes are beginning to drift down the driveway past the Weaving Building. It's time to go inside the Woodshop to start my "House Design" class. I can hear the slam of clay on the wedging table in the Pot Shop. In the Silver Shop tonight there's a stained glass class... From out in the yard you can hear the scratching sound of the glass cutter over the stained glass, then the sharp click as the scored glass is snapped. From the Weaving building comes the clicking sound of the heddles in the floor looms.

Pottery, weaving and woodworking have formed the core of the Craft School's classes for many years. Classes generally have two sections, for beginning and advanced students, and most are scheduled once a week for ten weeks.

In addition to the core crafts, the Craft School offers classes according to demand — in silverwork, off-the-loom weaving, stained glass work, carpentry, painting, house design, bookbinding, drawing, basketry.

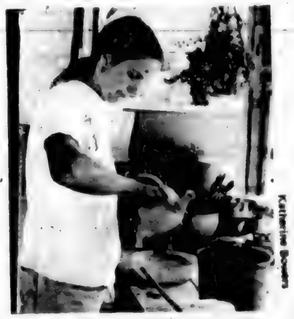
Judith: The Shelburne Craft School has been quietly tending to business for a long time. Some of its buildings date back to the early 1800's. The barn red weaving building was once a wagon paint-and-repair shop; next to it was a blacksmith shop which is now in the Shelburne Museum. The long yellow structure that is used for art classes was originally built as dormitories for railroad workers.

The idea for the Craft School grew in the 1930's, when the Reverend J. Lynwood Smith began teaching woodworking to Shelburne men and boys in the basement of the Trinity Episcopal Church rectory, and they outgrew the space. Shelburne was then still a farm community. With financial and physical help from many Shelburne townspeople, Mr. Smith rescued the dilapidated former carriage shop (most recently used as a meat market) from collapse — and the Shelburne Craft School began.

From the beginning, the Craft School had a double purpose: to provide young craftspeople with a place to get started, giving them studio space for their own work as well as an income from teaching adults and young people, and to give public school students in the area art, crafts and woodworking programs. Until the late 1960's, the Craft School continued to underwrite the hiring of full-time teachers for these programs. Now the classes are taught by Shelburne Middle School teachers using the Craft School's facilities.

In the renovated red building, in the early '40's, weaving classes joined the woodworking program. In the late '40's, the Pot Shop was built, and soon after, silverworking and painting classes were initiated. The young instructors came from all over: from the Rhode Island School of Design; from the American School for Craftsmen (then at Alfred, N.Y.); from Europe... Many stayed in the area, continuing their craft. Guy Cheng and Frank Mann were both instructors in the early days of the Craft School. Elizabeth Atwood, now an assistant professor at UVM, came to teach art and continues as weaving instructor and as a member of the Board of Directors. The Scatchards — George, Teri and Ted — have all taught pottery at one time or another.

I've been teaching pottery here for three years, and the Craft School feels like a place I live as well as work. To me, a working environment is really important — but the atmosphere of a lot of offices I've seen seems stifling. Here, I could work in the small garden outside the Pot Shop, hang plants in the windows, bring in a hot plate and books... But there are times when I walk right past that, just sit down and focus only on the clay. Once, I looked up and realized my entire intermediate class was at work in the shop. But it wasn't class time, and everyone kept quietly concentrating on their own work. People can come in and out whenever they want, night or day, and some adopt the place, work and talk and eat and help keep the shop running. I like that kind of community.

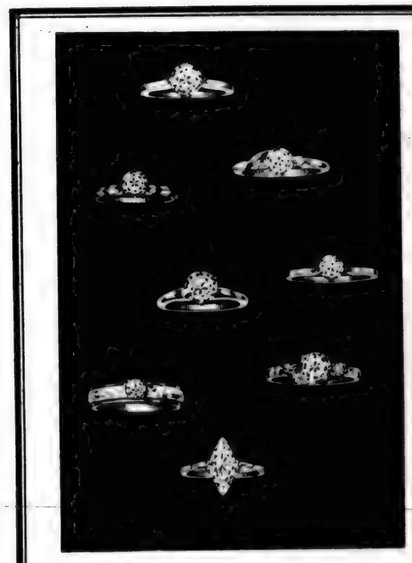


Peter: I started at the Craft School assisting Woody Smith, the present director, with a woodworking class several years ago. Woody is the finest woodworker I've ever run across. I have yet to see him stumped by a student's questions or predicament. He runs his classes on an almost one-to-one basis: he goes from student to student, helping them with whatever techniques or tools are necessary for their projects. Since the men and women in the classes have very different levels of skill and widely varying projects, the instruction is highly personalized.

For the last two years, I have been leading classes in Carpentry, which basically involves the tools and techniques of house construction, and in House Design, which deals with all the elements concerned with planning a house to meet an individual's or family's personal needs while retaining comfort and economy. We go over many alternative building methods, such as post and beam construction, solar and wood heat, natural materials, and so forth.

Judith: For the past two years, we've held a Craft Fair at the end of the summer at the Town Hall on Route 7, in the center of Shelburne. Besides a wide range of crafts, we've had mime troupes, music, fine foods, and a generally good time. Craft booths are set up at the Town Hall, and then demonstrations of pottery, stained glass, weaving and woodworking are scheduled at the Craft School down the road. People hang purple banners from the trees along the way to guide visitors between the Fair's two sites. Though we're calling this next one on August 16 and 17 "Third Annual Fair," people at the store in the village remember the Craft School's early fairs in the '50's — long before the recent craft renaissance. Sometimes it's hard to keep in mind how far back the Craft School goes, and how much groundbreaking work went into it in those early years. It grew by a community effort; and now, though people come for classes from all over northeastern Vermont, I think it's a sense of community, of personal space, that keeps the school going.

(Judith Bryant and Peter Marsh are two of the instructors at the Shelburne Craft School.)



The Best Gift of All

A Diamond Engagement Ring

It's the one gift she'll never forget.
Prices start from under $100

You are invited to open a Charge Account at Prestons.

A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844

F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

YARN CELLAR

REYNOLDS YARNS IN TWEEDS & NATURAL TONES

BULKY & KNITTING WORSTED WEIGHT

yarn cellar
THE ROYAL
96 Church Street
Burlington

NEWS

ON TOUR: POLITICS IN QUEBEC

If you're tired of the jaded politics of Gordon Paquette, Tom Salmon, George Meany, and Ronnie Rayguns, if you want a refreshing change from the business as usual politics of the Democans and Republicrats, if you want to see some real live, radical politics which involves not only the left-over firebrands at the local U, but also mom, pop, and the neighbors next door, invest in $5 worth of gas and take the short two-hour trip to Montreal and surrounding parts. That's right, next door to the beckoning country of pastoral Vermont, and just a short haul from Burlington, lies Quebec whose political climate is light years ahead of both Vermont or the USA as a whole.

Quebec is a province where the unions still lock the management in the office for the duration of a strike, a place where the teacher's unions issue manifestos entitled "Schools in Service to the Ruling Class" rather than diddling around with the likes of Al Rollins. Quebec is a place which, along with the rest of the world, celebrates May Day. This past May Day in Montreal saw a demonstration of 30 thousand radicals and trade unionists, with the locals from the French neighborhoods cheering on the procession from the balconies of the apartment flats, and with the teachers standing in front of the grade schools with placards carrying the demands of their trade unions. Even the grade schoolers were sitting along the sidewalk with mini-banners reading "Quebec Libre."

Radicalization in Quebec has escalated in the past five years with increasing trade union militancy, which has swept Canada as a whole, and the recent increase in Separatist sentiment among the Quebecois. Quebec is both a political and cultural colony of Canada. Eighty per cent of its wealth is owned either by Americans or English-speaking Canadians. The situation there is somewhat reminiscent of Vermont. There is far less manufacturing employment than in the rest of the country and the rate of unemployment is steadily double of that in Ontario. But Quebec is also culturally distinct from the rest of Canada. That culture generally serves as a demarcation line for discrimination and exploitation. The salary in Quebec of an English speaking male is 45% higher than a French speaking male, and the wage of an average earner in Ontario is 40% higher than that of a French speaking Quebecois.

The political pot in Quebec has really began to brew ever since the FLQ did their nutsy thing back in 1970. Though the FLQ's terrorism threatened to bring the house down on those with radical or separatist sentiments, ironically separatism and labor radicalism became more palatable for wider sections of the Quebec population ever since.

This sentiment festered and burst upon the political scene in 1972 when 210 thousand public and para-public employees went off the job in the biggest strike in Canadian history, demanding a minimum wage of $100 a week. Though the strike was not explicitly nationalist or separatist in orientation, most of the strikers linked the demand for a bare minimum standard of living with their exploitation as French Canadians. As a result, many labor leaders were publicly proclaiming the "society is not static. It can and must be changed in radical and revolutionary directions."

When the April strike ended, the government imposed several fines on many of the unions and arrested three of the union leaders for violation of anti-strike injunctions. Many of Quebec's workers became mighty sore at the government's crackdown, and responded with a nine-day wildcat general strike of 100 thousand workers, demanding the release of the union leaders, and an end to the retributions on the unions. Some towns in Quebec were completely shut down by the strikers. These towns became centers of the strike with daily town meetings, the publishing of strike newspapers, and the seizure of the local press and media. In fact during the May 1972 strike, 12 TV stations were seized throughout the province. Even the unions in the English-Canadian owned Montreal dailies closed down in a one day sympathy strike. Workers in the General Motors plant in Ste-Therese occupied the plant, and ever since that occupation the management has addressed the employees in French rather than English.

Though the May 1972 general strike petered out, the event left its mark on the trade unions. Three of the major trade union federations have declared their support for independence. The aforementioned radical manifestos are another product of the May upheaval.

Though nothing so dramatic has erupted in Quebec since 1972, the militant tenor of politics, especially trade union politics, has escalated in the past three years. During the most recent May Day celebration, the entire town of Joliet closed down in a general strike for a week – just for general principles. The number of working days lost to strikes has dramatically increased in past years, the most notable of these strikes being by the construction workers building the Olympic village, and by the workers at the United Aircraft plant. The construction unions have been put under government trusteeship since their last strike, with their membership carefully screened for any potential "troublemakers." The workers at United Aircraft have been on strike for 17 months, and Quebec's workers went out on a 120 thousand person, one day general strike in support of the aircraft workers. On the political level, the radicalization in Quebec seems to have stalled. Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois was decisively checked in the last elections to the Quebec national assembly, although the party received strong support from Montreal's working class districts. Many people in Quebec feel that the election's results did not accurately reflect the depth or trend in political sympathies, arguing that the stagnation in the PQ's election support was due to the party's willy-nilly attitude towards the unions. Levesque has on several occasions disassociated himself from the trade unions' more radical struggles.

The political scene in Quebec is further complicated by the policies of Canada's social democrats, the New Democratic Party which has opposed Quebec separatism. This has grated both sides, because the NDP is supported, and was founded, by Canada's trade unions. The NDP has also chosen to the Harold Wilson type politics, having a difficult time in the last national Parliament elections, distinguishing itself from Trudeau's Liberal Party. The result: the NDP does horribly in Quebec, and the Quebec trade unions get lukewarm support from the NDP.

Yet the political landscape in Quebec promises to get more interesting as time goes on, especially this summer as the public employees' contracts come up again. If and when things get popping, the reader might want to take up on this writer's earlier suggestion, and pop on up to Montreal and see some real politics in action. It will be a promising change from American politics where, as Michael Parenti has said, "the politicians' campaign promises are gathered up every election day like so many barn droppings."

—JOHN FRANCO

THE CUPBOARD IS NOT BARE

The Community Action Council Emergency Food Shelf is located in an old storefront at 180 Intervail Street. The door leaks, a few windows are cracked with age and the sills are beginning to rot. But Les Haskins, the office worker, finds the time to engage in improvement projects when the office is quiet. We found him, paint brush in hand, working on the front of the building. "We had a real nice sign," he explains, "but it blew down yesterday." He put his paintbrush down next to the can of yellow paint and showed us inside.

In the rear of the office is the grocery cupboard, the food stacked neatly on its shelves. Available stock includes popular staples as brown rice and macaroni and a wide selection of 'meals in a can' for those who do not have kitchens equipped with the variety of utensils and extras necessary to cook up a meal from scratch. There is also a stove and refrigerator in the office and Les and David Blodin would like to be able to have hot meals available on the premise for those who may be traveling through and are stranded in town without a job.

David is the Outreach Worker checking with families in their homes and contacting churches. He is the Community Action Council employee who started the Food Shelf almost single-handedly last August. A pilot project of the CAC the Food Shelf was originally [illegible] and 50 area families [illegible] Shelf was open from 9 – 5 on Monday through Friday. David feels that with the necessary funds or volunteer manpower these hours could be extended and the effectiveness of the service would be greatly increased.

The Food Shelf has helped about 400 families since it opened. Most are referred by Social Services and are cases that have been rejected from agencies such as Welfare and General Assistance. Summer is a slow period for the Shelf. About fourteen persons come in a day as compared with an average of twenty-four in the cold winter months when expenses are compounded with the cost of heating oil and warm clothes. As layoffs in the city increase, Les and David are seeing more and more middle income people. These are waiting for their unemployment checks to come in or whose unemployment has run out.

Application procedures at many area agencies for the lower income people are demeaning and after many discouraging experiences many men and women give up trying to preserve their personal dignity. At the Food shelf there is no application form to sign and no embarrassing questions asked. The person gives his name, explains his problem and the formalities are over. Les gives them a supply of food for three days or a week and uses his good sense of humor to send them away smiling. Sometimes, when a person finds a job, he returns with groceries for someone else in need. "That makes me feel good," Les beams.

—PAMELA STEFANEK

SHATKIN : NO IN-STATE STATUS

A University of Vermont senior who was denied in-state residency status in 1973, but achieved it subsequently, has asked the State Supreme Court to rehear her case.

The State Supreme Court last month upheld the decision of the Board of Trustees and the UVM Residence Appeals Committee not to grant Maria Shatkin of Winooski in-state status for the fall semester of 1973.

Mrs. Shatkin says the Court discriminated against her because of her marital status. She achieved in-state status for the spring semester and all following semesters, and the money that would be returned to her should she win her case would be no more than $700.

Attorneys for Mrs. Shatkin say the Supreme Court's decision was discriminatory because it was based on a common law that says a wife's domicile is that of her husband.

Her attorneys, John Dooley and Mark Skinner of Vermont Legal Aid maintain this is unconstitutional.

Mrs. Shatkin and her husband moved to Vermont from Connecticut prior to beginning [illegible] at the University) graduate program in chemistry in 1972.

She applied to UVM as a transfer student, but did not enroll. She worked for the university as a secretary for a year and took a free evening course.

She then unsuccessfully applied for resident tuition status, claiming to have resided with her husband in Winooski for the required one-year period. The Residency Appeals Committee decided she was not eligible for in-state tuition, citing "lack of domicile for a one year period" as the reason for their decision.

The decision was upheld by the Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Shatkin then sought an injunction against the university, citing "irreparable injury" because she allegedly could not afford to pursue an education. The case has dragged on ever since then.

She enrolled at UVM and paid out-of-state tuition, being able to afford it because she received a Vermont Student Assistance (VSAC) loan, which is supposed to go to Vermont students only.

Attorneys for Mrs. Shatkin have said that VSAC uses the same residence as UVM in determining in-state status. VSAC has refused to comment.

HOSPITALS GRANTED GIFT

A team of physicians and nurses from the University of Vermont and Dartmouth Medical School have received an award of $600,000 which will permit them to continue their efforts to reduce deaths of newborn infants from lung disease in Vermont and New Hampshire over the next three years.

The award marks the first time that medical schools in two states have cooperated on a regional plan to improve care of newborns and infants.

The funds for hospitals will be used "together" in a [illegible] education program for nurses and physicians. Most of these educational efforts will be carried out in the smaller hospitals.

Each hospital will be encouraged to carry out those studies and treatments for which it is best equipped. Only mothers and infants requiring highly specialized care and diagnosis will be transferred to the medical center hospitals, insuring that mothers and infants in hospitals in the two states will receive the same quality of care [illegible] duplicating expensive [illegible] the smaller hospitals.

"STUDIIS ET REBUS HONESTIS" RE-EXAMINED

This past year the Board of Trustees made the seal of 1800 the official UVM seal, displacing a much later seal which had been devised to accommodate the new State Agricultural College. The passing of the newer seal made me a little sad because it alone contained the Latin neologism viridimontanae. Surely "viridimontane" would be the English mot juste to describe UVM and Vermont when all other words fail (even "viable"). (Compare "ultra montane.") Another feature of the newer seal was the lamp resting upon a shield containing the UVM motto studiis et rebus honestis. These emblems seem to allude to the literary source: Horace, Epistles I.2.36: et nil poisces ante diem librum cum lumine, si non/ intendes animum studiis et rebus honestis/ invidia vel amore vigil torquebere. In his history of UVM from 1791 – 1904, Tradition Looks Forward (1954), Julian Lindsay reports that the motto was decided upon by President Sanders and two colleagues in 1880. For most of the last century this epistle of Horace was required in the second year of study at UVM. One wonders how the viridimontane Latinists interpreted this poem in those years. I have heard the motto explained as "affairs both practical and theoretical" as though to characterize the diversity of the UVM curriculum. But Horace meant the words to refer to philosophy as revealed in first-class literature. In antiquity literature covered a very wide range of subjects, just as at UVM around 1825, as Lindsay points out, literature and science were almost synonymous. Horace claims in fact that Homer knows more about philosophy than the stuffy philosophers and fussy rhetoricians do (in this case Chrysippus the Stoic and Crantor the Academic). The poem's own sententious moralizing is relieved, fortunately, by Horace's subtle wit, occasional obscene double-entendre (UVM's motto is in effect offered to young men as a deterrent to self-abuse), and at the close a twist of Epicurean indifference: If the student heeds Horace's advice, o.k. If not, that's o.k. too. Shall we hope that President Sanders chose the motto not only as an admonition to students but as a sardonic reminder to his faculty and administration not to take themselves too seriously?

The letter, originally in dactylic hexameter, is here offered in a free prose translation. It is to Lollius Maximus, a young friend studying oratory at Rome, while Horace is on vacation in Praeneste. The date is about 23 – 21 B.C.

Horace (65 – 8 B.C.), Epistles I.2

While you were studying oratory at Rome, Lollius Maximus, I was at Praeneste re-reading Homer, the author of the Trojan War. He states better and more clearly than the learned philosophers Crantor and Chrysippus what is beautiful, what is base, what is useful and what is not. If you have time, let me tell you why I think so:

That story about the collision between Greek and barbarian in a stubborn war over Paris' love is a study in the passions of foolish kings and peoples. Antenor wanted to remove the cause of war, Paris did not, refusing to be forced to live happy and safe! Nestor tried valiantly to settle the quarrel between Achilles and Agamemnon. The latter was fired by love, and both by anger – and when kings go mad, the people pay for it. So it was with the Achaeans. Inside the walls of Ilium and out, behold: sedition, treachery, criminal lust and wrath.

Homer offers us Ulysses' might as a useful model of courage and wisdom. This vanquisher of Troy prudently observed the ways and cities of many people. Not to be drowned in the waves of adversity, he endured many a hardship to bring his men and himself home across the broad sea. You remember those Siren voices and Circe's cups. Had Ulysses been like his comrades who drank from them in lustful folly, he would have become a base and witless slave of a harlot and lived the life of an unwashed dog or a mud-loving sow.

In comparison with him we are mere ciphers, born to consume, like the suitors of Penelope or Alcinous' lazy troupe, wasting time tending their complexions, sleeping through the day or dulling their wits in the drone of the cithara.

Thieves rise in the night to strangle a man. Won't you at least wake up to save your life? After all, if you won't run for healthy exercise, you will when you have the dropsy. Call for a book and a lamp before daybreak and aim your mind at upright interests and affairs (studiis et rebus honestis), or you'll toss in envy – or lust – and still not sleep! You are quick to remove anything which hurts your eye, so why do you put off until next year the cure of your mind? "Begun's half done!" Dare to be wise. Begin now! To postpone the good life is like the bumpkin who waits for an ever-flowing river to run dry before crossing.

A man's goal is money and a rich wife to bear children. So the untilled woods yield to the plow. But a man should seek only what he needs, no more. A house and estate, a heap of bronze and gold never cooled the rich man's fever or took away his worries. One should only ponder how to use possessions properly. House and property no more cure anxiety than painted murals aid a sore eye or pillows the gout or lyres an ear infection. "Anything spoils in a rotten pot."

Spurn foolish pleasures bought with pain. "The greedy man is always a pauper." Limit your desires. "A prosperous neighbor makes the envious man grow thin." Not even Sicilian tyrants could devise tortures greater than envy.

The man quick to anger will live to wish undone the works of his wrath as he forever rushes violently to gratify any hatred however small. Anger is really a passing madness: control your mind or it will control you. Put it in reins, cast it in chains!

A trainer knows how to tame the tender neck and teach the horse to obey its rider. The great hound hunting in the wilds began his career as a pup yapping at stuffed stags in the farmyard. So, young man, drink in my words with a pure heart, give heed to your superiors. "The pot will keep alive the same flavor with which it was first imbued." But whether you fall back or manfully push ahead – it's all the same to me. I don't wait for the dusgard or try to keep up with those who pass me by.

—Z. PHILIP AMBROSE

THE STORY OF A FIDDLING CO

When Reverend Arnold Brown came to Craftsbury Common, Vermont nearly 14 years ago, he found a quaint if not classic Vermont settlement. Nestled in and among the state's greenest rolling hills, it was a small town and still is, with 600 people to its name.

There is a presence about Craftsbury Common... an air thick of Vermont charm and character. White picket fences adorn the colonial houses, with their deep green shutters. Just down the road from the main stretch of town, a well-preserved cemetery pays tribute to those who have settled there since 1798.

Across from the schoolhouse lies The Common. Rich in New England descent, it used to be common public property where people could leave the horses to graze while they attended church. Now it was a pleasant grassy gathering spot in the center of the town, handsomely bordered by a whitewashed three-railed post fence.

What people did for their own entertainment in Craftsbury Common was pretty much up to their own ingenuity. Back out in South Dakota where Reverend Brown had come from, people made their own music for an evening's enjoyment. Usually sponsored by the Church, people even got together for festive music making occasions. Things in Vermont seemed relatively quiet by comparison. Oh there was music, but it rarely ventured out of the house.

Vermont's musical traditions began in the kitchen, usually on Saturday nights. Friends and family got together for "kitchen junkets," playing what instruments they had and singing old songs together. Beryl Darling, a glowing middle aged woman, remembers such childhood gatherings well. People would come over for coffee, play some cards, maybe, and sing songs into the after-dinner hours. "People didn't go out to dances then." That was back some 40 years ago.

Craftsbury Common's first Model A didn't introduce itself and the coming of General Motors until the 1930's. The roads were still pretty bad then, and-forget it(!) in the winter. The later paved roads that connected Craftsbury Common and the town of Craftsbury with the neighboring towns and communities of Vermont were inevitable. But it didn't change Craftsbury Common too much. If anything, it made life a little easier.

But new ideas and new trends were no longer riding into town. They were driving. And somewhere through the years — and not all that long ago — the notion of kitchen junkets faded as a practice. Saturday night dances gained fashion and prominence.

It must have surprised Reverend Brown to find that there wasn't any apparent interest in country music when he arrived that first September. And as a new member of the community, it was going to be a matter of time before he'd be able to do something about it. There are two ways to "get known" in a hurry when you're new in town. That's either to do something notorious enough to brand you immediately as an "infamous character", or to be the new reverend of the local church. Arnold Brown was anything but the notorious type. An almost shy man, dedicated and warm, Reverend Brown established himself without difficulty in Craftsbury Common.

His interest in music, while he played no instrument himself, sparked local interest in the people themselves. Two summers later, he and local townsman Pete Wells organized a July fiddling contest, innocent of its being the genesis of the now famous annual Craftsbury Fiddler's Contest. A little over one hundred people came to the High School Gym to listen to the eight contesting fiddlers. Veterans Wayne Young and Bob Moffatt were among the original contestants. It was a rainy third Saturday of the month, an omen of sorts to the inclement weather that was to dampen the contests to come. But for the moment, the people of Craftsbury Common were enjoying some great foot stomping music.

By the third year, the contest's reputation had 700 people jammed and dangerously packed within the same gym walls. Organizers shuddered at the disasterous potential a fire might have had. But the fiddling couldn't be beat.

Apparently, interest in fiddling was on the rise. Among the people "behind stage" were several recording engineers and technicians, capturing material for the first of many Craftsbury Fiddler's Contest records. The growing popularity of the music eventually spawned the Northeast Fiddler's Association, now 9 years old. Having monthly get-togethers, the Northeast Fiddler's Association quickly generated increasing interest as well as informal opportunities for fiddlers to learn from each other. A comprehensive listing of current fiddlers evolved. Enthusiasm grew even more with the subsequent founding

John Dillon

Reverend Brown chatting with Beryl Darling

TEST ON CRAFTSBURY COMMON

of the Champlain Valley Fiddlers' Club, Inc. and Southern Vermont Fiddlers' Club, Inc. Yes, interest in fiddling was definitely on the rise, both by those who fiddled and by those who just liked to hear some good tunes to stamp a foot to.

As the years rolled on, the Fiddling Contest became a community production. A young people's fund-raising organization called the Horse and Buggy Club (related neither to the colt nor the cab, but to the United Church itself) gradually took charge of each year's contest. Organizing the increasingly complex set of tasks necessary each year to pull the Fiddlers' Contest off, the Horse and Buggy Club in turn uses the profits for a number of notably good causes. Serving as a relief fund of sorts, revenue goes to people who have lost their homes (due to fires), to the local fire department, to local and regional programs like the Waterbury State Hospital and Vermont Child Aid. The Club, co-chaired by William Ryan and Nathan Willey, was able to clear $13,000 on last year's contest, all of which was distributed to good causes and for support of the Church, the Club, and the Contest.

Now in its thirteenth year, the Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest represents a mature and certainly established annual fiddlers' showplace. It's big-time now, compared to Reverend Brown's first gymnasium assembly. A full and sizely $10,000 must be outlayed before the first fiddling enthusiast even saunters into Craftsbury Common. Expecting upwards of 20,000 people, a state license with endless sections of "on-condition" regulations must be attained. To meet some of those regulations, twenty-five policemen at the usual rate of $5 an hour must be on hand. Thirty-two Port-O-Lets (those gray and infamous state-of-the-art outhouses) renting for about $35 apiece (not including transportation) must be installed. Letters must be written to a lengthy list of fiddlers throughout New England. Correspondence with the press, including the New York Times and the Boston Globe as well as with NBC, which covered the Contest last year, must be made well in advance.

Yet, the Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest remains a community project. In the context of modern concert productions, such a fact makes the Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest a rare exception to the usual make-a-bundle promotion tactics seen across the country and a pleasant tribute to the people of Craftsbury Common, Vermont. The Horse and Buggy Club delegates the many responsibilities to local people in an everyone-chips-in effort... people to make the pies and prepare the chicken, people to set up facilities, people to take care of parking, people to do promotional work and letter writing. There are plenty of jobs to be done from selling the $3 Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest proof-of-admission buttons to the serving of fried chicken dinners which became a part of the Contest a few years ago. For the people of Craftsbury Common and the contestants themselves, no one wants more than an enjoyable day of good hearty fiddling entertainment.

••••••••••

The Third Saturday Of The Month

The cars were already backed up onto Route 14. The whole southern approach to the town of Craftsbury, let alone Craftsbury Common, was impassably clogged like the exit at a drive-in movie.

People motivated either by impulse or by impatience to break from the line and head further north did find the alternate route into Craftsbury a bit more accessible. But it too was backed up. And while the congestion wasn't really overwhelming yet, people realized early on that their best bet was to park the car right on the road and hike in.

Ah, but what a glorious day for a fiddling contest. The weather was nearly perfect... deep blue skies with only an occasional fair weather cloud. The muggyness of the previous week was absent altogether. With a slight breeze, the cooler temperature was balanced with plenty of warming sunshine. It was the kind of invigorating summer day you dream all winter about, and usually wait an entire summer for!

The incoming crowd converged from both routes, doubling its mass at a single juncture next to the Craftsbury General Store — 2 miles from Craftsbury Common. An elderly woman wearing a print dress walked across the lawn to join her neighbor, near the end of town. Together, they stood and observed from the porch what was for the most part well-behaved invasion!

Sitting on the roadside, on the porch steps of the post office, and the local stores, flocks of people taking a break also watched as cars, pickup trucks and schoolbuses crawled up the hill. People of all ages were turning out for this one. A couple in their 40's, standing outside the car, stared in bewilderment at their wrinkled road map. Apparently, this wasn't Craftsbury Common. Entire parties armed with blankets and coolers and other concert conveniences were marching up the road. "Where abouts is this?" queried one Connecticut backpacker. Little kids with their harmonicas, mothers and fathers cradling their newborn and folks well into their retirement were all hiking up the same hill together.

Filing past the entrance booth where $3 bought admission and a souvenir blue and white "Craftsbury, Vt., Fiddlers' Contest" button, the procession of cars and people continued on towards Craftsbury Common. (Those lucky enough to have motorcycled for the day found themselves with the best means of transportation.) And with the procession, so too went every available can and bottle of beer in town. "We stocked as much as we could," pleaded one storekeeper.

Fiddler George Maille

THE STORY OF A FIDDLING CONTEST ON CRAFTSBURY COMMON

Up the road, an Orleans County Sheriff directed the traffic into an open field, where hundreds of vehicles scrambled for a place to park. The encampment was growing by the minute. "We're about to run out of buttons!" hollered a local townsman, holding a wad of green bills in a carpenter's pouch. It was only 1:30 p.m. All 10,000 of this year's allotment of buttons were gone a half an hour later.

By mid-afternoon, an estimated 15,000 people had swamped the town of Craftsbury Common, the largest turnout in its history. Spread across blankets, propped against styrofoam coolers, seated comfortably in portable lawn chairs, or sitting right on the ground, thousands of partying bluegrass and fiddling enthusiasts packed into the Common for a day of country and oldtime fiddling.

The continuous parade of different fiddlers and their accompanists provided a welcome variety of fiddling styles and musical renditions. While many of the contestants simply played their two songs and then exited, a number of veterans told stories and anecdotes, generating swirls of laughter and warm applause from the audience. "It may sound tinny, but it's loud!" boasted one old-timer, referring to his shiney violin. The instrument was made from an anti-freeze can.

Fiddling Slim Butch Baker and the South Woodbury Hillbilly Philharmonic livened up the audience a bit. An overgrown Henry Aldrich-type dressed in an old tuxedo and brandishing a quart bottle of Schlitz, Fiddling Slim insisted on a little clowning around and joke telling in-between songs. "This next song here's kind of half-assed. Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha!" And it was. But the crowd ate it up.

But in-between the mediocre renditions and some valid attempts, some of the finest old style fiddling in New England filled the air. Wilford Guillette, a carpenter from Derby, Vermont, was one fiddler who proved that you need not play the violin to know good fiddling when you hear it. With a beaming smile, a pipe tucked firmly to the side, the energetic old fiddler rocked his head to every foot-stomping lick of his fiddle. The rhythm was contageous. And damn if he wasn't having as good a time as the audience.

Veteran fiddlers like Clem Myers, Leo Murphy, Arthur Johnson, Frank Grove, Jan Pelloquin, Conrad Pellitier, Dwayne Perry, Joe Gonyaw all graced the dusty flat bed truck that served as the stage that day. But perhaps among the most noteable fiddlers to lift bows to their instrument Saturday was Bob Moffat. A thin, aged man sparkling with energy, Moffatt has competed in every Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest since that rainy July day thirteen years ago when the contest first began. With a cool summer hat atop his head, the "Old Eden Mountain Fiddler" felt right at home in front of the massive crowd.

"Well hi everybody."

(Cheers and applause greeted the familiar face.)

"Good to see you all again."

(His warmth drew even greater response.)

"Got some good tunes for ya this year."

Shouts and hollers were tossed to the stage as the old timer got down to business. Accompanied by a banjo, guitar and shallow waves of handclapping from the audience, Moffat did a spirited version of "Woodcutter's Reel," giving proof of his well weathered fiddling ability.

The entire day's fiddling was greatly enhanced this year by a much improved P.A. system. Dick Longfellow, owner and chief recording engineer of Green Mountain Recording, and a five-man crew arrived early Friday afternoon to set up the Contest's sound system. Scaffold towers to support the battery of heavy duty speakers had to be assembled, microphones and mike stands all needed to be arranged as did the stage monitors. Then, working out of the back of a U-Haul truck, a myriad of lengthy gray cables and patch cords had to be connected to a bank of amplifiers and tapedecks. The three year old Northfield, Vermont recording company spent an additional two hours Saturday morning doing a balance check in final preparation for the day's music. The proof of the sound system's achement capability could be heard echoing over the meadows and off the far away hills near Craftsbury when the contest got underway. Judging from the quality of the sound and of the fiddling itself, Green Mountain Records should have some excellent material for release.

The Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest was more than good fiddling, however. There was in the air, a warm atmosphere of spirited merry-making and casual interaction between musicmakers and their listeners. Attracting small gatherings of inquisitive admirers, fiddlers, banjo strummers and guitarists could be spotted all around the Common as they warmed up their calloused fingers either to the tune playing on stage or their own favorite selections. Swinging to a different beat, one Orleans County Sheriff was keeping the peace by joining Delmer Leach in a fiddling duet. Perhaps surprised that an officer of the law could play something other than a night stick (and rather well at that), the crowd of interested onlookers gave the two fiddlers quite an audience of their own.

Most of the fiddlers behind stage were easy going people with a variety of backgrounds, and almost always responded obligingly to those with questions or requests. George Maille of Essex Junction was one of a number of old time fiddlers who, after many years of hardly touching the violin, decided to pick it up again. Motivated by the growing interest in old time fiddling generated by the Fiddlers' Association, Maille maintains that fiddling "is a God-given talent," that everyone has. It just needs developing. When asked about this year's competition, Maille – wearing a colorful pair of blue, red and white print overalls – responded enthusiastically: "There are more musicians this year. Not just fiddlers, (but) a greater number of accompanists."

Many of the old-time fiddlers are glad to see younger people at the Fiddlers' Contest. While most of the youths are out to hear more bluegrass playing style, the exposure to the older style of fiddling is one of the best possible ways to promote old time fiddling itself.

The day itself would not have been complete without a hearty helping of barbequed chicken and home homemade pie. Working beneath a large blue and yellow fairground tent at the far end of the Common, a crew of local men and women doled out 2000 halves of chicken and more than 540 assorted pies before running out (somewhere near 6:30 p.m.) Blueberry seemed to be the strong favorite of the day.

For almost everyone at Craftsbury Common Saturday, partying and enjoying some good fiddling was the only real order of the day. But for the gentlemen seated around the table at the side of the stage, judging each contestant's warm-up and competition numbers was another. Straight from the annals of Norman Rockwell's Americana, the five-member panel, headed by Craftsbury's own Earl Wilson, rated each contestant in four categories:

1) Authenticity of old style fiddling (vs. Bluegrass or conventional violin playing.) – 25 points.
2) Rhythm and timing (with regard to foot stompability) – 25 points.
3) Tone value – 25 points.
4) Clarity – 25 points.

A score of 82-84 generally marks a winner. Eighty-two contestants entered the Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest, each performing two numbers apiece. It was a long day.

As the night's darkness began to settle, and with it, a chill evening air, the judges called the top ten scorers of the afternoon to the stage. There was a different crowd waiting in the Common now – a rowdy, YI-HOO! kick-up-the-dust crowd. Nearly the entire assemblage was on its feet, listening and responding to what was probably the best fiddling heard all day.

For most of the people close to the stage, the urge to stomp their feet and clap their hands or join the boisterous circles of people dancing was almost irresistable. Hundreds of heads bobbed up and down in the dingy incandescent light. Middleaged folks were dancing and stomping away, right along with the rest of the semi-inebriated (and all the more spirited) young adults.

Conrad Pellitier, last year's winner from Quebec, and Clem Myers took first and second in the Open Division. Wilford Guillette and Leo Murphy placed likewise in the Senior Division. But where they, and the many other fiddlers who played really placed was in the hearts and the musical spirits of the many enthusiasts who swamped Craftsbury Common that third Saturday of the month.

Reverend Brown spent a good part of the afternoon chatting with people inside the United Church next to the Common. There had been word of problems and complaints. "Half" the people supposedly attending the concert were milling around town or wandering on the road and people's property between Craftsbury and Craftsbury Common. There was a certain element of things (the crowd) being out of control. Things that are almost inevitable anytime you throw a lot of people in one place.

"It's a big production for a community this size," admits Reverend Brown. This year's assemblage of people was indeed overwhelming for such a small core of people to handle. This is precisely why the Horse and Buggy Club has made the decision to no longer sponsor the Fiddlers' Contest, at least, not by itself. The sadness comes upon seeing how successful Reverend Brown and the Horse and Buggy Club have been with the Fiddlers' Contest in integrating people of all ages for a single affair while at the same time, promoting that rich old style fiddling.

Amidst the playing and jovial conversation-making earlier in the day, a young lad named Eugene Hall was watching the backstage activities with inquisitive fascination. Eugene is black and is up in Vermont for the summer, thanks to the Fresh Air Fund. When asked what he liked about Vermont, he responded with the frighteningly real words: "Ain't no killing. No shooting. No fighting. Fighting – there's too much," referring to his home territory in the Bronx. It was a sobering perspective on a day of merry-making and good music, and where the young and old were sharing together.

—WYATT KASH

THE DEVIL'S INSTRUMENT

Clem Myers stood crouched down in the converted old laundry van, sipping coffee from a styrofoam cup. The big front windows looked out over onto the massive gathering on the Common for the Craftsbury Fiddlers' Contest. There was a lull in the day's parade of contesting fiddlers. Apparently the judges were making their decision for the playoffs.

An inquisitive blond-haired youth named Tom knocked at the sliding door. Clem motioned to come in. Tom explained he had been waiting all day to hear an Irish song. He had forgotten the name, but when played in fitting style on the violin, it was supposed to bring a tear to the eye. Clem tried a few chord combinations. "Oh, Danny Boy." "That was it." But Clem hadn't played that old song in a while. He ran through a rusty verse, and then a second. Well he wasn't going to draw any tears from anybody today. But at least he solved the mystery title with a kind demonstration.

Tom looked at the older man and his fiddle in fascination. The fiddler caught the twinkling gaze and offered to tell the lad a bit of history about the instrument.

"You know, the violin used to be considered the devil's instrument." Reassuring his visitor that the story he was about to tell was true, based on his own research as the former president and founder of the Northeast Fiddlers' Association, Clem continued:

"Playing the violin was considered an evil art. Back in the English pubs of the 17th century, the people of the day thought the smoke coming from the resin in the bow was actually the smoke of the devil. They figured the only way you could fiddle was if you sold your soul in exchange for the 'talent' to play."

"If you were caught even playing the violin, you'd be banned from the Church. Your only chance for absolution would be to burn your violin and bring the ashes to the church."

(Bryce Wilson, the M.C. of the contest, was heard announcing the top ten scorers of the day.)

One of Clem's travel companions came running up to the van and slid the door open with an excited zzzzzwahm!

"They called your name, Clem!"

Tom realized he'd best be leaving. He thanked Clem for his time and for the story and stepped back into the parking lot.

Clem took another sip of his coffee.

He finished second in the open division competition that night.

Arts & Entertainment

LOCAL DIVERSIONS: STAN KENTON'S TROUPE AT PATRICK

The trumpets echoed off the walls throughout Patrick Gym Wednesday night, July 23.

It is a musical summer in Burlington. Most attention goes to the full-dress flamboyance of the Vermont Music Festival, overshadowing the equally important High School Music Program where many Vermont secondary-school students are given summertime enrichment to their regular-year music education. And, that night, they and several hundred other "music students" were treated to a splendid performance by a big, big band.

A half-hour before showtime, a lone saxophone is gurgling out "Moonlight in Vermont." There is the twonk, twonk, twonk of a double bass being tuned, someone is bump, bump, bumping a set of conga drums above the ever-growing murmurings of an expectant crowd. Tested against a pedal, a bass drum rumbles.

The air is still and stuffy this midsummer evening in Patrick Gym. Then suddenly, the place cools.

At eight o'clock, sixty-three year old Stanley Newcomb Kenton follows eighteen younger musicians out to the stage. The crowd applauds enthusiastically a man who has been a jazz trendsetter since 1941. They break into "My Funny Valentine", sounding like a slow, mournful dirge, syncopated by those big-band bursts of brass. It becomes a steady waltz, punctuated by brass bursts. Back and forth, building up, slowing down.

The stuffiness in the air disappears as though all that magnificent sound pushes the stale humidity around. (Using the adjective "rich" to describe this is impossible. This bandleader has been around just as long.)

The jazz musician remains a durable symbol of twentieth-century wanderings; on a tour of one-night stands, a suitcase and trombone in hand... With the advent of rock-and-roll in the early fifties, jazz took a mean tumble. In order to keep his boys working, Stan Kenton began summer tours, teaching and performing before groups like the High School Music Program. Names like Kai Winding and Gerry Mulligan sat in Kenton sections then. When jazz "came back..."

He and his band are still teaching and playing, much to everyone's benefit and delight. Wednesday night, Kenton and eighteen band members played.

They played a marvelous variety. An arrangement of the currently-popular Judy Collins song "Bring in the Clowns." A Latin-influenced composition by William Russo (composer of the popular "Three Concertos for Blues Band and Orchestra"). "23 degrees North, 82 degrees West." The classic Ellington-Strayhorn composition, "Take the 'A' Train." A classical piano solo by Kenton leads into a version of "Tonight" from West Side Story (the "Tonight" melody is derived by Leonard Bernstein from a Tchaikovsky piece). Kenton wipes his hands with a conspicuously-displayed Holiday Inn towel after a samba version of the Kenton theme, "Artistry in Rhythm," the hit that made Stan Kenton's reputation back in 1941.

But the big hit of the evening was "Peanut Vendor." The "Five Angry Men" of the trumpet section paraded off the stand. While the remaining bandmembers stayed in their chairs, the trumpeters wandered through the crowd, climbing the bleachers, striding through the aisles, all the while blasting out with their trumpets.

Outside sat one of those big Challenger buses that we're all familiar seeing booming along Vermont roads. This one was different. It had California license plates and "Creative Directions, Inc." painted on the shiny aluminum sides. Every bus you ever see has that rectangular window up front, the destination printed on white letters sitting on a black background. On Kenton's bus, it says "NOWHERE."

Quite the contrary.

—CARL BLUMBERG

A FEW REVIEWS FROM THE RECORD FILE

Paul McCartney and Wings — Venus and Mars Are Alright Tonight.

Paul McCartney's specialty is in love songs. It always has been, and always will be as he comes up with no fewer than seven songs that attempt to massage that delicate muscle commonly called the heart. All seven songs, as well as the other four singles which deal with rock concerts, pill popping, and outer space (or spacing out), are all good songs. My only complaint with them is the same thing that I find hard to take about previous McCartney albums, they're strictly commercial. Sometimes he seems to get a little carried away in applying the AM polish on his platters. But, I guess that of all the bad qualities that could be had, this would be the most desireable as it helps the record appeal to a broad audience: witness the popularity of "Band on the Run." McCartney gets some help on the most musically pleasing song of the album, "Listen to What the Man Says," as Dave Mason plays guitar, and Tom Scott gives it that New Orleans jazz with an excellent saxophone. So, the final word is, Venus and Mars is alright.

Frank Zappa and the Mothers of Invention — One Size Fits All.

Arf — I said, as I wondered what I was going to say about a Frank Zappa and The Mothers album. And then I came up with a brilliant idea. I'll say what critics have been saying about Frank Zappa for over a decade now, "If you're a Zappa freak, then this album is definitely for you, especially if you like the more recent stuff; but, if for some reason you can't relate to Frank, then best leave this alone." Glad to hear that this won't be the last one with Ruth Underwood as it was cut along with another Mothers album soon to be released. We love you Frank, Even with all your bovine perspiration.

Neil Young — Tonight's the Night.

Bring yourself way down for this one, as Neil never makes it out of his dream world. This album is more deep in thought than it is depressing, although some of its thoughts are depressing. Voice cracking without caring, Neil sings of life along with its price. In "Lookout Joe" he sounds like he feels like goin' back to the days when he was young enough to know the truth. The main attraction of the album is the fact that Nils Lofgrin, another somewhat puzzled daydreamer, plays lead guitar on the album. On Speakin' Out and the title cut, Nils shows us the style that made him famous, or at least should have. This record doesn't quite equal Neil Young's earlier efforts, but it's good if you're in the mood.

KEN MILLER

And now a return from the not so ancient past, with a guest review from Edsel Peacock.

Eagles — One of These Nights

Their energy, once as boundless as highway 1, is now bottled, sanitized, and glossed to the limit on their fourth album. Their trademarks, head rollin' rhythm and skin tight harmonies everywhere, slogging up this album. Producer Bill Szymczyk has polished the Eagles' sound to such alarity in the mix that you can see right through it. Call it a commercial success or an unaesthetic english muffin, (5 days old). The songs are letter perfect, with "Lyin' Eyes" the most poignant and bitter, and the title tune, an LA funk, AM rocker with Motown styled backing vocals. The slightly flawed masterpiece of "Desperado," their second album is not here. The rock & roll energy of "On the Border" lies already gone. The group is driven as usual by Don Henley's extravaganzas on the cymbol and Bernie Leadon's sustained rhythm chords. The songs are textured too smoothly leaving the listener with nothing to hold onto except his reflection in the chrome. The Eagles are looking for money, but what happenr after the thrill is gone?

IF you enjoy Classic surroundings, excellent service, exotic cuisine, delightful atmosphere ... then you must visit
taj mahal
DINNER
5:30 PM - 10:30 PM
ENTERTAINMENT
BOMBAY LOUNGE
SPECIAL COCKTAILS
Bengal Tiger
Snake Charmer
Kashmere Delight
Bengal Lancer
115 College Street
658-4377

What's Your Beef
Steaks
Prime Rib
Lobster
Shrimp
Crab Legs
Barn Yard Chicken & Steak
Flounder
152 St. Paul Street
Burlington

Beautiful Lake Champlain
SCENIC LINE BOAT RIDES
Operating Between BURLINGTON, VT. and PORT KENT, N.Y.
★ Beautiful views of historical Lake Champlain, The Green Mountains of Vermont and The Adirondack Mountains of New York.
★ Refreshments, Souvenirs and Gifts are available in the comfortable passenger lounges on all three ferries.
★ Stop Over if you like, in Burlington or Port Kent.
★ For Schedules of sailings call:
BURLINGTON, VERMONT — 864-9805
or KEESEVILLE, NEW YORK — 834-7960
or refer to
"Lake Champlain Ferry Crossings Schedule"
★ Frequent Daily and Evening Sailings
★ Sundecks
★ Heated Lounges on Cool Fall Days
"Route of The Explorers"
LAKE CHAMPLAIN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Inc.
Burlington, Vt. — Tel: Burlington, Vt. 864-9805
Keeseville, N.Y. — 834-7960

WHAT'S DIS ... ISRAELI DINNER NIGHT?

People of all size, shape, and color. People young and old, families, couples, and strays, standing patiently in line outside of Christie Hall. Such was the scene when we arrived to partake in the festivities of Israel Night, the third of Saga's international dinners. We stood in line for quite some time anxiously awaiting what we had heard to be a borage of many foods, all of Jewish heritage of course. As the line began to move, the excitement and curiosity of all began to build. It was not long before we were through those long awaited doors of entrance, to behold what was truly a stunning display of many different foods. I must say, Saga does know how to apply the cosmetics for a special occasion. The display for this evening's occasion was a real eye-pleaser, the kind one hates to destroy by human hunger. But by the time I actually reached the tables of food with my plate in hand, not only was my hunger overwhelming, what was to be consumed was in just enough disarray so as to prevent any scruples on my part as to further delving hands onto the goods.

However, the quality of this expanse of food is yet to be determined. Being at this point perfectly adjacent to the long table of main course delights, my eye carefully scanning the offerings, I come to the conclusion that although the food looks good, it looks perfectly regular. In other words, it does not look particularly Jewish (excepting of course the pretentious matza balls in the soup). But that's all right, because the general trend of the folks here is that they weren't drawn together this evening for a religious confrontation, rather, they were drawn for the most part out of the fact that they could get all the food they could eat for a very inexpensive price. This was evident not only in that people came back for seconds and thirds departing with mountains on their plates each time, but also in the intrusive greediness of those in line waiting to get food for the either first or following time.

As I stood in line, a little old man cut in right behind me shoving his plate out in front of him, an action that seemed to drain him of much of his energy. Faltering, he grabbed hold of my elbow. After he regained his balance, he looked at me as if I was some sort of tour guide. Pointing with his plate towards the first tray of food, he asked "Vhats dis?" "Chicken," I replied, and proceeded on. At the next tray, I again heard his voice, "Vhats dis?" "Fish," I replied. "What kinda fish?" I looked at the fish. It looked white. "White fish," I said. "Ahhhhh," he said, and loaded his plate with fish.

His inobtrusive pestering was repeated as we passed each tray of food. Towards the end of the line, I finally perceived that he was merely a crafty little monger who had been engaging me in conversation designed to distract me from noticing the horrendous amount of food that was collecting on his plate. After my putting sour cream on his spinach omelet, he quietly, yet very quickly disappeared, almost as quickly as he had appeared some minutes ago.

The first table of offerings, the main course, completed, I moved on to the second table which struck my eye, the salad and soup bar. This was a simply garnished presentation of a wide variety of salad greens and makings on one side and soup on the other side. Nothing special, unless of course you want to consider the aforementioned matza balls to be placed in otherwise drab chicken soup. But the salad makings as I said were good, so I loaded up and moved on to the last, but not least, bread table. A variety of bread prepared to suit any breadlover. Fresh bread of any color and shape you might desire. I myself went for the pumpernickel.

The preliminaries completed, I shuffled off to find a suitable table at which to gorge. This did not take long, so I settled right in. The food tasted good at first, a relief to my prolonged hunger. The eggplant was good, the spinach omelet with its sour cream was acceptable, and the chicken, well, the chicken was just chicken. As a matter of fact, the only things that tasted as good as they looked at that first gander were the bread, the salad, and the desserts to which I am now coming.

I have finished my meal and am sauntering outside which seems to be the general direction of the crowd upon finishing one's meal. Out of doors, I behold another eye pleaser — an assortment of colorful fruits and one partially destroyed sheet cake which before the meal, had been neatly decorated with the Star of David, but which at this point was indiscernable. So it goes.

Closing the evening with my cup of coffee, it suddenly began to rain on the desert table, the people, and on the best part of all, the dancers. Six or seven dancers had been performing what I presume were Jewish dances. With the rain however, their performance came to a halt, as did my evening at Israeli night.

As I drove off in the van, I could not help but look back on the evening with a feeling of unsatisfaction. The evening had been full of pretenses that I could not term anything else but that. It had the appearance of a banquet fit for a king, and yet why was I feeling sick to my stomach from ordinary institutional food. I guess I was wrong to expect anything more.

—ANNE CHRISTIE
—ELLIOT FREEMAN

MOZART AT THE WEBB'S: A CRITICS REVIEW

Curtains rise once again for the Mozart Festival, but this time at the Webb Estate at Shelburne Farms. The Grand Porch, adjacent to the beautiful 1899 estate, set the scene for last Wednesday's concert. Appearing that evening was the well-known fine arts quartet: Leonard Sorkin, violin; Abram Loft, violin; Bernard Zaslav, viola; and George Sopkin, cello. The members of the Quartet are the artists-in-residence at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee. The Quartet did a marvelous job in captivating the audience. The atmosphere was undoubtedly a plus for the Mozart Quartets.

The next concert of note was also held at the Webb Estate. However, this time we move to the Coach Barn. Wall-to-wall people gathered at this 1901 setting to marvel at the virtuosity of Julius Baker. The world-renowned flutist performed the Andante in C Major for Flute and Orchestra, K.315 and the Concerto for Flute and Orchestra, K.313. Accompanied by the New York Chamber Soloists, Baker's brilliance was overwhelming and shown over all. The Cadenza of the Concerto truly captured all in attendance for it was merely a sample of Baker's facility.

Julius Baker is probably the most renowned flutist in the world. He has recorded almost the entire flute repertory. He has been a member of the Juilliard Faculty for the past twenty years.

Sunday's concert also featured a French horn solo, Concerto in E-Flat Major for French Horn and Orchestra, K.495. Due to last minute changes in the soloist, Joseph Anderer replacing Ralph Froelich, the New York Chamber soloists were kept on their toes. A remarkable job by both the soloist and the orchestra.

This coming week, the Mozart Festival is holding a week-long session of Flute Master Classes given by Julius Baker. In these classes, amateur flutists will have the opportunity to perform for Mr. Baker as well as be coached by him.

Those of you who missed these performances are invited to enjoy this week-end's concerts. Friday evening, August 1st, Julius Baker and the New York Chamber Soloists will perform at the First Congregational Church. Saturday the Festival moves to St. Michael's Chapel in Winooski. This concert will include 2 Mozart Masses by the University Choral Union under director James Chapman; guest soloists Jean Haker, soprano; Jane Briden, soprano; Charles Bressler, tenor; and Raymond Murcell, bass, accompanied by the Mozart Festival Orchestra. Sunday the scene shifts to Ira Allen Chapel on the UVM campus to hear pianist Menahem Pressler and the New York Chamber Soloists.

—ELANE PETERSON

DISCOUNTS
SINCE 1967
BOYD'S MUSIC
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS
VERMONT'S COMPLETE MUSIC STORE
RENTING - REPAIRING
WE SHIP STATE WIDE
GUITARS & AMPLIFIERS
Acoustic, Ampeg, Gibson, Gretsch, Hagstrom, Hofner, Kustom, Rasino, Maestro, Oliver, Shure, Altec, Lansing, Dobro, Bogen, Epiphone, Fender, Giannini, Goya, Guild, Harmony, Hi-Watt, Laclo, Marshall, Ovation, Sho Bud, Sound City, Sunn, Standel, Traynor, Wilder, Peavey, Weil, Yamaha, Rickenbacker
PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS SYNTHESIZERS
ELECTRIC PIANOS & COMBO ORGANS
Fender Rhodes, Gem, Univox, Hohner, Panther, RMI, Lowrence, Audio, Watson
COMPLETE RENTAL SERVICE
All Instruments, Amplifiers, P.A. Systems
COMPLETE REPAIR SERVICE
All Makes, Amplifiers, Strings
VIBES
Bogen, Deagan, Musser
DRUMS
Gretsch, Ludwig, Rogers, Leedy + Ford, Premier, Slingerland
BAND INSTRUMENTS
Bach, Artley, Blessing, Armstrong, Leblanc, Holton, Reynolds, Harmonedy, Vito + Signet, Yamaha, Getzen + Bundy, Selmer + Bescher
MUSIC • CLASSICAL & POPULAR
GUITAR - FLUTE - DRUM SET - BANJO
INSTRUCTION BY PROFESSIONALS
DANCE BAND BOOKINGS
206 MAIN ST. BURLINGTON
863-4613

FAMOUS SINCE 1974
when in Burlington, don't miss
CARBUR'S RESTAURANT
Vermont's most unique menu!
~ COMFORTABLE ATMOSPHERE
~ COMFORTABLE PRICES
Downtown at 119 St. Paul St.

...BLOSSOMS

(continued from page nineteen)

st both. After eligibility has been clarified, they must be interviewed by the department or agency they wish to be hired by — the employer has the option to hire or not. At the same time a student is free to select job possibilities in his or her major field of interest. The experience gained in interviewing and working in a responsible position is a great asset when applying for a job after graduation.

Over 1,000 schools are involved in the work-study program. Its concept has proved successful at both the national level and at UVM. Work study, students are performing worthwhile services, by doing jobs previously left undone due to lack of money and/or staff.

AFFAIR AT EAST FAIRFIELD

Stephen Tanner

WHO WOULD THROW A PARTY CELEBRATING A BARN RAISING AND, IN THEIR RIGHT MIND, INVITE THE ENTIRE STATE OF VERMONT" NO ONE, EXCEPT...

a young dairy farmer in East Fairfield.

There was to be a big party in East Fairfield, on the weekend of July 26, for several weeks before, rumors circulated that an anonymous young dairy farmer, scion of some unclear fortune, had built an enormous barn to house his herd and was celebrating it with FREE music (featuring some of Vermont's best bands and one name act), FREE food and FREE beer for any Vermonter showing up at the weekend long gala. It sounded improbable. After all, how many people do you know who would even dream of throwing such a party? But a usually-reliable source, himself an East Fairfield resident, kept insisting the rumors were true and the party was a certainty. And another East Fairfieldite, no less a personage than John Cassel himself, in the process of replying to some personal inquiries from the Summer Cynic, confirmed the planned existence of the mysterious party and further volunteered that his band was scheduled to play starting Sunday morning at two.

There was a party. There was no free food (food was purchased at the "cafeteria" stand operated by the East Fairfield Volunteer Fire Department). There was little free beer.

But the music was all there, minus the unnamed "one name act." Well-known Vermont acts, including Brian Curry, John Cassel, the Triads, and Widespread Depression (a large, talented young swing band out of Brattleboro, complete with vibraphones) entertained the hordes of partygoers from an improvised stage in the middle of the cavernous barn.

••••••••••

From St. Albans, Vermont Route 36 climbs a steep hill past a U.S. Air Force radar station, and snakes through the Fairfield swamp and quiet Franklin County pastures into the town of Fairfield proper. At the four corners in the town's center, signs point north to the birthplace of Chester Arthur, the 21st President of the United States.

On Saturday night, two writers made the left turn off Route 36, and began to look for the mysterious party. Traffic in the area was heavy; at 10 P.M., these Vermont backroads were seeing more traffic than the usual occasional farm vehicles and lost tourists. Saturday night, it seemed that all of Franklin County (and much of the rest of Vermont) were all on their way to or from the mysterious celebration.

Pretty soon, the two writers decided they needed some guidance. They flagged down a car behind them. "Follow us." They did, down a winding, dirt road. Left turn, left turn again. And over a rickety bridge.

It didn't take long to guess that the car in front was lost (as were a number of cars travelling that normally-untravelled dirt road late that night). The two writers decided that it would be better not to rely on local guides.

Soon thereafter, they rejoined the road to Chester Arthur's birthplace, called, appropriately, Chester Arthur Road. Cars streamed in both directions; dust clouds created by the traffic obscured nearby headlights and taillights. Just over the hill from the tiny, yellow one-room frame building where Chester Arthur was born, parked cars began to line both sides of the dirt road. Groups of people, often carrying sixpacks and wine bottles, some staggering already, walked to-and-fro along the crowded, dust-churned-up dirty road.

The car parked, the two writers walked down the road in the direction of an intersection where a flashing blue light marked the entrance. A sign, almost obscured in the dusty dark, "BORDERLINE FARM — Good Cows."

From Chester Arthur Road, a huge barn, lit-up in the dark and dust, was visible up a large hill. Automobiles and drunken pedestrians flowed up-and-down the narrow dirt road leading to the party.

In the basement, people admired the clean stalls with the new fixtures, as yet uninhabited by dairy cows.

Up stairs, dancers and spectators crowded around the stage in the middle of a huge cathedral-barn. On one side, volunteers from the fire department watched over the fryers and grills, and food warmers, selling hamburgers, hot dogs and barbequed chicken to hungry partygoers. On the other side of the huge barn-hall, pickup trucks and vans waited to unload and load amplifiers, drum sets, and the other instruments belonging to bands waiting to go on or finished entertaining the crowds. Amid vehicles, band equipment, food concession, and stage, there was still much room for the crowds of partygoers.

Amid the long- and short-haired, the cluttered floor, Widespread Depression played the music of Count Basie and Duke Ellington, while young and old danced and clapped and milled around and drank beer.

While no beer was handed-out free "as advertised," one Cynic writer discovered a local entrepreneur selling cold bottles of Schlitz for a dollar apiece. The writer bought two, and conversed with the salesman. The salesman, a local resident, spun his own tales about the mysterious man giving the party. As the writer listened, the salesman kept excitedly tale-telling, all the while marking down the price of beer to the writer, who listened enthralled by the stories and ever-getting-cheaper bottles of Schlitz.

Inside, it was essentially the same story. Some mysterious character named Gerbrody or Kiroty. Tales told, building a week-end legend.

At midnight, lamenting their unpreparedness in not bringing sleeping bags, cameras, food, beer and cigarettes, the two writers agreed to return to Burlington for the night, to return Sunday morning for the party's second day.

••••••••••••

The speedometer read 77 miles per hour. There were no dashboard lights in his car and the sun wasn't due to rise for another 2½ hours. His eyes explored the headlit highway, darting from the white dashes on the asphalt to the gravel shoulder with caffeinated quickness. Dunkin' Donuts had done it to him. A couple of cups of coffee and a chocolate honey dip had given impetus to his curiosity. So he had headed, with all the lubricated speed his '66 Chevy could put out, for probably the largest barn-raising party he would ever attend. It had been brewing for 15 hours already and the luminous dial on his wristwatch was just capping 3:30 Sunday morning.

From the center of Fairfield – frame houses and white clapboard – he followed the roadsigns that pointed to Chester A. Arthur's birthplace. The historic marker in town claims Fairfield is the "widely accepted" birthplace of the 21st president who took office after Garfield was assassinated in 1881. "Widely accepted" because Arthur's father, a minister, had married an American girl living in Canada and during his campaign as Vice-President with Garfield there was some question as to whether or not he was an American – much less a native-born Vermonter.

Rolling up and down in the night from blacktop to dirt through what he could only imagine are fields of corn and silage now covered over by a nocturnal cirrus dew, he knew he was on the right road because headlights appeared repeatedly: Dull glows in the

The bikers were there. He walked back outside the van and up onto the hill to meet the "super hogs," local chapter of serious cyclers who were sleeping under the stars. Two of the Superhogs were seated around the fire they had built with some of the leftover 2 x 4's from the barn construction. They were engaged in early morning talk when he stepped up to the fire. The best intro was to ask if they knew where the owner of the barn was. Of course they didn't, but they were happy to repeat all the rumors A.M. mist flashing out from the curves in the road ahead. The stars were not brilliant. They only provided a background for the sluggish movement of the autos as they crept from the party. Occasionally, they sparked a reflection from the metallic roof of a barn.

Arriving at the driveway he saw the remains of a parking lot for a party that had once been upwards of 2000. Now the field was matted and his headlights moved across cars parked at random angles. He drove all the way up and parked. Sounds of John Cassel, his band, and the Nightcrawlers "Hot Lickstan" harmonies wafted from the open door of what he considered to be the largest classical barn he'd ever laid eyes on. Two arched doorways on the basement walls. But larger than railroad tie beams supported the floor. And the lattice work of the 39 arching studs which supported the zinc roof welled up memories of the catacombs of cathedrals.

Under this roof, the party-goers have dwindled to about 150 as the John Cassel Band put out their third gig of the day. They began at 3 a.m. He arrived at 3:30 and that die-hard crew was playing to the die-hard dancers, drunk with sound, beer, and advancing exhaustion. The Volunteer Firemen of Fairfield were serving out energy boosters in the form of barbequed chicken, coffee, and hot dogs, among others. Outside, one of the doors to the barn a HOOD truck stocked with 60 kegs was slowly depleting. By the time the affair had ended 100 kegs were drained. he had heard that night. "His name is Coburn or Castlegobi. He's inherited $52 million. Pineapples. The Barn was $650,000, the house $¼ million. If I had that kind of money I'd own every year of Harley ever made. And every possible combination." The rest were asleep beside their machines.

He had watched several local Franklin County farmers walk in awe through the basement of the barn to the party's music upstairs. They walked slowly, gazing at the beams in the ceiling and the Dairy stalls. They had little to say as their eyes took in the spectacle.

He had been taking photographs and his eyes were tired. Upstairs at 6 a.m. "The Triads," a local band, had set up. They had just closed the Fairfield Dairy Hall and decided to play out here. They played the perfect morning music. Nothing like good rock 'n roll to purge the scene of somnambulence and insert a little energy into the dancers.

At 7 a.m. the die-hards were asleep – most of them. Only 50 or so people danced like a scene from They Shoot Horses, Don't They? Fairfield Dance Marathon.

On his last legs, he walked to his car and began the drive home. He stopped at the base of the driveway for one photograph. The silver roof was now touched with the yellow of morning. Two silos tolld sky ward, framed in the brush of a fence row – a celebration of the Franklin County soil.

••••••••••••

Sunday morning and the road was less crowded. Three Burlingtonians told a Franklin County deputy sheriff they were publicity men for the John Cassel Band. Instand access.

Rumors still circulated. Who was this character, this "invisible", "elusive" presence responsible for throwing the party. The stories told by Franklin County farmers and Burlington UVM-types alike were the major activities at the party, especially Saturday; telling the tales of someone named Gerbrody or Kiroty were often more important than drinking beer or enjoying the music. The fantastic in those stories ever-increased, perhaps in proportion to the excitement generated by the mix of music and beer. The amount of money deposited in some Franklin County Bank. Some hazy figure walking into a local farm supply, walking amongst the tractors, backhoes, manure spreaders and balers, all the while saying, "I'll take that... and that... and that one..." The checks that raised eyebrows in Burlington banks. That cathedral-like barn with the giant, shiny metal, futuristic roof; the pungent smell of wet, new wood not yet smelling of the cow barn. The partially-built house, sitting on the hill overlooking the barn.

Speculation was the game; nearly everyone played. One character long-familiar with the county, nicknamed Propaganda (pronounced "prop-a-gahn-DA"), said, "He doesn't want to show his face. He's gonna send out six guys; each one's gonna say HE's the one." Just try and find out.

Whether or not this mystery was created deliberately, either out of self-protection or plain old fun, has yet to be proven. At this point, it is irrelevant. Happily, there were never six actors, each one playing the title role of Partygiver.

Late Sunday afternoon, the real one talked for a short time to a Summer Cynic writer, courtesy of an introduction by John Cassel. The writer had been nagging Cassel most of the afternoon; not expecting any success, choosing Cassel as the only likely route to meeting this Gerbrody or Kiroty character. Cassel, having just concluded performing for the fourth time in 24 hours, was packing up, for the drive to Jeffersonville and a fifth performance. Once again, the writer came up and nagged him.

But this time (remarkably good-humored considering the circumstances) Cassel stopped what he was doing, looked around the barn, and pointed, "There he is. Come on. I'll introduce you."

The Partygiver was not the tweed-suited, riding-booted country squire, mildly amused by the goings-on. He looked like any other young Franklin County farmer. Short, dark hair, beat-up work boots, dirty dungarees, and a well-washed grey workshirt with "Joe" scripted above a flapped-pocket.

A native-Californian, Phillip J. Gerbode first came to Vermont as a student at Middlebury College. Sometime during his Middlebury years, he became convinced that he wanted to remain in the state. His interest in dairy farming, a passion really, resulted from a logical interest in rural living.

He is remarkably un-countrysquireish. During the five minute conversation, he speaks quietly, almost oblivious to the madness going-on in his barn.

"Have you ever read The Great Gatsby?"

"A lot of people have talked about that. No, I haven't." His expression never changed.

He had to excuse himself. Two little children skitterishly pestered him to get them dinner. He walked them over to the East Fairfield Volunteer Fire Department's food set-up on the other side of the barn.

••••••••••••

Life isn't easier for any of the partygoers. Just more bearable. The ugly recent publicity surrounding the relationship of Earth People's Park to the surrounding community of Norton did little to enhance future hopes for the historic conflict between native-born and New Vermonters. With tough problems like energy, unemployment, inflation, dairy prices and brucellosis facing the residents of this beautiful state; conflicts as native vs. newcomer beg to be placed in the background.

Phil Gerbrode may not have attempted to do this consciously, but he certainly helped out.

And Chief John Irish says, after two fundraisers (the other one July 4th) for the, East Fairfield Volunteer Fire Department, the department is pretty tired out. But a lot closer to building that new addition to the firehouse.

—CARL BLUMBERG
—STEPHEN TANNER

LETTER FROM PARIS

I

She had forty minutes until her first class, a Conversation class, was to begin at the Sorbonne. It was a Monday morning, and she had been in Paris for five days, preparing herself for this one, which was to be the beginning of a six week course there. She had come into the central area on the métro this morning with all the French businessmen and women, and so felt partially as if she were one of them, but inside was petrified into a deep closed-mouth silence, and still used only gestures to communicate though she knew she knew how to speak enough French to communicate verbally. She found the right door in the immense and old main building of the Sorbonne, which takes up a block and has a large cobblestone courtyard in the middle, to her classroom, where she was to report at 10 o'clock, and then walked to a Papeterie she had seen before where she intended to buy a notebook. This deed appeared an easy one to carry out, and in walking along the narrow sidewalk next to the cobblestone street, passing workmen, construction workers, secretaries, children, benches, magazine stands, cafes, she smiled to herself. It seemed such independence was as satisfying as any she had known. Upon reaching the Papeterie, which in the summer had an outside display to select from, she immediately headed in the direction of the notebooks, and this seemed again as natural as if she were in an American bookstore, and made her smile again. She began to feel to the bottoms of her feet that she was going to be able to do it: to live in Paris as she had hoped she would be able to before coming.

Leafing through the notebooks to find the right one was her first rude awakening. All of them were made of sheets of graph paper, some simple squares, some more complicated lines which looked like logarithmic paper, but there were no straight lined ones of the sort she was used to. She felt the eyes of the salesperson on her as she went around looking at the first pages of all the notebooks, and so quickly selected a paperbound pad of graph paper, not a hard-covered notebook as she had had in mind. She handed it to the young man, waiting for him to tell her the price in francs, and cupping the money she had put in her skirt pocket for this purpose. Instead he took the notebook but said in fast French and gestured that she should pay inside, which she would easily have understood if she were not at the same time trying so hard to compensate for the fact that the image she had had of selecting the right notebook, paying for it, and continuing on her way, were not dwindling so rapidly. With a response of more confused gestures, a wide-and-scared-eyed look, and still more tightly pressed lips, she finally understood that she was not going to get her notebook until she had paid inside and brought the slip with PAID on it back outside, which she did. The fact that it was graph paper and how would she write on it had no bearing on anything any more. She put her new notebook in the bag she carried and turned to cross the street. Her feeling of independence had turned into an uncomfortably hot sweat, and she had less time now before her class than she would have liked, and so to console herself for having so blundered an attempt to step out of her familiar boundary with the idea that it would be no different on the other side, she thought to herself that she would go have a cup of coffee and a cigarette before class.

She found a cafe, where there were both inside and outside tables. She knew the price to be higher outside than inside – this she had discovered by making the mistake one time – and so she went inside, to the small and dark and mostly empty room where were a woman – probably the owner or, if a man, his wife – the bar, a few inside tables, steps leading down to the telephone and toilets, and a few mysterious doors that were unaccounted for and never would be as far as she was concerned. It was a cafe like all the others. She went up to the woman immediately and said nonchalantly, "un cafe, s'il vous plait." It seemed easy enough, and memories of sitting in diners with her sister on the other side of the ocean were already coming back and making the hot sweat and private humiliation at the notebook incident go away. She stood at the bar and waited as the woman fiddled with the noisy machine which makes the coffee. The woman placed the cup on the bar, and said, "un franc," which was paid. She looked at the cup of coffee, which she had expected to be a nice cup of black coffee, and discovered it was instead a demi-tasse of espresso. This was all right though – anything was all right, so long as she could just sit down to console herself further. When she lifted the small cup carefully to carry it over to a nearby table, where she would light a cigarette and perhaps write in her small notebook (bought in America) or just think about other things, the woman said harshly, "Ce n'est pas le pareil... ce n'est pas le pareil," which meant that if she were going to sit down to drink her coffee she would have to pay more. At this point the saving of money was completely irrelevant. Exasperated, she asked the woman how much more it would be to sit down, and the woman told her 1 franc 30, 1 1/3 times what she had paid for the coffee, which after all had turned out not to be the imagined cup of coffee. She gladly paid to avoid any further contact with this woman, and sat uncomfortably in the corner of the cafe, and knew then that the only way she could console herself would be not to pretend any more that she could live over here as she did at home, doing the small familiar things she made herself happy with, but to adopt small ways which were familiar to the French in Paris, and to let them become familiar to her. The expresso turned out to be just what she needed anyway, and she finished it at ten minutes to ten, and as she walked towards where she knew her classroom to be, another different sort of smile spread across her face.

II

It was a Sunday, and the sun was bright but not hot. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon she calculated that on the other side of the ocean her father was driving his two youngest children to the Variety Store, where he bought his Sunday New York Times every week, and the children each their week's 10 cents worth of candy. She could see the red in their faces from having already been awake three hours, running on the lawn with the ball or the collie to use up time until their father was ready to go. In one second it was real to her: she began to shake her foot to the time of nothing, nothing other than the knowing that she couldn't be there with them, a silent knowing. But in the next second it was gone, and she realized her foot was moving to the beat of music, and then that the music was coming from somewhere on the other side of the high hedges around her, and then that it was a piece by Telemann and that the volume couldn't have been more perfectly balanced between too loud and too soft. A broad smile pushed its way across her face and stayed there. The torment she had been feeling ten minutes before in the museum was completely gone, had already passed two stages into a peace she had not remembered having known, and which made her say outloud to a friend, "If they played music like that everywhere, there wouldn't be wars," and then she was sorry she had ever let a thought like that leave her to be made public. There were sparrows hopping on the ground beneath the chairs, and on the tables themselves, where spills of sugared coffee were fast drying in the sun. She was sitting in one of the chairs under a red parasol attached to the table, in a small garden just outside the museum.

It was arranged so that visitors at the museum could wander and look at the paintings inside until his feet were tired or his mind tormented, and then walk outside without losing the right to return to the paintings at any time for the initial price paid at the main entrance. This was not the greatest advantage however, in most such resting areas one had to buy at least something to drink in order to be able to sit at the tables, which is not bad in itself but cannot always be carried out when even a cup of coffee costs 75 cents or a dollar, but here one was free to sit and rest without buying a thing or talking to anyone. There were white iron tables and chairs, parasols, the hedges to enclose the small garden, and the re-entrance to the museum available when the feet were rested or the mind once more content.

The moment passed and the small sun patch on her arm where the parasol did not cover began to make the rest of her body warm and then hot, and her mind was blank again, and the energy to continue, this time on the second floor of the museum, had re-charged itself. She picked up her bag and went back into the cool stone building. It was the Jeu de Paume, an impressionist museum on one of the corners of the Jardin des Tuileries, opposite the Louvre. She climbed the stairs and prepared herself for once again facing the other visitors, for substituting the paintings for the music she had heard outside a moment ago, and for putting out new energy to make this substitution an equal exchange.

There were paintings by Monet, Manet, Van Gogh, Gaugain, Cezanne, Pissarro, Toulouse-Lautrec and more. In two minutes of gazing into the dimensions of the paintings, she was sucked into another vacuum, and it never occurred to her that anything else existed.

It suddenly struck her that all the women and girls and mothers and daughters smiled out from their framed gardens or pond edges or benches or tables with the country in the background, and smiled as if they were enjoying their lives, and were leading them fully; she felt as if she were the one that was dead and only a ghost, and felt horrified at her manner of existence – as she imagined it must be to be a soul in the air and to look into her kitchen at home where the others were still living, but not to be able to touch them or talk to them, or to have them touch her and communicate to her. She felt that the women and girls in the paintings sensed her presence as she looked in, as she imagined her family would be able to sense the presence of her ghost in the kitchen where they all sat in flesh and blood, but this ability to sense only added to their smiles a golden carat of irony, and then they kept on with what they were doing and being.

She felt that if they had stopped to pity her it would have been too hard to bear; as if she had a terminal disease and lay dying in the hospital, and her family would want to stop their daily living to be with her, but she would not want that – she would want them to go on as always, to see it. And they would go on, but would hold their knowing faces up to her, knowing that somebody who couldn't participate was looking in on it desperately, wanting to savor every minute of the fractions she saw. This was how she looked at the paintings and how she felt the people in them to be looking at her. Her life began to seem too trivial in one strong second, and she descended the marble steps again, and found herself in another shaded iron chair, with the classical music coming over the hedges, and the birds hopping and twittering, and slowly she began to regain a consciousness of her own life, her own flesh and blood, the importance that she be there, then, to hear and see and feel the circle around her, and then she could walk again... this time to be on the other side of the hedges, where the music from the speakers was stronger, and where a new pocket of life enveloped her.

–ELLY CLAY
July, 1975, Paris

A DREAM WITH NO STUMP ROOTS IN IT

I took a long-handled ax and made myself a stump out of an oak tree. It felt good. My back ached for three days, and I got a blister I kissed every morning. But I worried about the roots of the stump that clung to the dirt beneath my lawn. I tried not to think about them. I mowed my grass every week and set up my croquet wickets perfectly symmetrically. But at night I dreamed about dynamite, had a vision of the stump rising in the air above a balloon of fire, the roots ripping out of the earth, and later a beautiful flat place there where the old stump had squatted. I dreamed my wife and I went out under the stars and made love in the new grass that had grown over where the roots had been. But I am a calm and inconsequential man, accustomed to living with worry. Stump roots are nothing compared with car paymehts and dentist bills. A man can live with stump roots I told myself. I drove my car to work every morning, changed the oil in my lawnmower after every twenty-five hours of use, and [illegible] each evening before dusk. So [illegible] stump roots are shooting [illegible] a child will grow up and [illegible] Then I began [illegible] up through the dirt of my lawn, those ten white and sweet little [illegible] at them with my tongue instead of [illegible] soul, my wife said when I came [illegible] that troubled me. 'You're usually very calm and inconsequential, she said, and I agreed. I took my suits to the cleaners, stopped at the A&P for milk, spaghetti sauce, and wheat germ. I took my little family on a vacation to the Jersey Shore. We stayed in a motel, splashed in the sea, became happy and sunburned. Whenever I found myself thinking that I couldn't swim because there were roots lurking just beneath the surface of the ocean, I said, don't be a fool. A week after we came home I set fire to the stump, but the flame went out in the wind. Fool, my wife said. Pyromaniac. I agreed and went to the drug store to buy aspirin for her. I built a birdhouse for the baby and tried not to look at the charred stump. We had friends over for drinks. Everybody laughed a lot when my wife told the funny story about my going out and setting fire to the stump. I did it because it was there, I said, and everybody laughed a lot. That night I woke up and walked out onto the lawn in my bare feet and pajamas. The grass was wet and cool. There was the moon, the Milky Way, the street in front of our house with a few cars driving by. There are worms and moles, too, I thought, and I took off my tops and bottoms, and laid myself flat down on the earth in the cold and wet. I wished it would rain. The paperboy came, rode his bike past me, but did not stop. The milkman came, said Hi there, and went on in his truck. At dawn my wife came out in her robe and slippers, said, What are you doing out here? Like Christ, like Lazarus, I rose, shamefaced, gathered my pajamas, looking at the imprint my body had made, a place of matted grass perfectly the shape of my body there on the lawn. I wanted to tell her, there are worms, there are moles, there are roots, but instead I said, I am ashamed, I am deeply sorry, and I slunk past her through the doorway. I was not allowed to play with the baby for three days, though I drove to work each morning, weeded the flower beds when I came home, and left generous tips for the paperboy and the milkman. Yesterday I heard my wife on the phone telling her mother the funny story about my going out in the middle of the night to lie on the lawn. Last night I dreamed my most beautiful vision: In animal skins I am walking with my wife and child over a plain of freshly mown grass. There are rows of sturdy houses and a few tennis courts in the distance. A gentle, pale blue wind is at our backs, and there is warm rich sunlight all around us. Our feet pass without sound over an earth that is smooth and endless.

Reprinted from A Dream With No Stump Roots in It: Stories by David Huddle, by permission of the author and the University of Missouri Press. Copyright 1976

MAD HATTER

If you think you've got problems just think about those poor pigeons in Burlington. Dig it, an attorney is plotting ways to rid the Queen City of this dastardly plague. Chittenden County Courthouse Committee Clerk Edward Cashman is searching for a solution to the shit problem which has covered the former post office building in downtown Burlington. You notice the Burlington Free Press refers to it as dung. Why not call it what it is, and it's shit.

Considering that it costs $23,000 to remove the shit from the building the least the pigeons can do is go and shit some place else. Some of the solutions to this problem have been in keeping with the warped mind theories that eminate from people in authority in Burlington government.

Put a 10-cent bounty on the pigeons was one suggestion. Another clear thinker came up with placing rubber snakes around the building. Poisoned corn, playing of Frankie Carle records, on and on it went. Finally someone (he must have been a veteran) suggested shooting it out with the varmits in City Hall Park.

What a great idea! We could schedule it for July 4, 1976. No one could say that Burlington, Vermont wasn't going to go all out for the Buy Centennial. Think about it, grown men shooting it out with the pigeons in City Hall Park on the 4th of July. They would end up terrorizing half the area before they settled their smoking weapons down.

Personally the method that won my heart was the one where attorney Cashman and a construction foreman trapped the birds and then strangled them.

A tip of the Mad Hatter's hat to the committees of the Burlington International Games. What an absolutely outstanding job is done by the coaches, participants, and of course, the parents.

So much is done in one day you almost wonder if it is all worth it. Consider a 10 hour bus ride. Consider a $12,000 budget. Consider the amount of work put into a venture like this. Consider that shortly it will grow into a two and probably three day affair.

Thinking that there are juvenile problems in the North End the spending of $12,000 is most definitely questionable.

I am not saying that the Burlington IG does not accomplish its purpose. I am sure that it does. And I think that is bringing a lot of kids together to compete against one another.

For $12,000, you could compete against Rutland or Royalton at least three or four times a year...

Remember last week I told you about quoting the Burlington Free Press, you take your own chances on that count.

Well Free Press writer Carlo Wolff comes in for a one issue stint for reviewing of records and completely blows it. Hell he's trying to make the Cynic like the Free Press.

Case in point: Page 12 Vermont Summer Cynic July 24, 1975. (review on Timeless, by John Abercrombie)

"Abercrombie first gained notice on Billy Cobham's great jazz-rock album, Spectrum, and has since worked with the Brecker Brothers and performed on various CTI big band records."

Do your homework, Carlo. Abercrombie never played on Cobham's Spectrum album and never played on CTI big bands dates. He did play with the Brecker Brothers. Well one out of three is not a shut out.

Whenever you hear major big time athletes interviewed they rarely speak of talent anymore, they speak of money.

Bobby Nichols speaking about the field in the Canadian Open just referred to the money winnings of the guys he considered the toughest to beat.

Joe Namath, a quarterback, calls a press conference to announce he signed a $4 million contract with Faberge.

What gives???

What are these guys, athletes or businessmen?

Can you imagine this: Yankee Stadium originally cost $9 million to build, was then to be remodeled and updated by the city of New York for $24 million. The cost now will be about $59 million.

There certainly are better places for money in New York than in an exclusively major league baseball park which is owned by the Knights of Columbus anyway.

No wonder New York City threatens to disappear forever in a sea of misappropriated funds and misguided programs. Shame...

Mark on WRUV-FM makes for good listening. A top-notch job.

Thanks to Zoe Breiner for the kind words. I am sure the St. Louis Cardinals will finish... the season that is.

Weather Report has a record out that may eclipse Mysterious Traveller. It is called Moon Spunnin' and it is ohhh sooo pretty. Wayne Shorter does a job on this disc.

Joel Vance writing in Stereo Review called Jeff Beck's Blow by Blow possibly the album of the year. So true. Something must be wrong when I start agreeing with Joel Vance or is it vice versa.

All Yankees' fans back into hiding. After the doubleheader dunking by the weakest pitching staff in Kenmore Square the pin stripes forlornly returned to the drawing board for next season.

I understand the Yank's strategy for next year is to sign Johnny Bench and Joe Morgan as free agents. Trade Jim Mason for Nolan Ryan and then bring in Leo Durocher to manage. Lots of luck!!!

Best of luck to my friends Dave and Eddie Hershberg who are taking over Brannie's Yellow Bus in Battery Park. I went through the swearing-in ceremony having to eat two steamed hot dogs, french fries and a pop. Tasted good!!! Really!!! It wasn't bad. I think I got at least two hours sleep that nite, between trips to the.....

–AL BERNARDINA

SELF PORTRAIT OF AN INMATE: NAMASTE

In South Burlington, locked on four sides by Farrell Road, Swift Street, Shelburne Road, the beltline connecting Route 7 with Interstate 89, and a short par 3 from the Kohala Mauna Restaurant advertising Polynesian delights (though widely known to be serving some rather dubious Cantonese), we find that the Vermont Department of Corrections has spent roughly four million dollars to build its most modern correctional facility to date. However, any good vibes about the new system end with the physical plant.

A large number of inmates who have paid their "dues" at the antiquated monstrosity on 220 Main Street in Burlington, are now incarcerated (sorry folks, but there just isn't another word for it...) within this structure of electronic-gadgetry and privacy-invasion. Despite the most intensive goody-goody public relations campaign in its history, the Department of Corrections has so far been able to dupe only the public into believing that this building out of 1984-has any real merit in terms of the agency's advertised sham of treatment, release and rehabilitation. The inmates – society's alleged failures – see things differently!

One inmate in particular who has served "time" in both institutions explained that for several months while at the B.C.C.C., continual reassurances had been given by staff and administrators to the tune that, "...things will be different at the new center." Now that he has arrived and had an opportunity to examine the "probable cause" of these ostensibly emotional statements, he has found that the callous, degrading, poorly-trained staff and administration of old is the working machinery of the new. Nothing he feels can ever change until those in power deem it necessary for their own survival to change. Being a realistic individual, with an astute understanding of the correctional system and its inherent trappings, he can foresee no viable improvement over the medieval concepts of arbitrary punishment and capricious custodial supervision and control which had become a way of prison life in the old institution.

Hopefully, this tragic situation has the potential to change. Yet, as the majority of the inmates would confirm, this will not be possible until the public becomes aware that the window-dressing that the Department of Corrections has so long displayed, is of human lives with human needs, and not that of paper images meant to deceive and demean society into thinking that new buildings can – in any manner – build "new" men.

*NAMASTE – "I greet the soul within thee" (Ancient Hindu greeting – Yogananda)

–CHARLES BALDWIN

MEDITATION CORNER:

TM BRINGS VERMONTERS OUT OF THE MEDICINE CABINET

A very exciting thing is happening in the Green Mt. State with the Transcendental Meditation (TM) program and its application to the obvious drug abuse problem found in all areas of life. Up until now, the state of Vermont, as in other states around the country, has conceived drug abuse as something most specifically found and generated in the student population, with the use of non-prescribed drugs such as LSD, hashish, marijuana, etc. But now, for the first time, the state is beginning to recognize that the problem of drug abuse goes far beyond merely the non-prescribed drugs and reaches into the community and its bathroom "medicine cabinets" with their prescribed drugs-such as Valium, Librium, barbitutes, amphetamines, anti-depressants and so on. A large number of the Vermont population are as "hooked" on these prescribed drugs as is the student community on recreational-type drugs.

Now that this fact has been recognized as more than a serious problem the government is looking for possible solutions.

The State Department of Social and Rehabilitative Services in Montpelier recently approved a one-year $2,500 grant to the International Meditation Society to teach the Transcendental Meditation technique to a Vermont community in hopes of substantially reducing the drug abuse problem in that area. The target community for the pilot project, beginning in September, has been narrowed down to either Rutland or St. Johnsbury. Daniel Kaufman, the instructor of the TM program, who will be implementing it in either of these two areas, said, "A lot of people want the state grant to be used in St. Johnsbury, but the turnout at a recent introductory lecture on TM in Rutland showed a high level of response."

TM is not a therapy specifically directed at the drug abuse problem but has been found to have profound benefits for nearly 3/4 of a million people in the U.S. (regardless of age, cultural background, or intellectual ability) in not just one area of their lives, but on all levels of the personality. So no matter who you are or what you want out of life, TM can enable you to enjoy all of your life more. All the TM program requires for full unfoldment of one's potential is the simple, enjoyable practice of this mental technique 15–20 minutes morning and evening. If one is enjoying life more and is daily using more of one's potential, then there is clearly less of a need for those all too frequent visits to the doctor for those prescriptions to cope with the daily "ups and downs."

Vermont has a truly enlightened understanding of the needs of the people for an effective way to combat the effects of stress and tension, worries and anxieties, the harbingers of depression. This understanding has taken form in a grant to make available to the communities this proven technique to gain extremely profound rest twice a day. The deep rest gained through the TM technique has been proven to be qualitatively twice as deep as the depth of rest gained in a full night's sleep. Though not eliminating the need for sleep, the TM technique provides the body and mind with such a different, though natural, state of rest that we feel more refreshed; so- we're just not as tired. And from everyone's experience, those "down in the dumps" days beset us only when the stresses have gathered and not been effectively dissipated in the night. In short, stress is a reality and now with the reality of deep rest through TM we can most quickly rid ourselves of it and begin to appreciate the "good life" that our Green Mt. state has to offer. The Vermont government, when asked about the grant, said, "We will try anything once." We are confident in saying that once is all that will be needed.

Any questions about the TM program or the benefits reported, please feel free to contact us at the International Meditation Society, 308 Main St., 862-7259 or attend a free lecture at Billings Hall, UVM on August 5th at 7:30 p.m.

–MAGGIE GILLETTE
TM Instructor

YOU AND YOUR PLANT -

RECYCLING OLD VEGGIES

There undoubtedly isn't more phosphorous or potash, or magnesium around now than there was many eons ago. Probably true, too, for most of the other essential plant food mineral elements.

Of course, you are more interested in the current status of the plant food content of your garden soil. Such occurrences as yellowing of green leaves, purpling of stems and leaf margins; blossom end rot on tomatoes, failure of the broccoli to sprout flowers are symptoms of some mineral deficiencies or other. A short supply of nitrates can cause yellowing, purple colors often relate to lack of phosphorus the so-called rot or blackening of the bottoms of tomato fruits is really due to an interrupted supply of calcium and the culprit that causes flowering failures in the cabbage family is a deficiency of boron.

Where have all the goodies gone? Down to the sea most likely. However, much of what plants need and use in the way of minerals is recycled over and over and over. Look at a forest. The leaves fall to the ground, decay, minerals therein are unlocked by microorganisms and leaching rainwaters to move down into the soil and back into the tree via its root system. The tree itself eventually falls and decomposes and its mineral content too is recycled.

In the garden we tend to take away most of the produce and so the natural cycle of mineral re-use is broken. If you put most of the waste portions of your vegies into your compost, it will help some. Minerals to replace those eaten – and so not recycled back into the garden or at least not generally so in this day and place – must come from someplace else. Unlocked from the reservoir hidden in the rocks and minerals below, added via supplements of plant food, or via manure or compost.

One way you can make sure you're not creating deficiencies is to add a tiny bit of everything (or almost) by means of ocean seaweed or kelp. These can be applied directly to your garden soil as a mulch or added to your compost pile. Liquid preparations are available to put into the soil. It's always a good idea, when making compost to include as much of the old vegetables as possible, and whatever else organic that you can get your hands on, to supply as many different sources as possible of mineral matter.

–TED FLANAGAN

SWEET BETTY'S COOKIN CORNER

It's me again.

Do you know what? It's almost time for those beautiful little bevies of blueberries to blossom bountifully all about us!

And do you know what that means?

It means it's time to take a trip to the top of a mountain or meander in the midst of a meadow picking those plump little purple pearls!

And what do you do once you've got the blueberries?

Make a magnificent melange of munchable muffins!

This week, yours truly Sweet Betty, has the sensation of the season: Make 'em – Blueberry Muffins.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

Measure –
1½ c. flour
½ c. sugar
3 T. baking powder
Salt

Add ½ qt. of blueberries or to your liking.

Fold in mixing as little as possible:
1 egg
½ c. milk
1/3 c. shortening

Bake at 350 degrees until brown.

WORK STUDY PROGRAM BLOSSOMS AT UVM

With the advance of summer one is able to look around the UVM campus and the Burlington community to see a great number of college students working. Many of these students obtained their positions through the University of Vermont Work-Study Program. One such position is a recreational director for Baird Children's Center, a treatment and education resource facility for emotionally disturbed children. Converse Home for retired Vermont women uses work-study students as aides to residents and staff in the dining room and kitchen. The Youth Services Bureau uses students as counselors and friends for Burlington youth who are having serious difficulty adjusting to their home, school, or community. Forestry majors work in the U.S. and state forest services.

The 'on-campus' jobs range from secretarial and maintenance to research assistant, computer programmers, and statististicians in administrative and academic offices.

To be eligible for the program an applicant must be an undergraduate, graduate or professional student attending on at least a half-time basis during the normal academic year; and in need of earnings from such employment in order to pursue a course of study at the University.

The funding for the program comes primarily from the federal government with 20% matching by either University funds or off-campus non-profit public service organizations. The amount of assistance awarded to a student reflects both the degree of financial need and to some extent the skills and experience the student has had previously.

The Work-Study program at UVM started in 1965 and is now funding approximately 1000 students during the summer program period and the academic year.

In these days of fewer jobs it is often the job interview and previous experience that makes the difference. The W/S program gives eligible students a chance

ALAN BROUGHTON HAS A BOOK OF POETRY

In the Face of Descent, a book of poems by Prof. T. Alan Broughton of the University of Vermont English faculty, has been published by the Carnegie-Mellon University Press.

The collection includes poems previously published in a number of magazines and journals including The Beloit Poetry Journal, Northwest, Prairies Schooner, and the Quarterly Review of Literature. The title poem received a Second Award in the Borestone Mountain Poetry Awards and appeared in the anthology Best Poems of 1972.

"The Burning", another poem in the collection, received an Honorable Mention in the Yankee 1973 Annual Poetry Awards judged by May Sarton. A sequence of 12 poems, The Skin and All, was originally published at George Little and the Stinehour Presses in Vermont as a collaboration in a series of poems with prints by artist Bill Davison of the UVM art faculty, through a Summer Institutional Grant from the University.

Prof. Broughton joined the Vermont faculty in 1968 and was named a professor in 1974. He attended Harvard and the Juilliard School of Music and graduated from Exeter Academy, Swarthmore College and the University of Washington, and taught at Sweet Briar College before coming to Vermont.

AFT LAWYERS APPROACH NLRB FOR UVM

Attorneys for the University of Vermont are expected to file briefs with the National Labor Relations Board this week, as the Board's Washington Headquarters begin the process of determining who shall be represented in a collective bargaining unit.

The hearings began in Boston four months ago following a petition from the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) seeking to represent the University Faculty in collective bargaining.

The American Association of University Professors (AAUP) and the Vermont Education Association (VEA) subsequently began separate unionization efforts at UVM and were represented when the hearings began in April. They have since withdrawn, and are now in the status of "intervenors."

The hearings were held in Boston and Burlington, and concluded recently. The final decision on the composition of a collective bargaining unit will be made in Washington, Robert S. Fuchs, Boston regional director of the NLRB, said last week.

The change of venue to Washington had been at the request of the University administration, the unions and the hearing officer, University President Dr. Wayce C. Patterson said Tuesday.

"We feel, as do the unions, that the case is of such universal importance that the board itself should rule on this," Patterson explained.

The transferral of the representation case to Washington is likely to prolong the final judgment from Washington, and thus the union election, according to all accounts. The backlog of cases is cited as the reason.

The Washington office will, after determining who is to be represented in the collective-bargaining unit, write up the ballots and handle the election.

The ballots will contain the options open to the faculty members who are to be represented by a collective bargaining unit, if they should so choose to have one. They may choose to be represented by a union, (and if so, which one) or they may choose to not have collective bargaining.

The University of Vermont administration and its special advisor for labor relations, Dr. Samuel Feitleberg, have urged university faculty to become familiar with the labor situation, so if they are contained in the collective bargaining unit, they will be sufficiently concerned to vote on the issue.

The University Administration is opposed to collective bargaining and believes that the majority of the faculty are too. It has thus pushed for a wide representation of faculty in the collective bargaining unit, saying that when it comes down to a vote, the faculty will not want a union.

Among the months of testimony at the hearings have come a series of charges from the American Federation of Teachers of unfair labor practices.

AFT attorney Anthony DeMeles has declared that the University has withheld documents subpoened by the AFT for cross-examination, and has attempted to intimidate faculty by hinting that tenure could be taken away if collective bargaining is approved.

INCISIVE RIGHT- ON JOURNALISM CONTINUED

(continued from page twenty)

responses that Mr. MacKay has garnered from various offended Liberty Unionites. In their putdowns of Mr. MacKay's boorgee tirage (although I think this outdated red rhetoric is a bit much, it is their perogative), I have not been able as yet to discern just what the Liberty Union really is. If the Liberty Union is truly concerned with the future of the state of Vermont, I think it might be best to stop giving Mr. MacKay an more shit which only reinforces his ego (and at the same time guarantees us more of his liberal bullshit), and instead one of your kind people in the LU could give us a cool appraisal of the party and its positions and activities. After all, the people already know what you're not. I think it's time we found out just what you are.

Perhaps because our interests run in the same vein, perhaps only because we are friends, but for whatever reason it has been most refreshing to read Mr. Stevens' prose throughout. That his delightful piece on the LU (Revenge of the Hipster) was entirely overlooked/overshadowed by the babbling Mr. MacKay is unfortunate to say the least, and may say something about the sensibilities of much of the readership of the Summer Cynic. That they should take more stock in some out-of-state purple-prosed bullshit when offered genuine and articulate criticism is downright disgraceful. But not entirely unexpected.

I fear that I may have taken up too much of your time/space. But before I leave let me say that I hope you people are preparing more of the same hard hitting articles that have set the tone of the Summer Cynic thus far. Has anybody thought about doing an expose on the fallout shelter racket? Or how about the ABM controversy?

And remember:

A landscape is only good when it shows the oppressor hanging from a tree. – Ishmael Reed

Vermont for Vermonters tom reardon
burlington

Classified

HOUSE WANTED: Looking for country home to rent within 20 miles of Burlington. Needed as soon as possible. Have Pet. Please call 985-3575.

RESPONSIBLE MAN DESIRES A RECONDITIONED RESIDENTIAL APARTMENT WITH 2 BEDROOMS. CALL STEVE 658-4911.

Horse shoeing and trimming – Tim Wentzell Farrier. All work guaranteed, 864-7375

For sale: girl's 26-inch 3 speed bike. In good working order. Very reasonable price. Call Karen at 658-2686 after 6 p.m.

For sale: 1967 Austin Healy Sprite MK IV, $750. 863-3623.

For sale: Audi 1972 Super 90 Station Wagon. Must sell. Call 1-453-3487.

For Sale: Mercury 1973 Comet, 4 door, 302 V-8, auto trans., P.S, AC, excellent condition, has to be seen to be appreciated. Call 863-1413 after 5.

For sale: 1970 Toyota Corona, four door automatic. Engine good condition. Some rust. 24 M.P.G. $450, 893-2612.

Needed: a place in the country to live. The less luxuries the better. In return I'll work or pay rent. Experience in: housecleaning, gardening, animal care, horseback riding, skiing, barn work, wood cutting, forestry. References, Call Laura, 864-5461.

For Sale: Datsun 510 1971. Good condition. Call Steige, 658-2053.

For Sale: Unused Kloe & Maxwell Organic Chemistry text, $8. Call 899-2133.

For Sale: Mercury 1973 Comet, 4 door, 302 V-8, auto trans., P.S. AC, excellent condition, has to be seen to be appreciated. Call 863-1413 after 5.

Moving – must sell colonial sofa excellent condition $90; table loom $40; bureau $12; pair V-W snow tires $30. Call 863-6249.

Horseshowing & trimming. Tim Wentzell, Farrier. All work guaranteed, 863-7375.

Experienced MA in English. Will edit and/or type manuscripts. Call 862-4175.

Black man's wallet lost on campus. Reward offered. 863-6504.

Classified ads are free. They must be in the Summer Cynic office each Monday before the Thursday issue.

summer cynic

"Make a claim to a piece of terrain"

Editorial

It has been a good year for my garden. The little plot of earth that received a good share of my springtime energy now showers me with a healthy variety of fresh vegetables.

I remember the hours I spent turning the earth, breaking up the clods of dirt, clearing out stones and pulling weeds. Grueling preparation indeed. Sometimes I wondered how could I expect anything to grow. Nonetheless I persevered.

The weeks of hot, humid weather threatened to ruin my garden before it even had a chance to get off the ground. But somehow through those dark, dry and doubtful days I kept my faith. I had labored hard. I had sowed the seeds with care. I had lived a moral existence. How could this garden fail? When the rains came I knew that all my work would not be in vain. I felt rejuvenated with my growing success.

I realized that with the help of my garden I could stop supporting the big chain-store supermarkets. I vowed to eat only the food that my garden provided. For three weeks I ate nothing but dirt. Baked dirt. Fried dirt. Dirt over easy. Steamed dirt. Cream of dirt. Not only did this diet put a dent in my appetite but I noticed that less and less of my friends accepted my dinner invitations. My social life was soiled.

Finally, thank God, my radishes were ready! My friends gathered from near and far to help with the harvest. Homegrown prosperity at last.

Yesterday I stood in my garden looking over the rows and rows of vegetables as the last rays of sunlight began to disappear behind the mountain. I bent down and picked a zucchini that was ready. Gazing westward and holding the zucchini proudly in my hand I felt a touch of melancoly, for shortly the summer will be over and my garden will be gone.

BETTER HALF SPEAKS UP

To the Editor

I am very disappointed, to say the least, about the insipid article you wrote on Jimmy T and the Cobras.

Before you intended to write an article on a band, did you consider asking about the time and effort put into a band, the equipment they use; information on the musicians, who are the main backup of any band, where they have or will be playing, or what kind of music they actually do play? I could go on and on but I believe I've made my point.

Throughout the article, there were a number of factual errors. For instance, Jimmy's children are a 13 year old daughter - not a son, an 11 year old daughter, and a 9 year old son. "Twist and Shout" was not the song they played for the twist contest, it was "Let's Twist Again." The band members were not wearing jeans which is evident by the pictures used to illustrate your story.

I would also like to know what you meant by calling the band's music "plywood" rock and roll.

I am someone you called one of the "roadies" of the band. Did you ask me who I was or do you know anything about me to catagorize me? I am the better half of one of the musicians in the band and I want you to know that there is more to music, band equipment, the business itself and the behind the scene life than what your very pedestrian article portrayed.

It seems to me you were more interested in writing about your personal lives than the lives of four musicians whom I believe you were trying to write about. The next time you write an article for a newspaper, you might try to get your facts straight and stick to the subject or don't write at all.

— Cyndie Lankay

Correspondence

SCHOOLHOUSE INACCURACIES CORRECTED

To the Editor:

We would like to thank Wyatt Keith for his kind words about the Schoolhouse and at the same time correct some inaccuracies in his article (July 17) about our move to Burlington.

The Schoolhouse was not thrown "out on the streets" recently when its "unyielding benefactress withdrew her financial support." There was this year an increasingly apparent disagreement about educational methods between the majority of parents, on the one hand, and on the other, a minority including the person who has provided a large amount of financial support for the school (including physical quarters). Matters came to a head over the rehiring of one of the school's three teachers.

Major decisions in the Schoolhouse are made by majority vote of parents and teachers, and it became clear to both parties that it was unreasonable for a person to contribute heavily to a cause she no longer espoused. Hence, we parents freely decided to find new quarters for the Schoolhouse even though the owner of the building had stated that she would rent it to us for one year's time. She indicated that she would prefer to contribute her building and wealth to support a different school, and we felt it was unfair to prevent her from doing so by continuing to occupy her building.

What transpired was, in fact, a fair solution to a difficult problem. We are afraid that your article makes our former benefactress appear as the Wicked Witch of the West, whereas she is actually a very thoughtful and caring person, devoted to quality education, who found she could no longer support a parent cooperative school. The members of the Schoolhouse continue to be grateful to her for her past support, without which our school might not have gotten started, and offer our best wishes for her new effort.

Sincerely,
Anne McCartley
Pam Hoadley
Paul Dimond
John Dahl

MOZART FOR THE PEOPLE

To the Editor:

On Saturday, July 19, the sponsors of the Mozart Festival appeased the populace of our community by presenting an hour of Mozart's music in Battery Park. Let me note that the musical presentation was an excellent one and the intent to include as wide an audience as possible was an honorable gesture. However, the make-up of the audience for the most part was a transformed group of patrons to the regular, rather snobbish and affluent classical music affaciendos. Certainly the attire of the musicians, replete in tuxedos, and the decor of the platform, vases of flowers, was indicative of the entire performance.

Battery Park regulars and the adjacent neighborhoods are certainly unaccustomed to such goings on and this was reflected in their obvious absence. No one can convince me that the Mozart menage is anything more than a closed "with it" bunch of groupies who have deliberately priced this coterie of regular performances out of the reach of the masses and have placed these melodic meetings in out-of-the-way places to insure the privacy of the inner klan.

The New York Times ran a piece last week describing a series of Mozart concerts being held in Central Park with the young conductor wearing a T-shirt with a picture of Mozart on it. The audience was composed of young people who were receiving their first exposure to this classic phenomena and who enjoyed it immensely. I suggest that the powers that be put aside the sham of public relations that they pulled this year and, in the future, run a meaningful series of free, public performances in various parts of Burlington which will allow people of all social and economic classes to become immersed in the true beauty of Mozart. It's about time we swept away the veil of mystery and snobbishness that has so far prevented the masses from obtaining true insight and understanding of Mozart's music. Let them eat cake? no. Let them hear and enjoy the music.

Bret Holmes
North St.
Burlington

VIRGINS NOT UNTOUCHED BY DISCRIMINATION

To the Editor

I read with interest your essay topic for the creative writing contest. It sounds promising, but, don't you think you're being just a little discriminatory? You've excluded all those brilliant writers who are not yet married, and prefer to remain virgins until the "I do's" are said. For some reason, society dislikes a virgin, and describes the ailment with such goodies as "puritan," "innocent," "square," and many others (some being more graphic).

Why is it that the open-minded liberal who prides himself on accepting as equals blacks, whites, Hindus, Jews, and disciples-of-who-knows-what will cringe at the thought of befriending a virgin? A different set of standards cannot really be that All-Terrible in the Land of the Free, can it? Just think; virgins can walk, talk, write, and (believe it or not) think as well as anyone else.

And so, another injustice in American life is uncovered.

Catherine L. Bowers

Editor:s Note:

We are sorry you misconceived the essay topic of our Creative Writing Contest. As sexual beings, a major part of our lives are engaged in sexual encounter. It can even be said that birth is a sexual experience. Being a virgin by no means prevents you from participating in our Creative Writing Contest. We welcome any entries you wish to offer.

SUMMER CYNIC: INCISIVE RIGHT-ON JOURNALISM?

To the Editor

Some summer, hunh? All this sun, weather you could fry eggs on the sidewalk with, and every Thursday another issue of this Summer Cynic to peruse. What more could you ask? Incisive right-on journalism, snappy dialogue, and more advertising than you can shake a stick at, if that's your idea of fun. I realize that I know little of matters concerning money, but it would seem wise for the Student Association to investigate your operation, or at the least, you folks should come up with a detailed account of your expenses. I swear ¾ of your paper is advertisements, something that seems uncalled for with a periodical of your stature; i.e. free to the public and supported by Student funding. As it stands, one would think you to be on easy street, vacations in the Sierra Madres, the good apartments on Loomis Street, meat four times a week.

Sorry. I digress. Back to the paper. Every Thursday me and the boys (the boys being a nameless non-sectarian committee committed to the raising of the consciousnesses involved in the struggle) get together down at one of the waterholes and have a good giggle. John Franco's little economic papers are especially popular down at the Kozy Nook, most notably the piece from a couple of weeks back. Everybody wanted to know what they could do to bring down the regime that's fucking them over. I was trying to explain the alternatives open to them last night (sunday) when Freddy Prinze came on the demo telethon and got everybody's attention. But keep up the research.

With much interest we've been following the continued debate over Scott MacKay's article about the Liberty Union convention. Although we decided a while back that the less said about that little collection of quasi-Thompson babbling (And here a little note to Mr. MacKay, Freeman, et al: perhaps it would do you well to read a bit of what Dr. Thompson has written about Gonzo journalism. What he lacks in respect he more than makes up for in compassion. If anything, one will discover that Dr. Thompson cares about what he writes, and is almost never an arrogant condescending asshole.) the better, a few observations. It's been interesting to note the

(continued on page nineteen)

Uermont summer clinic

THE LAST CHANCE SALOON

WELCOME BACK TO BURLINGTON

- Great Drinks At Prices You Can Live With
- Best Selection of Draft Beers in Burlington
- Air Conditioned
- Weeknight Specials

A PLACE TO MEET OLD FRIENDS AND MAKE NEW ONES

147 MAIN ST.
3 DOORS DOWN FROM THE FLYNN THEATRE

VERMONT SUMMER CYNIC
Burlington, Vermont

Editors
Elliot Freeman
Katherine Bowers
Stephen Tanner

Managing Editor
Wyatt Kash

News Editor
Margo Howland

Consulting Editor
Kieran Bell

Columnists
Charley Baldwin, Alen Bernardina, Wayne Blocker, Carl Blumberg, Clair Cutter, Commodore Davidson, Ted Flanagan, John Franco, David Latane, Scott MacKay, Ken Miller, Elaine Peterson, Molina Ripieni, Jay Stevens, Frank Zuss

Photography
John Dillon

Graphics
Terry Marshal
Philip Van Wyck

Typesetter
Susan Ball

Advertising
Martha Richardson

Layout
Martha Richardson

Composition
KNE

Printer
North Country Printers

Legal Counsel
William Root

Radio Voice
Jacques Gonselin

Transportation
Wheatland

Opinions expressed in editorials, cartoons, or columns in the Vermont Summer Cynic do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University administration, faculty, or staff, or the State of Vermont.

A Seymour Phuture Production

GRAND RE-OPENING

Shepard's Pie (now in the sky!)

our quaint upstairs shop featuring current wanted items at surplus prices!

Cotton TURTLENECKS $4.49 17 colors

V-neck or Crew SHETLAND SWEATERS $9.99 and $10.49

REGISTER FOR FREE GENUINE ARMY SLEEPING BAG!

See our other army items such as: Peacoats, N-1 jackets, Bomber jackets, Fatique pants, Field jackets, Mussette bags, Parkas, Chino shirts, Chino slacks, Work gloves, Knapsacks, Work shoes.

LEE WORKCLOTHES and JEANS from $10.97

FLANNEL SHIRTS from $4.79

Low Prices on HANES UNDERWEAR

WASHINGTON WORKCLOTHES and JEANS from $7.49

CLOSEOUT ITEMS from Shepard & Hamelle

QUANTITY DISCOUNTS FOR BUSINESSES ON SHOP CLOTHING • WORK CLOTHING • UNIFORMS, etc.

SHEPARDS PIE IN THE SKY

"Upstairs Over Shepard & Hamelle"

cheap pleasure:

As almost everyone knows by now, a stereo system is a great enhancer of life at school. Music is, after all, one of the great (legal) pleasures available to us poor humans, and its acquisition, furthermore, requires no complex social skills. You can even enjoy it fully clothed and standing up! (Of course, there is also the option of enjoying it in other positions.) Best of all, though, it is no longer the exclusive domain of the wealthy, thanks to Tech Hifi. We think that the systems on this page amply demonstrate that.

This system is the lowest priced real hifi we know of. And we mean real hifi, capable of reproducing music in complete detail and with all its subtlety intact. The centerpiece is the Cambridge Audio 1500 Receiver. This unit comes from a small manufacturer with a firm belief in the value of high performance with a minimum of frills. You won't find a lot of flashing lights and complex dials on the 1500, but you will find true hifi performance, something we haven't found in any other unit at the 1500's price. The turntable is a Glenburn 21108, which is the lightest tracking (1½ g.) turntable at its price on the market, and also the quietest. It comes complete with a hinged dustcover, base, and a high quality dual-magnet cartridge from Audiotechnica. The speakers are Model 22V acoustic suspension units from Creative Environments. They have 6-inch woofers and very sweet sounding 2-inch tweeters. If you bought all this from us piece by piece, it would cost you $292, but from now through September 15, you can buy the system at a savings of $63. Which is $10 off our regular system price. As a matter of fact, the only reasons we can think of not to buy it are: (1) you are buying one of our other systems; (2) your roommate has a collection of 400 Polka records.

$229

This system gives you the clarity and detail of the system on the left, plus more robust bass response and the additional power and superior tuning section of the Sansui 221. Sansui, the worldwide leader in hifi, recently introduced this unit, which we feel is by far the best value on the market at its price, which separately is $169.95. For one thing it has more power than any other name-brand receiver at its price. It also has an outstanding tuner section, and of course Sansui's famous reliability. Tech Hifi has teamed it up with Creative Environments' model 66V speakers, which are two-way systems with 8-inch woofers, in an acoustic suspension design. 2-inch tweeters handle the treble very smoothly. We were quite amazed when we opened our first pair of 66VS; their quality of construction and of sound is extremely high for their price. The system is rounded out with the same sturdy Glenburn 21108 used in the other system. For the price of many departmentstore compacts, this system gives you true hifi at room filling volume. It just might fill your room with people, too, most of which will be asking where you got it. You can impress them with your bargain-finding ability by telling them that it only cost you

$289

Advent Corporation, one of the most familiar names in hifi, has introduced a very nifty little radio, which gives you amazingly big sound from a very small piece of equipment. It comes in two pieces, the speaker being separate so that it can be placed conveniently. It is quite capable of driving additional speakers, and it is equipped with input and output jacks so that it can be used as a very slick little mono sound system, with a tape deck, for instance. It can give you an inordinate amount of pleasure for the very modest price of

$125

By the way, everything we sell at Tech Hifi, unless we state explicitly otherwise, is covered by no less than different customer protection policies, including seven-day money back, sixty-day exchange, and ninety-day trade in policies. In addition, the above two systems, as well as other recommended systems at Tech Hifi carry a

5-year warranty

This policy covers all parts and labor on all parts of the system except styli, fuses, lights, and idler wheels in turntables.

BANKAMERICARD

MASTER CHARGE

come, hear.

tech hifi

150 Church Street 862-2638

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL

For College Students With I.D.

Pre-Winter Service
Winterization & Tune Up

Only:	Labor:
8 Cylinder Cars:	$14.25
4 & 6 Cylinder Cars:	$9.50

20% Off Parts & Accessories
Sept. 2 - Oct. 1

Gordie's University Texaco
860 Williston Rd.
So. Burlington, Vt. 05401
862-7535...863-9838

Get Your Act STRAIGHT!

LEVI'S STRAIGHT LEG JEANS

Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
10% Discount to UVM Students

TABLE OF CONTENTS

RAPPIN' ON CITY HALL'S DOOR: AN INTERVIEW WITH MAYOR PAQUETTE ..... twelve
The "In" team of Tanner and Freeman (intros by Freeman and interviews by Tanner) are into the Mayor's office for a footnote to future historians with the Burlington Burgomeister.

LASERIUM – THE NEW CONTENDER FOR THE "ENTERTAIN ME" DOLLAR ..... twenty-five
Destined to stir as much cosmic commotion as the ill-fated kahoutek, and become far more commercially viable, a relatively new sound and color spectacle called Laserium has emerged on the entertainment market.
Wyatt Kash, Summer Cynic Managing Editor, reviews the laser light concert and explores the future prospects of Laserium as a revolutionary new form of art.

LIVING IN THE THIRD WORLD ..... twenty-seven
A Fictional portrait of living in the North Streets of our world painted by Mike Breiner's prose: "You throw up if you can. If you can't, you know you can make yourself because that's the only way you can get started."

SELF–PORTRAIT OF AN INMATE ..... twenty-nine
In the final installment of Charles Baldwin's "Journal: Reflections," the inmate spells out, from an insider's perspective, the essential ingredients of problems facing the new Chittenden County Community Correctional Center. It is Part II of "A Systematic Malevolence."

OPEN SEASON: THE FRESHMAN FLOOD ..... thirty-two
Welcome campers! Scott MacKay forecasts the annual flood of the Frosh in his classic fried and fulminating tradition.

NO ONE KNOWS THE WAY THE WAITRESS FEELS ..... thirty-three
"A 1967 Chevy Impala SS emblazoned in blue metalflake and chrome mags, jams its Firestones to a screeching halt at the highest pump." Meanwhile, Larry Seiden revs his pen for a profile of Lisa Singer, a gas pumping waitress in Burlington this summer.

WHAT THE HELL DO YOU DO WHEN YOU GET OUT OF THIS PLACE? ..... thirty-five
Mr. Franco has recently trotted off to Law School after an illustrious, if not controversial, career here at "Camp Catamount," as he reverently refers to it. This week his wizened typewriter hammers out some hard core advice to the college grad.

A CONVERSATION WITH PETER AND JOHN ISAACSON ..... thirty-six
A crew of Summer Cynic writers and photographers spent an informative afternoon and a pleasurable evening in Stowe's "Topnotch" bar with a local top-notch folk singing twosome. Interview by Susan Ball, Elliot Freeman, Ann Christie. Photos by Stephen Tanner.

SAGA FOOD'S MEALS SCHEDULES ..... forty-six

FALL SEMESTER UVM SCHEDULE ..... forty-six

THE SUMMER CYNIC CREATIVE WRITING CONTEST ..... forty-nine
Including short story, essay (Topic: "My First Sexual Experience.") and poetry winners. We also sponsored a photo contest, but we only received one entry so the contest was scrapped.

A PICTORIAL ..... fifty-eight
Summer Cynic photographer John Dillon shoots a cycle of reflective nature photographs.

S.A. FILM GUIDE FOR THE FALL 1975 ..... sixty

DEPARTMENTS
News ..... six
Arts and Entertainment ..... seventeen
Editorials ..... twenty-four
Calendar and Announcements ..... forty-six
You and Your Plant – by Ted Flanagan ..... forty-one Mad Hatter – by Al Bernadina ..... twenty-two Local Diversions – by Carl Blumberg ..... twenty-two Sweet Betty's Cookin' Corner – by Sweet Betty ..... forty-one

NEWS

BOARD OF TRUSTEES TO DECIDE SALARY DISCLOSURE

The salaries of the top-level administrators of the University of Vermont, long shielded in secrecy, will become public knowledge if the Board of Trustees accept the "package proposal" of President Wayne C. Patterson this weekend.

The Trustees will meet this Friday and Saturday, August 15-16, in Waterman, at which time the University's interim president will present them with a package of information containing the individual salaries of the Interim President, the Vice Presidents and the Deans, and the mean average and ranges of the general faculty and general administrative employees.

Patterson will then ask that this information be made public.

Patterson said last Friday that the information would not show the specific salaries of the general faculty and staff, but would show the salaries as divided up into Classes P, I, S, and T, and would show the average and the range for each unit by category.

However, the salaries of the University Administration would be spelled out. National averages and comparisons will be included with each salary level.

A push for public disclosure of University salaries grew out of the top levels of the state government, including Governor Thomas P. Salmon, when it was learned that the salaries of Patterson, Executive Vice President Alfred B. Rollins, Jr. and Vice President for Development Barbara Snelling had been raised during a closed session of the Board of Trustees committee meeting in June.

The Board refused to disclose the salaries, and administrators questioned said that such had been the custom for years.

"I don't think there was ever a policy on it, rather a tradition," Patterson said.

The tradition probably dates back to when the University was a private college, he added.

Trustees initially regarded the flap as a tempest in a teapot, and the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee on Financial Planning, Luther F. Hackett, termed as "prying" attempts to get the salaries disclosed.

However, under growing pressure from Salmon, Administration Secretary Robert M. Wilson, and members of the legislature, the Board of Trustees decided to address the problem at their next meeting.

When Patterson took office June 23, he said in a Rutland Herald interview that he personally wasn't opposed to the disclosure of the University's presidential and vice-presidential salaries, a statement which was a major attitude change for the Administration.

Patterson then said he would bring the matter before the Board of Trustees with some "recommendations" and strongly indicated that he would favor making the salaries public.

Patterson says he does not expect any "major opposition" to the proposal, and said Friday he had "generally talked to people" on an informal basis, and that the response had been mostly favorable.

He declined to say specifically which Trustees he had talked to, explaining that he informally asked them for comments whenever he happened to meet one.

Friday Patterson was at the Addison County Field Day with Trustee Carey Howlett, and the matter was mentioned during a radio interview there. "They're not getting too excited about it. Carey said he didn't think it was very important at all," Patterson said.

—MARGO HOWLAND

TUNNEL PROJECT DIGS ON TOWARDS NOVEMBER OPENING

Construction on the University of Vermont Tunnel, which began in late June, is now half completed. Traffic continues to pile up on the Upper Main Street (Route 2) site, as cars skirt roadblocks, and bicyclists and pedestrians detour around fences, barrels and mounds of earth.

The walk that used to lead up through the parking lot by the Dairy building and the Dental Clinic now disappears into a gaping hole.

The new Campus Security Facilities will be housed there, in a subterranean building. Security officials will be on duty in the building 24 hours a day, and will see all persons using the tunnel.

On the south side of the tunnel, at the end of the Redstone Walk, there will be a series of steps leading down into a paved brick courtyard, which will lead into the tunnel. An elevator for handicapped persons will be adjacent to the steps.

An intercom system will be connected to the security office, so that handicapped persons can inform security police of their presence, and then pass through.

Larry Snyder, Director of the Office of Facilities and Architectural Planning, said in a press conference earlier this summer that known handicapped faculty and students would probably be issued keys to the elevator.

Construction on the north side of the tunnel is nearing completion, and the excavations on the south side are scheduled to start August 16, and continue through September 1.

Once the tunnel is completed, in November, the parking situation will return to normal, except for the parking lot outside the Dental Clinic, which will be grassed over and landscaped.

The tunnel will cross Main Street (Route 2) at an angle from the Redstone Walk on the south side, and emerge to the left of the Dental Clinic on the north side.

An earth barrier system, consisting of landscaped embankments and a chain-link fence will extend from the west end of the Carrigan Dairy Building as far east as the Living Learning Center.

Trees and shrubs will surround the area.

The barrier system is intended to prevent attempts to cross the street either above or below the tunnel in the high-speed traffic areas.

The traffic light at the end of Redstone Walk has been removed, and will be thirty feet to the east of the walk during construction.

The traffic light at the Living/Learning Center will be permanently moved 60 feet to the east to provide an on-grade crossing for people leaving the residence halls and going to the Medical Center.

A pedestrian traffic island will be built in the center of the road, an addition to the original plans. A traffic island of sorts is there now; a series of yellow barrels and sawhorses surround the perimeter of the construction site, making it possible for pedestrians to cross partway and wait safely in the middle for the traffic in the other lane to clear.

Jack Dunn, project manager for Murray Construction Co., of Underhill, has compared the excavations and the insertion of the tunnel as "sinking a giant culvert."

Murray Construction Co. was the low bidder for the tunnel when the bids were opened May 14, and Webster-Martin, Inc., of South Burlington, have been retained as consulting engineers.

The 1974 General Assembly authorized $550,000 to be raised for the issuance of bonds for the project, and Murray Construction's bid falls within the budget, according to Proctor Lovell, UVM Director of Support Services.

Construction of an underpass was a specific requirement of the Living/Learning Center Land Use permit issued by the District IV Environmental Commission.

On April 17, 1972, the Commission issued a land use permit which stated: "The Applicant shall provide two pedestrian crossings across Main Street, one of which shall be an underpass."

Students, led by former Student Association President Peter MacAusland, raised opposition to the tunnel, declaring it a waste of money.

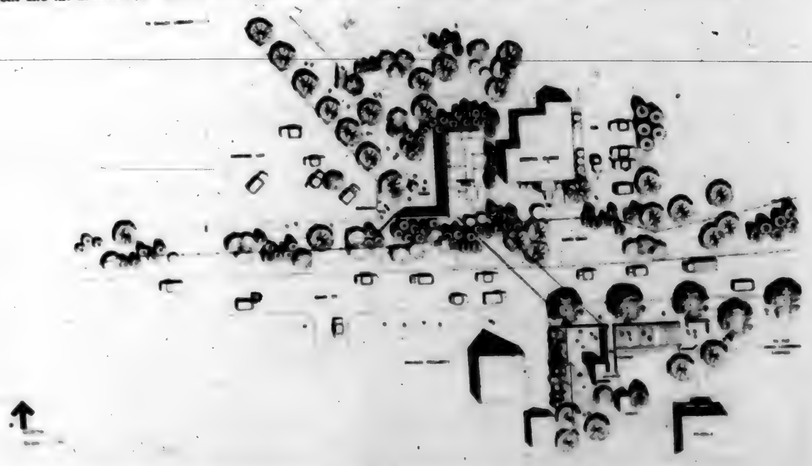
Construction continues for retaining wall below Dental Clinic.

Over 2000 students signed a petition opposing the tunnel, and last January, five of Chittenden County's six senators sponsored a bill, S-93, which would have blocked construction of the underpass by withdrawing the state appropriation. The money, however, could not be applied elsewhere.

The bill passed in the Senate, but died in the House after frantic lobbying by the University Administration. University officials argued that to overrule the requirements of the Environmental Board would set a serious precedent.

Townsfolk are still grumbling about the decision.

—MARGO HOWLAND



UVM PEDESTRIAN UNDERPASS AND BARRIER SYSTEM

NEWS

VPIRG RELEASES REPORT ON AIR POLLUTION IN VERMONT

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group, Inc. (VPIRG) has released a detailed report charging that there is a serious air pollution problem in Vermont and that the state air pollution agency has been ineffective in dealing with the problem. The report is titled "UP IN SMOKE, The Myth of Clean Air in Vermont."

The report cited and described air pollution violations in all categories of pollutants measured, including sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, particulates and ozone. VPIRG concluded that the number of reported violations is only a conservative estimate of the actual violations.

VPIRG Assistant Director Peter Franchot charged that the state air pollution agency is not protecting the quality of air. He said the air quality monitoring program is "in a shambles" and that "the agency is an easy mark for large industrial polluters who have avoided pollution control for over five years in some cases."

In a related action, VPIRG Director Whitey Bluestein sent a copy of the report to John McGlennon, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Regional Administrator in Boston, and urged him to disapprove the pending Vermont request to relax sulfur limitations in fossil fuels. Citing the recent PGA Report which found that Rutland was the only city in New England to have a sulfur dioxide pollution problem, Bluestein stated that "the present limit has not proved stringent enough to attain acceptable air quality or to protect the public health in Vermont."

Franchot said, "the most serious finding of our investigation was that state and federal air quality standards are regularly violated and no action is taken except to call for more study." He added "our report asks that immediate action be taken to meet the sulfur problem in Rutland and the carbon monoxide problem in Burlington."

Another major finding of the report was the poor condition of the air quality monitoring program. Franchot continued "monitoring machines are broken down and don't get repaired for months, data is recorded and never read, some data is useless but still collected and stored in boxes, new monitors are located away from areas of pollution and monitoring often fails during peak pollution periods. There can be no question that the monitoring program is in a shambles."

Franchot criticized the negotiations over pollution abatement that have dragged on for over five years with large polluters such as Howe Scale and Patch-Wagner of Rutland and Burlington Electric Light Department. Franchot said "Large, stubborn polluters have played games with the Air Pollution Section and have gained long delays in correcting pollution. Five years is a long time to wait for a company to come into compliance with state regulations — and some of the companies still haven't met the regulations."

Vermont Public Interest Research Group

Franchot added that "Air pollution is a matter of public health. It is no coincidence that Vermont leads the nation in lung cancer or that Rutland County has one of the highest cancer rates in the country and that we have an air pollution problem in Vermont. Air pollution means higher doctor bills and more disease. That's why we are disappointed that state government is not more vigorous in its enforcement of the law."

UNIVERSITY HOUSING GETS EXTENSIVE FACE LIFT

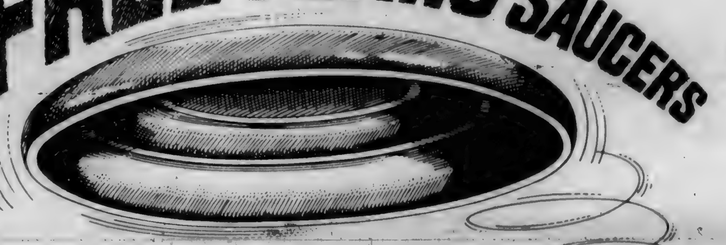
Fall brings a number of changes to the University of Vermont housing situation. Dean of Students Dr. Keith Miser told the Summer Cynic that as of Friday, August 8, there were 187 more students than spaces, a figure 80 students lower than last year.

Miser anticipated that the figure might increase slightly, because 57 freshmen never mailed in their room contracts. "They may just appear during registration with their suitcases and ask for their rooms; so this is all still pretty much in a state of flux." He noted that there were still three weeks before school opened, and numbers might still be reduced.

Because of the extensive repairs necessitated by the requirements of the Fire Safety Code, the University will not be renting Gates Hall this fall. The building was the Chapter House of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority until last December, when the chapter went inactive. The University rented the building for the spring semester, and it

(Continued on page nine)

FREE FLYING SAUCERS



Open a Chittenden
THRIFTI-CHECKING account and get in on the fun with your own FREE Flying Saucer.

THRIFTI-CHECKING—the perfect student account.

- No minimum balance.
- No charge for deposits, checkbook covers or nameprinting.
- Free special checkbook covers with your college emblem and colors.
- Only $2.50 for book of 25 checks.
- Statements sent every 3 months.

Chittenden puts some fun into your checking.
Check it out today at the nearest Chittenden office.

Chittenden TRUST COMPANY
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

PETERSEN TO SUCCEED DEAN MISER

Stephen Hayes Petersen, 30, of Bloomington, Indiana, will be the new Assistant Dean of Students and Director of Residential Life as of October 1.

Petersen succeeds Dr. Keith Miser, who was appointed Dean of Students in March.

Petersen, a graduate of Indiana University (A.B. in French, 1967; M.S. in Student Personnel, 1969) is currently completing studies for a doctorate in Higher Education. He will assume his new post at the University of Vermont upon completion of the Ed.D. requirements.

Until then, Dean Miser will continue to wear two hats, performing the responsibilities of both Dean of Students and Assistant Dean/Director of Residential Life. He says he doesn't mind the inconvenience because "I think we ended up with probably the best candidate in the nation."

Upon Miser's promotion last March to the post formerly held by Dean Richard Powers (now Executive Vice President), a search committee of students, faculty and administrators was established to find a replacement.

Petersen was picked from a field of 200 candidates for the job, and picked the University of Vermont over several other schools that had offered him positions, Miser said.

Petersen currently holds the title of Assistant to the Dean of Students/Assistant Director of Residential Life at Indiana

(continued on page twenty-three)

Quality Fabrics
By Pendleton
Crompton-Richmond
All 4 Major
Patterns In Stock
Vogue Butteric
Simplicity McCalls
TINA'S FABRICS
211 College St.
Just a few steps from Church St.

STRIKE IMMENENT FOR VT STATE COLLEGES

The Washington, D.C. Headquarters of the National Labor Relations Board now begins work on the determination of a collective bargaining unit for University of Vermont faculty.

The labor representation case was recently changed from Boston to Washington, at the request of the University Administration, the unions, and the hearing officer. Shortly thereafter, the hearings concluded.

The transferral of the case to Washington is likely to prolong the final judgment from NLRB, according to all statements. The backlog of cases is cited as the reason. The hearings, held in Boston, Burlington, and Washington, D.C., began April 2 after the John Dewey chapter of the American Federation of Teachers filed a petition seeking to represent the faculty in collective bargaining.

Subsequently, the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) and the Vermont Education Association/National Education Association (VEA) began separate unionization efforts on the campus.

The University Administration is opposed to collective bargaining, and believes the majority of the Vermont faculty are too. It has thus pushed for a wide representation of faculty in the collective bargaining unit, saying that when it comes down to a vote, the faculty will not want a union.

Undoubtedly, the Administration is paying close attention to the labor situation in the Vermont State Colleges, whose faculty are unionized.

Because of a dispute in pay increases, the State Colleges might vote to go on strike in September.

In all the years of war and campus unrest, the University of Vermont has never shut down. Faculty who would be represented in a collective-bargaining unit at UVM would do well to remember this fact.

COMMENTARY ON BARGAINING

Four months ago, the University of Vermont began hearings before the National Labor Relations Board in Boston on the composition of a collective bargaining unit. The hearings began in April after the John Dewey Chapter of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) filed a petition seeking to represent the University faculty in collective bargaining.

Subsequently, the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) and the Vermont Education Association/National Education Association (VEA) began separate unionization efforts on the campus.

The University Administration is opposed to collective bargaining, and believes the majority of the Vermont faculty are too. It has thus pushed for a wide representation of faculty in the collective bargaining unit, saying that when it comes down to a vote, the faculty will not want a union.

Undoubtedly, the Administration is paying close attention to the labor situation in the Vermont State Colleges, whose faculty are unionized.

Because of a dispute in pay increases, the State Colleges might vote to go on strike in September.

In all the years of war and campus unrest, the University of Vermont has never shut down. Faculty who would be represented in a collective-bargaining unit at UVM would do well to remember this fact.

Among the months of testimony at the hearings have come a series of charges from the AFT of unfair labor practices.

AFT attorney Anthony DeMelas has charged that the University has withheld certain documents subpoenaed by the American Federation of Teachers. In addition, DeMelas said, the Administration has attempted to intimidate faculty, by hinting that tenure could be taken away if collective bargaining is approved.

BARGAINING FOR UVM PROFS?

Faculty at the Vermont State Colleges will decide next month if they want to go on strike to protest insufficiently high wage increases.

The Faculty Federation, the State Colleges' union local of the AFL-CIO, wants a minimum of a 10 per cent raise in faculty salaries. The final offer of the State Colleges' Administration, headed by VSC Chancellor Dr. William G. Craig, amounts to five per cent. The raise had been written into the contracts pending appropriation of the funds by the State Legislature.

Faculty Federation President Albert Ouellette was quoted in the Rutland Herald last week as saying that "the money has been appropriated." The Legislature added $200,000 to the State Colleges' appropriation, which Ouellette figures will take care of two-thirds of the increases.

The Faculty Federation's Delegate Assembly, composed of a member from each State College, voted July 28 to seek a strike vote, and now must seek the go-ahead from the full membership to schedule the strike vote.

The Union is scheduled to seek the permission for the vote before September 12.

THE INDIANA UNIVERSITY COINCIDENCE

What is it with the University of Vermont and Indiana University? Dean of Students Dr. Keith Miser, who holds bachelors', masters' and a doctorate from Indiana University, says it is merely "an ironic coincidence" that the positions of Assistant Dean of Students/Director of Residential Life and Director of Student Activities were both filled by graduates of Indiana University.

Stephen H. Peterson was chosen last week to succeed Miser as Assistant Dean of Students/Director of Residential Life, and David A. Nestor recently succeeded William Root as Director of Student Activities.

Root, a graduate of the University of New Hampshire, left UVM to pursue studies at Indiana University!

In addition, the current President of the University of Vermont, Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, hails from IU, and the Assistant to the Director of Residential Life, Gloria Thompson, is returning from a one-year sabbattical during which she worked on her doctorate in higher education at Indiana. Like Miser and Patterson, she also graduated from IU. The college has an excellent reputation for its Student Personnel and Education departments.

Miser said he was "bothered" by suggestions that there was anything funny going on. "People notice all the names from Indiana University... and wonder if I'm just hiring my friends. That bothers me, professionally. Not only had I not heard of them, they didn't even know each other, so that's even more innocent."

Miser said that of the top ten finalists for each of the two positions, there was only one candidate from Indiana University. "That person was hired, in both cases, after the evaluations had been compiled, and interviews given by the thirty-seven various search committee members. Miser called it a "rigorous" selection procedure.

People with goals manage their money with a Howard
Checking Account.
A free book of checks for students.
Turn to the Howard
Bank
Member FDIC
Main Office: Main and St. Paul Streets, Burlington
Offices in: Church St., North Avenue, South Burlington, Essex Center, Essex Junction, Richmond, Shelburne, Winooski, St. Johnsbury, Dewberry Falls, Barton, Orleans, Belmont, Montpelier, Northfield, Killington, Berlin

UVM HOUSING GETS FACE LIFT

(continued from page seven)

was known as Gates Hall.

The building is still owned by the sorority, and the Burlington Fire Department has notified all the fraternities and sororities on the campus to comply with fire code requirements. The buildings are classified as "dormitories" under the code, and $10,000 in repairs is needed to bring Gates up to the required standards. The sorority indicated it is not in a position to undertake the repairs at this time, Miser said.

Miser said the girls living in Gates had been notified, and that they have University housing elsewhere.

Converse Hall, which has been closed for repairs since December, and Redstone Hall, which closed in October because of dangerous gas conditions, will reopen their doors this fall.

"Converse will be right down to the wire" as far as opening on schedule, Miser said. "They're working on the finishing touches." The renovations cost an estimated $1.1 million.

Miser said the basic design of the interior had been left the same but the whole basement had been renovated, creating student rooms, a recreation area, a mailbox area similar to the ones in Wright-Davis-Wilks, and a fireplace lounge.

The top floor of the building has been remodeled into conference and meeting rooms, and overlooks Lake Champlain. "Remember, it was the attic where Henry the Ghost lived; it had never been used," Miser said.

(According to UVM legend, Henry, a medical student, hanged himself from the beams of the Converse attic and hasn't left since.) Converse will now house twelve extra students because of the added rooms, for a total population of 162. It is co-ed by wings.

Redstone Hall has brand-new plumbing, wiring, and lighting, and the inside walls had to be ripped out and replaced. There is new painting, plastering and carpeting as well. The renovations cost an estimated $330,000.

"We almost rebuilt the building inside, and we tried to put it back to 1865 when it was built. It's furnished in the old original furniture we've had restored. That furniture is over 100 years old, and it's rugged," Miser said.

He added that they "saved a fortune" by renovating the furniture instead of having to completely replace it.

A student committee did the design work, Miser said, and "we're very proud of the results."

Redstone will house 33 female students.

Robinson Hall is also undergoing extensive renovations. The room dividers, made of wallboard, do not meet the present fire codes, Miser said, and the wallboard is being torn out and replaced with fire walls.

Coolidge Hall is getting new windows installed, and a new coat of paint. Miser said the dormitories had a "rigorous" fire inspection, and most were found to pass inspection with few problems.

"We did pretty well. Most requirements were not really expensive; they were minor, non-shocking things," Miser said.

The University of Vermont will rent all three floors of McAuley Hall from Trinity College this year, and as a result, the residence hall will have the twenty-four parietals of the University.

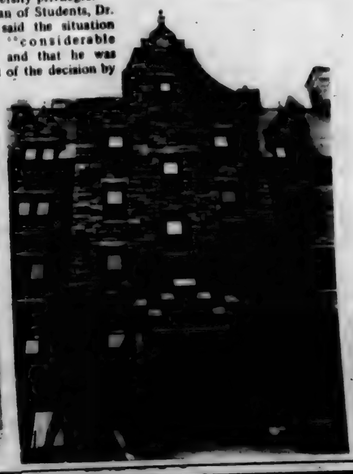
Trinity College does not have twenty-four hour parietals, and when the University rented two floors of McAuley, the women students there had to comply with the Trinity visitation rules of 8 a.m. to midnight. The students complained that they were the only residence hall that did not have full University privileges.

UVM Dean of Students, Dr. Keith Miser said the situation generated "considerable controversy" and that he was just informed of the decision by Trinity's Dean of Students, Sister Pat Conley.

The university will continue to rent Jeanne Mance Hall, and there are no further developments on the possibility of the University buying the building from the Medical Center Hospital, Miser said. For the first time, Jeanne Mance will be co-ed. Two of the six floors will house men.

Hamilton Hall will also be co-ed this year, Miser said.

—MARGO HOWLAND



houseplants
all prices + sizes reference section on plants
downtown Burlington Traders Way
6 no. Winooski Ave.
658-3733
all green & healthy Earthworks

BIG BURGER
1200 Williston Rd.
S. Burlington
Hope You Enjoyed
A Great Summer
Welcome Back

You have an "Engagement"
to see our Oval Diamonds
Select them "loose" or in beautiful 14 or 18 karat gold setting ... ed from $150.
Illustrations slightly enlarged
Prices start from under $100
You are invited to open a Charge Account at Prestons.
A family of jewelers in Vermont since 1844
F.J. PRESTON & SON INC.
17 Upper Church Street
Member American Gem Society

LOVE COSMETICS

Powder
Blusher
Eyeliner

LOVE'S BLUSHING POWDER
Brush-on blusher for fresh, soft With natural-hair brush color.
$3.75

LOVE'S TRANSPARENT POWDER
Puff-on Powder for soft, natural finish.
$1.85

LOVE'S AUTOMATIC EYELINER
For soft, natural eyes. Applicator brush included
$2.75

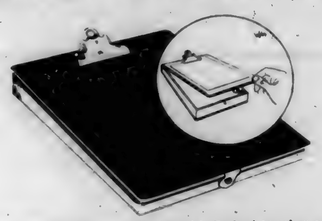
AVAILABLE AT UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

ZIGGY CARDS AVAILABLE AT THE UNIVERSITY STORE

ZIGGY™

American Greetings Corporation

INTRODUCING THE CLIP CADDIE



The usefulness of a normal clip board is limited to what can be carried under the clip. The Clip Caddie with a storage feature as well as a suitable writing surface makes it ideal for students who need to carry extra supplies. Anybody who uses a clip board will find this handy. Price: $5.95 each

Robinson Reminders - Staco

If You're Thinking of Giving a Picture, THINK BIG

Wouldn't it be nice to have that favorite print or slide on display as a framed enlargement at home or at work?

Beautiful enlargements can be made from color or black-and-white negatives or slides in a variety of sizes to suit your preference and pocketbook. And enlargements make wonderful personalized gifts.

Pick out your favorite picture or pictures (bring negatives if you have them), and ask us about enlargements.

No obligation, of course.

In addition to our already discounted film and processing prices, we are offering this back-to-school special: good through Friday, September 26th.

FREE 5x7 COLOR ENLARGEMENT WITH EVERY ROLL OF COLOR PRINT PROCESSING.

WE SELL Kodak CAMERAS FILM

UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

SUMMER NEWS IN REVIEW

CONTINUING ED DEAN RESIGNS

The Dean of Continuing Education, Dr. Raymond V. Phillips, has resigned his post at the request of Dr. Edward C. Andrews. Phillips will be on sabbatical for a year, but is scheduled to return after that to his basic position as Professor of Education, in which he has tenure.

Phillips resigned because of policy differences with Dr. Andrews over the administration of the College of Continuing Education.

John Bushey, director of the University of Vermont Summer Session, has been appointed Acting Dean of Continuing Education by Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, the University's Interim President.

Events leading to the resignation of Phillips first surfaced February 12, when the Administration announced that Vermont Education Television officials would henceforth report to the office of the Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr.

As Dean of Continuing Education, Phillips had been directly responsible for the operation of the Vermont Educational Television Station (ETV).

The change, university officials said, would "streamline administration and give greater focus to educational television's potential in overall planning and budgeting."

Reports published February 15 said Phillips would resign before July 1, and that the decision to resign was reached February 11 in a conference between Phillips and Andrews. Neithes would comment on the reports, though Phillips retained the services of Burlington attorney Phillip Hoff.

Hoff, former Governor of the state, called the resignation "a satisfactory solution for all concerned."

Interim President Patterson has said the whole "outreach area" of Continuing Education will be "thoroughly studied" before a permanent Dean is appointed.

BUCKLEY AMENDMENT CHALLENGE FAILS

The first student challenge of academic records under the Buckley amendment at the University of Vermont failed Monday, June 2, when University officials released a ruling that the records of the student involved were not "inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise in violation of his privacy or other rights."

A three-member committee of emeriti faculty, Dean George V. Kidder, Dr. Alexander Gershoy and Dr. Reginald Milbank, who heard the challenge of student Alan Davis, submitted their recommendations Thursday to the Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dr. Alfred B. Rollins, Jr.

On Friday, May 30, the University had planned to release the ruling, but the student's attorney, Richard Blum of Burlington, refused to agree, saying "I don't want my client to read about it in the papers, you can release it Monday."

Dr. Rollins has indicated that he will not order the student's record to be deleted or modified.

Davis, a pre-med student from Belle Harbor, New York, had specifically challenged a statement made by Zoology Professor Dr. Robert Keen that appeared in a composite letter of evaluation prepared by the University Pre-Medical Committee. The Buckley amendment, sponsored by Sen. James Buckley, C-New York, permits a student to challenge the content of academic records "to ensure that the records are not inaccurate or misleading, or otherwise in violation of the privacy or other rights of students."

The committee concluded that "complete omission of the substance of the letter would have resulted in an inaccurate and misleading evaluation, whereas the present committee letter should not be misleading for the purposes for which it was intended and read."

Davis had maintained that Keen's statements criticizing him as a laboratory assistant and saying he "procrastinated almost to the point of disaster" were misleading and inaccurate in light of the fact that he had received an A in Keene's course.

The Review Committee acknowledged this fact, and said the statement "could be misleading to one who fails to note that the course grade on the transcript is A. The Committee, as well as Dr. Keen, could well have called attention to the grade in some way."

The Review Committee therefore recommended that Dr. Keen be asked by "an appropriate University official" to review his letter "... to assure that he considers it in each detail a clear and accurate expression of his opinion and to make any revisions he may find desireable."

by MARGO HOWLAND

EXECUTIVE MUSICAL CHAIRS

UVM Registrar Richard Barwin has been appointed as interim Assistant Executive Vice President.

The appointment of Barwin by Interim President Wayne C. Patterson is yet another of the executive reshufflings which have been going on at the University since Dr. Edward C. Andrews Jr. announced his resignation from the Presidency.

Andrews, who now heads the Maine Medical Center at Portland, has been succeeded for an interim period by executive Vice President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson.

Patterson, who took over the reins June 23 (a week earlier than expected) will serve until the Board of Trustees approve a permanent successor.

That is not likely to occur before December.

Associate Executive Vice President Richard Powers assumed Patterson's post for the same period, following Patterson's appointment as interim president.

Barwin's appointment as interim assistant executive Vice President is related to the change of Powers' office. He will assist Powers, while Associate Registrar Charles Howe takes charge of the Registrar's office.

Barwin joined the UVM staff in 1968 as administrative assistant to the Dean of the University of Vermont Graduate College, and was named Registrar in 1971.

A graduate of Penn State, Barwin earned a masters in Education Administration at Stetson University, and joined the University staff after a career in the U.S. Air Force.

THE LAST TRUSTEE'S MEETING OF THE SUMMER

The University of Vermont Board of Trustees will meet this Friday and Saturday, August 15 and 16, in Waterman to decide, among other things, whether to make the salaries of the top-level officers of the Administration public information.

The salaries of the University President, its vice-presidents and general faculty and staff have never been officially disclosed to the public, a practice that is said to date from the days when UVM was a private institution.

University President Dr. Wayne C. Patterson, now serving in an interim capacity, will present the Trustees with a proposal to end that long-standing tradition, and he believes the Trustees will accept it. (See story this issue.)

The Trustees will meet in their various committees throughout the day on Friday.

On Saturday, The Full Board meets at 8:30 a.m. in Waterman's Memorial Lounge. Robert Boardman, Chairman of the Presidential Search Committee, will report on the progress of narrowing down the field of applicants for the University Presidency. Boardman is expected to have three names to bring before the Board in October, and he may have some names to mention in this report.

In June Boardman told the Board that the Committee had twelve names in the top category of "highly qualified" and nineteen in a "qualified" category, with thirteen names as yet unclassified. The remainder had been discarded as "not ideally suited."

The Board will also hear from the Gymnasium Committee regarding the proposed improvements and additions to the facility. Patrick Gym was built when the University population was half its present size, and in addition, federal law mandates equal

(continued on page twenty-three)

THE DIAMOND STORE

Art Carved DIAMONDS

FOR TODAY, TOMORROW, FOREVER.

Brilliant. Breathtaking. Finest diamonds set in fashionable styles. For discerning tastes. For your special love. At affordable prices. See our complete ArtCarved collection ArtCarved insures your diamond ring against loss or theft for one full year.

Charge Accounts Welcomed

LIPPA'S JEWELERS

46 Church Street Burlington, Vermont

Open Fri. Eve.

DISCOUNTS SINCE 1967

BOYD'S MUSIC

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

VERMONT'S COMPLETE MUSIC STORE

RENTING REPAIRING

GUITARS & AMPLIFIERS

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS SYNTHESIZERS

ELECTRIC PIANOS & ORGANS

COMPLETE RENTAL SERVICE

COMPLETE REPAIR SERVICE

BAND INSTRUMENTS

MUSIC • CLASSICAL & POPULAR
GUITAR - FLUTE - DRUM SET - BANJO
INSTRUCTION BY PROFESSIONALS
DANCE BAND BOOKINGS

206 MAIN ST. BURLINGTON 863-4613

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE

Retail Outlet

FANTASTIC SELECTION OF BEERS, ALES, AND AMERICAN & IMPORTED WINES

AT GREAT SAVINGS

OPEN DAILY

45 E. Allen St. Winooski, Vt. (At the rear of Frank's Texaco)

RAPPIN' ON CITY HALL'S DOOR

AN INTERVIEW WITH MAYOR GORDON PAQUETTE

We were sitting on the veranda soaking up the afternoon sun. Addie Ann asked me if I wanted some iced tea. I nodded and she went into the kitchen. Meanwhile I was thinking. It was coming down to the week before the deadline for the last issue of the Summer Cynic, and I felt the story eluding me was one that could give our readers some insight into what makes Burlington tick. Hmmm... what to do? I pondered the problem. Sure... I had spent some time with Governor Salmon, why not pay a visit to Mayor Paquette?

Addie Ann returned and handed me a tall cool glass. "Well, what are you going to do?"

"Interview the Mayor," I said.

"Mayor who?" she wondered.

CYNIC: What do you think of interviews?

MAYOR: I think that they are good and that they serve a useful purpose. I think that the interviewer has a certain subject that he wants to discuss and I enjoy that in the interview.

CYNIC: Do you think that interviews say enough about the issues or the person being interviewed?

MAYOR: Well sometimes they do and sometimes they don't. Many times the person being interviewed feels that some of the things he's said have been left out. Most times for me the interview has come out like it really happened and not changed too much.

CYNIC: How do you think the press has treated you as mayor? Do you feel, as Tom Salmon does, that you are in an adversary relationship with the press?

MAYOR: Oh no. I think the press has treated me very well. They've pretty much told it like it happened about me and the city of Burlington.

CYNIC: Governor Salmon told us, when we went down and spent a day with him, that he thought the Brattleboro Reformer was the best newspaper in the state. What do you think is the best newspaper for the city of Burlington and also in the state?

MAYOR: I've only really been exposed to the local media so I don't know much about the Brattleboro Reformer or any of the other state papers. I do get the Rutland Herald, the Burlington Free Press, and the Times Argus, and I think that the Times Argus and the Burlington Free Press both have been publishing pretty much all of the local news. I do find that the Rutland Herald probably does cover state news more extensively than the other two papers do.

CYNIC: In 1958 you defeated Dr. Charles Perkins, a man who was considered unbeatable for the Ward 2 Aldermanic seat. Could you describe that election and tell why you think you won?

MAYOR: Well it's pretty hard to think back and try to describe the election. I can tell you this, it was awful cold that election day. Certainly I feel I won because I was well known in the ward. My family had operated a grocery store in the local area for years and my brother and I later operated that store and we had an awful lot of contact with people in the ward. I think I worked quite hard in that election, in fact the reason I mentioned that it was so cold was because I stood outside the polls from 7 in the morning till 7 at night without going in one time which I think showed that I could really persevere with something like that. I think that that gained a lot of popularity with the people who came to the polls.

CYNIC: Is it true that you had a bet on with someone who thought you couldn't win that election?

MAYOR: Yes, that's one of the reasons that really got me to run. They were really hard up for a candidate, couldn't find anyone to run against the good doctor so they made a bet with me and it looked quite appealing and then the second bet came along and I thought that I really ought to try. That's really how I got into politics. I had those two bets that I wanted to win and also I wanted to find out what made the city tick.

CYNIC: What other reasons did you have for getting involved in politics?

MAYOR: Being in a small grocery store in the north end of the city run like a 'little general store,' we used to invite people over to have a coke and sit around and discuss local problems and happenings and I think that really set me off to wondering what was happening in city government, what I could do to help or what I could get down there and find out to bring back to my neighbors about what really was going on. That's why I got interested in the City Council.

CYNIC: When you were the President of the Board of Aldermen you said that "the people should be informed to their needs and invited to come to discuss them, in other words we try to counteract the problem of big government with its tendency to grow away from the people." You then proposed to have the second Aldermen's meeting of each month in a different ward and then in a term as mayor proposed a "Meet the Mayor Day" to promote open government. What has happened to these ideas and philosophy about government? Have you or the city tried to break down the communication barrier between the students "on the hill" and the people of Burlington?

MAYOR: Yes, since being elected mayor I believe I've been able to open the doors of city government to all people and run a wide open city government so that all the people will be informed. I proposed to the Board of Aldermen that we put the board on the road to each ward and go to a school the second meeting of each month because this meant that we didn't have to carry all of the bills and the paperwork on the first meeting, and it was just getting around to being quite successful when the board decided they didn't want to get around anymore and they voted quite strongly to stay in City Hall. I still feel that this kind of thing works in a city like Burlington. We do have the neighborhood school concept here where we could get around and when it was ward problems in a certain ward, you got better attendance. Of course I do have to agree with the Board that at the first series of those meetings the attendance was rather small, but as we went along I thought it was generating. When we came back to City Hall we found that we had generated enough interest so that at our board meetings we have a good attendance.

I still hold an open house here as mayor. I haven't for two or three months now because of other business that's been going on but we'll get back into it and I think that these days that I hold open house that we get people in to talk to me that wouldn't think of coming in to City Hall and making an appointment to see me. They just walk in at any time during that day.

I believe that we've gotten more people involved in city government during the past few years than we ever have before. If you look at the number of people who've applied to serve on commissions this year, it will attest to that point because I don't believe that we've ever had that number of people applying to serve on commissions for the city before.

Also two weeks ago, I proposed to the board a committee of three members from each ward to serve on a citizen's advisory committee to the Board of Aldermen and myself, the board members to pick the three citizens from their ward to serve on this committee. I did that because after I saw how many applied to be on commissions and felt that they wanted to get involved with city government that this is one way that they could serve the different districts in the city a great deal. I also mentioned to the board that in that committee of 18 people, that young people should be represented, because I think that's what government's all about. Open it up and let people express what they feel they want their city to be doing.

CYNIC: Have you found a great deal of student involvement in city politics in the past?

MAYOR: Sad to say, we haven't found too much student involvement. You know I've always been a great believer that the "students on the hill" can help the city of Burlington and I think we can help them. Certainly I'm not one of those that felt when the 18-year-olds got the vote the university students would be trying to pass things that the citizens didn't want. I do feel that students at UVM, Trinity, or Champlain, even though they're not from Vermont or Burlington, that there's a good possibility that they'll get involved in government when they go back to their homes. I think that this is a good place for them to get involved with the party of their choice, find out what government's all about so that when they do go home they'll want to get involved.

CYNIC: What is the attitude of most Burlingtonians toward the students at UVM?

MAYOR: We've been discussing the "town and gown" relationships for some time and I believe that the majority of the people in Burlington like having the university here and do not resent having the students here. I think the university has made us the kind of a community we have. When we look at the city of Burlington in these times with these economic conditions, people say "Well, why is Burlington going along so well in the economic conditions we have?" Well we have to look at the hospital and the university to see that they are part of our economic keep-on-going. I don't believe, outside of some people complaining about students using up so much housing, I don't believe that they have a bad feeling about the students. I think that most of them do enjoy having the University of Vermont right here, because I think that the calibre of students that we're getting have been a great asset to us.

CYNIC: Would you say something about your trip to Washington to testify in the U.S. Senate for an amendment to the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1974?

MAYOR: Yes, when I went down to testify I had been following that bill for some time and quite concerned that the states of Vermont and Wyoming were not included in the bill. We weren't included in the bill because we didn't have a city of 50,000 or more. So I arranged to testify on the small cities' behalf to get federal funding on 50% of our deficit for transportation in Burlington. We were received very well. I also testified on behalf of the handicapped and the disabled. I included that into my testimony because I felt somewhere along the line here we should be testifying before the Congress to show them that we are concerned about the people who can't get out and have any mobility at all. Really I was testifying, saying to the Senate that what I was concerned with was that they were going to be killing the bill. The big city people were fighting to have every piece of special handicap equipment on every bus. This would have cost billions of dollars because if you look at the city of New York and equipped every bus with that sort of thing I don't think you could get it through the Congress or the Senate or the president either. So I thought that most cities of our size should use one bus with a "Dial-A-Ride" system because even in New York if a bus drove up to the corner with all this equipment how would the wheelchaired person or the cripple get to the bus? They couldn't. So equipment on every bus would be a waste of money. I had a strong testimony on that portion of the bill. We haven't heard what the committee has done on that. We're hoping that it will come out favorably because it does mean $39,000 to the city of Burlington as a subsidy for their bus so we can give people better service.

CYNIC: Are students included in the census figures for the city?

MAYOR: Well they tell us that the students are included in there now. One of the arguments we have on the census figures now is that they are not including the students, but they claim the students are included. We've been arguing census figures since I became mayor. They tell me we have 38,000 and I tell 'em we have 50,000.

CYNIC: Could you describe how a small town mayor like yourself got a seat on the Advisory Board to the National League of Cities and Towns?

MAYOR: Well I think this is another case of what you might call politics. I was a member of the League. The meeting was going to be held in Hawaii. I was very much interested in serving on the Board of Directors because this gives you a little insight into what's going on in National Government with the bigger city mayors. So we mounted a little campaign in Burlington along with Bob Stuart, the Director of the League of Cities and Towns in Vermont. We sent a few telegrams out to the different mayors that were serving on the nominating committee. I arrived in Hawaii for that meeting and I was on a committee with Mayor Lindsay from New York. We got to talking and I told him that I wanted to serve on the board. And the meeting of the nominating committee was going on right next door. Mayor Lindsay stepped in and talked to them and when he came out he mentioned to me that there was a good possibility that I would be on the Board of Directors the next day. I think that we did a little politicking and talking, and that's how I got on the Board where I served for two years. From there I moved to a seat on the Advisory Board to the Board of Directors.

CYNIC: You mentioned before that when you got onto the Board of Directors of the National League of Cities and Towns you "did a little politicking." What do you think the tenor of American opinion is right now toward politics and what do you forsee as the future of the profession?

MAYOR: I think when you look at people in general, they have gotten a little complacent about what's happening at a National level after being shaken up by what's happened. On the local level, they are closer to us than they are there. I think on a local level you'll find that people still do have the faith in their local governments. I hope that that's restored in Washington before too long so that things will take a step in the right direction.

But local governments are being scrutinized more than they ever were and rightfully so and this is why I've always talked open government because I believe you can be accused of something if you're trying to do this in the backroom. But if people understand what you're trying to do, then they're going to have faith in what you're doing and believe you. And I think that's what's wrong in Washington today. I think that more things have to be done out in the open to let the American people know what's going on.

CYNIC: Is there any politician who you would say you admire above all others?

MAYOR: No, I can't say I admire any politician above others. I look at a lot of people around the country who have been able to get things done in their cities and I admire them for it, but I've never had any politician as an idol. I look at the City of Burlington as a business. I look at the incomes and the expenses and I try to operate the city not after somebody else, but after what our people want.

CYNIC: Has the morning when you said you would "wake up and go for it," meaning the U.S. House of Representatives seat, come yet?

MAYOR: No I haven't really made a decision yet I probably won't make one for another month. I've been thinking very seriously of it. I'm very much concerned with what's been happening on the national level and I do look at the Congress as where the whole thing happens. Although it's only a two year term, I've given it a great deal of consideration during the past few months.

CYNIC: Why do you think the House and not the Senate is where the action is?

MAYOR: I have a strong feeling that most everything that happens in Washington generates in the House. Then it goes to the Senate for a little polishing. The Senators disagree for a little bit. Then they get the two committees together and this is how the legislation starts and goes. Of course I fully realize the large numbers in the House and the two year term, but I think that's where the ball game is in Washington and unless we can have more openness among the members of the U.S. Congress and more people involvement with the U.S. Congress, that we're not going to be doing the things that people really want.

CYNIC: When you have ideas about the U.S. House of Representatives, will you still be thinking about the small town mayor?

MAYOR: My own personal feeling is in Washington that we, the mayor's in the country, and I've been quite close to the National League of Cities and Towns and the National Mayors Conference, have to get our message across to the House and the Senate. And when we look at both the Congressional Houses I have to agree with what Jake Garnes said down there about six weeks ago. He said, "For God's sake, send me down some mayors down here to Washington to tell me what's going on in this country. The Congress and the Senate are not fully aware of what's going on at the grass roots level. We, the mayors, feel that we are the grass roots level. We know what's going on in our cities, and we're having quite a job getting this across to the House and the Senate. When you see the legislation that has been presented by the Mayor's Conference and the National League of Cities and Towns, we prepare our legislation and our goals, we go to Washington to sell them to the Congressmen, and we try to get things across. I think they really need the mayors down there because we know what's going on at the grass roots level.

CYNIC: People say that Urban Renewal is "bogged down." Do you think so?

MAYOR: Oh no, all you have to do is take a look around. It's going full steam ahead over there and we expect to be parking in that garage by Christmas of this year. We think some of those Mall Shops will be open. The hotel down by the lake front is coming quite fast. Urban Renewal is going to help Burlington in more than one way. It's going to help keep our downtown alive which we really need for a tax base in the city of Burlington as well as provide for people coming in from our neighboring towns.

CYNIC: Are you working on anything specific that will clear Burlington's waterfront for the public?

MAYOR: Oh yes, we've been discussing the civic center that we are going to build. Within ten days I hope to announce that we will have a position filled for a person to spend full time on how we will get the money to fund that project. The civic center will be kicking off what can happen. I hope that we will be able to preserve the lake front as much as possible for public use.

CYNIC: What else specifically?

MAYOR: Really what I've seen are the plans for a place for boats, places for entertainment, places where people can go swimming but probably not a man-made beach site. I think we're thinking in terms of winter and summer activities down there. I'd like to see a lot of the winter sports come back in addition to the summer ones. I think they could.

Announcing a Big Money Saving Deal on Mobil Radials

at Spillane's Mobil

Radial Tire Sale

$36	$42	$49
Small Car Sizes:	Medium Car Sizes:	Large Car Sizes:
AR78-13	CR78-14	GR78-14
BR78-13	ER78-14	GR78-15
BR78-15	FR78-14	HR78-15

Plus $1.93 to $3.17 Federal Excise Tax

Mobil Radial Any Size Listed

*(Individual dealers reserve the right to establish their own prices.)

- Ask about our lifetime tread guarantee
- Save extra on sets of five
- Whitewalls styled to match original equipment tires
- Charge on your Mobil Credit Card

Spillane's Servicenter

A FULL SERVICE MOBIL STATION

863-2896 | 811 Williston Road | Next to Gaynes & 1st National

WELCOME STUDENTS

We're Next Door To Campus.

CYNIC: How soon?

MAYOR: It's really hard to say. I do know that someone or some company has picked up options on most of the land and they are discussing development and this sort of thing. Because of the money situation, it's too hard to tell.

CYNIC: 20 or 30 years?

MAYOR: Oh I would hope that it wouldn't take that long. I think we have to take things one at a time. I'm thinking about the civic center and the library building. We want to keep chopping away at it little by little and hopefully do something much sooner than 20 years.

CYNIC: Why do we have all the new traffic lights in the city?

MAYOR: This is one of the things that came out of the Traverse Study that was made that if we were going to be able to move traffic in the city with urban renewal and with the mall on Church Street this was going to be one of the requirements. Back when we got involved with that study, we set aside monies to buy the traffic lights, but we are having a synchronizing problem with them. But when that gets straightened out, the traffic experts say everything is going to work.

CYNIC: Was it really necessary to have all new traffic lights?

MAYOR: Yes, all the traffic lights that we had in Burlington were so old that the temperature bothered the synchronization of the lights. Once I got irritated by the poor synchronization and had all the old lights taken down and synchronized, then put back up and within an hour and a half they were all off again. They were old and nothing could be done with them. But we will be utilizing them on some street corners where people are asking for them and where they don't have to be synchronized so that they will still be useful to the city.

CYNIC: The old lights were taken down because they couldn't be synchronized. Their replacements can't be synchronized either. Is the temperature bothering the new lights?

MAYOR: I'm not sure. I don't think it's temperature. It must be in the mechanism and the company that put them in is still fooling around with the mechanism to get them synchronized.

CYNIC: Having said once "In our haste to obtain new revenues, we must not equate progress with a population explosion of poorly planned shopping centers and cancerous growth of the asphalt jungle." Do you believe preservation of Burlington's landmarks should continue?

MAYOR: I say that we have to save as many as we can of Burlington's historic landmarks. One of my favorite ones, which we haven't been able to acquire, is the VFW building. As part of their Bi-Centennial celebration, the Chamber of Commerce wants to buy it. If you stand on Main Street and look up Church Street and look at the old buildings, the different types of buildings and then glance at the new ones, the old ones are much prettier. They have a lot of character and when people come to look at Burlington, these are the things they want to see. That's one of the reasons I've been fighting so hard to keep the Carnegie Building, the old Fletcher Free Library. They tell me it's not an historical site, and I say it's the only one we have. I think that construction costs have gotten to the point now that people are more seriously considering saving buildings. I think old buildings are what makes a city. If there's anything I hate it's to drive into a city and see everything that's new. I think the Master Plan that we have in the City of Burlington is going to help preserve our heritage here and not take all of these buildings down.

CYNIC: Had the City of Burlington received any Discretionary Funding from the Federal Housing and Community Development monies, what would it have been used for?

MAYOR: What we're looking to do in Burlington is to build more housing for the elderly and we are looking to have more housing for people on the low income brackets. We've been following that legislation quite closely and the President's not doing too well by us.

CYNIC: You have been called a "thumb in the dike politician" and a "consummate politician who will lie low until the people are screaming." How do you react to this and what would you cite which would negate these criticisms?

MAYOR: I can't really see who would quote that. I think I've taken positive actions in the city with the consultation of a lot of people. I don't think that I just did something before I talked with an awful lot of people. I usually make it a policy if something is rolling around in my mind many times the alderman think I'm just throwing it their way because I haven't talked with them. I'm not a politician that goes to the Board of Aldermen and asks for support before I bring something in. I've always laid it on the table and let it pass on its merits rather than politicking for it. They say the Democratics have control of the Board of Aldermen, but I've never said to the Board, "I want this passed and this killed." I've always gone to the Board on a wide open basis. I think we've been able to operate the city in a good businesslike manner and we've been able to give the people what they want at a reasonable cost in taxes.

CYNIC: Is it really your dream to see a dome over the Church Street Mall?

MAYOR: You know that's been discussed a great deal and certainly when you look at a mall, everybody talks about a climate control mall. But when you look at Church Street, I don't think it's possible. And maybe we wouldn't want it. We do gripe a little about our climate up here, but I think that's all in our spirit. We're going to have a shopping mall right off on Church Street, but I think Vermonters will still want to walk up and down Church Street and I think if we turned it into a mall that the kind of things that will be in there will bring warmth to the mall anyhow.

CYNIC: Many people regard gun control as political suicide in the state. Why were you so eager to require licensing of handguns and their owners in the city?

MAYOR: Well that goes back to what I said a little while ago. Maybe I'm not a good politician. I know that gun control is a hot potato all over the country. I've followed it a great deal in the last four years. In fact I voted against handgun control at the last four conventions that I attended. In the last NLC convention it only lost by about 3 votes, and mine was one of those cast against it. But as I look at it and as I look around the country more and I see different states enacting more gun control laws, I can see where everyone is going to get into more trouble with these. If each state has a different gun control law, how is anyone going to know what to do as they cross different borders? And then when we look at the statistics on the Saturday Night Specials and we see what's happening with this type of gun, it's time that we have legislation that will control it. I'm not for registering all arms in the U.S., but I do believe that legislation can be written up that will satisfy all factions. I say that the Congress has sat on this for an awful long time. Why? Because it is a political hotbox. The president is starting to get concerned because he's reading the same statistics that I'm reading. I know in Vermont we'll probably be the last state to adopt gun control if we see the laws pass state by state. I have no doubts in my mind about that. But after reviewing all these statistics, I felt I had an obligation. I felt I had an obligation to bring out my feelings about what should happen in this country on gun control. Whether it's good or bad politically I think you have to express your opinion and the people have to know where you stand.

CYNIC: You once told me that you felt at times while in office that you acted as a counselor for people's personal problems. Do you feel sometimes that you are the scapegoat for a lot of the city's problems?

MAYOR: No, really surprisingly not. Oh, I've had some and I like to get criticism because this is how I find out what people want or how people feel about what I've done. Many times people come in with good suggestions. Just a little while ago, a group of students came in from Smith School, I don't know whether you read that in the paper or not? But they told me they didn't have a sidewalk to walk on around the bend at Barlington High School. I drive by there everyday and never realized this. The next day we had the street department trucks out there blasting away the rock and cleaning the sidewalk. So those students came in here with their teacher, really criticizing me and the street department for not doing this and we got it done. That kind of criticism keeps us on our toes.

CYNIC: You once said, during your first mayoral campaign, "I love this kind of thing, getting out and shaking hands, working for a campaign you believe in. Even if it's an election I'm not involved in, I go knocking on doors just to stay active and keep my hand in. This stuff gets in your blood."

Governor Salmon told us that Senator Aiken had advised him on one occasion that "once this political bug gets in your blood, the only thing that will cure it is embalming fluid." What will you do when your political life comes to an end?

MAYOR: It's quite hard to say, because I've had only one career in my lifetime. I've been in the baking business since I got out of school. I started there driving a bread truck and ended my career with Girard Baking Company last January as the manager of the company. I do know the baking business. I know the grocery business because I was involved in it with my brother for 14 years, but being away from it, I think it's changed so much I wouldn't know it now if I got back to it. I could always go back to consulting in the baking business. I'm not exactly sure what I'd do once I left this.

CYNIC: In retrospect, how do you react to your statement and to Senator Aiken's quip? Do you think embalming fluid is the only way out of politics?

MAYOR: I think just like they do, that once you get in this position where you get on the council and if you are concerned about people, you like people, you get out, shaking hands, and meeting old friends and making new ones I find it exciting because you're finding all modes of life out there and having new experiences every day. It's not like a business where you're operating that business every day and it's almost a routine with you. Government has gotten so interesting because there are so many things that you get involved with so that it does get in your blood. Trying to do the things that you feel are right for people. But I do think that a fellow will quit before the embalming fluid gets him.

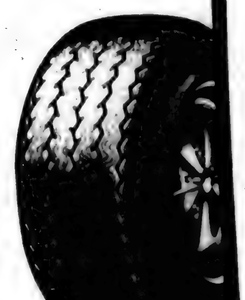
CYNIC: Do you enjoy swimming in the Lake?

MAYOR: This year I haven't been in the Lake one time because I haven't been able to leave here. I like to go into the lake and did a great deal until I got to be mayor of Burlington. They told me that during July and August I'd be getting a lot of time off, but it doesn't seem like I get any time off. I only live about 3 minutes from the lake. My children swim, but I don't, so it looks like if I'm going to achieve that, I'm going to have to put in a swimming pool.

—STEPHEN TANNER
—ELLIOT FREEMAN

Announcing a Big Money Saving Deal on Mobil Radials

at Spillane's Mobil



Radial Tire Sale

$36	$42	$49
Small Car Sizes:	Medium Car Sizes:	Large Car Sizes:
AR78-13	CR78-14	GR78-14
BR78-13	ER78-14	GR78-15
BR78-15	FR78-14	HR78-15

Plus $1.93 to $3.17 Federal Excise Tax

Mobil Radial Any Size Listed

*(Individual dealers reserve the right to establish their own prices.)

- Ask about our lifetime tread guarantee
- Save extra on sets of five
- Whitewalls styled to match original equipment tires
- Charge on your Mobil Credit Card

Spillane's Servicenter

A FULL SERVICE MOBIL STATION

(863-2896) 811 Williston Road
Next to Gaynes & 1st National

WELCOME STUDENTS

We're Next Door To Campus.

CYNIC: How soon?

MAYOR: It's really hard to say. I do know that someone or some company has picked up options on most of the land and they are discussing development and this sort of thing. Because of the money situation, it's too hard to tell.

CYNIC: 20 or 30 years?

MAYOR: Oh I would hope that it wouldn't take that long. I think we have to take things one at a time. I'm thinking about the civic center and the library building. We want to keep chopping away at it little by little and hopefully do something much sooner than 20 years.

CYNIC: Why do we have all the new traffic lights in the city?

MAYOR: This is one of the things that came out of the Traverse Study that was made that if we were going to be able to move traffic in the city with urban renewal and with the mall on Church Street this was going to be one of the requirements. Back when we got involved with that study, we set aside monies to buy the traffic lights, but we are having a synchronizing problem with them. But when that gets straightened out, the traffic experts say everything is going to work.

CYNIC: Was it really necessary to have all new traffic lights?

MAYOR: Yes, all the traffic lights that we had in Burlington were so old that the temperature bothered the synchronization of the lights. Once I got irritated by the poor synchronization and had all the old lights taken down and synchronized, then put back up and within an hour and a half they were all off again. They were old and nothing could be done with them. But we will be utilizing them on some street corners where people are asking for them and where they don't have to be synchronized so that they will still be useful to the city.

CYNIC: The old lights were taken down because they couldn't be synchronized. Their replacements can't be synchronized either. Is the temperature bothering the new lights?

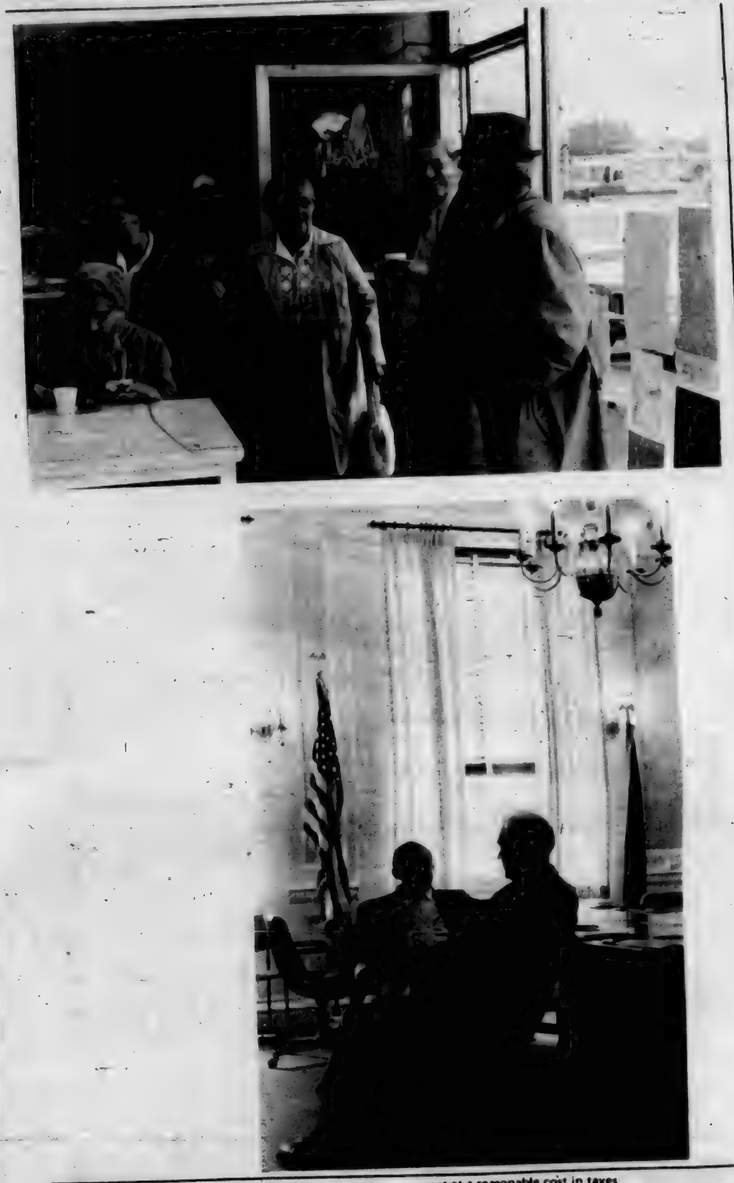
MAYOR: I'm not sure. I don't think it's temperature. It must be in the mechanism and the company that put them in is still fooling around with the mechanism to get them synchronized.

CYNIC: Having said once "In our haste to obtain new revenues, we must not equate progress with a population explosion of poorly planned shopping centers and cancerous growth of the asphalt jungle." Do you believe preservation of Burlington's landmarks should continue?

MAYOR: I say that we have to save as many as we can of Burlington's historic landmarks. One of my favorite ones, which we haven't been able to acquire, is the VFW building. As part of their Bi-Centennial celebration, the Chamber of Commerce wants to buy it. If you stand on Main Street and look up Church Street and look at the old buildings, the different types of buildings and then glance at the new ones, the old ones are much prettier. They have a lot of character and when people come to look at Burlington, these are the things they want to see. That's one of the reasons I've been fighting so hard to keep the Carnegie Building, the old Fletcher Free Library. They tell me it's not an historical site, and I say it's the only one we have. I think that construction costs have gotten to the point now that people are more seriously considering saving buildings. I think old buildings are what makes a city. If there's anything I hate it's to drive into a city and see everything that's new. I think the Master Plan that we have in the City of Burlington is going to help preserve our heritage here and not take all of these buildings down.

CYNIC: Had the City of Burlington received any Discretionary Funding from the Federal Housing and Community Development monies, what would it have been used for?

MAYOR: What we're looking to do in Burlington is to build more housing for the elderly and we are looking to have more housing for people on the low income brackets. We've been following that legislation quite closely and the President's not doing too well by us.



CYNIC: You have been called a "thumb in the dike politician" and a "consummate politician who will lie low until the people are screaming." How do you react to this and what would you cite which would negate these criticisms?

MAYOR: I can't really see who would quote that. I think I've taken positive actions in the city with the consultation of a lot of people. I don't think that I just did something before I talked with an awful lot of people. I usually make it a policy if something is rolling around in my mind many times the alderman think I'm just throwing it their way because I haven't talked with them. I'm not a politician that goes to the Board of Aldermen and asks for support before I bring something in. I've always laid it on the table and let it pass on its merits rather than politicking for it. They say the Democratics have control of the Board of Aldermen, but I've never said to the Board, "I want this passed and this killed." I've always gone to the Board on a wide open basis. I think we've been able to operate the city in a good businesslike manner and we've been able to give the people what they want at a reasonable cost in taxes.

CYNIC: Is it really your dream to see a dome over the Church Street Mall?

MAYOR: You know that's been discussed a great deal and certainly when you look at a mall, everybody talks about a climate control mall. But when you look at Church Street, I don't think it's possible. And maybe we wouldn't want it. We do gripe a little about our climate up here, but I think that's all in our spirit. We're going to have a shopping mall right off on Church Street, but I think Vermonters will still want to walk up and down Church Street and I think if we turned it into a mall that the kind of things that will be in there will bring warmth to the mall anyhow.

CYNIC: Many people regard gun control as political suicide in the state. Why were you so eager to require licensing of handguns and their owners in the city?

MAYOR: Well that goes back to what I said a little while ago. Maybe I'm not a good politician. I know that gun control is a hot potato all over the country. I've followed it a great deal in the last four years. In fact I voted against handgun control at the last four conventions that I attended. In the last NLC convention it only lost by about 3 votes, and mine was one of those cast against it. But as I look at it and as I look around the country more and I see different states enacting more gun control laws, I can see where everyone is going to get into more trouble with these. If each state has a different gun control law, how is anyone going to know what to do as they cross different borders? And then when we look at the statistics on the Saturday Night Specials and we see what's happening with this type of gun, it's time that we have legislation that will control it. I'm not for registering all arms in the U.S., but I do believe that legislation can be written up that will satisfy all factions. I say that the Congress has sat on this for an awful long time. Why? Because it is a political hotbox. The president is starting to get concerned because he's reading the same statistics that I'm reading. I know in Vermont we'll probably be the last state to adopt gun control if we see the laws pass state by state. I have no doubts in my mind about that. But after reviewing all these statistics, I felt I had an obligation. I felt I had an obligation to bring out my feelings about what should happen in this country on gun control. Whether it's good or bad politically I think you have to express your opinion and the people have to know where you stand.

CYNIC: You once told me that you felt at times while in office that you acted as a counselor for people's personal problems. Do you feel sometimes that you are the scapegoat for a lot of the city's problems?

MAYOR: No, really surprisingly not. Oh, I've had some and I like to get criticism because this is how I find out what people want or how people feel about what I've done. Many times people come in with good suggestions. Just a little while ago, a group of students came in from Smith School, I don't know whether you read that in the paper or not? But they told me they didn't have a sidewalk to walk on around the bend at Burlington High School. I drive by there everyday and never realized this. The next day we had the street department trucks out there blasting away the rock and cleaning the sidewalk. So those students came in here with their teacher, really criticizing me and the street department for not doing this and we got it done. That kind of criticism keeps us on our toes.

CYNIC: You once said, during your first mayoral campaign, "I love this kind of thing, getting out and shaking hands, working for a campaign you believe in. Even if it's an election I'm not involved in, I go knocking on doors just to stay active and keep my hand in. This stuff gets in your blood."

Governor Salmon told us that Senator Aiken had advised him on one occasion that "once this political bug gets in your blood, the only thing that will cure it is embalming fluid." What will you do when your political life comes to an end?

MAYOR: It's quite hard to say, because I've had only one career in my lifetime. I've been in the baking business since I got out of school. I started there driving a bread truck and ended my career with Girard Baking Company last January as the manager of the company. I do know the baking business. I know the grocery business because I was involved in it with my brother for 14 years, but being away from it, I think it's changed so much I wouldn't know it now if I got back to it. I could always go back to consulting in the baking business. I'm not exactly sure what I'd do once I left this.

CYNIC: In retrospect, how do you react to your statement and to Senator Aiken's quip? Do you think embalming fluid is the only way out of politics?

MAYOR: I think just like they do, that once you get in this position where you get on the council and if you are concerned about people, you like people, you get out shaking hands, and meeting old friends and making new ones I find it exciting because you're finding all modes of life out there and having new experiences every day. It's not like a business where you're operating that business every day and it's almost a routine with you. Government has gotten so interesting because there are so many things that you get involved with so that it does get in your blood. Trying to do the things that you feel are right for people. But I do think that a fellow will quit before the embalming fluid gets him.

CYNIC: Do you enjoy swimming in the Lake?

MAYOR: This year I haven't been in the Lake one time because I haven't been able to leave here. I like to go into the lake and did a great deal until I got to be mayor of Burlington. They told me that during July and August I'd be getting a lot of time off, but it doesn't seem like I get any time off. I only live about 3 minutes from the lake. My children swim, but I don't, so it looks like if I'm going to achieve that, I'm going to have to put in a swimming pool.

—STEPHEN TANNER
—ELLIOT FREEMAN

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

Is Doing Their Best to Help You

FIGHT INFLATION
with
C-THRU GRAPHICS BETTER LETTER
DRY TRANSFER LETTERING

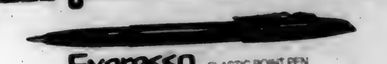
ONLY $2.50 PER SHEET

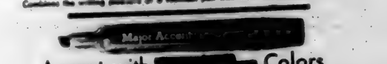
CHECK THESE FEATURES

FREE CATALOG!

Expresso. PLASTIC POINT PEN



Accent with Colors



Sharpie® FINE POINT MARKER
NOW SHARPIE HAS HIGH INTENSITY INKS AND NO HARSH ODOR

SANFORD CORPORATION

CROSS® soft tip pen

This Lustrous Chrome Soft Tip Pen is a tribute to distinctive styling and offers the value conscious buyer a fine writing instrument attractively priced.

3504 Lustrous Chrome Pen With Two Refills $12.00

CROSS® SINCE 1848

AVAILABLE AT UNIVERSITY STORE ON THE CAMPUS

SCOTCH BRAND MOUNTING SQUARES

Scotch Brand mounting squares. Self-sticking adhesive on both squares. Hang pictures, wall decorations, fast! Use it on all types of walls... tile, plaster, wood — any surface that is clean, dry and smooth. Easy-To-Mount instructions included.

"SCOTCH" BRAND DOUBLE-STICK TAPE: A unique, handy tape that's sticky on BOTH sides. Perfect for holding shelf paper, notes, gift wrapping in place. Attach decorations, labels and recipes. Use it to mount pictures, photos, favors. Each roll in clear plastic dispenser. Tape has unusual adhesive that does not adhere to itself, therefore it unwinds like Great sound. Medium price.

3M makes a full line of cassettes, and this is our medium price one. The "Scotch" Brand Low Noise/High Density cassette is great for music, for voices, for anything. Available in popular playing times. You can't buy a better cassette in this price range.

Scotch 3M

CARTER'S

HI-LITERS & POROUS POINT PENS

SUPER SCAMP™ Super Point Pen

#948 SUPER SCAMP. Bulk Pack

JUMBO HI-LITER®

Carter's NEW SUPER SCAMP — New super-tough plastic point — writes fine for life! • starts sharp, stays sharp • rugged as a ball pen • convenient as a porous point pen • quality of a fountain pen • makes carbon copies too! Long cap off time — comes in 4 bright colors: Black, red, blue, green.

Reg: 49 cents Special: 29 cents

HI-LITER® marker

#874 Pocket Hi-Liter. Bulk pack.

WON'T PENETRATE MOST PAPER
ODORLESS NON-TOXIC

NEW INK!
Will not dry out even if cap is left off for days.
Draw chisel tip across words — the bright "see-thru" ink REPLACES UNDERLINING.
Four colors — yellow, pink, blue, and green, — for Hi-Liting different subjects in different colors.
The green ink is specially formulated not to black out on copies made on most office copying machines.

CARTER'S

Arts & Entertainment

TIMON, A RARE SUCCESS

The applause stutters on as houselights shoot up; one senses the audience collectively gathering to stampede out... suddenly a scrap of paper flies from my program. I scoop it up and read:

Timon of Athens, one of Shakespeare's most rarely performed works, was probably written during the period of the great tragedies. From Plutarch's lives and other works Shakespeare drew this bitter tale of greed and ingratitude. The wealthy Timon, despite the pleas of his devoted steward, Flavius, and the warnings of the cynical Apemantus, recklessly bestows his riches on his corrupt and thankless friends. The great Athenian general Alcibiades, returning to the city to a hero's welcome, is banished on pain of death by a bribed senate as he pleads for the life of a friend who has killed a man in anger. Timon, realizing his folly too late and bankrupt at last of both money and friends, retires to the woods surrounding the city to become the ultimate misanthrope. There, he gives gold to Alcibiades who, seeking revenge, has vowed to destroy Athens and its inhabitants.

I am amazed. Behind me a woman argues softly, "but it was about politics George, it's incredibly contemporary..." Pattering across the Royall Tyler cobblestone, Michael turns mumbling, "It's still hard to be decadent in fleshtone bathingsuits." In answer I fish out the scrap of paper, hand it to him explaining that it had been secreted in my program. He scans it quickly, nods, "yeah, that explains a lot."

I unequivocally endorse Timon – go see it. Its tragedy is one that consumes our generation: the misperception of friendship. Additionally, the failure of the director is equally a failure of our time: the quest for and perversion of sensuality.

Timon is a pimp, a bad one,

(continued on page eighteen)

CONCERNING TIMON

Wednesday night. The Yankees are in Cleveland, & the stumbling Sox are pulling into Milwaukee, but in Burlington it/s theatre night: quick dinners, showers, fumbling with ties (Where/s my goddamned tie? Over there. What play is this we/re going to tonight? Timon of Athens. What/s it about? I couldn/t get through it but its got something to do with this ruler in Greece. You/re mean we spent this money on a play you can/t even read? Where/re my goddamned cufflinks? Walking up to the theatre, strains of Mozart on Loomis Street. Cut to: Simon Roberts in the mirror, keeping time with his comb, caught up in that rapture that overcomes him whenever he hears... the Classics.

THAT'S RIGHT LADIES & GENTLEMEN. TONIGHT ON OUR STAGE. THE CLASSICS! BROUGHT ALL THE WAY FROM THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY TO YOU. THE PLAY THEY SAID COULDN'T BE DONE, TIMON OF ATHENS.

.....

When Jay asked to come along, i figured this was as good a time as any to get some things off my chest, especially after someone had decided that Jay's comments were bad for business, it seemed like the more perspectives that there are, the better. Another seat in the house. i/m not a critic. i don/t even know what i like, but when Tom told Jay they should have a little talk about Shakespeare after Jay's piece on Much Ado, the need to talk about poor willy & the modern world seemed necessary. Overdone Will even if he is the greatest poet of all time, which of course isn/t worth a tinker/s damn. It/s like all the nonsense that went on when Henry Aaron took over Babe Ruth/s spot at the head of the home run race. All of the statistics aside, what it boils down to is this: which would you rather do, sit around & watch movies of the Babe cranking up & slapping one out of Yankee Stadium, or jump in the car when the brewers bounce into Boston, drive to Fenway, have a few beers, & maybe see Hank dump it in the screen. Sure he might go 0 for 4, but you don/t go to the park to see a guaranteed homer. A wiff can do the same thing, because it/s all alive. If you know what i/m

(continued on page eighteen)

Ice - Cold Beer
Good Drinks
Good Food
WHERE?
AT THE OFFICE RESTAURANT
CHURCH STREET
Entertainment on Friday and Saturday Now by CHARLES TROIS With his guitar and immense repertoire
"Besides, we still have the BEST sandwich in town!"
Office Resaurant
103 Church Street
Burlington
864-5601

THE GAP
Appalachian
9 Mechanics Lane
India Imports
Leather Goods
Silver Jewelry
Baskets
Frye Boots
Levis
Landlubbers

The All American Hero
163 Main St.
864-9701
Finest Subs in Town
Open till 2:00 AM Everyday
Friday 3:00 AM
FREE DELIVERY
To all Students
From 8:00 PM To 1:00 AM
Min. Oder $3.00
10% Student Discount on Any
SUB or SANDWICH
With This Coupon
864-9701
864-9701
864-9701

RATHSKELLER RESTAURANT
Cocktail Lounge
IMPORTED BEERS
VINTAGE WINES
ENJOY FINE PRIME RIBS
STEAKS SEAFOOD
DELICIOUS BREADS
& PASTRIES
LUNCHEON & DINNER
127 COLLEGE ST BURLINGTON
658-1985
CITY PARK

Shakey's
PIZZA - SPAGHETTI - CHICKEN
ICE COLD BEER
OLD TIME MOVIES & CARTOONS
Open Daily 11:30 A.M.
1653 Williston Rd. S. Burlington
World's greatest pizza.

TIMON

(continued from page seventeen)

possessing not even the street hustler's compassion, who never beat their marks indiscriminately but pride their ability to fit the hustle to the man so smoothly it fits like a masochistic glove. Timon is not simpatico with his friends. Divvying his material wealth among them he hopes to extract a metaphysical reward: love. He procures fourteen year old virgin sweetmeat for his cromes to screw while he bobs about slapping backs sporting a button that reads: LOVE ME.

Clouding everything is Director Ed Feidner's version of an amoral exotic Athens that is strictly bargain basement Fellini. An alcoholic, a homosexual, belly dancers drizzling across the stage... absent is that enduring legacy of B movies: the vision that the near east is an immense fleshpot of intrigue whose flavor is indistinguishable from squat, dank dwellings, spices and stinks, refuse that are nearly human weaving thru steam & hashish haze, women baked under the mediterranean sun until they ooze juice and sex. The meatmarket at the Royall Tyler has its nearest competition in the Super Duper.

Dennis Lipscomb's glitter-fag Lucullus and Jeffrey Demunn's crocked Lucius gain quality from the fact that both are talented performers, yet within the context of this tragedy they are affectations which hinder plot.

(continued from page seventeen)

trying to get at. Which has nothing at all to do with Timon of Athens.

••••••••

this is all a liberal course allows: notes at intermission

The lights come up to healthy applause. Standing up, Jay asks, —What did you think? & my God, how many more times do we have to go through this kind of thing. i babble something about big willy meeting the glitter kids. Which is made that much worse if Wilder is right about the Greeks. A bunch of hung-up hypocrites, drunks, & faggots, lying & cheating their way to world domination, popping off Socrates with a cup of hemlock, balling their way through the Roman conquest. The cradle of democracy. Which does of course explain a few of the reasons of why things are so screwed up. Jay stops me & says how would you do it. We talk about tapes, different lighting. The obvious differences between Errol Flynn in Ivanhoe & Roman Polanski's MacBeth. The spectacle of history versus its reality. The Satyricon of Fellini is not that of Petronius. & can we feel anything anymore when confronted by a faggot, drunk, & some clown who whips himself while he/s copping a cheap feel? Dennis Lipscomb hissing over his pearls, Jeffrey DeMunn slurring out lechery over the girls, Gerald Moses' Timon coming on like some schizophrenic combination of Willie the Pimp & the Good Humor Man, all watched over by Tom Carlisle, whose Apemantus cavorts aroung the stage like some overgrown Puck. It's all like watching the 30 year old street kids down on Church Street. All they know is cruising the strip in a rebuilt Ford, their hair slicked tight for a convertable night. & it ends up as a gesture as flimsy as the robes that swish about our

It is only after intermission that one realizes what the play is truly about. Timon stops pimping and Gerry Moses explodes into an incredible stage performance. Timon descends to an excremental level, shedding clothes, morality, sanity, manners, burrowing down until he reaches the integrity contained solely by sin and shit. Symbolically he only eats roots. He sins against himself as a man, becoming an animal and here, unwittingly, naked, streaked with grime and sweat, his diaghram heaving, we get a dose of carnality so real and sincere it makes the evening worthwhile.

Timon is not a good man taken advantage of by cheap friends, he is an inconsequential man with too much money hoping that by letting people take advantage of him they will provide the little bit of love he is incapable of feeling for himself. He learns to love himself but will never comprehend his own tragedy. Moses feels compassion for Timon as a character, he transmits that to us. Almost never do the other performers appear to feel anything about the characters they portray. The result is a lot of inconsequential performances waste time. In a perverse way the tragedy of Timon is the tragedy of this production: an absence of true feeling resulting in a grasping for the easy cliche and the willingness to caricature that seems the easiest export of our times. Except for Gerry Moses' performance this play exists only as potential.

—J. KARL STEVENS

equally swishy poet & painter. It is somehow unnerving to catch glimpses of their jockey shorts when the fabric stretches too tight. & then that voice behind me on my way back in. —Nobody in the show likes the play. What is this madness. The lobby is quiet after the audience shuffles back in. A woman rushes up the stairs. As the lights go down she stands in the back. Timon enters & she sits in the back row. Her husband spots her, & motions her to sit down. She points at Timon, the play is going on. She shrugs, which is all the liberal course allows.

••••••••

on the way home

It/s over & my God its like going to an evening of one acts. Taken out of the realm of entertainment, the show abandoned for the play, the second half is incredible. The only concessions, senators decked out like the Magi & harlots in flesh tone bathing suits (even Marilyn Monroe wouldn/t wear one of those things). But beyond that. Timon & the big boy cutting loose. The Good Humor Man finding out the little bastards are ripping him off when he goes to the bathroom. Stripped of all the excesses & theatrical pretensions that hinder the first part of the play, what remains is one of those events that you just don/t see often enough: a truly moving performance. Sweat & blood, Timon sucking his roots, tossing gold as he grills his old companions like some demented bodhisattva. What a treat. No robes, no farts, just Moses & us, taking on the shits that populate this junk heap of Greece. & when Willy turns the guns on himself. The anxiety of poor Will churning out those lies for bread. Oh it does the heart good. To know even the Big Daddy could just let go & scream once in a while. It almost made the wait worth while.

—MIKE BREINER

SAGA OLÉ, MIT EIN POSTSCRIPT

"We dined at an off-season dining hall on the campus. They were men and women and a couple of brats wolfing down the meal in the dining hall. It was full of smoke and eating and drinking and laughing and singing and whistling and gagging. The food was good and so was the wine, but the drapes were faded. We did not talk much because our mouths were full. Afterward, we went down to the Fiesta to get dessert and to watch the bulls run.

Ole.
Toro.
Toro.
I got two scoops of Mocha Chip before the bulls stampeded the dino-dong cart."

PAPA HOMINGBIRD
LUNCH ALSO RISES

••••••••••••

"The only running of the bulls at this Pamplona was the advance publicity."

—ANONYMOUS
CYNIC WRITER

••••••••••••

Thousands of college students and graduates will always remember that four-letter word that they were mostly fed with throughout their college career: S-A-G-A. It was, and has been, an ambivalent relationship always. SAGA or whoever else was in the kitchen doing institutional foodservice always inspires some of the least-tasteful humor to be found this side of the National Lampoon. And occasionally, it was deserved. All may remember fondly one future homecoming when age-old speculation became reminiscing, still debating the origin of a certain main course served in a certain dining hall back in those halcyon undergraduate years.

This summer: Our Maternal Chefs have provided us with a new wrinkle on college foodservice, The International Night.

One week ago, Monday's latest international night featured a rarely-eaten form of Peninsular cuisine, Sagastilleian. We leave it to the Iberiaphiles to analyze this nomenclature.

Amidst the architectural Institutional Moorish (or lessish) of Wright Dining Hall, the University's caterer provided its version of the favorite eats of European bullfight fans.

While the gazpacho served was a worthy offering, (and helped to erase its food-service genesis), the cold vegetable soup functioned to raise expectations about the dinner that was to come. Yet, in the back of our minds, something said that the gazpacho was going to be a hard act to follow. Hence, we rushed through three helpings.

We were correct in our assumptions. What followed was definitely not of comparable quality. The entrees were not up to snuff, at least compared to the earlier gazpacho. Chicken Espanol was hardly more than a stewed chicken, tasty but unexciting. The so-called Rice Andalouse was little more than overcooked, stuck-together rice flavored with green peas. There are certainly other names for both dishes.

The major disappointment was named paella. It was a poor choice of title. Paella usually inspires visions of a rice dish flavored with bits of chicken, clams, lobster, chorizos (Spanish sausages), saffron, and occasionally, a beer flavor to the rice. The Sagapaella was highly disappointing. The yellow-tinge to the rice hinted at the presence of saffron; shrimps and (we think) pizza sausage were visible, too. However, the dish tasted of an overabundant helping of an unknown fish, probably a fresh-water variety. Paella, the name inspires such thoughts, this time was really no more than an competitor with tuna casserole.

Unfortunately, our hosts are caught in a dilemma. There are frequent overlaps in European cooking. The Chicken Cacciatore of Italy can cross the Alpes Maritimes into France and become Poulet Chausseur. Then it can tire of France, head south over the Pyrenees to become Chicken Espanol with Sofrito.

Our hosts should consider some more varied areas of culinary interest. Perhaps, some form of Indian cooking, or Chinese or Japanese. Perhaps an International Night featuring the cooking and culture of Tierra del Fuego.

••••••

KNOCKWURST

Postscript: Knock, Knock, knockwurst on heaven's door

Typesetting and deadlines preclude detailed review of Saga's latest entry into International cooking, German Night. Suffice to say, it was far superior, of much higher quality than the Iberian evening.

—SANCHO PANZA
ELIO BRIMBAS
GERHARDT KARTOFFEL

An Oompah band strikes up a polka at German Night, last of Saga's International Dinners.

Folkcraft Instruments
Dulcimers - Banjos
Harps - Balalaikas
Kalimbas
& things
Available Completed or in Kits
Dulcimer Kits $12.95 and up
Banjo Kits $18.95 and up
Box 488, Lyndonville, Vermont 05851 Tel. 626-5736

FRESH GROUND Coffeehouse
For International food and a casual atmosphere at prices you can afford.
Mon-Thurs-11:30-9:00 P.M.
Fri-Sat-11:30-10:00 Pm.

CARBURS
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
- After the Flick
- Before the Game
- Between Boogies
CARBURS RESTAURANT
- Comfortable Atmosphere
- Comfortable Prices
CARBURS
FAMOUS SINCE 1974
Downtown at 119 St. Paul Street

WRUV PROGRESSIVE RADIO FROM UVM

WRUV-FM 90.1 MHZ – Stereo

Greetings from the front office of Burlington's one-and-only progressive, commercial-free radio station. If you are new at the University of Vermont, check out the stereo sounds of WRUV-FM, 90.1 Mhz. We've been around long enough to develop a unique combination of old and new, rock, jazz, blues, and classical.

Most of the D.J.'s on WRUV-FM are students at UVM who have over the years shown an exceptional interest in radio work. By working at the station, they have learned a great deal about electronics, sound mixing, announcing, and music in general. Although it takes time to get a regular airshift on WRUV-FM (a 3rd Class FCC License with endorsement, as well as an audition tape, are required), anyone can join our infamous ranks as studio technicians, news reporters, public relations persons, and sales representatives.

While WRUV-FM is primarily a music-oriented station (18 hours daily), we are also an information source for everyone living within a forty mile radius of UVM. We provide such services as "What's About Town" (a guide to the local nightlife), "Concert Guide" (for Burlington, Boston, Montreal, etc.), the "Ride Board" (to get you where you want to go), and early morning ski reports when the time comes.

Listen for our special programs, too: Monday night "An Hour's Worth," (August 18 Rod Stewart and the Faces), Tuesday night – "New Releases," and Saturday night "Album Feature."

See what's happening this fall at UVM's own radio station, WRUV. We'd like to hear from you. You'll be hearing a lot more from us.

Dave Leonard Station Manager WRUV-FM

WRUV-AM – 580 KHZ – 91.1 CAFM

In September, WRUV-AM begins its 21st year of service to the residents of the University of Vermont via carrier current, 580 on the AM dial. The station is also on the area's cable FM service reaching into thousands of homes off campus. WRUV provides an excellent educational opportunity for students with a variety of interests and the chance to articulate them.

Program director Al Devoid will be looking for D.J.'s in September who have an interest in music and a desire to improve and refine the presentation of music. There will be many openings for interested students. The station hopes to recruit Freshmen as well as upper classmen. People interested in electronics are always in demand as WRUV provides many projects in this area.

WRUV-AM will continue to follow UVM sports in 1975-76 with play-by-play broadcasts of Basketball and Hockey games. Duke Eaton will return to cover the Basketball team while Bill Newell and Chris Wallace will handle the hockey games. Sports director Les Scheinfeld needs several people for a variety of sports shows during the semester.

If you feel that you might be interested in any job at the station, then a visit to the Pomeroy Hall Annex is a must – we're in the "Barn" next to the Burlington Resevoir.

Bill Newell
Station Manager WRUV-AM

The Record File

The Basement Tapes, by Bob Dylan and the Band, Columbia C2 33682

Dealing with this masterpiece in a few graphs is a bitch. We've all heard of these tapes, and many have awaited them for years. Many songs made famous by other groups appear here in their original, and you know now why other musicians picked up on them.

Dylan sings here in all his voices: rock, country, urban talkie, blues. And the Band, which I'm just beginning to listen to, sounds fine. Check out "Orange Juice Blues" for another, bluesylazy side of that group, especially the great Garth Hudson sax.

Columbia has cleaned up the tapes, made them listenable. They sound good. Though they sound like first drafts, they're clear, clean. The lyrics are as good as any by either Dylan or the Band – the melodies, some borrowed, most original, stick in your mind.

What amazes about this collection is its procreativity: not only did this group fiddle around and work things out here for all to hear, the musicians made you think. The melodies linger, yes, but the themes – traveling, eating, the basics – love, death, hunger – are given new meaning.

Maybe this is the true Great American Novel.

Natty Dread, by Bob Marley and the Wailers, Island ILPS 9281.

A curious blend of revolution and pipe dreams, this record works on both levels: powerful, trance-inducing music married to provocative, if sometimes muddled, lyrics.

Marley has a limited vocal range, and the vocal sound on this album is less varied than on the Wailers' last two albums. But that doesn't matter. The production is the Wailers' best, and the instrumentation is newly full-bodied and subtle. The characteristic Reggae beat, a sprung 4/4, dominates except in "Talking Blues," but there's something unfamiliar to it here. Perhaps it's the density of the instrumentation coupled with the vocals by the female backup group, the I–Threes. Maybe it's the horns. Sometimes the record sounds like Memphis has been moved to Kingston.

Puzzling at first, the record finally works. I hear Bob Marley and the Wailers are finally beginning to catch on here, and this album has had much to do with the group's success. They deserve it; their music is insistent, powerful, subliminal. Their message is to dance through the chaos. You can hear it throughout this record. It may be voiced in a strange dialect, but the record is still saying – slow, sexy and subversive – keep on dancing.

Slow Dazzle, by John Cale, Island ILPS 9317

Cale's cryptic wit continues to mesmerize, as it has on his last several records. But with this, he has begun to marry that dry wit and fantasy to rock and roll flash. If Island pushes this album, it could glean several singles from it: "Dirtyass Rock 'n' Roll," "Darling, I Need You," and Cale's fantastic, ominous version of the Presley classic, "Heartbreak Hotel."

Classically trained as a violist, Cale first gained notice with the Velvet Underground. The first star to emerge from that band was Lou Reed, who seems to have burned himself out with his latest, hideous electronic instrumental extravaganza double album, and seems condemned to repeat his preoccupation with urban ennui. Cale, however, continues to grow. The songs on this album are funny, witty – and they have catchy melodies. This album, unlike its predecessor, Fear, makes you want to dance and sing along. There are flashes of similarity to the Doors' music and Cale looks much like Jeff Beck, but his music is his own. The musicians are first rate, particularly guitarists Chris Spedding and the genius from Roxy Music, Phil Manzanera.

You've tried the rest Now try the best
It's Hair by Blunt, Inc.
194 College Street 863-6908

taj mahal
Restaurant and Gift Shop from India
American & Indian
Businessman's Lunch
11:30 am-2:30 pm
Monday-Saturday
Dinner
5:30 pm-10:30 pm
Entertainment in the Bombay Lounge
Special Cocktails
115 College Street
658-4377

Stop & Shop
202 Main St.
Cold Beverages
Subs Made To Order
Full Line Of Groceries
And Meats
Yogurt

MOZART ON THE BOAT MASSES IN THE CHAPEL

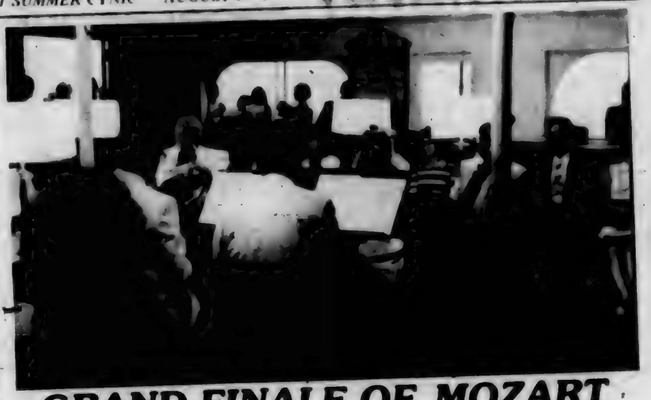
Wednesday p.m. some 300 people wandered down to the King St. Dock to attend the sold-out Mozart Festival performance on the S.S. Champlain: Winds On the Water. Having had a pretty hot day, the ferry ride was welcomed by most everyone. Once all aboard, the boat sailed for 15 minutes. Sun setting on the beautiful New York mountains... the music began at 8:15. Like Noah's, this arc carried two of every kind: two oboes, Melvin Kaplan and Marc Schachman; two bassoons, Morris Newman and Bernadette Zirkuli; and two French horns, Ralph Froelich and Joseph Anderer.

Various combinations of the octet performed throughout the evening. First on the program was the Serenade in E-flat major, K.375. The selections were perfect for the lovely ferry ride. Next on the program was the C-minor Serenade, K.388. The performance was quite professional and after hearing that the performers had only rehearsed for 25 minutes before the concert in a spot-checking fashion, I was convinced of their excellent musicianship. However, the S.S. Champlain is hardly a place for a concert. The inside of the boat was an amazing swetbox where some 40 of the 300 people had the privilege of viewing and hearing the concert as it should be. The remainder of the ticket-holders roamed around the deck in an endless search for a good place to hear the music, stuck their heads in windows and crammed in the doorway to catch at least a glimpse. Those who realized it was a futile effort to enjoy the music aspect were undoubtedly found at the bar in the bow of the boat. The intermission was gladly welcomed by those attempting to view the concert from inside.

The latter portion of the concert was less warmly received though the selections were very beautiful works. The Divertimento No. 3 in B-flat, K.439b, and the Serenade in E-flat, K.375. Precision, great musicality and flawless technique prevailed throughout... if you were one of the lucky ones to hear. One thing that some may be interested to know is that the early sell-out of this concert was no indication of the people in attendance. There was an amazing cross-section of people. Much greater than expected. Considering the few number of tickets available, there were a good representation of students and town folk. Those who got-it-together early had tickets.

The scene now shifts to the lovely chapel at Saint Michael's College in Winooski. The Masses – both great and small – were performed. The concert featured guest soloists: Jean Hakes, soprano; Jane Briden, soprano; Charles Bressler, tenor; and Raymond Murcell, bass; accompanied by the University Choral Union under the direction of James Chapman and the Mozart Festival Orchestra which consisted of the New York Chamber Soloists, some N.Y.C. imports and UVM instructors: Jane Ambrose, flute; Robert Wigness, trombone; William Storandt, timpani; and Elizabeth Metcalfe, organ.

The large group of musicians, with few rehearsals together, did a beautiful and moving job of both early and later Mozart Masses (K.115 and K.427). Both soprano soloists filled the hall and shook the rafters with the intensity of their voices. The most distracting part of the concert was the awful imbalance of parts. The upper voices in the choir were far too heavy, especially the soprano section. Similar problems occurred in the orchestra. The highest and most piercing part overpowered all, this being primarily the oboes. Because of the full brass and woodwind compliment, the few strings seemed only to be drawing their bows and not producing any sound. Murcell's solo was eaten up in the angled ceiling of the chapel and thus the accompaniment prevailed. The excellent program notes were written by James Chapman of UVM. Though the program notes displayed great musicological facts, they seemed far too sophisticated for the crowd and thus were used as fans.



GRAND FINALE OF MOZART

A weekend of closing concerts ended the three-week long Second Annual Vermont Mozart Festival.

Friday's sold-out performance was an evening of "The Salzburg Mozart." Featured were the New York Chamber Soloists: Stanley Ritchie, violin; Hamao Fujiwara, violin; Ynez Lynch, viola; Fortunato Arico, cello; Julius Levine, bass; Melvin Kaplan, oboe; Marc Schachman, oboe; Ralph Foelich, horn; and Joseph Anderer, horn.

The program consisted of two divertimenti, K.136 and K.247; Symphony in C major for oboes, horns and strings, K.128; and Cassination in B-flat for oboes, horns, and strings, K.99. Heavy in the woodwinds and horns, the ensemble could have standed greater string sound.

There were several discrepencies in tempo between the strings and winds but were resolved shortly into the movement due to the high caliber of the musicians.

The concert was held at the Shelburne Farms Coach Barn. The 1901 structure was a beautiful place to enjoy "The Salzburg Mozart" music. There were roughly 600 present. Many viewed the concert from outside sound use of the seating arrangement and heat. This was a rather successful concert.

The final concert was held Saturday at the First Congregational Church on South Winooski Ave. The concert featured the lovely soprano soloist Jean Hakes fully capturing her audience at each of her performances. Also featured were Ynez Lynch, alto; Charles Bressler, tenor; and Raymond Murcell, bass, with the University Choral Union, the New York Chamber Soloists and Director James Chapman.

Quite a few choral works were performed of both the early and later periods of Mozart's life. All the musicians performed with a true sense of its being the last of the series of concerts until next year. The Choral Union, as usual, truly out-did themselves as an extremely professional group. A bit heavy in the soprano section, no concert is perfect in balance from one location to the next.

—ELANE PETERSON

HANNIBAL'S INC.
PIZZA, HOTDOGS, SANGRIA, DRAUGHT,
GREAT SELECTION OF BOTTLED BREW
BEST JUKE BOX IN TOWN
HANNIBUL'S, WHERE EVERY BEER HAS A GOOD HEAD
152 CHURCH STREET

B.T. McGUIRES

Lunch Served 11:30-On Hours:11:00 am-2:00am
Sandwiches served daily
Above HANNIBUL'S on Church Street

MAD HATTER

Well, Billy Martin, baseball's resident jerk, is now with the team he should be with, the Yankees, baseball's resident jerk team.

Can you imagine the nerve of the Yankees to fire Bill Virdon and hire Billy Martin. But then again the Yankees have never lacked for nerve. Remember...

Back when the Yankees' title of Bronx Bombers wasn't just a catchy phrase every pennant and every world championship, it seemed, was grabbed up by the Yankees.

The reason why is very simple. The New York Yankees had better players and the three biggest jerks baseball has ever known. I refer to Dan Topping and Del Webb who were co-owners of the Yankees and George Weiss, their always smiling general manager.

The Yanks would fly through the American League season with very little trouble and then wipe out the National League representative. But every once and awhile the New York pin stripes would have trouble winning the A.L. flag. So what would the Yankees do to win. They would arrange deals for National League has beens who suddenly became revitalized once in Yankee Stadium. Remember...

Johnny Mize over for the Giants hit like a man half his age, he was 39 at the time. Johnny Mize won a lot of big games for the Yankees and ended his career cashing in three World Series checks.

From the Boston Braves came Johnny Sain. A pitcher who previously had been a four-time 20-game winner, Sain was on the way out with the Braves at the age of 34. Sain had a record of 5-13 when the Yankees took a chance. What a chance it turned out to be. Sain turned in back to back seasons of 11-6 and 14-7 for the Yankees.

Enos (Country) Slaughter became a Yankee at the age of 38. After a distinguished career with the St. Louis Cardinals, Slaughter was eased over to the Yanks. Of course he contributed to a couple of pennants and was even involved in a couple of those New York to Kansas City trades.

The list goes on and on. Johnny Hopp, Jim Konstanty, the Yankees went out and bought protection.

And now the Yankees of 1975 show just how rough and tough they are.

Unloading the nicest of men in Bill Virdon in exchange for the abrasiveness, foulness and all around jerkiness of Billy Martin. The Yankees have outdone themselves on this one.

But at least Billy M. will be King of the Jerks...

Give 'em hell if they are late dept. The Burlington Traffic Commission has stated that the 229 new traffic signals will be working and in synchronization by Labor Day.... Ahhhh, but they did not say Labor Day of what year...

Pity the poor Lieutenant Governor... All he wants is a $1,300 desk and everybody flips out.

Lieutenant Governor Brian Burns has once again shown how to take the heat off politically. Buy a $1,300 desk.

What, not everyone has a $1,300 desk?

But everyone is not the Lieutenant Governor.

Can anyone forget the stirring battle for the office between the winner and present reigning Lieutenant Governor Brian Burns and ah, and ah, it's sort of like trying to remember the two clowns that ran with George McGovern in 1972.

But Brian bugs not that easily.

"If I were thinking about next year, I wouldn't have purchased the car. (An earlier controversial purchase that the Lieutenant Governor made). I'm not looking forward to next year."

What the hell kind of a thing is that for a No. 2 man to say. You talk about looking down at the next twelve months and it kind of sums up our Lieutenant Governor.

Not to be outdone with a putdown of 1976 (our Nation's 200th Birthday to boot) the Lieutenant Governor had more absurd remarks to make.

"I didn't want something functional. This gray metal desk is functional. It holds up the telephones; it has drawers."

Hey, Brian, I'll bet with your new $1,300 desk you will even be able to put your attache case with your lunch in it on it.

The biggest balls in the state belong to Senator Pat Leahy. Where in hell does this guy get off voting himself a raise. So what if he is going to donate to charity. Obviously these guys are way overpaid.

When is someone going to stand up and tell the politicians of this country they are sick of their self servicing little empires.

When is someone going to stand up and say that politicians, generally speaking, are full of shit...

You remember the Vermont Sunday News... that's the one that makes your fingers dirty from the ink that rubs off...

Earl Butz is a kultzzzzz.....

Speaking of a mental wilderness... have you ever listened to the local disc jockeys selling their wares... what a wasteland. The next idea those guys have will be their first...

Jim Lynch, a stalwart in the Government's communications system, has been tearing down nothing but big prizes in his 1972 Corvette. Look I just write this, how the hell should I know why someone would go bananas looking at a Corvette.

In successive weekends, Lynch's pride and joy, Sparkle Plenty, has beaten out over 27,000 other cars to win a St. Christopher medal which saves you from road accidents.

Does Channel 22 still carry the Boston Red Sox games? For the amount of games the local outlet carries, there really is little sense in maintaining the contract.

22 will probably still carry a dying horse in the Boston Bruins...

The Louisiana Superdome opened the other day... It cost over $163 million to build. You can see priorities are upside down when that much money will be spent on a sports edifice... while Louisiana continues to wallow in one of the worst school systems in the country...

—AL BERNARDINA

LOCAL DIVERSIONS: SCOTLAND YARD'S 'KOJAK'

Notwithstanding oppressive numbers of t.v. policemen (and with the prospect of more-to-come in the incipient season), I have remained loyal to a couple of the best. The main shared-characteristic of both Kojak (CBS) and Barney Miller (ABC) is a generous helping of what Time Magazine calls "survival-humor." In both shows, the wiseguy policeman takes on the forces of crime and disorder, wisecracking all the way to the Miranda warning, all the while trying to cover-up the personal psychic upset-stomach caused by overdoses of the urban pressure cooker.

For me, this survival-humor is much easier to take than the flood of police shows set in West Coast metropolises. We are bombarded by the old standbys Hawaii Five-O, Cannon, Adam-12, Mannix, etc., now re-enforced by added detachments of The Rookies, SWAT, Streets of San Francisco... In L.A., Frisco, and Honolulu, the lawman is still The Blue Knight; the municipally-employed knight-errant riding around on his white horse (unmarked Plymouth), rescuing fair damsels and slaying all sorts of unAmerican dragons. It seems that the only trick to these (usually) humorless fictional guardians of the public order is their dependence on crime-solving by sheer California macho. After all, SWAT, the L.A. police's answer to urban guerilla warfare, is no more than John Wayne's Green Berets moved from the long-running, lately-unsuccessful Southeast Asia engagement back to the homefront of Los Angeles where the forces of evil may yet be stopped... hopefully. Delete green camoflauge; substitute police blue.

With the exception of the dying Gunsmoke, t.v. shows have a short life expectancy. Even Kojak and Barney Miller will bite the dust someday (if not from a hoodlum's bullet or shiv, then from the equally-bloodthirsty actions of a bored sponsor.) Should Kojak survive past the coming season, I'll eat a copy of any one of MacKay's articles, without ketchup.

But... there is hope. Anyone at once enamored of the television police show, yet fed-up with West Coast law enforcement screen-mythology, has an out...if... Monday nights... they can get to a set receiving Montreal's Channel 12, CFCF, 10 o'clock.

The weekly program is deceptively called The Sweeney (the title being a Cockney expression for Scotland Yard's elite Flying Squad. The expression is used by peace officers and criminals alike.) It features two plainclothesmen, Inspector Jack Regan and Sergeant George Carter, actors John Thaw and Dennis Waterman respectively. (Waterman seems familiar, like one of Alex' Droogies in A Clockwork Orange?)

The show manages to combine fast-action (with one good car chase per show), imaginative photography, and a London version of the New York street-humor of Kojak and Barney Miller.

A typical piece of dialogue. On a recent show, Inspector Regan is ushered into the office of a prominent bank president. Regan has been there before, several years earlier, investigating a robbery. The bank president remembers Regan, querying, "It's still Inspector Regan, isn't it?" Regan replies, "Yes, I don't play golf."

The show is full of Regan's and Carter's subtle asides knocking the British class structure. The very character of Regan suggests that he is an Irishman somehow locked into serving London law enforcement. He is an outstanding detective, but he must have his own way. In the process of practicing his craft, he is as popular with the backstreet informers and prostitutes as is his Yank counterpart, Lt. Kojak. Regan and Carter move through the London underworld, quickly commenting on both criminal and law-enforcement with equal irreverance.

Viewer's attention must be paid carefully to the dialogue. Not only are recording levels kept low (a frequent hazard with watching English productions) but the characters speak in any number of unfamiliar county accents that are difficult to understand (for an American viewer). But think of the poor English viewer trying to translate Savalarisms.

It all merits a look-see. After all, how many times do you hear an English police officer use Yiddish expressions?

—CARL BLUMBERG

THE VPIRG REFERENDUM: STUDENTS VS. ADMINISTRATION

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) is under heavy attack from a number of conservative legislators, some of whom are also members of the UVM Board of Trustees. Many of the legislators were stung by the lobbying successes of VPIRG during the last session of the General Assembly, and have decided to try to get rid of VPIRG entirely.

"We are going to get VPIRG out of there," said Representative Stuart Rouse, D-Hartland. He added that he would hate to have voted any way that VPIRG wanted him to vote.

The opponents of VPIRG are trying to pressure the University administration into changing the present funding arrangement with the student-run consumer and environmental group. By cutting off VPIRG's funds, they hope to destroy the effectiveness of the organization's lobbying.

The VPIRG opponents are arguing that they are not really against VPIRG, but that they are opposed to the present funding arrangement between the state-run university and a highly political lobby. At present a $3.00 VPIRG fee is included on each student's bill. Students who do not wish to join VPIRG may waive payment of the fee without penalty. Also any student who pays the fee but wishes to get one's money back may get a refund from VPIRG.

In reality, however, the lobby group's opponents are trying to knock off VPIRG without being blamed for it. They are trying to avoid charges of political repression for their tactics to end the lobby group's funds. VPIRG's successes, according to Rep. Rouse, stick in the minds of many of the conservative legislators.

UVM represents the largest single source of VPIRG's funds. The legislators who oppose VPIRG realize that changing the present system will drastically cut the bulk of the group's funds. The real issue involved in the controversy is not how VPIRG gets its funds but how to cripple the student group's lobbying powers and general effectiveness.

Part of the reason for the anti-VPIRG sentiment by the conservatives was the passage of a bill that would require legislative approval before any new nuclear power plants can be built in Vermont. Also many of the legislators were irked by the group's scoresheet that was distributed throughout the state. The "VPIRG Roll Call Report" examines 15 issues in each house of the General Assembly. Part of the report averages the voting percentages of each legislator and grades them according to how they voted for or against the VPIRG position.

On the last day of the 1975 session, the same members who are generating pressure on UVM introduced a bill calling for a legislative investigation of the VPIRG funding agreement with the state colleges.

In order to clear the air over the controversy, the VPIRG Board of Trustees has called for a campus referendum on the question of student support for the group. According to VPIRG Trustee David Barney the referendum will either reaffirm or end VPIRG's mandate at UVM.

"If the students support VPIRG," Barney said, "the issue becomes a question of whether or not students have any control over their own affairs." Barney added that VPIRG was originally set up as a way students could work through the system to make changes in society. He noted that VPIRG was formed during a time of campus rage when many students were advocating violence.

Barney also added that the VPIRG student leaders are optimistic about the fall referendum. "We should do very well," he said, "VPIRG has a great track record of success."

In three years of operation, VPIRG has issued reports on air pollution, small claims court, highway planning, abnormal occurrences at the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Plant and other issues of public concern. A report on children's health care led to the passage of a law opening up dental care to many Vermont children. In addition, VPIRG has written pamphlets on hearing aids, mobile homes, prescription drug prices and nuclear power.

At present, the VPIRG student leaders are preparing for the fall by organizing a massive educational campaign for the first three weeks of the semester. That the future of VPIRG's existence hinges on the outcome of the upcoming referendum is only part of a greater issue. What is really at stake is the question of who will weigh out heavier with regard to the financial support of student ideas, commitment and direction — a politically-motivated university administration or the students themselves.

...TRUSTEE'S MEETING CONT'D

(continued from page eleven)

physical education facilities for men and women.

The gymnasium additions would include new tennis courts and a new pool to be housed in a separate building. Southwick Hall, the women's gymnasium, is now part of the new Music Building, and as a result, the use of Patrick Gym has increased still further.

The Gym Committee met recently to discuss the funding of the additions, and possibilities raised included doubling student athletic fees, or conducting a fund drive. The renovations are estimated to cost $5 million.

The report of the Ad Hoc Financial Planning Committee, chaired by Luther F. Hackett, presented during the June meeting a long-range "no-growth" policy for the next five years.

The policy called for increases in the budget only to cover the cost of inflation. Those increases would, under ideal circumstances, be covered by slight increases in state appropriations each year. Otherwise, the report warns, the money will have to come out of increases in student tuition, already among the highest in the Yankee Conference.

Hackett's report was acknowledged, but not voted upon as policy. The Board accepted the report's deficit budget (the first in UVM history) but delayed action on the report itself, in June.

It is likely to take a stand on that report now.

Other topics expected to be raised at the Board meeting will be the medical compacts (terminated June 30), the University's labor situation, the progress of the tunnel, the status of the Student Association Senate, and the upcoming student referendum on VPIRG.

...SUCCESSOR STORY

(continued from page eight)

University, a job he has held since 1971.

From 1967–1968 he was a Resident Assistant at McNutt Residence Center at JU and an instructor and counselor at Culver summer school at Culver Military Academy, in Culver, Indiana. From 1968–1969 he was Assistant Coordinator at McNutt, and from 1969–1971 held the academic rank of Instructor and Assistant Dean of Students at Coe College, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

His other activities include: a membership on the Corporate Householding Board of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, at Bloomington, Indiana; Program Coordinator of the American Cancer Society, in Bloomington; Chapter Coordinator of the American Field Service Program, in Bloomington; and Program Director, Operations Crossroads Africa, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Petersen is a member of the Alpha Chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators (NASPA), the American Personnel and Guidance Association (APGA) and the American College Personnel Association (ACPA).

He is married to the former Carolyn Neff.

—MARGO HOWLAND

The Village Cobbler
60 PEARL STREET
ESSEX JUNCTION
879-7202
9:30 - 6 daily
Wednesday 'til 9
"Your family Shoe Store"
FEATURING
hottest item on college campus
The Original COPENHAGEN CLOG
Ladies Sizes 5-10
Made in Denmark of the Finest Quality Leather and Wood

DAKINS MOUNTAIN SHOP
227 MAIN STREET
BOOTS BY: Vasque Nike Fabiano
PACKS BY: Camp Trails Climb High North Face Sierra Design Kelty
SLEEPING BAGS: Camp 7 Snow Lion
TENTS: Jan Sport Eureka North Face Sierra Design
CLOTHING: Camp 7, Snowline Woolrich, Johnson, Rugged Wear, Lee
Your complete outfitters for backpacking, moutaineering, X-C Skiing 864-4122
WE ALSO CARRY: Aladdin Lamps Freeze Dried Food Climbing Gear X-C Gear Topo Maps Stoves Knives

summer cynic

"Everything Put Together Sooner Or Later Falls Apart"

Editorial

After Labor Day America will get serious. She will return to business as usual. She will have no choice.

Thousands of children will be expected to report on how they spent their summer vacation.

"Well first we, me and my parents, drove to the ocean. It was fun and then we went to visit my grandmother in the country and it was fun and then..." Thousands of their classmates will sit staring out the window seriously bored.

In living rooms across America, there will be countless slide shows. Beautiful color shots.

"This is me and Bertha at a rest area in South Dakota. You see this fella, an insurance salesman we met... Bertha, do you remember where he said he was from... well anyway, he took this picture so we could both be in it together. Hell of a great shot... isn't it, Harry?"

Friends and neighbors will sit on couches in the dark restlessly bored.

Colleges and universities will be flooded with young men and women anxious to obtain a higher education.

"We were hitching you know in this one place for hours and no one would pick us up. The people were either rednecks or tourists. Then out of nowhere this guy in a Mercedes pulls up and gives us a ride all the way to Denver."

Young men and women will listen to stories of adventures "on the road" all too obviously bored.

America will not want to face the fact that summer is gone. She will try and hold onto the past wearing thin the memories until she is hopelessly bored.

That is America for you. She doesn't care about what you have been up to. Which is all right. She has her life and you have yours.

After Labor Day America will get serious. She will return to business as usual. She will have no choice.

With this issue, the Summer Cynic closes up shop. Subsequent issues carrying the name Cynic will be a product of the regular-season people. Our job's over.

More with sighs of relief than tears, we mark our departure with the hope that in some way The Summer Cynic touched you. If you laughed, or were angered, we can look upon the whole venture as a success.

Correspondence

WHAT'S THE SENSE OF HUMOR?

To the Editor:

"What's dis?" What are these offensive anti-semitic stereotypes doing in a nice paper like yours? The expression "crafty little monger" is the old Shylock stereotype we thought had been long left behind in Elizabethan England or Hitler's Germany. We certainly were not happy to see it cropping up again at viridimontanae.

And why cast even slight aspersions on a foreign accent? It's a fact of life that people born abroad have them and find it hard to shake them. This makes them in no way inferior to those who answer them in perfect Vermontese. Feeling that a foreign aspect is "funny" or suspect is not the way we should be feeling about each other these days.

I don't even know how to tackle the innuendo that the old man was using his accent as a tricky ploy to divert the writer from the "horrendous" amount of food he was taking. The writer and other guests seemed to be stockpiling food at quite a rate too -- but only if one had an accent was it considered "horrendous" and tricky.

The purpose of the international dinners is to bring us together. Let's keep it that way.

Sincerely yours,
Ellen Drucker
Christie Hall

*Editor's Note: The review of Israeli Dinner Night (*Summer Cynic, July 31) was written with no intention of maliciousness or as an ethnic slur. In our attempt to recreate a lighthearted situation, we forgot to take into consideration the rather sensitive nature of some people who obviously lack any sense of humor. If to laugh at oneself is a crime, then we are culprits.

AN EDITOR'S NOTE

After several of our first issues were published, the Summer Cynic sent them out to Randy Jansen, the editor of the Vermont Cynic. We asked for his appraisal of our effort and asked his advice on how to improve the quality of our publication. After a brief recap of his summer life in Vancouver, this is how he responded:

To the Editor:

I'd admit the Summer Cynic does have some problems, but considering the problems that you had just putting it together, I'd say you've done a fair job. Your two best articles (I think) were "A Day in the Life of Tom Salmon," and the first part of "Self-Portrait of an Inmate."

You asked for some suggestions on lay-out and editorials. I'm not quite sure what you want to know. It's difficult to give suggestions from 3500 miles away. I see that Wyatt is on the staff. He is far more experienced in layout than I am and would probably be more helpful. For the editorials, I can only give you some of the guidelines I use when I write an editorial. First I find a subject that I am interested in or feel strongly about. It's easier to present an argument that way. Second, make sure your message that you're trying to put across is understandable to the readers. Lastly, depending on what I'm trying to say, I try to change my style of writing. Satire produces one effect, while an informative editorial produces an entirely different effect on the reader. I hope this helps somewhat.

Many thanks for doing the Summer issue. I really appreciate it. Good luck in your last issues.

Randy Jansen '77
Editor, Vermont Cynic

A ROAMIN' REPLY

To the Editor:

I am sorry that I have not responded earlier to your thoughtfulness in sending me a copy of your article about a day with the Governor.

I thought it was very well written and very fair.

Congratulations.

Sincerely,
Norman James
Assistant to the Governor

summer cynic

AUGUST 1975 SECTION II

LASERIUM

The New Contender For The "Entertain Me" Dollar

The impetus is unmistakably there. The prospects of another idlely spent summer's evening is enough in itself to drive people out of the house by the thousands. And yet, we're still faced with the infamous question, "What do you wanna do tonight?" Ballbearing it at the Rollerrink, teeing off through miniature golf course windmills, or romping away the night at the amusement park are all plausible suggestions. And then of course, there's always the old "Anybody up for the movie at the "

But, as if to subtlely remind us that modern technology is not as much a part of daily life as daily life is a part of modern technology, there is a new and very dazzling entertainment entity vying for the "entertain me" dollar. Behold, the Laserium. The crossbreed of laser optics and a planaterium, Laserium is a multicolored spectacle of laser light patterns playing in concert to a dynamic assortment of musical selections.

Unlike a film, which one goes to see, or some activity where participation is the source of entertainment, Laserium is a show that literally swells the auditory and visual senses with laser-intense colors and a variety of moving melodies. It is the show's unique experiential quality that has made it such a success in twelve major cities across the nation. The laser-light concert, which currently draws enough people to fill the 800 seat Hayden Planetarium in New York three times nightly, four evenings a week, has met with critical acclaim and mounting popularity.

Into The Cosmos

Planetariums are those small, round auditoriums with the off-white hemispheric domes, located in the wings of some Natural History museums. And it is there we find perched mysteriously in the center of the room, the identifying Dome Projector — a huge, dark metallic ant, cocked to one side in a suspended state of animation. Such is the setting for the hour long showcase of laser light illusions.

Soft pastel colors splash against the ceiling. The dome itself arcs upward with such perfect symmetry it really becomes quite impossible to assign dimension to it's height. It's an intriguing illusion. Soft bursts and [illegible] of [illegible] seemingly [illegible] the room. At last the dim lights fade out [illegible]

[illegible] A [illegible] fanfare [illegible] of the sort of big [illegible] flows into view. From a single [illegible] pearls around the room, the auditorium begins to fill with Aaron Copeland's heart moving "Fanfare for the Common Man." Heads and shoulders pivot right and left, then sweep through 360 degree inspections of familiar skyscrapers and city landmarks. The horizon darkens — suddenly, the skyline transforms into a bedazzled New York at night. A full moon descends slowly, displaying its full cycle of waning and waxing crescents before slipping behind the cityscape. And as it disappears, so too, fades New York City. The room is left in total darkness, a black nothingness that teases the eye to grope for some piece of reassuring light. A momentary stillness reverberates from the walls... the creature stirs.

Suddenly, lunging from deep within the infathomable blackness, a spectacle of star studded galaxies bursts into view, swelling one's entire peripheral gaze. In breath-taking splendor, it's like looking skyward on the clearest night you'd ever hope to see. No seatbelts for security; the slowly revolving universe with Copeland's inspirations filling the room beckons each skygazer into outer space. The "Fanfare" of sounds softens to a light, soaring melody... and the euphoric sensation of how it would feel to float adrift deep in space becomes ever so imaginable.

Then, somewhere near the center of it all, a nebulous grows bright — a swirling cloud of brilliant red laser-light particles, expanding as it drifts seemingly through the galaxies. It's a vivid, very three dimensional Star Trek fantasy come true. The laser light nebulous continues to flow in and out of itself, like a ruby infested cirrus, growing in dimension and brightness with each crescendoing swell of Copeland's rich orchestration. There is an awe-inspiring quality to its wispowy form and dazzling intensity. Imagine a pure spectacle of the great Northern Lights choreographed to the kinds of moving melodies that [illegible] have made "Fanfare" [illegible] and in surround-sound no less. For the eye and ear to [illegible] is almost orgasmic.

A mood-changing transition in the music takes place: the kind that signals — even to those unfamiliar with the piece — that the first selection of the evening is on the verge of concluding. And with it comes a sort of spell-bound awakening — the sort of release of tension that leaves you suddenly in discovery of your own breath, like the stone cold seconds that follow the climatic seizure in a work of drama. The billowy cloud begins to contract. Still swirling, still flowing, its dimensions slowly reduce to its entrancing nebular form. Slowly, the laser light swirl begins to travel inspiredly off into the infinite reaches of "space," as if seeking some new part of the universe to play. And then, shrinking to a miniscule point of red light, it vanishes altogether.

And so ended the first of ten selections of the evening — a slow fade out in accompaniment with the music. Reactions to the introductory illusion and to the remainder of the program ranged from cosmic enthrallment to silent fascination. There were moments in the show where particular laser light patterns throbbed repetitiously, or where oscilliscope antics became all too predictable. But most of the laser images throughout the evening were both distinctive and captivating.

That Ain't No Computer

That four laser bright colors can form such diverse three dimensional illusions in time with the music is a tribute to the individual octopusing the [illegible] knobs and dials behind the Projection Console. A veritable Wizard of Oz, the Laserist (what else?) in front of a myriad of laser image [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Welcome to the Enchanted World of Serendipity

A world of intriguing objects from far away places and intricate creations from our foremost native craftsmen.

Pleasant aromas, exiting designs, bountiful colors and an atmosphere designed to stimulate your imagination await you in one of Vermont's most exciting shops. Owned and operated by a native craftsman, Serendipity has become a local favorite and an attraction to visitors. Come, enjoy some time with us!

India Print Spreads
Hand Thrown Pottery
Stained Glass
Dry Flowers
Paper Lamp Shades
Scented Candles
Music Boxes
Many "One of a Kind" Creations
Sculpture
Beaded Curtains
Miniatures

Imports from over 40 Countries
Imported Coffee & Teas
Enamel on Copper
Mirrors
Mobiles
Stone Craft
Collector's Items
Largest Selection of Handicrafted Jewelry in Vermont
Conversation Pieces

Featuring our own exclusive designs in silver

Serendipity

206 College Street
Burlington
862-5400

LASERIUM

Images, Inc., Laserium made its first appearance at Griffith Observatory in Los Angeles back in November of 1973. Though greeted with an underground following, its popularity soon emerged in the form of laser-light concerts in other cities. Gates Planetarium in Denver started its Laserium showings the following August. Two months later, the Hayden Planetarium in New York sponsored the first Laserium to hit the East Coast. That quaint old town across the bay from Oakland, California had a little star pinned by its name on the Laserium map that Thanksgiving. Within the year, Laser Images, Inc.'s directors, Charles McDanald, Michael Levin, Jon Basset, and Ivan Dryer had seen Laserium expand to San Diego, St. Louis, Atlanta, Chapel Hill (N.C.), Miami, Philadelphia, Toronto, Seattle and Vancouver.

Laser Images, Inc. stands to do very well for itself. The show is well packaged with Ticketron doing most of the ticket work. Setting Laserium up in a planetarium is usually mutually beneficial, attracting people to the museum while providing an auditorium for Laser Images to set up their show.

Not every planetarium is gung-ho on the invasion of people coming to see laser-gimmickry-put-to-music. On the other hand, Laserium has experienced problems with greedy auditorium managers. Expansion, therefore, has been discreet and not over-pushed. The California-based firm does have one tremendous advantage going for it. By having started and developed the whole concept of laser light concerts, Laser Images, Inc. has complete and unchallenged control of the market. If they could only convince their hosting planetariums to install some sort of head rests to take the pain-in-the-neck out of skygazing, they'd really be set.

LASER ART

But the question remains, can Laserium maintain and establish a permanent foothold in the entertainment industry? Amidst all the numerous characteristics that distinguishes man from all other animals, none is more documented, more cherished, nor so close to his being than his art. In retrospect, almost every form of art that graces man's cultural heritage has its roots deep within his evolution. Though their forms today show the signs of modern influence, as has happened throughout history, man's painting, his sculpting, his writing, his music all began millenia ago. It wasn't until the 1800's that a totally new form of art was developed. Suddenly, it was possible to capture a split instant of real life and preserve it on a special paper. Not long after it was possible to put a sequence of "instants" together and actually record entire events. Photography became a revolutionary testimony to the increasing sophistication of man's technology.

With the arrival of laser images, we are witnessing the emergence of an entirely new form of art, one that literally adds entire dimensions to what was possible a few years ago. Using the holographic process in laser imagery, actual three dimensional images can be created and directed. Laserium uses a single, 1-watt krypton gas laser to generate all its illusions. As an entertainment entity, one of its major strengths is its continual variation of vivid graphic display, resulting in a spontaneous, dynamic, highly three dimensional, ever changing creation. The thing that will keep Laserium alive is a continuous update of new textures and illusions such that people will be willing to return. For the people at Laser Images, Inc., the steady support of laser technology will be a built-in security.

What does the future hold for laser light concerts? A touring Laserium has already made appearances at major colleges throughout the country. For $3 a show, it shouldn't be long before the laser light phenomenon gets established enough to be a familiar type of entertainment. As far as stable popularity goes, it's still too early to judge, although signs do look good. And if Laserium does make it and follows the usual course of American marketability, don't be surprised in the not-too-distant future if the next time you walk into your favorite pub and find a Laser Light Juke Box radiating from the corner.

—WYATT KASH

LIVING IN THE THIRD WORLD

Those who speak of revolution and class struggles without referring explicitly to daily life have a corpse in their mouths.

R. Vaneigem

Here, everyday is the same day. You wake up each morning at 7 whether you have to or not, because your body has become conditioned that way. If you had enough money the night before you probably have a hangover, if that's the best way you can describe that feeling crawling up the back of your neck. The sheets will be soaked because there's no ventilation when your window is flush against the window of the building next door. You throw up if you can. If you can't, you know you can make yourself because that's the only way you can get started. Downstairs you hear the rest of the house waking up, getting started. When you've got the money you try to set up living someplace but the money is never coming in fast enough & you find yourself coming back to live with your folks. Which is another thing. As time goes by, you realize that they understand what you are going through, & maybe it works the other way too. You throw up, but there is nothing in your stomach but a little left over beer & a lot of digestive juice, & bits of half digested potatoes that you had for supper at three in the morning. You go downstairs & have a cup of coffee, & read the comics. The sports page. Skim the rest, catch the headlines. Ford away. Congress overrides veto. Nothing different. You go back upstairs & play music to get you ready for the day. Like everyday. If you can get your hands to work, you might even try to play a little yourself. With the record, & if you're lucky, you can be with Ry Cooder in LA, or sailing with Procul Harum in London, or driving home with Mary McCaslin in Northfield. Or just about anyplace you want to be besides this hot bedroom in the third world. You go to work. At a shit job & you know it, & the people you work with know it, & even your boss knows it because s/he's got a shit job too, only he makes more money at it & can fool himself into thinking he's not as miserable as you think you are, & you realize that even when you've got money that's not the problem. But at work everyone complains. If you're lucky, you have one of the less obvious shit jobs. You could work in a library. Or an office. If you're fortunate, you could work outdoors pumping gas or cleaning the parks. Or be putting in the trim on the new block on Church Street. Or you might be out of work. Living with your folks. Looking for work when you can. Work to get enough money so that you can ease off for a while. Or you may just keep working at your shit job because it's a better shit job than somebody else's, & if you look for something better you may have to work at something worse. So you get up everyday, throw up & dress, & one day you start thinking about what's happened to you so far. You've been to college. Or part of it. When that's over, you can maybe get a good job selling insurance. Or cars. Which are only shit jobs. That liberate you with money... & you realize that everyday will be just like this, scraping for shit, & picking up after people for the rest of your life because that's what you're taught to do in the third world. Clean up & shut up, & sing for de massa. But he don't know your language. Only the tune, & you beat the drums everynight in the bar. You beat & beat & beat, but no one knows what you say because they all speak the wrong language, & when you go home you see the urban centers on North Street with the lights on & the poor folks picking through old suits & shoes, cheap cans of vegetable beef soup & you realize that's all they want. Cheap food & cheap clothes. That's their dream, & no talk about the Vermont economy will change that. No talk about the distribution of wealth will change that. The unemployment figures don't mean a thing when you can hear on the street that the unprinted figures say twenty per cent. Who gets the money & who fucks the little guy doesn't mean a thing, & you know they don't give a shit about why they don't have any money only that they don't have any money, & you get angry when you see the politicos sit around & try to organize the people, which is what they like to call us here in the third world as we sit up here in our little pre-war Habana while touristas fuck touristas sipping bottled beer in our casinos & dance halls, kiddy pie out-of-staters who wear the clothes & cash the checks. Who've been poor for at least two years since they gave up suburbia. Who don't know about peddling papers once a week & getting a penny for each one you leave. Or getting in fights in vacant lots over butts & cheap wine. Who really don't understand why the kids are throwing rocks at the cops out the Avenue. Or why people like Pinhead Lestage & Bobby Rouchelle have to kill people just to let them know they're pissed. Or why that kid got gunned down in an argument on King Street. Or why Tommy Austin had to burn down the Cathedral when no one would listen to him. Or why the guys at Joe Barry's periodically beat each other's heads in. Or spend a Saturday night at the Mallett's Bay Drive-in with a six pack, & then go home dreaming about Teenie Tulip or Georgiana Spelvin while they nail their wife to the mattress. You want to tell these politicos about these people because they never understand why these people in the third world send their boys their lovers their husbands off to fight for this crummy existence. Or why each year they vote for the same people who keep fucking them over & who fucked over their parents & their parents & their parents, & all you hear them say on TV is we have to get back to the old values that made this country great, & everyone says it. Teachers, ministers, noted celebrities, politicians, even the politicos, & you can see old Tom Jefferson down there at Monticello carving out the Declaration of Independence. It's July in Virginia. Warm. The sun just going down, & old Tom is thinking about this war & those people up in Philly waiting for these words he's going to give them. But he just can't get started. He rips up page after page, the sweat starting to pop on his forehead. He goes to the window, quill to his lips, & then way off in the distance, down by the river, the sound starts way low rising up soft rising up sweet from by the water caught in the scent of the evening, & Jefferson smiles, that handsome face soft as he smiles & he goes to his writing table & starts when in the course of human events to the serenade of his slaves...

& you realize that things will never change here in the third world. At least not as fast as they should. You realize this when you try to put together answers. When you hear the stories about Portugal, you can only answer by ranting about Czechoslavakia, & Hungary, & the Ukraine, & Spain, & Allende, & United Fruit, & East Germany, & even Vermont. Nothing changes because everyone thinks that history stops. Too many people are willing to rattle off the figures because then you never really have to get to know any one. "We are so taken up in our general love of humanity that we don't have the time to descent to anybody." & you realize you will spend the rest of your life ranting on street corners or from the back boothes of bars, screaming I love you at some guy who's about to break your neck. Because nothing will ever change unless someone raises hell, & you know this will be your fate because like the lady said,

I cannot touch you
& this is the oppressor's language, & you know this way down, & probably believe it, & that makes you a reactionary because you always stop & ask why. But that's what happens here in the third world. When you've been down as long as we have, the road up hardly seems worth the effort, & just before you go to bed you think about setting the clock. For that shit job. But as you fall asleep you know you'll get up anyway. Because it's all there is to do.

—MIKE BREINER

Wide Selection Available At The University Store

scandecor INC

POSTERS

Thought Factory Cards

18 X 24 POSTERS
16 X 20 MATTED PRINTS
8 X 10 MATTED PRINTS

PRO GRAPHICS

THOUGHT FACTORY

UNIVERSITY STORE
ON THE CAMPUS

OUR TOP 20 ALBUMS NOW ON SALE

TOP 20
$5.98 List LPs
only 3.57

TOP 20
$6.98 List LPs
only 4.17

Aug. 1975 List will have some changes due to updated list.

1. Love Will Keep Us Together — Capt. & Tennille – A&M
2. Horizon — Carpenters – A&M
3. Made in the Shade — Rolling Stones – Rolling Stones
4. One of These Nights — Eagles – Asylum
5. Captain Fantastic & The Brown Dirt Cowboy — Elton John – MCA
6. Four Wheel Drive — Bachman-Turner Overdrive – Mercury
7. Greatest Hits — Tony Orlando & Dawn – Arista
8. Fandango — ZZ. Top – London
9. Gorilla — James Taylor – Warner Bros.
10. Venus & Mars — Paul McCartney/Wings – Capitol
11. Stampede — Doobie Bros. – Warner Bros.
12. Cat Stevens – Greatest Hits — A&M
13. Have You Never Been Mellow — Olivia Newton-John – MCA
14. The Original Soundtrack — 10 CC – Mercury
15. Hearts — America – Warner Bros.
16. Before the Next Teardrop Falls — Freddy Fender – Dot
17. Heart of Hearts — Bobby Vinton – ABC
18. Good Vibrations – Best of the Beach Boys — Reprise
19. Welcome to My Nightmare — Alice Cooper – Atlantic
20. Elton John's Greatest Hits — MCA

TOP 20

JOURNAL: REFLECTIONS—

A SYSTEMATIC MALEVOLENCE: PART II

Editor's Note: Charles Baldwin is now an inmate at the newly built Chittenden County Community Correctional Center. When the Summer Cynic editors found out from a friend of Charley's on the outside that he wanted a publisher, we contacted him. He has contributed prose, essays, poems, and letters' all summer.

Mr. Baldwin has had a multifarious career which ranges in scope from All-American track runner in high school to impoverished alcoholic; from free lance journalist to Olympic trial qualifier; from Navy enlisted man to check forging felon.

But Charley is most of all a writer. His final installment of "Journal: Reflections" is here submitted.

—At the Chittenden Community Correctional Center in South Burlington, now in its second month of full operation, we find that prohibitive overcrowding, disparaging security controls, a lack of both civil rights and suitable institutional programs and an inexorable groundswell of inmate dissent has cast those responsible for this facility and its operation into a dialectic abyss of confusion, repression and consternation. Each of the before-mentioned problems has contributed to the misadministration and mismanagement of the treatment and release objectives so much a part of the Community Corrections concept. As a result, the South Burlington Center is faced with the monumental task of improving conditions to an acceptable level of performance sufficient to satisfy its obligations to the state and its taxpayers as well as the inmates themselves.

—Exactly how this can be accomplished is now up to the Vermont Department of Corrections and its officials both here and in Montpelier and, unless a thorough and conscientious effort is made to rectify this appalling environment within the near future, then it should be understood that the resident population cannot be held accountable for the failure or lack of effectiveness in the management and administration of this institution.

—Individually, the major difficulties inherent to the Farrell Street Facility can be examined from among the following basic areas:

(1) OVERCROWDING: Simply enough, this means that the plant, programming, security, treatment and operational capability of this facility was designed for a maximum of eighty-eight residents and now, with consistently over one hundred inmates, has long since exceeded the training, preparation and working ability of the staff and administration to handle the daily requirements of comprehensive, conscientious care and treatment for the resident population.

There are individual members of the staff who have made sincere attempts to respond to the inmates and their problems, yet their hands have been tied by a restrictive and punitively-oriented administration, and frequently have been unable to achieve more than token change or relief from such arbitrary and capricious authority.

The recent efforts to effectively organize and operate an already over-burdened institution have led to both poor penology and a plethora of mistrust and reactionary controls. Pre-trial detentioners are housed with minimum custody, release-eligible residents. Maximum and medium security units in the facility are oppressively doubled up, and subsequently, the potential for self-defeating frustration, assaultive behavior and institutional misconduct is viewed with growing concern and trepidation.

At present, the Department of Corrections has made no specific move to remedy this abhorrent situation and until it does, it will be impossible to believe that any worthwhile treatment or care can be given to the resident population.

Further, it should be understood and accepted that the inmates' behavior and conduct has been, for the large part, exceptional considering the destructive environment they have been faced with. To date, the esoteric responses from the Department of Corrections have been reprehensible and should not become the excuse for more guards, more denials and fewer chances. The responsibility of such a progressive commitment to treatment and release programming lies with Department of Corrections... its officials, its administrators and staff... and until this obligation is accepted with the best interest of the inmates and society in mind, rehabilitation and growth will each remain vague ideals and not working realities.

(2) SECURITY: The residents of the Chittenden Community Correctional Center (regardless of the individual being in either maximum, medium or minimum security) have been innundated with denials (of reasonable inmate requests) for extended visiting hours (at present, four hours per week), equal recreation, education, work and/or training programs, access to an outside exercise yard and several additional projects or programs. All this, and each allegedly a pure matter of "security". Instead of granting privileges or incentives for good conduct and behavior (as an extension of the over-all concept of treatment and release), they have been erratically, though increasingly, revoked. The foreboding rationale for such rejections, as misleading as they might be, have been based almost entirely upon the unfair and arbitrary punishment of the general resident population for the actions and irresponsibility of a small number of individuals. These ambiguous "security" measures further serve to exemplify the abstrusive tendency of the administration to rely with increasing frequency on punitive and not therapeutic controls.

The multi-dimensional problem of overcrowding has contributed heavily to the administration's relentless surge away from viable programming and as a result, the usual staff reaction has been to sanction the unpardonable rejection and mistrust of the inmate population, their basic needs and the difficulty of adjustment to institutional life.

(3) CIVIL RIGHTS: For many decades, both society and the incarcerated individual accepted the fact that being confined as a consequence of anti-social behavior resulted in the loss of many basic rights. The vast majority of inmates accepted these conditions of their incarceration, but those who chose not to — those who felt they were being deprived of certain basic rights as granted by the Constitution of the United States — were, except in rare cases, powerless to alter the conditions of their confinement. The Judiciary continuously refused to become involved in the operation or administration of penal institutions.

During recent years, however, activism and litigation have replaced mute compliance as inmates in all levels of institutions (i.e., local, state or federal) are now directing their grievances to accessible state and federal courts and thus, are forcing correctional administrators to justify their actions so as to insure that all inmates have, by law, essential Due Process and Equal Protection.

In Vermont, as elsewhere, State law enforcement, court and correctional officials are beginning to understand that their decisions can be neither strictly punitive nor inconsistent with contemporary Civil Rights being established at all levels of today's society, especially amongst oppressed minorities... inmates and ex-cons included. The fact that an agency or organization followed a certain practice for many years is no longer valid as an excuse for continuing to follow the practice. The burden has shifted from the affected individual having to establish why the practice should not be followed to the administrator having to justify what legal grounds allows a particular practice to be continued. In turn, the judiciary is also beginning to recognize the basic rights of persons confined in our correctional facilities, rights which virtually all forms of society took for granted as having been forfeited by those incarcerated in penal institutions.

Inmates in Vermont's Correctional institutions have fought for the equality of treatment, sentence, bail, adequate medical care, a continuity of professional supervision and, most importantly, consistent and aggressive legal assistance, yet much of the litigation which has reached the courts is a direct result of individual research and drafting as well as the subsequent filing of Civil Rights suits (i.e., 42 U.S.C., 1983) without any outside involvement or direction from fully qualified members of the legal profession. The state of legal material, copies of the Vermont Statutes (certainly other than 1959 editions, which read like something out of medieval penology), reference books and publications (i.e., law, education or vocational programs and resources...) are all lamentably absent from the Library of the new South Burlington facility, and the conscientious minority of inmates who work cooperatively to remedy this merciless situation invariably draw the interest and assistance from the general inmate population to accomplish needed objectives. The administration and, at times, the staff view unity and collective strength as treacherous and too irrational to assume such self-realization and control of the flow of institutional life. The inmates, in stark simplicity, are asking for the right to determine their own success or failure, their own continuity of care, and lastly, the importance of self-determination and human dignity.

(4) INSTITUTIONAL PROGRAMS: Inherent to the multi-dimensional, before-mentioned problems of Overcrowding, "Security," and Civil Rights, we find the administration's present justifications for the shoddy state of working resident programs within the institution. Overcrowding and security considerations eliminate the potential for regularly scheduled education, recreation, vocational and educational projects; and the threat of joint legal and civil rights meetings or organization during such projects is a constant excuse for the rejection of inmate groups. Individuals can be intimidated or molded or restricted if they choose not to comply with the administration's dictatorial control of the institution, yet once two inmates work together for a common

FOR BURIN

It's four am and I can't sleep worth a damn, and I'm wide awake and nasty as hell.
And I can't sit down, and I won't stand up
Though I just can't leave here, I've gotta leave town
I got those prison blues from head to foot and its hard to take leaving you behind

Blackness be kind,
Night be gentle
I must have the courage to cool
my morning coffee of bitter-sweet deliverance
From the shadows

SUPER STEREO SAVINGS

FROM THIS AREA'S LEADING SOUND SYSTEMS DEALER!

YAMAHA CR400 RECEIVER $330
PIONEER PL15 TURNTABLE $130
SHURE M91E CARTRIDGE $50
AVID 100 SPEAKERS $180
Manufacturer's List $690

SAVE $101
SYSTEM PRICE $589
With Yamaha CR600 $699 (List $870)
With Yamaha CR600 + AVID 103 $849 (List $970)

HARMON KARDON 330B AM/FM RECEIVER $200
GARRARD 42M CHANGER $94.95
With base and dust cover
HARMON KARDON 20 SPEAKERS $120
Manufacturer's List $414.95
SAVE $115.95 SYSTEM PRICE $299
WITH MARANTZ 46 SPEAKERS $329

PIONEER SX434 AM/FM RECEIVER $240
GARRARD 70M CHANGER $139.95
With base and dust cover
MARANTZ 4G SPEAKERS $120
Manufacturer's List $499.95
SAVE $110.95 SYSTEM PRICE $389
With PIONEER PL12 + SHURE M91E $419
With PIONEER PL12 + MARANTZ 5 $469

DUAL 122G TURNTABLE ... $159.95
Base ... $12.95
Dust Cover ... $12.95
SURE M91E CARTRIDGE ... $49.95
Manufacturer's List $235.85
PACKAGE PRICE ... $149.95
YOU SAVE ... $85.85

KOSS K6 HEADPHONES
List $22.95 SAVE $8.00 $14.95

AUDIO DEN
AUDIO DEN RECORD and TAPE CARE PRODUCTS
RECORD CARE KIT ... $4.95 List 8.95 SAVE 4.00
TAPE CARE KIT ... $3.95 List 5.95 SAVE 2.00

SUPERSCOPE HF-92 CASSETTE TAPES $1.29 List 1.99 SAVE 70¢

SHURE M91ED CARTRIDGE $18.99 List $4.95 SAVE $5.96

SPECIAL! WATTS DISC PREENER List 5.95 $4.49

TEAC AC5 CAR STEREO List 159.50 $129 SAVE 30.50

AUDIO DEN 100 DORSET STREET
100 Dorset Street, South Burlington, Vt. 863-4398
OPEN DAILY 9 AM 'til 9 PM Closed Sundays purpose, then watch out because the denials will only be beginning...

Inevitably there will come a time of confrontation. Of energies boldly facing one another, each with audacity and single-mindedness. We ask, are we ready to assume the responsibility — however difficult and profound — of developing this institution into an enlightened and progressive test of self-determination? Can we ever fully achieve the lofty goal of maintaining a "community," despite our still-life prison existence. The implementation of inmate-conceived, inmate-directed and run, and treatment-oriented programs is paramount among the immediate objectives of the recently-formed, (though still lacking administrative 'recognition...) resident Liason Committee; elected by a full resident-population vote. Without the sanction of the Liason Committee, it is virtually impossible to propose and lobby worthy projects in the inmates' interest and renaissance soulfulness.

(5) INMATE DISSENT: In cahoots with the struggle for suitable institutional programs, inmate dissent has carried over in the growing day-to-day reality of the staff, administration and residents which has led to the acceptance that the facility is understaffed in the viable, rudimentary areas of helping the inmate in finding his or her worth and possibly, a strength of purpose and reality with which to eventually merge with the individual's release from jail. The skills of trade, education, counseling and therapy mean nothing if communication of human beings with one another is dangerously absent.

Inmate "Dissent" evokes an almost poignant sense of recall for the years of college administrator's reactions to "student dissent" on our campuses nationwide during the bloody and defeating and confused Vietnam era. Even we, isolated from any real feeling of world participation (except in our prouder, emotional, third-world "Attica" consciousness) on higher political grounds, do fight harder for the right of individual discipline and self-determination of one's future beyond prison walls.

In a small state such as Vermont, with only a few hundred inmates in five institutions scattered from Rutland to Franklin County and from South Burlington to Windsor, popular confrontations implemented throughout the United States, but surprisingly lacking here, dissent, hunger-work-condition strikes and slowdowns and riots, each of these have occurred in a Vermont institution, yet arch-conservative fears of violence such as rape, murder, armed robbery, etc., literally squelched any real news of these volatile, searching and profound incidents.

Instinctively, something deeply imbedded in my sub-conscious tells me that I can have at least some degree of hope for the survival of this institution and the chance that, given the right balance of compassion and reason with communication and trust, that a working, productive and therapeutic "community" can exist. The sadness and despair of this facility, the confusion and ever-frustrating consternation, can not be checked unless total honesty and respect and the recognition of both individual and group worth can be given without reservation or compromise.

I would like to take a moment before concluding this to extend my warmest thanks and my respect to Steve Tanner and Elliot Freeman, who have patiently and supportively listened to my unkind moanings about an often repressive "system" which had my life locked into a boring vacuum. My writings on the pages of the Summer Cynic has been, gratefully, a part of my present energy and feelin' good despite the squalor this small-hell frequently surrounds us with. To Sparky, who struggled for weeks listening to my ever-rational arguments for giving me passes to the community, ostensibly to discover if my "head" could handle the responsibility of being on the streets, I offer my respect for your efforts to do a fair and conscientious job in a difficult time and space.

And most thankfully of all, to my fellow sisters and brothers here at the Chittenden Community Correctional Center, you have given me the meaning and dignity and spirit needed to place some of these central things of ours right up front, on top of the administration, asking only to be acknowledged as human. Torn, faced with long, repetitive weeks and months in a place where "family" becomes the men or women in your individual living unit... Where "Community" is formed by a common desire for love and affirmation bonded by equality and acceptance.

—CHARLEY BALDWIN

DAVE'S AUTOMOTIVE INC.

SPECIALIST IN FOREIGN CAR REPAIR

ENGINE REBUILDING · TIRES · STEAM CLEANING · UNDERCOATING · ALIGNMENT · SPIN BALANCING

FUEL INJECTION ANALIZER

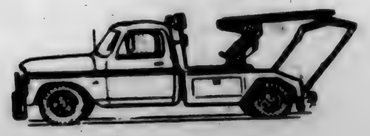
WE SERVICE ALL MAKES OF FOREIGN CARS

COMPLETE VW ELECTRONIC FUEL INJECTION DIAGNOSTIC SERVICE

INCLUDING THE FINEST IN SEMPERIT RADIAL TIRES

862-7686
878-8607

ROUTE 2 WILLISTON, VT.



DAMAGE FREE WRECKER SERVICE

ALL NEW FOREST HILLS
FOR THE MAXIMUM IN VALUE OUTLET

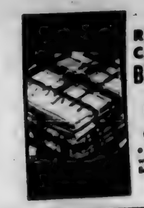
8½x11½ room size RUGS 12.88 reg. 17.99
• Assorted colors • Slight irregulars



REG. $6.99 CANNON BLANKETS 3.99
• 100% polyester with nylon binding • Beautiful plaid colors

9' x 12' LINOLEUM RUGS 7.99
• Choose from several patterns • Use in kit chen, family room, summer cottage or camp

Polyester fill 21"x27" PILLOWS 2 FOR $3
• Non allergenic • Extra plump • Resilient

MFGRS. SAMPLES!

72-INCH FIBERGLASS DRAPERIES 3.99
• Choose from many styles of mfgrs. samples • Lined and unlined styles

1st Quality DAN RIVER PERCALE SHEETS
TWIN FLAT FITTED 2.99
FULL FLAT FITTED 3.99 MATCHING CASES 2.66
• Vibrant, decorative, all-over print • Never needs ironing • Buy at these great savings

OUR REG. $4.99 100% COTTON CHENILLE BEDSPREADS 2.99
• Fits twin and full size beds • Do your summer decorating now and save • A fantastic value

WINOOSKI
West Canal Street

SHOP DAILY 9 to 9
Use our lay-away plan

STUDENTS SHOWING THEIR COLLEGE ID's will receive 10% off all merchandise except sale merchandise from Sept 2 to Sept 27

OPEN SEASON: THE FRESHMAN FLOOD

tuition up?
cost of good living is down at:
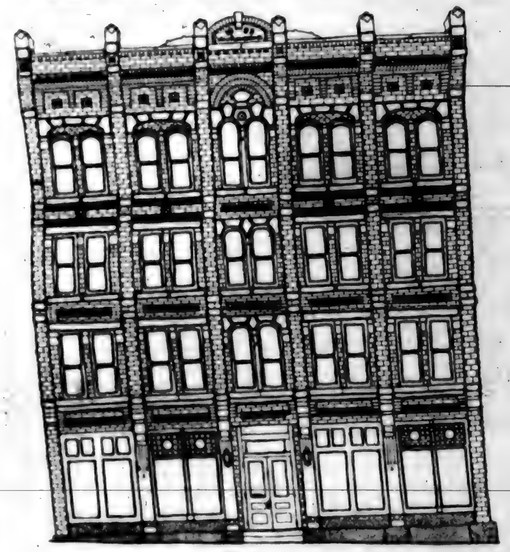
bennington potters
NORTH INC



casseroles	cookie cutters	jars
knives	chairs	jewelry
plastics	vegetable steamers	kites
woks	planters	pots, pans
plants	dinnerware	wastebaskets
candles	placemats	lamps
flatware	mugs	record racks
baskets	wooden spoons	glassware
salad servers	toys

and many more good items you can buy bennington potters NORTH
a city landmark
127 college street • burlington, vermont 05401
open 9 to 9, m-f; 9 to 9, sat

Boy, will Suburbia love Living/Learning. Not just like the Little League, Concerned Older People are always willing to help one with their "program."

So, after you've found out how everyone's summer was, pick out a good seat, arm yourself with a six of brew and some of that fine Columbian that has been floating around the Queen City of late, and watch the Suburban Arrival Show, brought to you by the Class of '79.

••••••••••

The sun percolates through the perpetually overcast Northern Vermont sky, glistening down upon New Jersey, New York and Connecticut license-plated Cadillacs and ersatz wood paneled LTD Country Squire Station Wagons meandering their way up Williston Road towards Camp Catamount. Lots of M.D. letters on those mud-speckled license plates. A few pick-up trucks... Vermonters, naturally. .

The parking lot is full now as the Suburban Susies and Johnnies, shadowed by little sister, sternly supervised by Mommy and Daddy, meekly disembark from the overloaded station wagon. The deluge begins.

The doors of the air-conditioned gas guzzler open as the accouterments (effulgents) of life in Larchmont, Long Island, Wellesley, Shaker Heights, Darien, Scarsdale, Short Hills, and Woodstock are unloaded. Out pour electric hair dryers-stylers-curlers that will never suffice to shroud that terminal acne case acquired by a steady McDonald's diet, KLH speakered stereos to drive roommates beserk with, bicycles that have ten speeds but can only be ridden one lousy month of the whole wintry Camp Catamount year, gold-framed Senior Prom/yearbook pictures of that soon to be forgotten high school honey, those new Rossignols that will never see Stowe's slopes because the lift ticket funds went for Tequilla Sunrises at Hannibals' and Daddy's thoughtful high school graduation present of an electric typewriter... dammit, doesn't Daddy realize that elementary education majors don't need typewriters and that he should have conjured up some practical, utilitarian gift... like a birth-control pill prescription. These Surburban Susies and Johnnies don't want to do what Daddy has done all his life, but from the looks of this avalanche, they sure as hell want him to keep on doing it.

Mommy nervously inhales another Salem into her rapidly aging lungs and readies her make-up for the trek into the Dorm. The society that relishes tossing Forty-second street, two-bit prostitutes in the slammer somehow never caught up with the Suburban Housewife. But, that's only because, in the great American tradition, she doesn't work cheap; split levels, charge accounts, LTD station wagons, country clubs and even Valium prescriptions are all very expensive items, what with the country enmeshed in a recession and all...

Once inside the dorm, inspection of the cinder-block cell immediately becomes secondary to that common arrival apprehension, that tremulous moment, known as Meeting the Roommate. Now Camp Catamount, you'll have to understand, is as adept at creating mis-matches in freshman roomies as Peter Salzberg is at scheduling basketball opponents... lest we forget Barry Cohen one-on-one versus David Thompson. Housing always seems to put the lithe young Queen of the Prom, right off the high school cheerleading line, in the same room with the bra-less, stoned hipster woman who started attending Anti-War rallies on Boston Common about the same time the cheerleader had her debut rah-rahing at Spaulding High football games. It's a perfect marriage. Chicago meets Jefferson Airplane, those new skirts get hung in the same closet with eight pair of faded Levi's, Rod McKuen says hello to Allen Ginsberg, the Congregational Church harvest supper

(continued to page forty-three)

NO ONE KNOWS THE WAY A WAITRESS FEELS

The pinball machines clatter incessantly in the gameroom. The Foosball players are mesmorized by the constant motion of eleven smiling dolls all aiming to kick. A small time hustler is working for drinks on the green felt of the pool table. The noisy laughter appears when you turn the corner, the game room is the strategic center of the Sting, but it offers no warning of the magic that lies on the darkened side of the petition. There's magic in the music and that is what brings the masses. Dance and drink, after all, isn't that what it's all about.

It's easy enough to find Lisa Singer even in this SRO crowd. She is the red flame searing her way through spaces that never existed between people until she wedges her way through. Her persistant cry of 'excuse me' is drowned in the wail of electric boogie music. Her tilt is slightly forward, a determined face, similar to that of the marathon runners as they realize they're on their last mile, rushes from her green alluring eyes. The semi moist light of the main ballroom sizzles with her energy.

"Hey Lisa, whazhappenin'?" She smiles to her acquaintance. She has no idea of his name but everyone knows the waitress with the dove's face. In a club like the Sting a smile reaches as deep as an extended hand.

Lisa is a UVM sophomore, a native of Concord, Vermont and a charmer like you've never seen. Like most of us this summer, she is hustling for that never found pot of greenbacks, the wonder cure for all your dreams, bills and retirement plans. She started off the summer working two jobs, a service station attendant at the Petco station on Riverside Ave. and as the supercharged waitress at the Sting, Burlington's most popular watering hole this side of Lake Champlain.

"The job at Petco started off as a joke. As a lark I tried to get a job at some of the gas stations on Williston Rd. None of them hired girls. A girlfriend of mine suggested Petco. The guy at Petco hired me right on the spot. The only thing he asked me was if I went to college and could make change. I told him I knew what a quarter looked like, and I started the next day. The job basically entails nothing more than pumping gas and adding oil to the crankcase.

Petco paid $2.10 an hour, but it was worth it for the experience. Sometimes this guy I worked with would jump in his car and take off. He'd go to Dairy Queen for 45 minutes and I'd be left there by myself with all these clowns waiting to have their cars intoxicated. I know this other girl who worked there and one time when this guy took off she got so flustered and delirious with the impatient line of cars that she poured oil into this guy's powersteering. Wow was she beside herself."

A 1967 Chevy Impala SS emblazoned in blue metalflake and chrome mags, jams its Firestones to a screeching halt at the high test pump. The driver, a male of the beer and piston persuation, glimpses the blonde through his chromed shades. She strides from the office. He's not sure if she's wearing anything under her Smith's overalls. As she nears, he sees a challenge in the green eyes and rivets his attention back to the sway in her hips and the lines of her torso. He's disappointed, a small halter covers what he'd love to know more about. "What will it be sir?" she says to his window. His brain is greased with wishful desires that he shys from expressing. As his tank fills, he considers an approach (everybody does). Five dollars of high test seems the right price for some cheap thrills. As she heads back to the office he entices. "I'm better in bed than most, try me." She laughs him off playfully. His conscience and imagination cleared, he drops the Hurst shifter into first and leaves his rubber souvenir on the asphalt as so many others before him have done.

"You certainly couldn't be overly touchy and work this job. You'd be crying more tears per gallon than the EPA could measure. You know it's not only the young ones who get hot pants when they see a chick pumping their gas. This old fella from Winooski used to come in all the time. He really liked me so he'd give me a quarter tip everytime. I'd make sure the amount pumped always ended with seventy-five cents. The old guy was real nice to me. One time he asked me to take a ride with him to St. Albans. Another time he made me an offer that if I'd spend one night a week with him, he'd buy me a car and support me. That was the whole deal. The package sounded delicious, but whoring isn't my thing. So I told him to ride a wild stallion and it would be almost as good.

To me feminism is just a word. I'm not a martyr for causes. I believe in equal opportunity and equal rights, only a moron doesn't. But these days everyone is disinterested in politics, it's a dead end game. The

(continued on page forty-four)

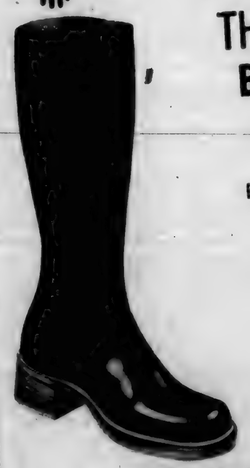
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE – CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE – CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE – CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE

We just wanted you to know we can fill your needs for sportswear as well as sweateras

Sweaters of all kinds and colors
Jeans, Ladies slacks, Blouses,
Men's shirts, Ladies Men's leisure shirts
hoisery
and we have much, much more

TOP QUALITY
AT LOW, LOW FACTORY PRICES
Check out our bargain corner
Layaway
You Can't Help But Save at the
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 Main St., Burlington, Down by the Lake
Open Daily 9-9, Saturdays 9-5

SUNDANCE
THE PLACE FOR
BOOTS BY FRYE



Leather Jackets · Vests · Pants
Custom Belts
Big Collection of Buckles & Beads
Pottery
American Indian Jewelry
Candles
And Much More....

Gifts from the hands of Vermont Craftman

In "Trader's Way"—No. Winooski Ave. At Pearl
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON, VERMONT

OPEN SEASON: THE FRESHMAN FLOOD

tuition up?
cost of good living is down at:
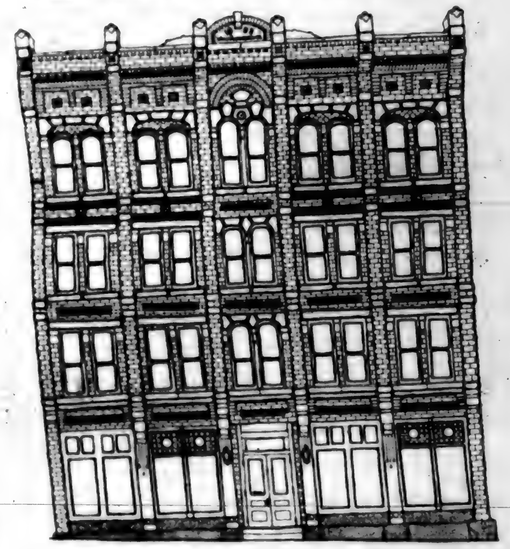
bennington potters
N&RTH INC



casseroles knives plastics woks plants candles flatware baskets salad servers cookie cutters chairs vegetable steamers planters dinnerware placemats mugs wooden spoons toys jars jewelry kites pots, pans wastebaskets lamps record racks glassware

and many more good items you can buy bennington potters N&RTH
a city landmark
127 college street • burlington, vermont 05401
open 9 to 9, m-f; 9 to 9, sat

balderdash. Boy, will Suburbia love Living/Learning for just like the Little League, Concerned Older People are always willing to help one with their "program."

So, after you've found out how everyone's summer was, pick out a good seat, arm yourself with a six of brew and some of that fine Columbian that has been floating around the Queen City of late, and watch the Suburban Arrival Show, brought to you by the Class of '79.

****

The sun percolates through the perpetually overcast Northern Vermont sky, glistening down upon New Jersey, New York and Connecticut license-plated Cadillacs and ersatz wood paneled LTD Country Squire Station Wagons meandering their way up Williston Road towards Camp Catamount. Lots of M.D. letters on those mud-speckled license plates. A few pick-up trucks... Vermonters, naturally.

The parking lot is full now as the Suburban Susies and Johnnies, shadowed by little sister, sternly supervised by Mommy and Daddy, meekly disembark from the overloaded station wagon. The deluge begins.

The doors of the air-conditioned gas guzzler open as the accouterments (effulgents) of life in Larchmont, Long Island, Wellesley, Shaker Heights, Darien, Scarsdale, Short Hills, and Woodstock are unloaded. Out pour electric hair dryers-stylers-curlers that will never suffice to shroud that terminal acne case acquired by a steady McDonald's diet, KLH speakered stereos to drive roommates beserk with, bicycles that have ten speeds but can only be ridden one lousy month of the whole wintry Camp Catamount year, gold-framed Senior Prom/yearbook pictures of that soon to be forgotten high school honey, those new Rossignols that will never see Stowe's slopes because the lift ticket funds went for Tequilla Sunrises at Haanibuls' and Daddy's thoughtful high school graduation present of an electric typewriter... dammit, doesn't Daddy realize that elementary education majors don't need typewriters and that he should have conjured up some practical, utilitarian giff... like a birth-control pill prescription. These Surburban Susies and Johnnies don't want to do what Daddy has done all his life, but from the looks of this avalanche, they sure as hell want him to keep on doing it.

Mommy nervously inhales another Salem into her rapidly aging lungs and readies her make-up for the trek into the Dorm. The society that relishes tossing Forty-second street, two-bit prostitutes in the slammer somehow never caught up with the Suburban Housewife. But, that's only because, in the great American tradition, she doesn't work cheap; split levels, charge accounts, LTD station wagons, country clubs and even Valium prescriptions are all very expensive items, what with the country enmeshed in a recession and all...

Once inside the dorm, inspection of the cinder-block cell immediately becomes secondary to that common arrival apprehension, that tremulous moment, known as Meeting the Roommate. Now Camp Catamount, you'll have to understand, is as adept at creating mis-matches in freshman roomies as Peter Salzberg is at scheduling basketball opponents... lest we forget Barry Cohen one-on-one versus David Thompson. Housing always seems to put the lithe young Queen of the Prom, right off the high school cheerleading line, in the same room with the bra-less, stoned hipster woman who started attending Anti-War rallies on Boston Common about the same time the cheerleader had her debut rah-rahing at Spaulding High football games. It's a perfect marriage. Chicago meets Jefferson Airplane, those new skirts get hung in the same closet with eight pair of faded Levi's, Rod McKuen says hello to Allen Ginsberg, the Congregational Church harvest supper

(continued to page forty-three)

NO ONE KNOWS THE WAY A WAITRESS FEELS

The pinball machines clatter incessantly in the gameroom. The Foosball players are mesmorized by the constant motion of eleven smiling dolls as aiming to kick. A small time hustler is working for drinks on the green felt of the pool table. The noisy laughter appears when you turn the corner, the game room is the strategic center of the Sting, but it offers no warning of the magic that lies on the darkened side of the petition. There's magic in the music and that is what brings the masses. Dance and drink, after all, isn't that what it's all about.

It's easy enough to find Lisa Singer even in this SRO crowd. She is the red flame searing her way through spaces that never existed between people until she wedges her way through. Her persistant cry of 'excuse me' is drowned in the wail of electric boogie music. Her tilt is slightly forward, a determined face, similar to that of the marathon runners as they realize they're on their last mile, rushes from her green-alluring eyes. The semi moist light of the main ballroom sizzles with her energy.

"Hey Lisa, whazhappenin'?" She smiles to her acquaintance. She has no idea of his name but everyone knows the waitress with the dove's face. In a club like the Sting a smile reaches as deep as an extended hand.

Lisa is a UVM sophomore, a native of Concord, Vermont and a charmer like you've never seen. Like most of us this summer, she is hustling for that never found pot of greenbacks, the wonder cure for all your dreams, bills and retirement plans. She started off the summer working two jobs, a service station attendant at the Petco station on Riverside Ave. and as the supercharged waitress at the Sting, Burlington's most popular watering hole this side of Lake Champlain.

"The job at Petco started off as a joke. As a lark I tried to get a job at some of the gas stations on Williston Rd. None of them hired girls. A girlfriend of mine suggested Petco. The guy at Petco hired me right on the spot. The only thing he asked me was if I went to college and could make change. I told him I knew what a quarter looked like, and I started the next day. The job basically entails nothing more than pumping gas and adding oil to the crankcase.

Petco paid $2.10 an hour, but it was worth it for the experience. Sometimes this guy I worked with would jump in his car and take off. He'd go to Dairy Queen for 45 minutes and I'd be left there by myself with all these clowns waiting to have their cars intoxicated. I know this other girl who worked there and one time when this guy took off she got so flustered and delirious with the impatient line of cars that she poured oil into this guy's powersteering. Wow was she beside herself."

A 1967 Chevy Impala SS emblazoned in blue metalflake and chrome mags, jams its Firestones to a screeching halt at the high test pump. The driver, a male of the beer and piston persuasion, glimpses the blonde through his chromed shades. She strides from the office. He's not sure if she's wearing anything under her Smith's overalls. As she nears, he sees a challenge in the green eyes and rivets his attention back to the sway in her hips and the lines of her torso. He's disappointed, a small halter covers what he'd love to know more about. "What will it be sir?" she says to his window. His brain is greased with wishful desires that he shys from expressing. As his tank fills, he considers an approach (everybody does). Five dollars of high test seems the right price for some cheap thrills. As she heads back to the office he entices. "I'm better in bed than most, try me." She laughs him off playfully. His conscience and imagination cleared, he drops the Hurst shifter into first and leaves his rubber souvenir on the asphalt as so many others before him have done.

"You certainly couldn't be overly touchy and work this job. You'd be crying more tears per gallon than the EPA could measure. You know it's not only the young ones who get hot pants when they see a chick pumping their gas. This old fella from Winooski used to come in all the time. He really liked me so he'd give me a quarter tip everytime. I'd make sure the amount pumped always ended with seventy-five cents. The old guy was real nice to me. One time he asked me to take a ride with him to St. Albans. Another time he made me an offer this: if I'd spend one night a week with him, he'd buy me a car and support me. That was the whole deal. The package sounded delicious, but whoring isn't my thing. So I told him to ride a wild stallion and it would be almost as good.

To me feminism is just a word. I'm not a martyr for causes. I believe in equal opportunity and equal rights, only a moron doesn't. But these days everyone is disinterested in politics, it's a dead end game. The

(continued on page forty-four)

CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE – CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE – CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE – CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE

We just wanted you to know we can fill your needs for sportswear as well as sweateras

Sweaters of all kinds and colors
Jeans, Ladies slacks, Blouses,
Men's shirts, Ladies Men's leisure shirts
hoisery
and we have much, much more

TOP QUALITY
AT LOW, LOW FACTORY PRICES
Check out our bargain corner
Layaway
You Can't Help But Save at the
CHARLESTOWN MILL STORE
65 Main St., Burlington, Down by the Lake
Open Daily 9-9, Saturdays 9-5

SUNDANCE
THE PLACE FOR
BOOTS BY FRYE

Leather Jackets · Vests · Pants
Custom Belts
Big Collection of Buckles & Beads
Pottery
American Indian Jewelry
Candles
And Much More....

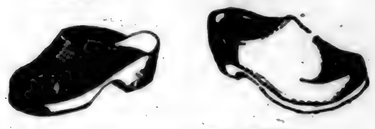
Gifts from the hands of Vermont Craftman

In "Trader's Way"—No. Winooski Ave. At Pearl
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON, VERMONT

the SKI shop, inc.

388 Shelburne Rd. Burlington, Vermont
862-5488
Far Eastern Imports For Men And Women

Clogs From Denmark



MENS & LADIES SIZES

Imported Sweaters From Europe

OPEN: 9-5:30 MON–WED
9-9 THURS & FRI
9-5 SATURDAY

Start the Year off on a Bright Note

-PAINT your room, apartment, car, dog, or roommate

To get you started

★ free helpful advice-questions welcome
★ 20% off all supplies with UVM ID

Come see us for everything you need from paint hats to paint

PITTSBURGH® PAINTS
61 Main Street
863-6866

CLASSIFIED

For sale: 67 Mustang, 6 cyl. 3 speed stick. Runs well, some rust, $64-7375.

For sale – over 2 hundred psychology and psychiatry books covering all major areas, 50 – 75% off original price. Call 862-2348.

HOUSE WANTED: Looking for country home to rent within 20 miles of Burlington. Needed as soon as possible. Have Pet. Please call 985-8575.

For sale: girl's 26-inch 3 speed bike. In good working order. Very reasonable price. Call Karen at 656-2696 after 6 p.m.

For sale: 1967 Austin Healy Sprite MK IV, $750. 863-3623.

For sale: Audi 1972 Super 90 Station Wagon. Must sell. Call 1-453-3487.

For Sale: Mercury 1973 Comet, 4 door, 302 V-8, auto trans., P.S. AC, excellent condition, has to be seen to be appreciated. Call 863-1413 after 5.

For sale: 1970 Toyota Corona, four door automatic. Engine good condition. Some rust. 24 M.P.G. $450, 893-2612.

Needed: a place in the country to live. The less luxuries the better. In return I'll work or pay rent. Experience in: housecleaning, gardening, animal care, horseback riding, skiing, barn work, wood cutting, forestry. References, Call Laura, 864-5461.

For Sale: Datson 510 1971. Good condition. Call Staige, 656-2053.

For Sale: Unused Kice & Maxwell Organic Chemistry text, $9. Call 899-2133.

For Sale: Mercury 1973 Comet, 4 door, 302 V-8, auto trans., P.S. AC, excellent condition, has to be seen to be appreciated. Call 863-1413 after 5.

Moving – must sell colonial sofa excellent condition $90; table loom $40; bureau $12; pair V.W. snow tires $30. Call 863-6249.

Horseshowing & trimming. Tim Wentzell, Farrier. All work guaranteed, 863-7375.

Experienced MA in English. Will edit and/or type manuscripts. Call 862-4175.

Black men's wallet lost on campus. Reward offered. 863-6504.

I want to buy a second-hand 35 mm camera, excellent condition. 862-1452.

Wanted to buy second hand double bed or water bed. Please call Donna at 656-2553 (days).

WHAT THE HELL DO YOU DO WHEN YOU GET OUT OF THIS PLACE

Getting a BA, huh? Well, welcome back to Camp Catamount for another exciting season of bar hopping and hockey tournaments. Enjoy them well, especially you younger lower classmen (classpeople?) because there won't be a whole lot of choices when you come to the question of what to do with your life when you get out of this place. When Easy Ed's successor hands you that diploma a few years from now, you'll be facing a regime of $2.10 an hour jobs. Some of you may get lucky and land a decent paying job with dad, who wants to keep it all in the family. But for the majority of you, there won't be much left to do but waitress at the Sting or pearl dive at the Scuffer. If you take a look around right now, especially during these waning weeks of the summer, you'll see that a considerable portion of Burlington's population is made up of dregs and low-lifes who just couldn't bear to leave, who can't face the contradictions of living in the real world. People who are just scraping around, who can quote Plato but can't change a tire. People who have already taken that long dreamt trip to Colorado or B.C., but somehow eventually gravitated back to Burlington, like the salmon to his spawning ground.

Many of these local alumni plan to work as a cook for Saga at least until they're 30, saving just enough money for a trip to Prince Edward Island and a couple of nights out at the bars. The remainder are the ones who went home right after graduation and started working for a relative or friend because it was the only thing they could find. Putting in their required 20 weeks at work, they were lucky enough to get laid off so that they could move back to Burlington and collect unemployment. These life-forms are frequently seen on Mother's Day scurrying to the Grand Union to cash their $50-$60 checks, and, after setting aside enough for food and rent, rationing themselves a dollar and a half for a pitcher of beer and a night with John Cassel.

Of course, the life of the unemployed college grad is not all that it is cracked up to be. Every five weeks you have to deliver your body to the Employment Security office and hope to God they haven't found you a job – at least not one as bad as the one you were forced to take when you graduated, the one you escaped from when you fled back to Burlington. The other occupational hazard of unemployment is terminal slothfulness. Often, especially in the winter months, you will idle away weeks on end in your apartment watching the Noon movie, and hanging around all afternoon waiting for Star Trek at 6 o'clock on channel 11. Many times the big event of the day is walking down to Hargreaves for a copy of the Free Press. In the summer, it is getting up enough energy to drive to the Starr Farm Beach because you can't afford the 25 cent admission to North Beach. It can also be just hanging around all day waiting for the $2 special at the Quarry Hill pitch and putt course, a course where you're led to believe you're doing well when you shoot an 87. But the epitome of dregdom is writing for the Cynic two years after you've graduated only because you need the extra $5 for a few beers.

Some grads try to avoid the contradictions of the Real World, and the disquieting effects of the lack of peer group contact, by getting married. If you can survive the first year of post graduate disorientation and depression without getting hitched, you'll probably be alright for at least another five. But if you feel yourself slipping, go to the weddings of a couple of classmate friends, and then ask yourself if you really want to face that Hannibul's barmaid or that Frat jock from New Jersey for the rest of your life.

A commonly sought resbit is attending either graduate school or law school. This of course is hardly a solution: it merely postpones the contradictions for another few years. Ah, Law School! The National Lampoon wrote that highschool is the closest thing to fasciam that you'll ever experience. They apparantly never went to law school. Step inside those hallowed prison walls of the American Bar Association and you'll feel yourself being warped back to your years of poddy passes and dress codes. Absurd. Twenty five and 30 year old students, many of them married, broke, with 2 kids and a half furnished house being told that they can't cut classes or they'll be dropped, and that they gotta follow every rule the dean lays down. Where authoritarianism is supposed to breed "self discipline." A plastic world where a 28 year old prof is an authority figure to the two 50 year old students there.

You might run into a few Camp Catamount alumni, but it doesn't really matter. Most of the students are from Lon Gisland anyway. Despite the promise that as much as 15% of the school may be women, the typical law student is facing a 3 year regime of brief cards and stroke books. And when this regime is finally over, the law graduate emerges as an adept pedantic skilled in the eclectic arts of argumentative diarrehea. And he still can't change a tire, and hasn't learned the difference between a fee and a bribe. He is now a certified hired gun for the sleezies who run the system. After a year or two of legal education he completely understands how Nixon was able to rationalize his guilt. The few jaded leftists there who've joined the Lawyer's Guild have hopes of the VPIRG – public defender – consumer advocate – Nancy Kaufman trip. But after two years of saying "your honor" to the likes of Bill Gilbert and Dan Ruggles, they're more than ready to flip burgers at the Miss Montpelier diner for a living. The highlight of their careers has passed; now they face a life of divorce cases and real estate contracts.

—The poli sci or soc grad school student faces much the same fate. Many of them are lucky enough to get a hi faluttin' fellowship at some prestigious university located in the decaying metropolis. Their life is much like that of the undergrad years. They are churning out more papers for yet another set of Wertheimers, Flanneries, and Nelsons, except that they wouldn't dare go out and have a beer with these profs. Too undistinguished. The unfortunate grad students get to do the intellectual coolie work for those professors who have kidded themselves into thinking that they're really onto something new. If it weren't for the computer print-out and the statistical survey, these grad profs would be tending bar. You may run into these grad school unfortunates every year or so when they sojourn back to Camp to check up on the dregs who are collecting unemployment. The grad student is more often than not chagrinned by the fact despite all the academic chevrons he is collecting, the unemployment dreg had far more peace of mind than a grad school clone. And besides, when grad school is over, you still face $2.10 an hour because of the current overproduction of academics.

These few comments have been aimed mainly at the newcomer to these parts. Even though you've got to listen to all the bullshit about academic standards and achievement and the like, don't take too much of it seriously. If you really want a decently paying vocational job, either transfer to pre-med or drop out of Camp and enroll in the St. Johnsbury Trade School. After all, it takes more time to apprentice as a plumber than it does to become a lawyer.

But if you insist on continuing with your liberal arts education, because you find it stimulating or some such rot, I ask you to heed the advice which is printed on the top of the "Labatt 50" bottlecap, and Enjoy! This oasis won't last forever.

—JOHN FRANCO

(802) 862-1591
Golden Dragon Restaurant
DELICIOUS CHINESE FOOD
144 CHURCH ST
BURLINGTON, VT. 05401
COCKTAILS
TAKE OUT ORDERS
Tuesday-Thursday 11:30 PM-10PM
Friday & Saturday 11:30 AM - 11 PM
Sunday 12 Noon-10 PM

©1975 Kalsø Systemet, Inc.

Style 110

This is the Earth® shoe.
Anne Kalsø invented it.
Everyone is trying to imitate it. But just because a shoe looks like the Earth® brand shoe doesn't mean it works like the Earth® shoe.

KALSØ earth® shoe

Available at:

139 BANK ST.

A CONVERSATION WITH:
PETER AND JOHN ISAACSON

Peter and John Isaacson? Those names may not ring a bell with those who are new to this area or with those who think that the only "good" music is the loud rock you can hear at the Sting. But many who have been around for awhile may remember them as those mellowed-out "country folk" singers who used to play at the Blue Tooth (the place that is now the Silver Keg) every Sunday night. If you had a rough week-end or if you had a rough week ahead (one that you were not quite ready to face), then the best thing to do on a Sunday night was to go to the Blue Tooth, listen to Peter and John, and get your mind cleared out.

If you haven't been around that long, you might have caught them at Carburs (where they played for awhile last winter), or you might have heard them in Stowe at the Topnotch (where they now play every Sunday and Monday night) or in Warren at the 1777 Inn (where they play every Friday and Saturday). If you have missed them in all these places, all is not lost because you will soon be able to hear them on record. Their first album, which was made at the Philo Studio in Ferrisburg, Vermont, will be out around the first of September. This album, to be called Peter and John Isaacson "because nobody really knows who we are and we'd like to get the name known first," will be on the Fretless label. This is one of the labels used by the Philo Studio and is, as Mike Colture (one of the owners of the studio and the engineer on their record) puts it, "a cooperative label between the artist and the company... the artist has complete control... they have a say in everything," unlike the average studio-produced album where the artist just comes in and does as he is told. The record is to be distributed nationally and will be available at most of the record stores in Burlington.

Peter and John are native Vermonters who grew up in Hancock, a small town about 25 miles south of Warren. As Peter says, "It's on 100. You can't miss it, but you've got to keep your eyes open... you don't want to blink too much when you're going through or you'll miss the whole thing." They come from a fairly artistic family. Their father is a painter and sculpsor and their mother's a sculptor. They also have a sister who plays guitar and sings and a younger brother who is a drummer.

Peter, who is 26, has been playing and singing in bars since he was 16, and John, now 22, has been playing with him off and on since he was 15. They have been playing steadily as a team for about 3 years. Peter plays acoustic guitar and sings lead vocals, and John plays bass and sings harmony vocals. Their style is sort of country folk with some blues (Mike Colture calls it "mainstream folk") and they have a definite style that grows on you and sends you back to hear them week after week.

The following is part of a conversation that a number of the Summer Cynic staff had with Peter and John a few weeks ago at the Topnotch.

PETER ISAACSON

CYNIC: How does one go about getting a record put out?

PETER: It's a very complex process which we've learned since we did it. The first thing to have is the material... have a reason to do the record... you gotta have songs.

CYNIC: Is it all original?

PETER: It's all original stuff. You don't have to have original material...but it must be recordable material. It's got to be decent and you gotta say it's time for us to do it... From there you go, hopefully, to somebody who is willing to finance it, which means you need investment capital... you have to have people who believe in you and want you to do something.

Then you go to the record company, which happened to be Fretless, and say OK, we've got this package that we want to do, and are you interested in doing it. They said yes we are, and then we proceeded from there. All the time we've been playing we've been becoming acquainted with musicians, people we might like to work with in a recording situation, and we worked out arrangements for particular instruments and ideas, kicked them around between us. And from that basis we set a date to go into the studio to start recording, and from there it progressed very rapidly... I'll tell you one thing right now. The easiest part of the record was the actual recording. The hard part is setting up the scheduling, cover design, things like that. It's an organizational, managerial type of thing which is totally foreign to us... The organization of it is the most difficult, deciding what order to do the songs in, etc. It's very easy to run over your budget in time and money, so you've got to be very careful about that, and if there's anything about the record that I regret, it's that we didn't have enough time... I wouldn't say we didn't have enough time, but it would have been nicer if we had more time and more money to spend on it. But I think we came out with a very good product for the time.

CYNIC: Who else did you have in the studio?

PETER: Richard Wesley played lead acoustic guitar, Andrew Marks played drums, and Herb Jones played pedal steel.

CYNIC: Are they all from Vermont?

JOHN: They all live here now.

PETER: Herb Jones is from Rouses Point, N.Y.

JOHN: Richard was originally from Northern California. He was like a studio musician in L.A. for awhile, and now he lives in Williston.

CYNIC: Are they in bands?

PETER: No, except maybe Herb who plays with a group on weekends. Andrew doesn't play drums with anyone in particular.

JOHN: He's a pipe maker.

PETER: Right, he's also a very good drummer. Richard plays guitar occasionally with some groups, he plays with us occasionally too, but not with any particular group. He teaches guitar. He's an excellent guitar player.

CYNIC: Do you prefer playing bars or would you like to play concerts?

PETER: I would love to play concerts. I don't hate bars. I like them. I think they're real good vehicles to test the validity of what you do. They're real good experience. I would recommend playing in bars to any entertainer that was interested in doing it as a profession, for training. It's great. There's absolutely nothing like a bar crowd to get your chops together on and get your stage presence down, that whole number.

JOHN: They also make you decide whether you really want to do it or not, because it can be very hard.

PETER: It's a real leveler. It's a thing where you say I want to go in it as a business and a profession and I want to be a musician for my life's work. You go into a bar and that will make you decide.

JOHN: You go, "Oh God!"

PETER: "What did I do? I don't know if I want to do this or not!"

JOHN: "Go back to a day job."

CYNIC: Vermont is definitely not the place if you say I want to be a professional musician.

PETER: I think it is. There's a lot more work here than say... I've played all over the country... from here to Hawaii and back again, and there are places to play.. say out in the mid-west. I did a lot of playing in Kansas and that area of the country. I started playing in Wichita 12 years ago. At that time you played in Wichita, you played maybe about five clubs, and then if you wanted to break out of Wichita you had to drive three or four hundred miles to the next gig because there's nothing between Wichita and say Kansas City or Columbus, Ohio. There's a lot of little places, but you can't make any money, and it's like shit-kicker bars. You can get killed.

JOHN: You can work New York or Boston, but you might work two days out of two weeks.

PETER: Or you might work a two-week gig in a six month period, and you might not work anymore and get paid for it. You might play, but you might not get paid, cause there's a lot of cats down there working for nothing. And they'll do it cause they got other gigs that they do in the day. Some cat's a leather worker and makes his money doing that. He plays guitar on the side. He goes into a bar and says I wanta play. They say, "fine, we'll pay you 5 bucks and all the beer you can drink," and the guy says OK. A guy like me comes along — a professional — and says "OK, we'll play for you; we'll do it for $100 a night, and the guy laughs. So they don't wanta pay.

CYNIC: Would you ever consider leaving Vermont?

PETER: Sure, but I don't want to leave it without having a place to go to. I've already done that for years. I did that for like 10 years, and there's no future in it. You spread yourself real thin. Nobody remembers you. Say you leave Vermont and go to Boston, and you hit Washington, D.C., and you hit Philadelphia, New York, and then you go to Atlanta for a couple of weeks, and then you go someplace else. All along the line you're making friends and you're seeing people, but nobody really remembers you because you're never there long enough.

The reason I came back here... I was out in L.A., and I was fat, man. I was making $350 as a single performer, $350 a week. I was living in a garden apartment. I had a swimming pool, I had a sauna. I had the whole number. It was great. Fantastic. I was doing my gig. It was so boring I almost killed myself. It was terrible. I used to go to work and say, "what am I doing?" It was the same situation out there. Nobody knew you because you're getting such a different crowd all the time. The turnover was tremendous. You'd never see the same face twice. And so what happened was I felt really lonely and real depressed about it. Plus the physical surroundings were... I mean you know you can't breathe. And everything was sort of really plastic. When they started replacing the palm trees on the freeway with plastic palm trees, that's the week I decided I was going to leave. So I came back.

I said I gotta have a firm base of operations. I gotta have a place where people know who I am, where I can build up a reputation as a performer and from there... You have to start small in this business. There's no such thing anymore as making it overnight. It's a long hard process.

JOHN: Those overnight successes you hear about. Those guys have been in it for 15-20 years, and they finally get a break. The only reason you never heard of them is because you never heard of them.

PETER: They're out there doing those one-nighters. You can burn yourself out doing one-nighters. Those 20 years all you do is get your chops down. It's good for that, but you can really... I've met performers, entertainers and musicians who have been on the road for too long, and it's the saddest thing you ever want to see. Because you can say at one point they reached their peak as a performer. Any one of a number of thing can happen to you. Your health can go bad. You can just get sick of it, which is usually the major thing. Your health and getting sick of it are usually the things that kill you first.. Your mental attitude. Or you might just not have any material to do anything else. People might get sick of you. What you do might be so dated and so..

CYNIC: You lose creativity..

PETER: Yeah. It's an easy thing to get down to a system. You say, "OK, we'll do the same show we did last night" and you can do that forever. You've seen them probably, the same type of thing. You get the same sets every night, the same songs in the same order, the same sets in the same order, and it drives you crazy.. Cause it's easy to do it that way. You don't have to think about it. You get up and you do your set "chi-ching". You can go to sleep inbetween... From the beginning to end, you can go to sleep. And what happens is that the audience goes to sleep. That's the danger sign. You go, "Gee, what am I doing?"

JOHN: For instance, the Stones. The American Tour is all completely set. They do the same exact show every night. Since they're playing to so many people in different places, nobody (unless they follow the group) sees the same show. So it's all new to you, but those performers do that every time they play and it gets old.

PETER: And that's why most performers can only stay in one place for two weeks.

CYNIC: You play the same clubs every week, so you're forced to change...

PETER: That's it. We're forced to change, not just for the audience but for ourselves, to keep us from getting bored. We stick to a format. There's not much you can do with a situation. We're limited in our instrumentation. We have an electric bass guitar, acoustic guitar, and two vocals. And that's the only way we're limited in what we do. We'll try anything. Usually what we try and do is vary the sets and vary the way we do the songs each night hopefully.

You can't avoid a certain thing that happens and that is people ask you to do the same songs every night. And sometimes you get a rash of requests that are the same songs. It's cool and we don't mind.. we love to do it for them cause that's what we're here for.. We are entertainment. We are here to make people feel good. I wouldn't call us self-indulgent artists. We like to please the people. That's what we're here for.

JOHN: When we first started playing together we were good, but I had just started playing bass, and I wasn't that hot on bass. People who have come back to see us week after week have sort of grown with us. They say, "you guys are much better this week than you were last week". And we're improving every week.

PETER: That's what we're trying...we're trying always to improve. Our stiffest competition is us. What we do is try and top what we did last night. Our memories are real good. We know how we felt the night before, and if you keep using that as a yardstick... Sometimes it's good, sometimes it's bad, but we try not to go below a certain level of playing. We never like just blow off a tune..

JOHN: Well, I wouldn't say never. Sometimes...

PETER: I don't (laughs). I try not to, man.

JOHN: We have at times. You have to be honest. At times we've gone through periods where... Every musician does, periods where maybe you didn't stumble onto something new that you can work at. And so you go through maybe two or three weeks where you're doing the same tunes, and you haven't found an exciting way to maybe change it or relate it to the audience to make it exciting. Those are the hard parts.

PETER: That's part of the creative process, where you say... "well, there's something wrong. I'm not feeling the way I should feel. What do I do?" What happens is.. what do I do with this song or this situation that will make me... be better at it and do better at it and you kick yourself in the ass every week to put yourself over the top again. It's like a sport.

CYNIC: It's like writing for a newspaper. Sometimes you sit down to write and there's nothing coming...

PETER: Right. It's just the human condition. Human beings go in cycles, and you can't be as creative as... Say you get a flash on something, and you'll run with that thing and maybe it'll take you a hundred yards, maybe it'll take you a few feet. But sometimes you don't even get that creative spark. Even if you don't get the creative spark, you still... we still try not to fall below a certain line on that scale where we say we're... technically we're fucked. We're not. We try and keep it above that level.

CYNIC: As far as the most creative musicians around, who do you like?

PETER: I'm going to leave the local people out of it.. People I like are.. some of them you haven't heard of.. some you are really familiar with.. some of the people who have influenced us.. people like Gordon Lightfoot even though I'm not real crazy about some of the things he's done recently. The format, his presentations, ideas behind that, sort of helped us a lot. Listening to people like that. Ian and Sylvia. I'm really hot on this new can, Willis Allen Ramsey. He's out of Oklahoma, one of Leon Russell's proteges. He's really good.

JOHN: I like the Moody Blues and I like a lot of jazz.

PETER: I dig some jazz but not a lot. Just for listening music I like classical music a lot and also a cat named Charlie Byrd. Charlie Byrd and Stan Getz together. They did a really nice record about 10 years ago called Desoponado. I like that bossanova sound.

JOHN: Linda Ronstadt.

PETER: ..real relaxing. All kinds of music. Our grandfather was a concert cellist. He died before John was born, but I listened to him a lot when I was a kid.

CYNIC: Are there any people you have personally known that have influenced you?

PETER: Sure, this cat John Hammond. I worked with him in New York. He was into Delta Blues. He's a white cat, but he's excellent I think. He's never really taken off as a huge star probably because of the type of material that he does, very sort of limited in its scope. But for that particular kind of music I think he's excellent.. a real nice guy and he helped me a lot.

JOHN: He's more a musician's musician.

PETER: Exactly. He helped me a lot as far as watching him, just showing me little things that would help... how to play certain things, and just from watching people. Actually that's the way I learned most of the things I've done. I've never had any really formal lessons.

CYNIC: Did you learn slide guitar technique from him?

PETER: Well, I didn't learn from him directly, but he was a great influence in wanting to learn it, and finally I just sort of stumbled onto it and picked it up for myself. It's a very difficult technique to master. Anybody can slap a steel on a guitar and make it sound sort of funky, but it's a very difficult thing to control as a technique and also when and how to use it. It's all a matter of taste. Everybody's got their own individual style on that particular end of it.

JOHN: That's the thing... there are a lot of techniques, and you just hear about them and just sort of try it... try and assimilate as many of them as you can.

CYNIC: Do you like playing blues?

JOHN: Yeah, we're starting to get into blues a lot more.

PETER: I like blues a lot. We would do more, except... it's a very select crowd of people that like acoustic blues. A lot of times when you play blues, people think, "oh, wow, it's rock and roll without a drummer," but that's not what it is and sometimes when you get into doing that they think you're trying to do rock and roll. But people... especially young people nowdays, since they've never really known anything about the roots of where rock and roll came from, the only thing they can associate the kind of blues we play is "oh it's rock and roll without a drummer." And it's a drag, cause they don't understand it.. and don't really know what it's all about.

JOHN ISAACSON

CYNIC: If you had total control of what you play, would you play any different stuff?

PETER: I think we play a good cross-section of what we really like. If we could choose, I think we would choose to do more original stuff, more original material.

JOHN: I would totally agree. Also if we had the opportunity and the capital to pay other musicians, we'd probably expand on our arrangements, but not really change the type of music we play that much.

We know a lot of musicians in rock and roll bands, and they all have the same complaint... they never have time to do their original material because where they play a prerequisite is that you do at least 20 or 30 tunes that are current top 40 stuff... I've seen bands get called down lots of times for doing their own stuff.

CYNIC: How do you go about writing songs?

PETER: That's a hard one. I don't even know. It's hit or miss. What happens with me is... I'm not like a prolific writer. If I write a song once every 3 months, that's a lot, that's enough. A lot of cats can sit down and knock off 2 or 3 songs a day and they'll end up with maybe 70 songs, and maybe they'll play 10 of them.

JOHN: And of those 10, maybe there's only 2 or 3 that are really good.

PETER: The way I write is that maybe a song will sit on the back burner for maybe 3 months and it's time for it to come out. It'll come out and you'll do it and then we go through a process of arranging it, and we play it in front of an audience for awhile and see how it works. If the audience likes it, then we keep it in our repertoire. If it doesn't work or if it doesn't get enough audience response, we won't keep it or we'll keep it and just put it back and not do it. When we finally decided which songs to record, we recorded the ones that get the most audience response. I think it's a very valid way of testing your material.

We try and do the best material of all the different people we do, and when you're writing your own material, you gotta think this has to stand up well next to a song by Gordon Lightfoot or Van Morrison or Ian and Sylvia. And if it stands up well next to those, then you keep that song, and eventually if people don't know it at first, they will learn to know it... something like "Green Mountain Boy." We must get 3 or 4 requests a night for that song. Sometimes we end up doing it twice because people ask for it. That's definitely not one of the most sophisticated songs I've ever written, but it is something people can identify with.

CYNIC: Of the songs you've written, what are your favorites?

PETER: The last one I wrote. It's always that way. Actually I like them all. I don't really have any favorites except there are a few songs that I really enjoy playing guitar on. They're usually the newest ones that we've learned.

CYNIC: (to John) Are any of the songs on the album yours?

JOHN: Just one. I've only written about 3 or 4 songs. I'm not really a writer.

PETER: Not yet, anyway. He's working at it and the song he wrote, "Wichita, Tulsa", is an excellent song. I like that song a lot. It's one of my favorite tunes to play. As a matter of fact, we've just started to do some reworking on that song. Some of the songs that I do I've done ever since I've been playing, things like "Someday Soon," by Ian Tyson. I've been playing it for 10-12 years, and they're always going through a state of change. It's like a fine jewel... each song — you sit there and you polish it up every night and you polish it a little bit more until you can't go any farther and then you'll change it in another way — you'll turn it around.

JOHN: A lot of people are under the misconception that good songs are new songs and that you have to keep writing new songs or finding new material. There are so many songs that have been written that are excellent that you could never, sitting down right now and starting to play for a year, get through all of them once.

PETER: We know so many songs we could probably play for 3 or 4 days without repeating a song. Sometime I'd like to just "go for it" and play all the songs we know, play like 30 or 35 songs a night. At the end of 3 days we'd still have songs left to play.

JOHN: Thank goodness for the people who have come back week after week to hear us, who maybe didn't know that much about our music when they first came but know us real well now and can enjoy that type of music, and we can thereby turn them onto other people who do the same type of music and actually educate them in a way — get 'em away from that rock and roll.

PETER: Doing this kind of business is like teaching in a way. You have a crowd of 40 or 50 people in a room, and none of those people have ever known each other — they're just a crowd of people. And what we like to do is, hopefully, take that crowd — you take them and you make them aware of each other, they're aware of you, and they become from a crowd of people to an audience and then from an audience they become friends. They become our friends, they become friends of each other. It's a thing where it unites the people and makes them feel good. You can sing sad songs all night but it doesn't matter because those people still go away feeling good.

JOHN: It's all very interrelated. It helps us, it helps the place we work for, it helps the people. If they come away feeling like they did a good job, we did our job, they did their job, the management did their job. Everybody's happy.

PETER: And it serves a purpose. The way I feel about playing is that we are doing something that, number one, is important to us. We feel we fulfill a need that's important to other people. Obviously it is, they keep coming back. We have been able, God knows how (maybe just hard work), to accomplish something in our lives that is important to us, that we can make a living doing and we're not hurting anybody — we're not ripping anybody off — we're not taking anything. We're trying to give, as much as we possibly can, to whoever comes in contact with us.

JOHN: It's a job just like any other job, you know. You work 5 days a week.

PETER: It's like being a plumber. Plumber comes in, tightens your pipes up, fixes you up, you pay him his money, he goes home and you're happy.

JOHN: It's true.. You come in to hear us, we tighten you up or loosen you up. Loosen some of those bolts. Relax and you go home. It's like any other gig. Sometimes you're tired of it. Sometimes you're really proud of yourself. It has its ups and downs. Just like anything else.

CYNIC: Do you prefer older audiences to college audiences?

JOHN: Definitely, myself I do.

PETER: No, ok John does. I prefer it as mixed as you can get from little tiny kids to old people.

I think a steady diet of real young audiences, like 18 year old kids, is bad for a performer because... first thing that happens is they ignore you. Second thing is they start paying attention to you and then they ignore you again. Then you say "well, what am I doing wrong," and you're not doing anything wrong. It's just their attention span is completely controlled and dictated by television. What that does is make your attention span about 6 minutes long (about 2 songs and then they break for a commercial, even though there's no commercial there.) You've got them for 6 minutes and that's it. Then they've gotta go have a drink or go fix a sandwich, and it means you've got a very limited audience.

JOHN: They also are not temperate in their drinking. They come in and get blasted out in half an hour and make a wreck of the place. Whereas an older audience is much more reserved. At least they nurse their drinks for awhile, even though they drink much more that young kids do. They sit and listen. They know how to be an audience.

PETER: There's a whole tradition in older audiences. They remember what it's like to be entertained. They know how to let go and say, "OK, now is the time I shut myself off and I pay attention to the entertainment." They come from a generation pre-television, where everything was either live entertainment or it was radio. Everything had to be done live and, actually, in terms of these days, fairly quietly because the loudest instrument on that bandstand was a trumpet. That was as loud as they got.

OK so you got a situation where the older people know how to be entertained by live entertainment. So they have a frame of reference. Young people come in and the only thing they're used to, as far as live entertainment is concerned, is rock 'n' roll bands and big huge impersonal rock concerts. That's the only way they can identify with it.

JOHN: They walk in and if the music doesn't hurt their ears, then it doesn't catch their attention..

PETER: ..or totally punch them in the chest.. they go "well, yeah, it's just acoustic music.. Well, let's go someplace else where they've got a rock n' roll band." And if that's the attitude, I'd prefer them to do that.

I gave up going to concerts years ago. The last one I went to, as a matter of fact, was John Hammond and that group Poco. It was the most embarrassing thing I ever saw. The poor guy — he comes out, he's a single, he's a phenomenal entertainer and guitarist, incredible — but they said things like, "get off the stage... play some blues." That's exactly what he's playing, just hassling him.. He did a very short set, about 25 minutes, got up and walked out. I don't blame him a bit. Then Poco came on. I was sitting real close because I wanted to see John, sitting right by the speakers. And they just lifted my hair right off. I got up and went to the back of the room because I did want to see them. It's not that I'm against live music or against rock 'n' roll. What happened was I changed my seat and I got hassled by the cop. He said either sit down or get out. I paid 7 bucks to get in and I couldn't find a chair. He hassled me, so I moved. I was pretending I was sitting on a chair and he came over and hassled me again — he said you either sit in a chair or get out and I went — what can you do. There weren't any more chairs to be had so I split. And that was the last concert I went to.

JOHN: I went to the Stones' concert in Washington and that was great, but the Stones are the Stones.

PETER: If there's any criticism I have about young people these days is they're spoiled. They don't understand and they don't want to take the time to understand. Everything has to be immediately understandable — like punching a button on television or punching a button for a soda. It's just something they've gotten used to, and it's not their fault. It's the way the whole American society is. They want everything immediate gratification. If they don't get it immediately, they don't want to have anything to do with it (laughs) I don't want to get any more controversial than that. That's about as controversial as you can get. It's a real problem with this society.

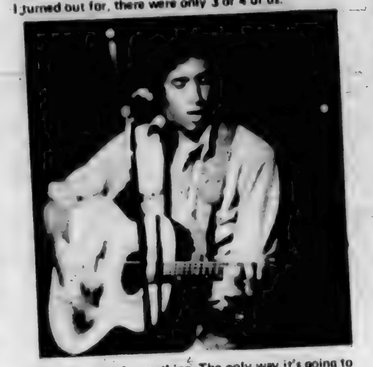
CYNIC: Do you think there's a chance of things changing?

PETER: I doubt it.

JOHN: Yeah, in another 10 years when they grow up.. get to be old people.

PETER: Yeah, but they'll be old people used to the same things they're used to now.

JOHN: Then they'll gonna go, "the kids these days, geez I can't understand it... they don't pay any attention to rock & roll bands... the last rock concert I turned out for, there were only 3 or 4 of us."



PETER: It's a funny thing. The only way it's going to change is for things to completely fall apart and people will get back to the way it used to be years ago. When I was growing up — see I grew up in Vermont in a time when my folks had a horse and wagon, and that's how we got around. I lived in Hancock which is 26 miles from Middlebury, which today you can make in a half hour for sure. I never even went to Middlebury more than twice in my life. We used to go to shop in Rochester, which is about 4 miles away. It used to take us all day to get into town and back. I never went to Rutland. I never went to Burlington. I went to Stowe one time, and I lived here until 1959.

The reason I picked Vermont is because things are more like that here than anyplace. If you go out in the real world.. it is nuts.

JOHN: Yes this is not the real world, folks. I just want you to know that.

PETER: I mean it's crazy. You can't relate to it in any sort of a human scale at all... We played down in New York at Lincoln Center about a year ago. It was the first time I played in New York in about 8 years. And boy was that strange. I mean it was a good listening crowd, but it was so strange to go into the city again and see what was going on.

It's surrealistic.. You take yourself from your apartment and you put yourself in the hall to play. Inbetween it's like... like Fellini.

You get used to it... you get dulled to it and this is dangerous. You get dulled to it within 3 or 4 days.

JOHN: Or you become very sort of perplexed... about everything. It starts to make you, like Peter said, either dulled or very vicious actually...

PETER: Makes you mean.. You go, "God, how does this happen?" You sit down and try to intellectualize about it, but there is no intellectual reason for it. There's no way you can reason it out because the only way you can relate to it is in a very animalistic sort of way. You deal with it from a very head-on sort of way and it's the only way to deal with it. It's very visceral and... you're ready to get your knive and cut people. It makes you feel like that.

CYNIC: What if your record is very successful. Would you want to go into the city and do concerts like that?

JOHN: We've thought about that a lot.

PETER: We'll do it in a sort of limited situation. What you have to do is pick and choose what you want. You look at anybody today that's really on top, and every one of them has been able to be farsighted enough to say... There are two ways to do it... there's the easy way, the 90-day wonder way. You become a 90-day wonder and then nobody ever hears about you again. Or there's the steady build-up over a period of years, somebody like Bob Dylan.

JOHN: Gordon Lightfoot is a good example, who until, I'd say 6 or 7 months ago, never had a million selling hit and not a lot of people knew about him, but he was selling albums. He was living his trade, he was making money.

PETER: He was doing exactly what he wanted to do. The thing is if you do that, you can still have a good life. You can do exactly what you want to do and there's no problem. The only thing that really can kill you is when you become a thing... like I would say the Rolling Stones or Elton John. They are totally controlled by the market that they play to.

JOHN: They started out as serious musicians... they still are very serious, but...

PETER: They're also serious businessmen. Maybe they're not, but the people behind them are very serious businessmen. They're like a corporation... or a conglomerate (not just a corporation, but a series of corporations that are all interrelated). They're like an octopus.

When you get that big, you really lose it. You have absolutely no control over what you're doing, where you're going to be tomorrow, how you're gonna feel about anything, you're just a thing.

CYNIC: Do you see yourself playing music from now on?

PETER: For sure. I'll play just as long as I can, until I drop dead. Hopefully, I'll be fortunate enough to be able to do that. The only thing I care about more than that is breathing.. you gotta breathe.. I also have to play and that's the only thing I care about.

JOHN: That's why I was saying it's like any other job. People retire at 65. We could play still. Sonny Terry and Brownie McGee are like in their 50's and 60's, and they're still doing it.

PETER: The format of what we do isn't necessarily going to stay the same. Who knows what we're going to be playing 10 years from now or even next year...

JOHN: But I can almost guarantee we will be involved in music in some way or another.

Helping is our business...

Use this bank as a resource for all of your financial concerns, during school, as you develop a career, a family, and a future for yourself. Helping really is our business.

The Merchants Bank

We Stand Behind Our Full Line

World Famous Shirts At Factory Outlet Prices

Hathaway®

153 Cherry Street

Shetland Wool Blend Sweaters

only $12.00

Great selection of colors and styles, including crew necks V-necks cable, solids.

Machine washable & dryable

Only the Look is expensive

GiGi

CHURCH ST. BURL., VT.

Art Supplies
Picture Frames
Sculpture Supplies
Drafting Supplies

Calling All Artists

Come To Vermont's Great Art Store. You'll Find Most Everything You Need And At Fair Prices.

Stop & Shop
202 Main St.
Cold Beverages
Subs Made To Order
Full Line Of Groceries And Meats
Yogurt

Boutilier's
Art Center
112 Church St.

GARDENING AND PEOPLE: A GROWING CHALLENGE

Tim Heintzelman and Kevin Anderson are two UVM students who like people, like gardening and enjoy a challenge. They've combined their interests and their respective skills (Tim is majoring in physical therapy and Kevin is a gardener from way back) in a very stimulating work-study job.

In early summer they sought out agencies that could use them to coordinate activities with children and mentally retarded adults. They planned to use the dual approach of teaching gardening and ecology to foster an appreciation of food and nature and of working closely with individuals to maintain interpersonal relationships and growth. Their efforts materialized three major projects: gardening with North Park low-income development children and with mentally retarded adults in workshops at the Champlain Valley Shelter, and engaging in horticultural and recreational therapy with developmentally disabled adults on 'summer vacation.'

Mary Laffler organized community gardens for residents of the North Park housing development last summer. Taking over her work, Tim and Kevin are now getting as many of the North Park kids involved in gardening as possible. The kids are about 9–13 years old and about ten participate each week.

"We use the Gardens For All plots on Staniford Road," Tim says. "The worse thing we could do is force them to garden, so we ask for volunteers. They aren't overly interested in weeding so we take them swimming and bike-riding too. The main thing is to get them away from the development for a while. But we want them to learn respect for gardens because these are kids who would raid gardens before they or their families had one. They like to harvest the vegetables, however, and we try to teach them something about nutrition. In the fall we'll use the kitchen at the North Park recreation hall to teach food preservation."

From the North Park kids they travel across town to Fort Ethan Allen and the Champlain Valley Shelter. At the Shelter mentally retarded adults who live in homes in the community are involved in various workshops. Tim and Kevin lead two groups a week through a gardening workshop. They have a real nice garden, which displays signs of being carefully planted, weeded, and watered. The vegetables are interplanted with neat rows of petunias and marigolds. Window boxes, designed for wheelchair gardeners, show flashes of color by the doorway.

"They really like flowers," Kevin explains, "not like the North Park kids and they're happy to be in the garden. Another important aspect of this project is that it gives them an opportunity to relate to new people outside their usual environment."

We go inside and walk past the woodworking room into the kitchen where the 'clients' prepare their vegetables. The ten or twelve adults involved in the project prepare salads and lunches from the garden. In the past few weeks, they've learned how to freeze beans. Here again, Tim and Kevin are concerned with good nutrition and teaching 'putting food by.'

On Tuesdays Tim and Kevin spend time with adults at the Champlain Valley Developmental Disabled Summer-Vacation Program. Most of the clients are not congenitally mentally retarded. They were kids who were slow learners or had physical handicaps and have consequently been mistakenly institutionalized since childhood. As a result of their individual problems being ignored through the years, they are now permanently mentally disabled.

About 17 adults go on nature walks with Tim and Kevin in the morning. They learn wildlife preservation and woodland ecology. After lunch volunteers are recruited to go camping in the West Bolton woods. Tim assures me it's a real treat. They have a barbeque and watermelon and, afterwards, wading in the brook. They take short hikes and watch the sun set before going to sleep beneath the stars.

Tim and Kevin like their work tremendously. "We have an opportunity to work with kinds of people that we seldom deal with at UVM," Kevin says. "Mentally retarded people are really great once you know them. They are open and honest and lots of fun." I watched a few men playing frisbe on the lawn outside the house at Fort Ethan Allen and had to agree. I was invited to go along on the camping trip and soon began really looking forward to it. But by evening the sky had clouded over and the rain had begun to settle in for the night – which is great for flowers but discouraging to star-gazers.

–PAMELA STEFANEK

yarn cellar

The Yarn Cellar

Can Keep You In Stitches All Year Long

yarn cellar

The Royal 96 Church Street

Village Shopping Park Shelburne

YOU AND YOUR PLANT : BIODYNAMIC GARDENING

A glimmer of enlightenment came while paying rapt attention to John Philbrick, along with several hundred other pupils sitting motionless in the early heat of that burning Sunday in the New Hampshire hills.

John Philbrick had warned us earlier that since he was an Episcopal clergyman retired and since it was the day of the week it was, he might preach a little. His sermon or rather, lesson for the day, was most well put forth, complete with vivid-and-actual examples and illustrations and delivered in a most convincing, authorative yet amusing, way, friendly style as one would expect from such a man of experience, co-author of the Bug Book along with Helen who herself is co-author of that best seller on Companimate Planting. John Philbrick has been into BD farming and gardening for many, many years and is now president of that association. So much for credentials.

John described BD as an experience in nature, a philosophy of sorts, a way of life actually based on a deeper insight into the forces operating in living nature. The practical applications of this philosophy were originally developed by Rudolf Steiner, an Austrian scientist born in 1861. Steiner's ideas, while resembling those of Goethe, deal with the "life body" or reality underlying the more transitory "physical body" or material form of plants. This "life body" persists, as does, for example, the shape and form of a tree, from generation to generation while in actuality the material, mineral body of the tree is recycled again and again. This life body also links the mineral forces of the soil or earth with the gases of the [illegible] consideration of the most complicated principles below and above the soil BD regards the soil, not merely as a substration providing water and mineral nutrients to the roots but as an organism in itself containing and transmitting life forces. It is the careful husbandry of this vital substance, the soil, and particularly of the humus in the soil, which is basic to BD gardening, restoring and strengthening the living forces within it, so that the soil, along with water, air, light and warmth can once again form a mighty living force, pulsating around your plants and penetrating them so that they become healthy, vital material forms of their invisable life bodies and of the life body of the garden itself allowing for the eventual transmittance of these forces the minerals, carbohydrates, proteins, vitamins and other vital substances within the plant to you yourself, stimulating you with new life.

–TED FLANAGAN
Garden Specialist

SWEET BETTY'S COOKIN CORNER

Yes Food Fans, a tear has welled up in yours truly, Sweet Betty's eye. Gone are the days of cataclismic carrot cake and colossal cream cheese frosting. Gone are the days of the convivial combinations of cucumber for making marvelous molds. Gone, too, are those good ole days of gustatious goodies like bevies of blueberries bunched together in munchable muffin morsels.

Food fans, don't you feel an eyefilling flood yourself. The summer has swept us by with searing speed. Soon the crisp autumnal afternoons will be upon us. It will be a chilly time. A time for chili. I can proffer a piece d'resistance par excellance for even the penurious pocketbook. To warm ye wayward woefuls when it's chilly, it's chili.

CHILI – SWEET BETTY STYLE

Heat 2 T. olive oil.
Add onion & 1 green pepper chopped.
Simmer.
Add 1 lb. ground beef – Cook & stir until meat is brown.
Add:
1 can tomatoes
1 can kidneybeans
1 t. chili powder
1 t. salt
Cook 45 minutes

SWEET BETTY'S COOKIN' CORNER

"Boo-Hoo, Boo-Hoo, Oh, Boo-Hoo-Hoo,
I can't believe it, but it's true.
The Barbarous, brutal, and bitter end,
Has come at last, our tongues to tend."
–BILL FAKESPEARE

PLANTASIA
indoor plant specialists
107 st. paul street
863-4455
2nd Anniversary Specials
September 10th
Don't Miss it!

FLOCKS OF GOOD SWEATERS

All wool, they are, and styled with knowledgeable knitmanship. We have shawl collars, newest crews, turtles and V-necks for your enjoyment. Don't be the least bit sheepish about picking out the choicest for yourself. From 18.00

hayes & carney
90 CHURCH STREET
BURLINGTON, VT.

ORIGANUM INTRODUCES BUYERS COOPERATIVE

Origanum is alive and well and newly situated together with Rising Earth Books above the Ski Rack at 81 Main Street. Those who bought their natural foods at the old store on College and Winooski will notice another big change besides locale. Origanum is now operating as a store-front cooperative buying group, but you may have already heard, the news is traveling quickly. Each item in the store has two price listings, a 10 per cent mark-up for members and a regular 40-50 per cent mark-up for non-members.

To become a member, a person pays a one-time $5 fee and $2 for every month one purchases food. Someone is reputed to have calculated that a member-shopper saves money if his grocery bill is more than $6 a month, since $6 at member prices buys the same amount of food as $8 at non-member prices. The difference is equivalent to the $2 monthly dues cost.

I found Origanum to be fully stocked with their usual selection of whole grains, seasonings, dairy products, juices, oils, and everything else I've forgotten to mention except fresh produce which may be available soon and meat, which will not.

David Book, fully involved with the old and the new, explained the need for this type of store in the Burlington area. As it is set up, Origanum/Rising Earth Books combines the accessibility of a natural food store with the low prices associated with bulk-buying through pre-order type co-ops. Origanum, of cdurse, is not yet fully a cooperative venture where members own shares in the store, elect a board of directors, and make decisions on policy.

David envisions the store becoming a member-owned and managed direct-charge cooperative after Origanum's long-term loan is paid. Also, for such a substantive transformation to take place (from a profit-oriented to a completely cooperative venture), the buying group would need more than the current number of members. The first five weeks in its new location Origanum had 30 new members a week with only wide-spread word-of-mouth advertising.

Because Rising Earth Books is also a part of the buying group, books are also available to members at a discount. In short, that adds up to a lot of good reasons to drop in for a visit.

–PAMELA STEFANEK

10% OFF All Purchases With Student I.D.*

SHELVING SPECIALS

ADD DIMENSION AND SPACE TO YOUR HOME THE EASY WAY, WITH PINE OR PARTICLE BOARD SHELVING.

PARTICLE BOARD
ROUNDED EDGE
5/8" THICK
12"x8 FT.
Reg. $3.25 .....
$2.99

COMMON PINE
1X12
REG: 48¢ Lin./ft.
NOW: 43¢ Lin./ft.
OTHER SIZES AVAILABLE
8" Cement bricks

PAINT SPECIALS
CHOOSE FROM 1000 COLORS

REG: $6.99 Gal
NOW: $4.99
Give your room or apt. fresh, colorful beauty inside and out at real money-saving low price. Excellent quality. Save now!

WE HAVE ALL THE SUPPLIES YOU NEED
ASK ABOUT FREE DELIVERY
★ Excluding ANY weekly specials
Good through Sept. 20th

woodbury lumber

Used & unusual Book

Paperbacks
50% off

Stop & Shop
202 Main St.
Cold Beverages
Subs Made To Order
Full Line Of Groceries
And Meats
Yogurt

Fine Quality Diamonds
That Start At Under $100

Come in and see us.
The Tick Tock Shop
Burlington, Vermont

OPEN SEASON

(continued from page thirty-two)

chats a supercilious stare at the Bar Mitzvah, Summer as an A&W Rootbeer stand waitress meets summer sampling hashish in Amsterdam, the Student Council Social Committee warily eyes the local N.O.W. Coordinator, Virgin naively wonders where boyfriend from B.U. will be sleeping this weekend, nursing manuals get mixed with D.H. Lawrence novels.

Ah, then comes the real cruncher, the guaranteed ire and anxiety creator: Parents meet Parents. Barre's Chamber of Commerce Man of the Year, circa 1968, Dick Mallary's local campaign chairman, cautiously extends his hand to Brandeis's leading Marxist philosopher... the Elks Club greets Aptheker, Machiavelli peers at Kropotin. So much for the melting pot.

Then naturally comes the most anxious occasion in the arrival of any college freshman, oops, freshperson: Boy meets Girl. It usually occurs in some exciting place like the endless line at the bookstore, or at the first Friday Afternoon Drinking Club. (Stop dreaming guys and forget what they told you about co-ed dorms... it never happens in the shower.)

At the F.A.D.C. Boy shuffles over toward Girl target, displaying the artful moves of a Hank Finkel, brandishing all the grace and panache of a fellow with diarreah fumbling for that last dime in front of a pay toilet. Hard to tell he's a freshman.

"eh... where ya from..."

"oh... Half Hollow Hills... it's in New Jersey."

"Ah... what's yer major"

"French... what's yours"

"I wanna go to Law School (the inevitable thirty second silence that seems like two years)... eh... well... eh... (lights a Marlboro, after three matches) eh... howse yer summer..."

"well... it was aright..."

"eh... well... wouldja like anudder beer?"

Mutual Oral encopreosis, the stuff from which great romances are built. Strickly YOUVEEEM style.

So much for your frosh arrival. Like your first date, family reunions and Youth for Nixon rallies, one's "first" arrival at College is something to be dreaded, stoically endured, and then quickly forgotten, packed away into the cobwebs of consciousness. Thank Christ – praying, naturally, that mine is not too closely related to Charlie Colson's – it only happens once.

–SCOTT MacKAY

We speak shoe. (shōō)

Crazytoes (crā'zy toes)
masculine or feminine noun. striking out on its own. Way out, that really means way in.

Foot (fōōt)
neuter noun. a fundamental part of everyone's vocabulary. Suitable for all occasions, but especially bathing, sleeping, streaking and tiptoeing through tulips. Equals .304 meters.

Karatei (kar'a tei) neuter noun. a mysterious term that provides the antithesis of known foot comfort.

DEXTER

Peanuts (pēa'nūts)
neuter noun. a shoe with color matching what is defined as (popular when roasted) underground seeds.

Buckler (bŭck'ler)
neuter noun. footwear that says rugged protection combined with buckled good looks.

Guru (gōō' rōō)
masculine or feminine noun. a brand new offbeat addition to the language of shoe. Repeated usage produces a new way of walking, a new way of feeling. Completely synonymous with "wonderful contest."

Suburban (su bŭr'ban) adjective. denotes informal or leisure use. Certain to be an all-round shoe.

Nous parlons francais a tous nos magasins

GLADSTONE'S
The North Country's Largest Independent Shoe Chain
BURLINGTON 11 Upper Church St. · BARRE 124 North Main St. · RUTLAND Rutland Plaza · WINOOSKI 94 West Canal St.
ST. ALBANS 38 North Main St. · NEWPORT 58 Main St. · BENNINGTON 465 Main St.

CLASSIFIED

Couple wanted to share in joint purchase of country land, to be divided. Must appreciate traditional architecture. Call Paul at 862-9015.

Volkswagon (bug) 1968, radio, sunroof, good running condition, body needs work. Moving, must sell $375. 863-6249 after 5:00.

1970 Buick Skylark – 2 dr, economical 6 cylinder, automatic, power steering, new tires. Good condition. $1035 (well below book price) MUST SELL. See at 195 N. Prospect St., or call John at 864-6687.

For sale 4x5 folding wooden view camera with GOERZ DAGAR lens and one degree soligar spot meter. Excellent condition, must be seen to be fully appreciated. $400.00, 862-1650.

Bring me your tired, your poor frazzled term papers and manuscripts. Proofing, editing only 40 cents a page, typing no extra charge! Randy, ext. 3884.

Horse shoeing and trimming – Tim Wentzell Farrier. All work guaranteed. 864-7375.

Wanted: Room or small apartment needed for 3 days/week, Sept.–May. Graduate student female. Call collect (802) 849-1338. Martha.

Very nice comfortable studio room, quiet residential area 10 minutes to college, rental to be dissussed. –45673.

Will you board my dog? I will be attending UVM in Sept. and would like someone to board my dog, a friendly, loveable, 70 lb. black and tan coonhound who needs a patient and loving master. I will provide food and a small monthly fee. I will take him during vacations & occasional weekends. If interested, call collect, Martin Alperen (617) 734-6942, Boston.

College senior has two rooms available to sublet in three-bedroom apartment. Quiet location on Loomis Street, close to campus. Serious students or grad students welcome. No smokers, pets or overnight boyfriends please. Rent negotiable. Call 658-4911 and leave message for Margo. Please include where you can be reached.

Boogie Your Boards Off At Smugglers Notch

(Rt. 108 Jeffersonville, Vt.)

STUDENT DISCOUNT BADGE
$20.00 Cost

ENABLES YOU TO SKI:

$5.00 on WEEKDAYS REG. $10.00
$7.50 on WEEKENDS REG. $11.00
$8.00 on HOLIDAYS REG. $12.00

OVER 3500 BADGES SOLD LOCALLY LAST SEASON

THE STUDENT'S MOUNTAIN . . . . . OUR REP WILL BE ON CAMPUS THROUGHOUT THE FALL.

For information on reg. season's pass program and discount badge program call 899-4089 (Burl.); 644-8851 (in-state); 800-451-3222 (out-of-state)

LUMS

LUMS JUST GOT MORE BIGGER.

Good news for everyone who loves good food! There's a great Lums in town-another in the big, growing, family of Lums Restaurants.

LUMS is for your family too. We serve gourmet burgers, steaks, roast beef, shrimp - everything from a snack to a meal. (Beers and wines too. Come out to LUMS for a great treat.)

LUMS No one also will give you more. more. more.

Williston Road
(NEAR THE AIRPORT)

...NO ONE KNOWS

(Continued from page thirty-three)

people who come into Petco, especially women think my working at a gas station is the greatest social breakthrough since pantyhose. Housewives come in and say I pump gas better than a man, but what does it take to pump gas. I guess they see themselves in my place but I'm not a highway angel on the march against sexism.

When I was fifteen, I fell into this working class heroine syndrome. I wanted to have my own money. I got a job as a carhop at the Frost Bar, which is a drive in just outside of St. Johnsbury. I worked for $1.80 a day plus tips, they took me over the barrel on that one. Since then I've always had a job. Two jobs got to be too much, so I left Petco. I intend to continue working at the Sting when school starts. That's one of the reasonb they hired me.

I got the job at the Sting when I walked in one night half lit and said to Bobby (Peisch, co-owner and manager), "hey when are you going to hire me?" He said come in tomorrow night and that's where I've been since. I like working at the Sting. I like the music and the people are really fine. At least most of them are. Of course sometimes the Sting gets real crazy. Then I have to disappear into the ladies room for a minute and make sure I can still see my face. Reality does change when you walk through those red doors. But those people, oddballs and mixed vegetables, are the flames in the summer's night.

The waitress is the most accessible of the bar's decorations. At Petco, the clowns were restrained by the physical limits of their cars. No one I came in contact with had the balls to get out of the warmth of the car. Sure they try to grab you when they pay, but it was just their way of making sure they got their moneys worth. To me people are everything and they make the world shine. In the Sting the guys like to play bump and run with the waitresses. When it's crowded, they try to trip you. But that's the way of the world, so I cope and smile. That's the secret of making tips. I'm basically an actress, my smile is my masquerade. I don't mind the hassles. It's a test of my control. One time there were these pretty boys lying on the floor, flat on their backs on the floor in the back. There was no room for me to pass except to walk over them. I gritted my teeth and took careful baby steps to get over them. As I took my final tettering step, one of them said "I win. I told you they were flowered." They were looking up my skirt (Sting waitresses are required to wear denim skirts and red tops) and they had a bet going on what color my underwear was. I was lucky I was wearing some that night. That would have blown their little minds. The one that won the bet gave me a big tip. Just another game of seeing if you can make the waitress's face match the color of her top.

The Sting has a good makeup for a Burlington bar. It's split about 50-50 between couples and singles. Most come to drink and dance. I've heard it's very easy to meet people in the Sting which is what a bar is all about, right?

But working two summer jobs has slowed my social life down. But I've met some fine people through work though. I haven't had time to go downtown by myself anymore. It gets me down when people think I'm a real bitch. They ask me if I want to party after work. But after doing two jobs a day, the only thing I'm ready for is to be carted to a big pillow. Finally, I couldn't take it anymore, so I quit Petco. Just cruised right out of the gas station business."

Night after night, bringing the hops, the brew, the amber scotch, carrying the key to another place on the tray. "I always leave my tip money on the tray. You know sometimes people need a little hint, like a cattle prod between their eyes. Money, one night someone offered Bobby Peisch $200 if he would let me dance with the guy. I was surprised Bobby turned it down. I guess he's more of a gentleman than a businessman. $200 is a lot of money."

The night's sister turns away from me. Visions of gold line her eyes, her emotions well controlled as she moves on the aisle. A smile sets her pace, she looks satisfied, as only one can be who has accomplished survival in a cabaret summer. The fastest mover in the Sting wiggles through the late night motions of sweaty dancers.

As Lisa wishes it were closer to closing, I make my way back to early Sunday morning. The pinball machines clatter out their song in the gameroom.

—LARRY SEIDEN

What's Your Beef

Happy Hour 4-6:30
Hot Hors D'oeuvres
Steamers
Food Served Daily
Sun. Ladies Night
(Happy Hour Prices)

Meeting Place of UVM

Backgammon
Cribbage Tank
Tennis

WHAT ALE'S YOU LOUNGE

152 St. Paul Street
Burlington, Vermont 05401

CHARLIE'S TENNIS DEN

85 Main St., Burlington in the SKI RACK 864-9118

The Particular Store.

Get advice from Tennis Experts.
Have your racket strung or repaired.

The only certified members of the Professional Stringer Association in the greater Burlington area.

Rackets by: Davis • Yamaha • Fischer • Bancroft • Wilson • Dunlop • Head • Seamco • Slazenger • Spaulding • Squash and Paddle-Ball Rackets

ART PRINT SALE! Over 7,000 Lithos, Etchings, Silk-Screen reproductions and limited editions!

Gallery 410 has one of the largest print collections in New England! You'll find a tremendous selection of old and modern masters. Traditional, Abstract, Geometric, Art Nouveau & Deco... Landscapes, Seascapes, Florals, Still Lifes, Animals, Birds, Clowns, Vogue & Sat. Eve Post Covers. Contemporary & Turn of the Century Posters... Original Old English Steel Engravings, Gibson Girl, & old advertisements... and much more!

Over 1000 Discontinued Art Prints .25 or 5/$1.00
Over 500 Art Prints values to $7.50 Now $2.50
Over 500 Art Prints values to $10.00 Now $3.50
Over 2000 Art Prints, values to $5.00 Now 3 for $1.00

143 Original Lithos Signed & Numbered On Sale $5 to $125

GALLERY 410
214 College St. - 863-3695

Learn to BARTEND for only $15!

Acquire all the skills of a professional bartender at a price you can afford!
Earn easy money as a professional mixologist!

(Open to all men and women 18 and over)

Good News! The famous three night bartendering course that you heard so much about last year will be back again starting in September. The first session will be from Tues. Sept. 23-Thurs. Sept. 25. For more information simply drop a postcard with name and phone number to Mark Gallagher

PO Box 83
St. Michael's College
Winooski, Vermont 05404

IF YOU'VE GOT A CAR...

Faculty and Staff Members

If you have a car, a motorcycle, a truck or any other kind of motorized contraption and you plan to be parking it (or trying, anyway) anywhere on UVM's ponderous, it is necessary to register your vehicle with campus security. Proof of registration is administered in the form of those familiar UVM parking decals - a colorful addition to any bumper. For those of you going by gas, please take note of the following information.

University parking decals will go on sale in the Security Office, Room 218 Waterman Building, beginning August 11, Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Parking decals will also be sold in the Student Lounge, Given Building, on August 21 and 22, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

The Parking decal sold at this time will be valid until January 1, 1976.

Any member of the Faculty and staff who parks a motor vehicle on the University grounds must obtain a Parking Permit for each vehicle used.

Requirements when applying for parking decal:

Applicant must apply in person. Applicant must present his current University Identification Card.

Cost

$5.00 per vehicle per registration period.

Note

You are responsible for removing the University parking sticker prior to the disposal of any auto and for obtaining a replacement for your new car. Decal will be replaced at no cost when pieces of the old decal are returned to the Security Office.

Students

Any student who parks a motor vehicle on the University grounds must register with Campus Security. "Student" shall include all persons enrolled at the University. Students, who at the same time, become associated with the University as part-time faculty or staff, will retain the status of "Student" as pertains to campus vehicle registration.

Commuter parking stickers will be issued at the Billings Center on September 2 through 5, for those not residing in the following buildings.

Resident parking stickers will be issued in areas as follows:

Residents of Chittenden, Buckham, Wills, Converse and Jeanne Mance Halls - at Converse Hall on September 8 and 9.

Residents of Harris, Millis, Marsh, Austin, Tupper and the Living & Learning Center - at Marsh Hall on September 10, 11, and 12.

Residents of Redstone Campus - at Simpson Hall on September 8 and 9.

Decals will be on sale from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Vehicles arriving after the initial registration period must be registered at the Security Office, Waterman Building.

Requirements when applying for parking sticker:

1. Applicant must apply in person.

2. Applicant must present his current University Identification.

3. Applicant must present his State Vehicle Registration Certificate.

Cost:

The registration fee is $4.00 per vehicle for the School Year.

D	FRIDAY, AUGUST 29	Due Date for Payment
A	SUNDAY, MONDAY, AUGUST 31 (12–5) and SEPTEMBER 1 (9–12)	Pick up Receipt and ID Validation Sticker at Waterman
	SUNDAY, AUGUST 31 (noon)	Freshmen Orientation
T	TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2 (breakfast)	University Residence Halls open
	TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2 (Patrick Gym)	Dining Halls Open — Meal coupons accepted
		In-person Registration — ONLY Degree students who did not advance enroll
E	WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3 (Patrick Gym)	In-person registration: 8:00 AM to 12 Noon — Same as above; 1:00 PM to 3 PM — Evening Division registration, for Degree students
S	THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4	Classes begin

EMERGENCY NUMBER

In an effort to improve emergency care for the University Community, we wish to provide a clarification of the phone numbers to be used on campus when contacting Rescue. We have two phone numbers which are as follows:

To summon an ambulance Dial 4000

-4000

For all other purposes Dial 3350

-3350

We have noted several emergency calls coming in on the business line and would especially like to stress our 4000 emergency number. This is a special line that allows a three way hookup between Campus Security, the caller, and the Rescue dispatcher.

BURLINGTON PLACE
"The Mini Mall"
101 Church Street Burlington, Vermont 05401
864-9555

Ziggy's
Most Complete Head Shop

Smoke Stack
Lowest Cigarettes in Town

Burlington Shoe Repair
Complete Shoe Repair Work Done

Mini Mall
Jokes · Candles · Clothing
Leather goods · Jewlery · Gifts

All visit Funland
at 97½ Church Street

FALL OPENING SCHEDULE

SUNDAY 8/31	Breakfast	8–8:30	Living/Learning
	Lunch	11–12:30	Living/Learning & Wright
	Dinner	5–6	Picnic between H/M & MAT
MONDAY 9/1	Breakfast	7:30–8:30	Living/Learning & Wright
	Lunch	11:30–12:30	Living/Learning & Wright & Waterman
	Dinner	4:30–6	Picnic on Redstone
TUESDAY 9/2	Breakfast	7:30–8:30	L/L, Wright & Waterman, Harris/Millis
	Lunch	11:30–12:30	L/L, Wright, Waterman, H/M
	Dinner	5:00–6	Chicken Bar-B-Q Gutterson
WEDNESDAY 9/3	Breakfast	7:30–8:30	L/L, Wright, Waterman, H/M
	Lunch	11:30–12:30	L/L, Wright, Waterman, H/M
	Dinner	5:00–6:00	L/L, Wright, Waterman, H/M

THURSDAY 9/4 Regular Schedule except: Marsh will open 9/6; Simpson will open 9/6

The DEN will open TUESDAY 9/2
The REDSTONE SNACKBAR will open on 9/7
"WALTER'S" will open tentatively on 9/8
The STORES will be located in L/L and Simpson and will open 9/8
The REDSTONE STATION will open on 9/13
The WHITE MOUSE will open on 9/14

FOOD SERVICE FACILITIES

O = Open X = Closed

Regular Dining Halls:	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.	Thu.	Fri.	Sat.	Sun.
Waterman
Breakfast	O	O	O	O	O	X	X
Lunch	O	O	O	O	O	X	X
Dinner	O	O	O	O	X	X	O
Simpson
Breakfast	O	O	O	O	O	O	O
Lunch	O	O	O	O	O	O	O
Dinner	O	O	O	O	O	O	O
Wright
Breakfast	X	X	X	X	X	X	X
Lunch	X	X	X	X	X	X	X
Dinner	O	O	O	O	X	X	X
Marsh
Breakfast	X	X	X	X	X	X	X
Lunch	X	X	X	X	X	O	X
Dinner	O	O	O	O	X	O	X
Harris-Millis
Breakfast	O	O	O	O	O	X	X
Lunch	O	O	O	O	O	X	O
Dinner	O	O	O	O	O	X	X
Living-Learning
Breakfast	O	O	O	O	O	O	O
Lunch	O	O	O	O	O	O	O
Dinner	O	O	O	O	O	O	O

Snackbars, Stores, Restaurants:

Catamount Den –	Every day except Saturday
Given Cafeteria –	Monday through Friday
"Walters" –	Every day
"The White Mouse" –	Sunday Evenings at Harris-Millis
"Redstone Station" –	Saturday Evenings at Wright
"The Stores" –	at Simpson and Marsh

All Dining Hall Facilities Service Hours are subject to change as customer needs dictate.

WHEN IT COMES TO EATING

THE VERMONT PLAN

BASE PLAN:

All resident students must purchase 680 (4 books of 170) food coupons each semester. The coupons may be exchanged for meals in the Regular Dining Halls – Breakfast = 3 coupons, Lunch = 4 coupons, Dinner = 6 coupons. Food coupons may also be spent in snackbars, campus restaurants and grocery stores where each coupon is worth 40 cents. Redstone Station this year will be 10 coupons; White Mouse will be 12 coupons.

COST OF BASE PLAN:

The Base Plan costs each participant $330 per semester. Of this, $270 goes to SAGA and $60 is retained by UVM for debt service and maintenance of Dining Hall Facilities.

The breakdown of coupon prices as compared to last year is as follows:

	Last Year	This Year
Base Plan	58.8 c. coupon	48.5 c. coupon
UVM Keeps	14.3 c.	8.8 c.
SAGA Got	44.5 c.	39.7 c.
Extra Coupons	20 ct.	30 ct.

NUMBER OF COUPONS NEEDED:

Each person must calculate the amount of coupons needed to complete a semester. 680 coupons may not provide for an entire semester's meals. Dining Hall records indicate students eat approximately 10 meals in the regular dining halls per week. Students' additional needs are fulfilled in the snackbars, etc.

Extra coupons may be purchased at the Coupon Bank for 30 cents each. Extra coupon books are available in books of 170, 80, and 40 coupons per book.

THE COUPON BANK:

An area, adjacent to the dining room, in the Waterman Building, has been designated The Coupon Bank. You may purchase additional coupons there.

All coupon books you may not wish to have in your possession can be held for you at the Coupon Bank to be picked up at your convenience.

You will need your UVM picture I.D. when you pick up or purchase coupons at the Coupon Bank.

COUPON PROCEDURES

You must present your coupon book to the checker/cashier at each dining location. Only the checker/cashier is allowed to detach the coupons from your book. Loose coupons changeable for meals.

D OF CAUTION!!

coupons are like ;). If you lose your book, you'll have to by buying another. And remember that the replacement value of a coupon is 30 cents.

PARENTS AND OTHER GUESTS

You may bring your guests to the dining halls, snackbars, and restaurants and pay for their meals with your coupons.

In addition, guests may purchase regular meals for cash.

OTHER SERVICES

Vegetarian Food Program: Selected vegetarian food items are offered for lunch and dinner (Mon-Fri) at the Simpson and Living/Learning Dining Halls.

Special Diet Needs: During the first week of school a seminar will be offered to help customers with special diet needs plan their individual dining format. A registered ADA dietician will be available for individual counseling. All requests for special diets must be approved by the University Health Services in advance.

For the Calorie Watchers: Calorie counts for all items served on campus are available.

Student Jobs: Many job opportunities are available in the dining halls. If you are interested in working for Saga, apply as soon as possible.

Sack Lunches: You may order snack lunches from the dining halls for trips.

Birthday Cakes, Party Supplies, etc.: You may purchase a wide variety of items, including bulk food. You may order these items from your Dining Hall manager.

SAGA is planning some new features this fall that will include:

–A line of non-food items in the Stores.

–The "Den Outdoors," weather permitting

–A stronger vegetarian program at Wright and L/L Dining Rooms

–"Baked-on-Campus" Health Food breads

Students will also be glad to see the following favorite features returning from last year:

–Waterman's Sunday Night Buffet

–A steak special at "Walters" and the Redstone Snackbar.

–Floor and Dorm group parties at the White Mouse. Must have at least 20 people. Contact Chip Strong at 3867 for more details.

–UVM Dairy Ice Cream Cones at "Walters" and the L/L Store.

SUMMER TIME NEWS

This summer, SAGA sponsored a series of very successful International Dinners at Wright Dining Hall. Working in cooperation with the Summer Session Office, SAGA prepared five theme meals for Italian, French-Canadian, Israeli, Spanish and German Nights. There is a good possibility that the concept will be worked into the regular school year program.

Also this summer was a very successful outdoor hamburger stand. A cooperative effort with SAGA and an organized fraternity emergency fund, the stand drew quite an afternoon following. It is hoped that an outdoor stand can be continued and expanded during the year.

SIMPSON DINING HALL RENOVATIONS

Simpson Dining Hall's planned renovation has been postponed until Second Semester. Delays in architectual planning, budget approvals, and equipment specifications will mean that the dining hall will have to be closed second semester. SAGA's Director of Food Service, Fred Smith, expressed sorrow and disappointment over the state of affairs, but offered, "It's better to go a bit slowly and do the job right."

MEAL COUPON ISSUING TIME AND LOCATIONS

DATE	TIME
September 1 (Fresh. only)	8:00–5:00	Lower Waterman
September 2 (Reg.)	8:00–5:00	Registration (Gutterson)
September 3	8:00–5:00	Registration (Gut.)
September 4	8:00–5:00	Lower Waterman
September 5	8:00–5:00	Lower Waterman
September 6	9:00–Noon	Lower Waterman
September 8 through Remainder of Semester	8:30–11:30 12:30–3:30	Lower Waterman

CATALOGUE

The latest word from the printer is that the 1975–76 undergraduate catalogue will be available beginning Monday, August 18.

Arrangements have been made through Personnel and Messenger Service to send a copy to each faculty member at his or her office. Copies may also be picked up at the Registrar's Office, 360 Waterman.

Stop & Shop
202 Main St.
Cold Beverages
Subs Made To Order
Full Line Of Groceries
And Meats
Yogurt

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.
SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY, LIGHTWEIGHT CROSS-COUNTRY, CAMPING AND MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT
SOUTH BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401 Tel. (802) 864-0473

X-COUNTRY SKI EQUIPMENT & ACCESSORIES
Bonna · Madshus · Norge · Fisher
EMS · Lovett · Asnes · Falk

BACKPACKING & CAMPING EQUIPMENT
Tents · Backpacks · Cook Sets
Boots · Mountain Clothing · Poly Bottles
Lanterns · Wind & Rain Shells · Sleeping Bags
Stoves · Freeze Dried Foods · Foam Pads

EQUIPMENT RENTAL
Sleeping Bags · Stoves
Tents · Foam Pads
Backpacks
Reasonable Rates
Good ID Required
Deposit

TECHNICAL CLIMBING EQUIPMENT
Ropes · Helmets
Carabiners · Other Soft And Specialize Climbing · Hardware Items Shoes

KAYAK & KAYAK ACCESSORIES
BOOKS & MAPS

One Stop Shopping For All Your Backpacking And Camping Needs

100 DORSET STREET

Hours: 9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Monday thru Saturday

Zayre
The Discount Department Store

Smart students in South Burlington make it a point never to miss the great Zayre DORM SALE.

Everything else seems to fall into place when your creature comforts are taken care of - and we at Zayre can do that!

Our fantastic DORM SALE STARTS SEPT. 2 and we have all you need to make your pad a palace - at pauper's prices, to boot!

Check the Burlington Free Press or your dorm for our super 8 page insert - and if you don't find it - come to our store for your copy!

The news keeps getting better - fill out an application at Zayre and get INSTANT STUDENT CREDIT FOR UP TO $100.00, if you qualify.

And of course your MASTERCHARGE, BANK AMERICARD, and ZAYRE CHARGE are welcomed!

Open Daily 9:30 AM to 10 PM

ZAYRE/SO. BURLINGTON
155 DORSET STREET EXIT 14E I-89
AT RT. 2, S. OF HOWARD JOHNSON'S MOTOR LODGE

summer cynic

AUGUST 1975 SECTION III

THE SHORT STORY CONTEST:

Tyrone Power Was Short, Too

A Story In Three Parts

one

EVER BEEN TO RENO?

It was dawn I remember, your typical uninteresting morning Mornings are a real pain for me. I never seem to be able to talk until noon But this day was different I was jovial, disgustingly good humored So sick was my mind that my master almost whipped me for spilling good cheer on his new tie I beat the rap He was happy too. We were all happy The day built I remember It started slowly, with kids squalling (the day care centers were out for the holiday) and old men thumping about For a place that doesn't move until 11 00 a m. this day was phenomenal By seven all the people were up/ up and vital They moved in front of the shop like dogs in front of a stockyard They buzzed and yelled At eight I had to break up a fight that threatened to destroy several good windows I went on with my normal duties till the time came I broke up several more fights All the r wdies came out on these days Master yelling for more booze I seem to recall But he is always calling for more booze At noon I opened the gates Oh shit did they start pouring in I was up to my armpits in peasants by 12-01 Then Master came out He looked the part Dressed in his best grave robbing black, he sat there resplendant They were all thrilled His "master of all" bass boomed out commands like they were (pardon the expression) god's own law I started weeding out the goodies Any girls or young children were sent post-haste (my new term) upstairs for processing It was then I spotted him, sitting in the corner with his dog and book, sneezing. Funny isn't it, even he had a cold. Life's a bitch. I asked what the bloody hell he wanted in this place, slumming? He sneezed in my géneral direction and gave me one of his holier-than-thou looks. I gave him the finger. It made me feel better

I cut through the crowd to tell the boss that he was here, just in case he brought any of his people with him Those intolerant mothers tried to close us down last year I stepped in a spitton. Somebody laughed I smiled and decked him Life is good sometimes Then I started upstairs to see if any of the girls needed help or anything They never do! But it got me out of that pot of humanity underneath I swipped someone's mint julep The things women drink! (the things I steal!) It tasted like a diabetic southerner 1 00 now, and time to get underway As I went down I heard Master calling off numbers I'm late again, I'll get my ass whipped for this But I don't mind, the drink was worth it That crumb was still in the corner. Some people! I climbed up the back steps next to master on the stage He kicked me for being last, but he smiled It looked like a good day He had given out 1000 numbers to this first wave, not counting the people sent upstairs. He yelled out "Number one." and some dirt farmer nearly killed himself getting up to the stage. Master said in his stentörian (reading pays off) tones, "What, oh inconsequential one, do you wish?" The whelp replied that he wished to sell his soul. In return, he wanted a new farm and a new wife. I wrote it down Master asked why his soul would be worth a new farm and woman. The creep replied that he was a Christian Master laughed and the sucker in the corner gasped. I took the shit's name and sent him upstairs to pick his new wife This went on for hours. Master's black robes were drenched and smelly by three, and he was unbearable by four The tally was good more people traded faith this year for tangible goodies than ever before We had at least 800 good souls more than 700 were Christians! The dude in the corner nearly shit a brick What could he give? We owned all the politicians and priests The game was fixed If you wanted pain you went to him If you wanted pleasure you came to us It seems this is the year of pleasure The next wave was much the same and by midnight master smelled like a ripe stable

400 bodies came our way in that shift A lot of people got tired and went back to the mud huts to wait for another year My feet hurt My hand felt like a deboned viper I had taken 71 notebooks of contracts Master's beatings will feel good after this I think back to the drink and the memory of lingered coolness keeps me going for hours No I don't care

The old devil went to bed at 2 00 a m I stayed up to clean The bum in the corner still hadn't left I let him sleep. His dog was nice, a big german shepard It was hungry so I fed it Licked my hand, mushy beast I always had a soft spot for animals. I once tried to train one of the rats in my cage but he couldn't quite get hold of the newspaper. The dog helped me clean and we talked. I asked him what his boss was really like, and he told me. We both laughed Tomorrow we would get an overflow of people trying to return deals and I would tell them to shove it (that's fun). At 5:00 one of the girls came down with a coke and we talked for a while. It was really nice of her to bring me the drink. Under the contract I don't even get two meals a day But I steal alot The girl offers me her services, but if I take them I won't finish my work So I thank her but say no, she nods and says goodnight Back to work The shit in the corner snores I sweep and moan, both of which are good for my soul A soul I no longer own, but what's a little soul compared to the happiness I now possess. Moral Never play dice with the devil (especially with his dice)

Some day I may get it back (fat chance) But it's a nice dream I work on, sweeping till all that's left to do is the crud's corner. I wake him He says thanks and asks if the party's over I giggle and say yes I'll never forget his last comment to me, the total beauty of the phrase "Is it too late to make a deal?" I smiled as I pulled out the dice Saviors can't play craps two

SOMETIMES

The man with the strings is playing mind games again I wish he'd leave me alone

